Written Ministerial Statements

TREASURY

ISA Reinstatement (Failure of Financial Firms)

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): I am today announcing the Government's intention to make changes to the ISA rules that will benefit investors whose ISA savings have been affected by the failure or default of a financial firm. This includes ISA investors affected by the collapse of Lehman Brothers.

Under current ISA rules, an individual can pay into their ISA a total amount up to the relevant subscription limit each year. The 2011-12 subscription limit for "adult ISAs" is £10,680, of which £5,340 can be in cash.

Where an ISA is affected by the failure or default of a financial firm, any reinstatement of sums held in the account at that point, or investment of any subsequent compensation received, is currently treated as a new ISA subscription, and therefore counts towards the normal annual limit.

We intend to change the ISA rules to permit investors affected by such a failure or default to make certain ISA investments over and above the normal subscription limits.

We intend that investors who have lost their cash ISA will be permitted to reinstate up to the balance of their account at the time of the firm's failure in a new ISA, outside the normal subscription limits.

Where a stocks and shares ISA has been affected, we intend that the investor will be permitted to invest any compensation (or any similar payment) derived from assets held within their ISA in a stocks and shares ISA, outside the normal subscription limits.

We propose to apply different arrangements for cases in which Lehman Brothers was, at the time of its collapse, the sole counterparty to an ISA product. Affected investors will be permitted to reinstate up to the balance of their ISA at the time of this collapse, outside the normal subscription limits. This is irrespective of whether any compensation has been paid to the investor.

Further details can be found in the HM Revenue and Customs ISA bulletin, published today—a copy of which I have placed in the Library. I have asked HM Revenue and Customs to consult ISA managers and other interested parties on the detailed rules required to implement these changes. I anticipate that draft amending regulations will be made available for consultation in the new year, and that finalised regulations will be laid in spring 2012.

The changes we intend to make will provide a principles-based approach which—together with the Financial Services Compensation Scheme's deposit guarantee scheme and other compensation arrangements—will enable investors whose ISAs are affected by the failure or default of a financial firm to continue to benefit from tax-advantaged savings. They also demonstrate the Government's commitment to ensure that the ISA remains a secure, accessible and tax-advantaged saving product.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government Finance

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Robert Neill): This Government are determined to support businesses—large and small—to support growth and build a stronger economy. In support of those aims, the Government announced two important business rates measures in the autumn statement. We will:

- double the levels of relief available to small business ratepayers for a further six months on top of the existing two-year scheme; and
- enable business ratepayers to defer payment of 60% of the RPI increase (5.6%) in their 2012-13 business rates bills.

Extending the period for which levels of small business rate relief are doubled means that eligible small businesses will benefit from significant additional reductions in their business rates bills throughout the whole of 2012-13. Approximately half a million businesses in England are expected to benefit, with about a third of a million businesses paying no rates at all for that period.

We have also listened to business concerns about the RPI increase for 2012-13. We are therefore giving businesses the option of spreading the increase over three years. Businesses will be able to defer payment of 60% of the RPI increase in their 2012-13 rates bills until 2013-14 and 2014-15. This will give businesses flexibility to manage their rates bills in the current economic climate and help their cash flow.

Those measures are in addition to the ones that we are already delivering through the Localism Act 2011. Through the Act we are:

- simplifying the process for claiming small business rate relief;
- waiving £175 million of backdated business rates demands levied on businesses, including some in ports;
- giving local authorities wide-ranging, discretionary powers to grant business rates discounts; and
- ensuring that all future business rates supplements projects will have to be put to the ballot so that liable businesses can decide whether to impose the business rate supplement upon themselves.

Taken together, the support provided through these measures will help businesses across the country to prosper.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Single Payment Scheme

The Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr James Paice): I am pleased to confirm that as at the end of 1 December, the first day of the 2011 single payment scheme (SPS) payment window, the Rural Payments Agency (RPA) had released payments totalling over £1.2 billion (71.6% of the estimated total fund) to some 84,600 English farmers (80.8% of the estimated total of eligible claimants). Payments to farmers will continue to be made as soon as validation of their claims is complete, with the values adjusted to reflect any significant outstanding overpayments from previous years. There remains much to do, but this promising beginning places RPA in a good position to meet its first SPS 2011 performance indicator, namely to pay 78% of the total estimated fund value to a minimum of 86% of eligible claimants by the end of December 2011.

In line with the commitment in my statement of 8 November, Official Report, column 12WS, RPA will write in early December to those farmers who are unlikely to be paid during the month in order to both explain the additional work that is required to validate their claim and provide an indicative time scale for how long that type of work can take. While it will not be possible to provide specific dates when payments will be made, I hope the additional information being supplied this year will help farmers with business planning.

I will continue to keep the House informed on the agency's progress.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

EU Foreign Affairs Council

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr William Hague): I attended the Foreign Affairs Council (FAC) in Brussels on 1 December.

The FAC was chaired by the High Representative of the European Union for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy, Baroness Ashton of Upholland. A provisional report of the meeting and all conclusions adopted can be found at:

http://www.consilium.europa.eu/uedocs/cms_data/docs/pressdata/EN/foraff/126518.pdf

The agenda items covered were as follows:

Western Balkans

The discussion focused largely on Serbia, and the EU-facilitated dialogue between Belgrade and Pristina. All expressed concern at implications for the dialogue of recent violence in northern Kosovo. I made clear the UK's strong support of enlargement in general, but on the basis of meeting the required conditionality. I also stressed the importance of Kosovo's EU aspirations. The General Affairs Council will return to this issue on Monday.

On Bosnia and Herzegovina, I emphasised the importance of focusing attention on the need for political progress on the ground, including the formation of a state-level Government.

Iran

Ministers agreed conclusions (see link) setting out the EU's serious and deepening concerns over Iran's nuclear programme following the latest report by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), which clearly set out possible military dimensions. They also decided to intensify pressure against the nuclear programme by sanctioning another 180 individuals and entities.

I took the opportunity to thank EU Ministers for their support during and since the attack on our Embassy in Tehran. All my counterparts expressed solidarity and the need for a united response, and a number have already recalled their ambassadors for consultations. Ministers agreed to issue the following response from the Council:

"The Council is outraged by the attack on the British Embassy in Tehran and utterly condemns it. It is a violation of the Vienna Convention. It also deplores the decision to expel the British Ambassador from Tehran. The Council considers these actions against the UK as actions against the European Union as a whole. The EU is taking appropriate measures in response."

After the meeting I made the following statement:

"Today, the EU demonstrated clear unity and solidarity with the UK on the outrageous attacks on our Embassy in Tehran. No difficulty in relations can excuse the Iranian regime's complete failure to protect diplomatic staff and property. That is why yesterday I announced the closure of our Embassy in Tehran and the Iranian Embassy in London. This is also why the EU and wider international community have expressed universal condemnation. I welcome the fact that France, Germany, Spain, Italy and the Netherlands have recalled their Ambassadors in Tehran for consultations.

I strongly welcome the EU's decision to intensify pressure on Iran following the IAEA's report by sanctioning another 180 individuals and entities. These include those directly associated with the nuclear programme and entities associated with the Islamic Republic of Iran Shipping Lines and the Iranian Revolutionary Guard Corps.

The EU made very clear that it will not bow to Iran's intimidation and bullying tactics. We will not back down and agreed today to work on further sanctions, including in the areas of finance and energy, by the next Council meeting. We want Iran to come to the table and negotiate meaningfully about its nuclear programme. Despite events this week we still want a diplomatic solution."

Iraq: Camp Ashraf

Baroness Ashton briefly raised Camp Ashraf and the interest the European Parliament was taking on this issue. Member states agreed that this was an issue for the UN and Iraq rather than the EU.

Southern Neighbourhood

Over lunch, Ministers had a positive exchange of views about Syria with the Arab League secretary-general, Nabil El Araby. Ministers agreed conclusions (see link above) and further EU sanctions against the Syrian regime. After the meeting I made the following statement:

"I strongly welcome this substantial further package of EU sanctions, targeted on President Assad, his regime and those who support them. This tenth round of sanctions aims to increase pressure on the Syrian regime to stop the continuing violent repression of the Syrian people. EU sanctions stand alongside measures introduced by Turkey yesterday including the freezing of assets belonging to Assad and individuals in the regime, and the Arab League's decision to impose unprecedented sanctions. I welcome these moves which send a clear message that the Syrian regime's actions have left it isolated.

EU sanctions are part of a broad international response to the horrific abuses perpetrated by a regime that has lost legitimacy. The UN Human Rights Council's Commission of Inquiry report, issued on 21 November, highlighted the systematic and wide ranging nature of these abuses including through compelling testimony from many of those who have suffered at the hands of the Syrian regime. The UK worked closely with international and regional partners to secure a third UN Human Rights Council special session on Syria, on Friday 2 December.

The UK continues to support the Arab League's efforts to bring an immediate end to the violence and supports the work of Syrian oppositionists towards realising the aspirations of the Syrian people for freedom, dignity and a new political system."

On Egypt, Ministers agreed conclusions (see link above) welcoming the peaceful start to elections but expressing serious concern at the recent violence and calling for a swift transfer to civilian government.

Ministers agreed conclusions on developments in the Southern Neighbourhood and the EU's response to the Arab spring, including the need for an offer of market access to Tunisia, Egypt, Jordan and Morocco (see link above). The Council also acknowledged through Conclusions (see link above) the Polish presidency's initiative to create a European Endowment for Democracy.

Middle East Peace Process

Ministers also had a short exchange of views with the Arab League secretary-general about the latest developments in the middle east peace process.

Common Security and Defence Policy (CSDP)

Ministers agreed a useful package of CSDP measures (see link above) focused on improving the EU's contribution to international security on the ground. They agreed to prepare for a small, focused and carefully calibrated civilian CSDP mission in the Sahel, focusing on policing, security, infrastructure development and regional training; and affirmed the EU's readiness to assist the new Libyan authorities if requested. In line with the UK's priorities in the Horn of Africa, Ministers agreed to plan for a new mission to help countries in the region improve their own civil maritime security.

These new operations fit well with our vision of CSDP, bringing together a range of security tools for practical effect in areas where NATO, which remains the cornerstone of our security, would not be engaged. In order to improve the coherence of this effect in the Horn of Africa, Ministers agreed to consider activating on a temporary ad hoc basis the existing EU Operations Centre, designed for low-intensity small-scale civilian or civil-military missions that do not require a military headquarters. This could bring together the EU's work to strengthen regional maritime capacities in Somalia and the wider Horn of Africa region with its existing military training for Somali security forces, currently run through the EU's planning staffs. The EU's naval counter-piracy mission Atalanta will continue to be run from the UK's military operational headquarters at Northwood. This further demonstrates that the EU has all the structures it needs for effective crisis management and does not require new, costly and duplicative institutions such as a permanent EU operational military headquarters - something this Government will never agree to. Council agreed that, without prejudice to the treaties, any future decisions on planning and conducting EU operations will be taken on the basis of unanimity and inclusiveness.

Ministers also highlighted the importance of improving Europe's civilian and military capabilities, and of strengthening the EU's partnerships with NATO, the UN and others. We hope that the focus of debate on CSDP will now shift from institutions to practical outcomes, effectiveness and real missions that actually make a difference in the world and can improve our own security and that of other countries within the EU and beyond.

Public Records (Colonial Documents)

The Minister for Europe (Mr David Lidington): Further to the statements to the House by the Foreign Secretary on 5 May, Official Report, column 24WS and 30 June 2011, Official Report, column 66WS, I wish to inform the House of our plans to make available to the public, over the next two years, the large collection of colonial administration files currently held by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO).

The timetable for transfer of these files to the National Archives (TNA), which has been approved by Professor Badger, the independent reviewer appointed by the Foreign Secretary, follows our undertaking to move rapidly to put these papers into the public domain.

In keeping with this Government's commitment to transparency and openness, the entire collection of migrated files will be transferred to TNA. None of the papers will be destroyed. Redactions will be kept to an absolute minimum, for example in order to comply with the Data Protection Act. We expect that 99% of the material will be available for the public to read.

The files will be reviewed and transferred in alphabetical order of the colonial territory concerned with the exception of Kenya, Cyprus, British India Ocean Territory (BIOT) and Malaya, which will be prioritised because there has been particular interest. The first batch of files, representing around 16% of the total collection, is expected to be available for public view at TNA in April 2012. This will include material from Aden, Anguilla, Bahamas, Basutoland, Bechuanaland and Brunei as well as the BIOT and Malaya files and the first tranche of papers from Kenya and Cyprus. Given the volume of material from Kenya and Cyprus, the remaining files will be reviewed and transferred in batches over the following months.

The aim is to have all the papers transferred before the end of 2013. We will be publishing a more detailed timetable on the FCO's website.

Abdelbaset al-Megrahi

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Alistair Burt): My noble Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the right hon. Lord Howell of Guildford, has made the following written ministerial statement:

On 23 November, Official Report, House of Lords, column 1051, I said that part of the Dumfries and Galloway constabulary would embrace the question of Abdelbaset al-Megrahi's condition and that we were awaiting the precise details of his health from the Libyan Government.

I would like to clarify that the Government have not asked the Libyan Government to provide information about Mr al-Megrahi's health. The terms of Mr al-Megrahi's release from prison on licence specify that he has to comply with a number of conditions set by the Scottish Ministers. These conditions include the submission of a monthly medical report to East Renfrewshire council. As I said on 23 November, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office have passed on a request from the devolved Administration to the Libyan chargé d'affaires in London asking the Libyan authorities to assist in ensuring that the supervision arrangements of Megrahi's licence are observed.

The Dumfries and Galloway constabulary's investigation concerns the involvement of others, with Mr al-Megrahi, in the Lockerbie bombing. The Government will continue to support the police in following any new leads, including any new information that may come to light concerning Mr al-Megrahi.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Missing Children and Adults

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (James Brokenshire): Safeguarding vulnerable members of our society is a key priority for this Government and I am writing to inform the House that we have today published a cross-Government missing children and adults strategy which seeks to ensure we are doing all we can to safeguard missing children and adults and to support their families. A copy of the strategy has been placed in the House Library.

There are an estimated 360,000 reports of people going missing in the UK each year amounting to approximately 200,000 missing people. Children and young people make up approximately two thirds of the missing reports and account for an estimated 140,000 children who go missing every year in the UK. Although the vast majority of people who go missing return or are found quickly, many vulnerable children and adults suffer harm and exploitation while missing and some never return.

Identifying and ensuring the safest return possible for these vulnerable children and adults is a key part of the police service's child protection and wider safeguarding role. However, tackling missing persons issues requires a multi-agency response and co-ordination across a range of policies and operational partners including the police, local authorities and the health sector.

Following the recent all-party parliamentary group (APPG) inquiry into support for families of missing people in July 2011, I accepted the overarching recommendation that there should be a cross-Government outcomes policy framework for missing persons. I also accepted the principles behind the inquiry recommendations, including that we can and should do better in the support we provide to families and announced that I would lead development of a cross-cutting strategy on missing children and adults.

Evidence from the APPG inquiry and consultation with stakeholders and key delivery partners showed that, although we have the right policies and responsibilities in place to tackle this issue, agencies are not always clear about these roles and responsibilities, nor do they always recognise the risks of harm that vulnerable children and adults face when missing.

With this in mind, the strategy I have published today provides a framework in which we can all work to collectively deliver the best protection possible for missing children, adults and their families. It includes a small number of strategic objectives which we believe provide the right foundations for any effective local strategy and provides a framework for local areas to put in place their own arrangements. I believe this strategy provides a core framework against which local agencies with a role in tackling this important issue can review the strategy they have in place with their local partners—and consider whether they can and should be doing more.

With the right priority and focus on this issue, and by ensuring we are all working together in the most effective way possible, I believe this strategy will help support the step change in delivery needed at a local level to ensure we provide vulnerable missing children and adults and their families with the help, protection and support they need.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Independent Living Fund

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Maria Miller): The independent living fund (ILF) operates as an executive non-departmental public body of the Department for Work and Pensions and provides discretionary cash payments to disabled people to support independent living.

In a written statement on 13 December 2010, Official Report, column 85WS, I announced that, having reviewed the role of the ILF, the fund would remain closed permanently to new applications, but that the care and support packages of current users would be protected until the end of this Parliament.

That decision followed an independent review of the ILF in 2007 which recommended reform to ensure long-term sustainability, and reflected a commitment to ensure that the care and support needs of all disabled people are delivered equitably as part of local authorities' broader independent living strategies in line with local priorities and accountability.

We committed to a formal consultation in 2011 on how existing users would be supported in the future. That consultation should be placed in the wider context of the reform of the care and support system and will therefore now take place in spring 2012, alongside the publication of the planned White Paper on the future of care and support in England.

DWP remains committed to working with the Scottish Government and Welsh Assembly Government on options for the future support for users in Scotland and Wales.

Written Ministerial Statements

Tuesday 6 December 2011

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Ratcliffe-on-Soar Power Station

The Attorney-General (Mr Dominic Grieve): On 13 July 2011 a written ministerial statement was presented to both Houses setting out the decision by Keir Starmer QC, to ask the Chief Surveillance Commissioner and retired Court of Appeal judge, Sir Christopher Rose, to conduct an independent inquiry following concerns about the non-disclosure of material relating to the activities of an undercover police officer and suggestions that the CPS had suppressed evidence in relation to the Ratcliffe-on-Soar power station protest cases.

The Director of Public Prosecutions committed to making public the findings of the independent inquiry and a copy of Sir Christopher Rose's report has today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The report is also available online at www.cps.gov.uk.

Sir Christopher has concluded that although there were individual failings, there was no deliberate or dishonest withholding of information by the prosecution. More detailed conclusions can be found within the report.

Sir Christopher has recommended that more explicit guidance be included in the prosecution team disclosure manual, a recommendation which the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) have agreed to adopt. In addition and in light of the report, the Director of Public Prosecutions has decided that specific training should be delivered to all senior lawyers in the CPS casework divisions and complex casework units about the proper handling of cases involving undercover officers. All chief Crown prosecutors and any staff who chair CPS case management panels should undergo the same training.

Sir Christopher worked in tandem with the IPCC in this matter sharing all relevant information. Sir Christopher's inquiry focused on the CPS' handling of the Ratcliffe-on-Soar power station protests. The IPCC are conducting their own inquiry which will be published in due course.

TREASURY

Anti-avoidance Regulations

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Mr David Gauke): The Government are determined to reduce tax avoidance in order to protect the Exchequer, which provides funding for public services, and maintain fairness for the taxpayer.

Accordingly, the Government are announcing today that regulations have been laid to clarify the time at which companies with foreign currency loan relationships or derivative contracts and matched foreign currency shares, ships or aircraft come within the provisions of the Loan Relationships and Derivative Contracts (Disregard and Bringing into Account of Profits and Losses) Regulations 2004 (the disregard regulations).

These regulations put beyond doubt that companies can only defer foreign exchange gains and losses under the disregard regulations from the date that they have a foreign currency loan relationship or derivative contract which is matched with shares, ships or aircraft. The regulations will apply to shares, ships or aircraft which are matched on or after 6 December 2011.

The clarification follows disclosure of an avoidance scheme in which companies claim to permanently defer foreign exchange gains on foreign currency loan relationships and derivative contracts by retrospectively designating the loan relationship as a hedge of newly acquired foreign currency share capital. The regulations will prevent future avoidance in this area and protect significant amounts of revenue.

Further details have today been published on HMRC's website, together with the regulations, technical note and tax information and impact note.

Bank Remuneration Disclosures

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): The Government have today launched a consultation on a mandatory requirement for the largest UK banks and foreign banks operating in the UK to publish the details of the level and composition of remuneration of their eight highest-paid senior executive officers. The first disclosures would be made in 2012, in respect of the 2011 financial year.

In February 2011, the Government announced an accord between the UK Government and major UK banks under the name "Project Merlin". As part of this announcement, the Government committed to consulting on extending the remuneration disclosures of the highest-paid non-board executives made under Project Merlin to major UK banks from 2012 onwards.

Remuneration practices in the financial services sector have incentivised excessive risk-taking in some cases, contributing to the severity of the financial crisis. While a number of UK, international and European initiatives have led to improvements in the alignment of risk and reward in the financial services sector, more detailed remuneration disclosures for the highest-paid senior executives at the largest firms will provide better oversight of incentives. This information will encourage improved shareholder governance and enhance public scrutiny, which, in turn, is expected to facilitate better decision making by boards in relation to senior executive pay.

These proposals have been designed to minimise potential costs and external impacts, including the impact on privacy. A full explanation of the regulatory changes and draft implementing provisions is set out in the consultation document and impact assessment. The consultation will be published on the HM Treasury website, and the consultation period is scheduled to end on 14 February 2012.

Following consideration of responses to this consultation, the Government will take a decision on whether amendments to the draft legislation are required, before publishing a summary of responses document and laying final regulations before Parliament during summer 2012.

Draft Legislation for Finance Bill 2012 and Tax Policy Update

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Mr David Gauke): Following Budget 2011, the Government consulted on a number of tax policies. Today the Government are publishing the responses to these consultations alongside draft clauses for legislation to be included in Finance Bill 2012. This fulfils our objective to confirm the majority of intended tax changes at least three months ahead of publication.

The draft clauses will be open to technical consultation until 10 February 2012.

Details of the clauses published today are set out in the overview of draft legislation document, which also includes tax information and impact notes for each measure. All publications will be available on the HMT and HMRC websites.

The Government are making additional changes to tax policy. Legislation will be introduced in the Finance Bill 2012 to:

provide that visiting EU forces and their civilian staff receive the tax treatment to which they are entitled under the EU status of forces agreement. Similar treatment already applies to visiting North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) forces.

exempt from income tax payments of the continuity of education allowance to service personnel in the armed forces.

ensure that individuals provided with security enhanced cars are not unfairly impacted by the abolition of the £80,000 cap on the cash equivalent of the benefit on company cars.

exempt from UK taxation, money earned by non-resident footballers and team officials in relation to the Champions League final in 2013, which will be held at Wembley.

ensure that existing tax rules dealing with tax adjustments arising on a change in accounting policy continue to apply following the expected changes to UK generally accepted accounting practice in 2012. The legislation will apply to changes in accounting policy where accounts are prepared after 1 January 2012.

introduce a lower rate of 20% of the full rates of climate change levy for supplies of taxable commodities used in the recycling of steel and aluminium, from 1 April 2012.

make consequential amendments to stamp duty land tax reliefs arising from provisions of the Health and Social Care Bill.

make further changes to the capital allowances anti-avoidance rules that apply to transactions involving plant or machinery following the announcement on 12 August 2011 to close down a loophole in the legislation.

take a power to modify the stamp duty land tax disclosure of tax avoidance schemes regime to facilitate both the removal of the grandfathering rules for certain avoidance schemes using the sub-sale rules and the removal of the property valuation thresholds for disclosure.

provide double taxation relief for remote gaming duty, general betting duty and pool betting duty following the announcement on 18 July 2011 of a review of remote gambling taxation.

amend the bank levy to ensure that the liabilities of joint ventures are correctly aggregated into a foreign banking group or a relevant non banking group's chargeable equity and liabilities; to ensure that double taxation relief can be restricted where the amount of a foreign bank levy subsequently is reduced; and to amend the powers allowing the rules for the exchange of information with foreign authorities to work as intended. The changes to the rules on joint ventures will have effect for chargeable periods ending on or after 1 January 2012.

The Government will propose amendments in Finance Bill 2013 to two pieces of legislation designed to protect the UK tax base. These are contained in sections 714 to 751 of the Income Tax Act 2007 (transfer of assets abroad) and section 13 of the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992 (gains on assets held by foreign companies closely controlled by UK participators). A further announcement will be made around Budget 2012 and the Government intend to publish a consultation including draft legislation at that time.

The Government also announce the withdrawal of five extra statutory concessions and a consultation on supplementary legislation for two concessions. The withdrawals will have effect from the beginning of the 2013-14 tax year. Further details are available on the HMRC website.

The Government have also tabled two further written statements today which:

set out legislation for Finance Bill 2012 which has effect from today; and provide further details on non-domicile taxation and the statutory residence test.

Draft Legislation for Finance Bill 2012: Measures with Immediate Effect

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Mr David Gauke): This Government are committed to creating a fair tax system and will take the necessary steps to prevent the loss of tax revenues.

The Government are announcing today measures which will protect the Exchequer and maintain fairness in the tax system. The legislation for these measures will have effect from today and will be included in Finance Bill 2012.

The protocol on announcements made outside scheduled fiscal events, published at Budget 2011, sets out the criteria the Government will observe when changing legislation with immediate effect. The Government are acting in accordance with the protocol in announcing the following changes to legislation.

Lloyd's stop-loss insurance

Legislation will be introduced to ensure that all premiums payable by corporate members of Lloyd's in respect of member-level stop-loss reinsurance shall be deducted for tax purposes in the same period in which the profits to which they relate are recognised. The legislation will apply to all premiums paid in respect of policies taken out on or after 6 December 2011 to remove the benefit of the current mismatch without further delay.

Scope of the supplementary charge

The Government are introducing legislation, taking effect from 6 December 2011, to prevent a potential loss of tax by ensuring that the supplementary charge applies to ring-fence chargeable gains and to confirm that the scope of the supplementary charge matches that of ring-fence corporation tax.

Section 171a of the Taxation of Chargeable Gains Act 1992 will be amended to provide that an election cannot be made to transfer a ring fence chargeable gain from a company carrying on a ring fence trade to a company not carrying on a ring fence trade.

Section 330 of the Corporation Tax Act 2010 will be amended to put beyond doubt that supplementary charge is charged by reference to all of the ring fence profits of a company that are chargeable to corporation tax; that is by reference to its chargeable gains in addition to the trading profits arising to the company as a result of its ring fence trade.

Further details have today been published on HMRC's website, together with the proposed draft legislation and tax information and impact notes.

The Government have also tabled two further written statements today which:

set out legislation for Finance Bill 2012 and updates on tax policy; and provide further details on non-domicile taxation and the statutory residence test.

Non-Domicile Taxation and Statutory Residence Test

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Mr David Gauke): At Budget 2011, the Government announced a package of reforms to the taxation of non-domiciled individuals and their intention to introduce a statutory definition of tax residence.

Following consultation, the core reforms to non-domicile taxation will be included in Finance Bill 2012 as announced and draft legislation is published today. This comprises the introduction of a higher £50,000 annual charge, a new relief to encourage business investment and technical simplifications to some aspects of the existing non-domicile rules.

The legislation of Statement of Practice 1/09, which is one of the simplifications to the existing non-domicile rules, will be taken forward in Finance Bill 2013 to take effect from April 2013.

The consultation on tax residence raised a number of detailed issues which will require careful consideration to ensure the legislation achieves its important aim of providing certainty for individuals and businesses. The Government will therefore legislate the statutory residence test in Finance Bill 2013 to take effect from April 2013 rather than April 2012. It will introduce any reforms to ordinary residence at the same time. This will give time to consult thoroughly on the detail of these changes well in advance of implementation.

The Government are committed to the form of the statutory residence test outlined in consultation. They will make a further announcement around Budget 2012 when it will publish their response to the recent consultation together with a further consultation on policy detail and draft legislation.

This will ensure that the full package of measures announced at Budget 2011 will be implemented in a two-step programme that will be completed in Finance Bill 2013. The Government remain committed to making no further substantive changes to these rules for the remainder of this Parliament.

The Government have also tabled two further written statements today which:

set out legislation for Finance Bill 2012 and updates on tax policy; and set out legislation for Finance Bill 2012 which has effect from today.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Government Olympic Executive Quarterly Report, December 2011

The Minister for Sport and the Olympics (Hugh Robertson): I am publishing today the Government Olympic Executive's Quarterly Report—"London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games Quarterly Report December 2011". This report explains the latest budget position as at 30 September 2011, and outlines some of the investments which are being made to capitalise on the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games.

The anticipated final cost (AFC) of the Olympic Delivery Authority's (ODA) construction and infrastructure programme is £6.856 billion. This is a decrease of £394 million since July—including £333 million that the ODA has returned to DCMS for transformation work to be carried out by the Olympic Park Legacy Company (OPLC), and savings of £61 million. On a like-for-like basis with previous reports, which included the transformation work in ODA's programme, the ODA's AFC stands at £7.189 billion.

The ODA has achieved £42 million of savings in the quarter, taking the total amount of savings achieved since the November 2007 baseline to over £910 million. Construction of the venues and infrastructure for the games is 92% complete with the majority of venues on the Olympic park now complete. Contracts for the sale of the Olympic village to Delancey/Qatari Diar (QDD) joint venture have been exchanged generating a net benefit of £14 million above the previous forecast.

With just over eight months to go until the opening ceremony of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games, we are in a strong position and the list of completed venues now includes the velodrome (nominated for the RIBA Stirling Prize 2011), the main stadium, the handball arena, the basketball arena, the aquatics centre and the international broadcast centre (IBC). During the "One Year to Go" celebrations at the end of July, the completed aquatics centre was unveiled to the public and diver Tom Daly marked the occasion by taking the first official dive into the pool.

The consistent and careful management of the London 2012 programme has enabled us to fund additional security requirements, and invest in projects to help drive economic growth and tourism as a result of the games, all while staying within the £9.3 billion public sector funding package (PSFP).

The Home Office and LOCOG have undertaken detailed analysis of the venue security staff that will be needed across the UK across a range of London 2012 venues next summer. Our priority is to deliver a safe and secure games therefore we have allocated an additional £271 million for venue security. This figure includes the recruitment and training of 23,700 venue security personnel based on more than 100 competition and non-competition venues across the UK.

We are confident that the core safety and security programme can be delivered within the £475million announced in December 2010's spending review settlement. In order to test the effectiveness, resilience and decision-making capability of key games-time structures and processes, we have also apportioned a further £2.8 million for games-time command, co-ordination and communication testing.

Historically, the opening and closing ceremonies are some of the most memorable and enduring spectacles from every Olympic and Paralympic games. They represent a unique opportunity to showcase the creative talent of the host nation to a global audience of billions. The four ceremonies will have an equivalent airtime value estimated at between £2 billion and £5 billion. To ensure that the UK capitalises on this opportunity, the Government have made available up to £41 million to LOCOG (£7 million of which is Government-held contingency) to support the delivery of the four Olympic and Paralympic ceremonies.

The Government have also allocated £25 million from the PSFP for domestic and international campaigns to drive economic benefits, including tourism, from the games. The "GREAT" campaign launched by the Prime Minister in the autumn and led by VisitBritain, will promote the UK as a destination for tourism and inward investment in key overseas markets. Run in partnership with UKTI, FCO and British Council we estimate that this campaign will attract an extra 800,000 visitors, generating around £400 million of additional spend per annum, as well as attracting £1 billion worth of additional trade and investment. The 70-day Olympic torch relay is a unique opportunity for each of our regions to showcase their culture and heritage to a national audience. Funding of up to £4 million has been released so that we can use the tour to increase domestic tourism across the UK. Through the domestic tourism campaign, it is estimated that 5.3 million additional short break nights will be generated by 2015, creating around £480 million of additional consumer spending.

I would like to commend this report to the members of both Houses and thank them for their continued interest in and support for the London 2012 games.

Copies of the Quarterly Report December 2011 are available online at: www.culture.gov.uk and will be deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

EU Ban (Keeping of Hens in Conventional Cages)

The Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr James Paice): I know many members of the House have been following progress on the implementation of the EU-wide ban on the keeping of hens in conventional cages. I, therefore, want to take this opportunity to update the House and explain how the ban will be enforced by DEFRA and the devolved Administrations.

Council Directive 1999/74/EC, which lays down minimum standards for the protection of laying hens, bans the keeping of hens in conventional ("battery") cages from 1 January 2012. This represents one of the most significant welfare advances across the EU and DEFRA, along with the devolved Administrations, has been working hard to see it effectively implemented across the European Union.

The Government acknowledge the sterling job that the UK egg industry has done in preparing for the ban and the very big investment made in converting to other production systems, demonstrating its commitment to animal welfare, which is also a serious consideration for many consumers when purchasing food. The vast majority of UK producers will be compliant by 1 January 2012.

It is a different story across Europe. 13 of the 27 member states have said that they will not be ready. There could be about 50 million hens that will still be in conventional cages across the EU in unacceptable conditions on 1 January 2012.

We want to protect our producers who have invested some £400 million in converting out of conventional cages, equivalent to spending £25 per hen housed. To this end, I have met with the Commission a number of times over the last year in an attempt to find a solution. A reliance on infraction proceedings against non-compliant member states will not be enough to deal with the negative impact that non-compliance would cause and that additional enforcement measures would need to be put in place to prevent market disturbance. In September, the Secretary of State wrote jointly with nine other concerned member states to the European Commission urging them to act quickly. At the October Agriculture Council, the Commission indicated that despite their efforts an intra-Community trade ban was not legally possible.

The Commission then turned to looking for a robust enforcement approach that avoids large numbers of producers having to close down their operations and the destruction of millions of hens and non-compliant eggs, while at the same time protecting all those producers who have complied with the ban and implemented a flagship animal welfare issue. While I never wished to see the 2012 deadline delayed, I was willing to explore the idea of a practical solution which would give some protection to UK and other compliant producers, by ensuring eggs from illegal cages did not leave the country of origin.

There was a meeting at official level on 29 November, where the Commission said that the early stages of pre-infraction procedures had already begun with non-compliant member states. The idea of a gentleman's agreement will not be progressed, but the Commission has asked for action plans from all non-compliant member states, many of whom supported keeping non-compliant eggs within national borders. The Commission's Food and Veterinary Office missions will be targeted at the beginning of 2012 at non-compliant member states and all member states have been asked to submit lists of compliant and non-compliant producers.

We have decided that the UK enforcement strategy to deal with non-compliance with the conventional cage ban will be robust.

The Government have thoroughly investigated the possibility of taking unilateral action and bringing in a UK ban on all imports of egg and egg products which have been produced in conventional cages in other member states. However, given the very significant legal and financial implications of introducing such a ban, coupled with practical difficulties in enforcing it, it is not a realistic option.

Instead, DEFRA and the devolved Administrations will be adopting the most robust enforcement approach available to us within the legal constraints that exist. Risk-based surveillance to ensure imported shell eggs from other member states have been produced in compliance with the cage ban will be in place from 1 January. The Animal Health and Veterinary Laboratories Agency (AHVLA) is the body responsible for enforcing the conventional cage ban in Great Britain. Its knowledge of the industry and those importing eggs, coupled with an understanding of a member state's level of compliance will define the level of surveillance.

AHVLA surveillance on imports of shell eggs will use ultraviolet light analysis to identify batches of caged eggs that are not from an enriched cage environment. This technique has successfully been used to date to identify caged eggs within batches described as being produced in alternative systems, for example, free-range. It has not up until now been used to specifically identify different types of caged egg production, but we have had the technique independently validated and it can be done. This technique will be used as a marker to prompt further action. Once suspected non-compliant shell eggs are identified, AHVLA will contact the Competent Authority in the originating member state and ask for confirmation of the system of production.

If they are found to be from an illegal system, they will be prevented from being marketed as class A eggs and would be sent for processing (i.e. be treated as class B eggs)—if indeed any UK processors would accept them. If the eggs were found to be from a compliant system, the eggs would be released.

We believe this scrutiny will mean importers will make greater efforts to ensure the source and integrity of the eggs they import, given the economic disadvantage that would follow if they were importing illegally produced eggs. We have no wish to hinder legal trade or disadvantage compliant producers wherever they are in Europe and we are quite happy to use member states' own lists of compliant producers, which AHVLA can check against and which will mean that these consignments are less likely to be held up.

However, the import of processed egg, principally in liquid or powdered form, is less easy to trace as the supply chain is less transparent and more challenging to audit. Because of a loophole in the egg marketing regulations, we cannot prohibit the marketing of any eggs produced in conventional cages from 1 January 2012 which are sent to processing (whether sent as ungraded or class B), nor can we prohibit the use of any products made from such eggs. We will continue to press in Europe to get this loophole closed, but until then we are taking steps to establish as much compliance as is possible with the conventional cage ban for egg products by working closely with the food industry.

An essential part of the UK's enforcement strategy is to ensure that retailers, egg processors, food manufacturers and the food service industry have stringent traceability tests in place to ensure that they are not using non-compliant eggs from either the UK or from other member states. Once again, our industry has risen to that challenge.

Retailers, food manufacturers, food service companies and processors have come out publically in support of UK egg producers. The British Retail Consortium has guaranteed that conventional caged eggs will not be bought by the major retailers or used as ingredients in their own brand products. They have put in place stringent traceability tests to ensure that they will not be buying conventional caged eggs. Retailers that have made this guarantee are Marks and Spencer, Morrisons, Asda, J Sainsbury, Co-operative Group, Tesco, Waitrose, Iceland Foods, Greggs, Starbucks and McDonald's. Many food manufacturers and food service companies have also given a similar guarantee for eggs or egg products. They include: Premier Foods plc, Marlow Foods Ltd, United Biscuits, Ferrero UK, Apetito, Allied Mills, Allied Bakeries, Burton's Biscuit Company, Speedibake, Dairy Crest, The Silver Spoon Company, Westmill Foods, Compass, Baxter Storey, and Sodexo. The following egg processors have also signed up to not sourcing conventional caged eggs from 1 January 2012: Manton's, Noble Foods, Framptons, Fridays, Oaklands Farm Eggs, Lowrie Foods, and the UK Egg Centre. We are in discussion with others who we hope to be able to add to this list.

The UK is 82% self-sufficient in egg and egg products, with the remaining 18% coming from other member states. Of the 18% of egg and egg products being imported, approximately 50% will be imported as shell egg and 50% imported as egg product (liquid or powder). The fact that we have managed to get the majority of UK processors on board, reduces the likelihood of non-compliant egg products being imported and demonstrates that full traceability is possible and should not be used as a justification by others to say that it is not.

Ultimately, it will be for the Competent Authority in each member state to take responsibility at source for ensuring that their producers no longer keep hens in conventional cages post 1 January 2012. If a retailer purchased eggs from a conventional cage that are marked incorrectly as class A, without exercising appropriate due diligence, they would be committing a marketing offence. The caterer, processor or product manufacturer might also be guilty of aiding and abetting such an offence if they knowingly purchased eggs purporting to be class A which derive from illegal cages.

The Government will also do their bit to protect compliant producers. We will be making necessary changes to the Government Buying Standards mandatory criteria to ensure that eggs produced in conventional cages, are not used in any form whether this is fresh, powdered or liquid.

Given our commitment to support compliant producers, we will also be taking tough action against any UK producers found to have laying hens in conventional cages after 1 January 2012. The AHVLA have visited the vast majority of known cage producers to remind them of the need to comply with the conventional cage ban when it comes into force at the end of the year and at the same time find out producers' intentions, as to whether they will cease production or convert to alternative systems. Similar action has also been taken by Scottish Government officials and officials in the Department of Agriculture and Rural Development in Northern Ireland. This has helped to build a picture of where remaining non-compliance may be found and thus where risk based inspections should be targeted in the UK from 1 January 2012. All producers targeted by the intelligence led risk analysis will be visited at the beginning of next year. If contraventions are found at the time of the visit, they will be dealt with using provisions within the Welfare of Farmed Animals (England) Regulations 2007, which implements Council Directive 99/74/EC, and the egg marketing regulations. A compliance notice will be issued immediately to ensure that conventional caged eggs do not go into the class A market, preventing the producer from benefiting from the production of illegally produced eggs and prosecution will be considered. Similar action will be taken as appropriate in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

We will be monitoring the situation carefully in the new year and will not hesitate to raise matters in Europe if any issues arise. I, together with my ministerial colleagues in the devolved Administrations, intend to continue urging the Commission to learn lessons from this experience with the conventional cage ban to avoid the same kind of problems occurring next year, leading up to the EU ban on the use of sow stalls on 1 January 2013.

HOME DEPARTMENT

The Draft Immigration (Biometric Registration) Regulations 2012

The Minister for Immigration (Damian Green): The Government are today laying before the House the draft Immigration (Biometric Registration) Regulations 2012. These will complete the roll-out of biometric immigration documents, known as biometric residence permits (BRPs), to all in-country categories of foreign nationals applying to extend their stay in the UK for over six months from 29 February 2012, including settlement, recognised refugees and protection categories.

This is required for the UK to comply with EU regulations (European Council Regulation (EC) No. 1030/2002 of 13 June 2002 Regulation, amended in April 2008 by Council Regulation (EC) No. 380/2008) that the UK opted in to and which lay down a uniform format for residence permits for third-country nationals. The UK Border Agency has been rolling out biometric immigration documents, known as biometric residence permits, by immigration category since November 2008.

We have made significant progress since the roll-out of biometric residence permits began in September 2008 and will complete the in-country roll-out three months before the EU deadline.

The roll-out to overseas applicants coming to the UK for more than six months and to in-country applications made prior to a biometric registration requirement needs significant infrastructure and system changes. No major technical changes are to be made to systems during the accreditation period of the games which runs from 30 March 2012 to 8 November 2012, to ensure that the integrity and robustness of our systems is maintained during this critical time.

For the overseas roll-out of biometric permits, we will return to Parliament with our plans, including policy proposals, for the final stage of the roll-out which will be after the accreditation period of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games. To manage the changes required to roll out to any migrant who applied in-country before a requirement to apply for a biometric residence permit, we will continue to issue a sticker (vignette) as evidence of leave until 1 December 2012. Any migrant granted leave of more than six months from this date will be required by these regulations to apply for a biometric residence permit if they have not done so already.

To manage the increased volumes of applicants registering their fingerprints and digital facial image, I am pleased to announce that the UK Border Agency has awarded the contract for delivering third-party enrolment to the Post Office Ltd.

Biometric residence permits simplify the checks that the UK Border Agency, employers and public service providers need to undertake to confirm immigration status and eligibility to entitlements in the UK. Our plans to introduce an automated online employers checking service for biometric residence permits from spring next year will make it even easier for employers to conduct quick and easy real-time checks on the validity of the document.

I can confirm that we are publishing the impact assessment for the changes on the UK Border Agency website and I will arrange for a copy to be placed in the House Library.

Criminal Records Regime Review (Government Response)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department (Lynne Featherstone): I have today placed in the Library of the House the report by Mrs Sunita Mason, the independent adviser for criminality information management, of phase 2 of her review of the criminal records regime, as well as the Government's formal response to both phases of that review.

I published Mrs Mason's phase 1 report on 11 February, alongside the Protection of Freedoms Bill. The Bill includes a number of proposals which reflect recommendations from that first report and which will improve the proportionality and efficiency of the employment vetting systems centring on the Criminal Records Bureau (CRB). I am pleased to publish today Mrs Mason's phase 2 report, which addresses wider criminal records issues such as definition, management and international exchange. I am grateful to Mrs Mason for her contribution to this important agenda, which encompasses two central objectives for the Government—rebalancing civil liberties where necessary and maintaining effective, efficient and affordable public protection arrangements.

The Government accept the large majority of Mrs Mason's recommendations, either unconditionally or in principle. Full details are in the response document.

The significant improvements to the Criminal Record Bureau's processes which the Government have brought forward in the Protection of Freedoms Bill will, I believe, substantially reduce the cost and administrative burdens involved in pursuing necessary employment checks. And as such, they are also supportive of other key Government priorities such as the growth agenda and the employment law review. They will also ensure greater protection of applicants' rights as only relevant and accurate personal information will ever be disclosed by the police. For example, we are giving the applicant the opportunity under these revised CRB processes to review and, if appropriate, dispute any information held about them by the police prior to it being disclosed to an employer. We have also included a provision to make the CRB process less burdensome on all concerned by introducing a new, online status checking capability that will in effect mean individuals can reuse their certificates for different employers across the same work force and so will no longer need to apply for a new certificate every time they want to take up a new role. This will have a positive impact on business, making it significantly easier for employers to take on staff in relevant sectors.

We do not accept Mrs Mason's recommendation to scale back significantly eligibility for criminal records checks. The Protection of Freedoms Bill is already being used to reduce very substantially the scope of "regulated activity" from which people can be barred. Against that background we think it is important to retain the capacity to apply for criminal records checks in relation to a broader set of sensitive roles.

We accept in principle Mrs Mason's recommendation that there should be a clear time scale for the police to make decisions on whether there is relevant information that should be disclosed on an enhanced criminal record certificate. However, we do not accept that the certificate should be issued at the end of a defined period where information is still being considered by the police, as that could pose significant risks to public protection.

In response to Mrs Mason's phase 2 recommendations, for now we intend to maintain the current arrangements for holding criminal records on the police national computer, while ensuring the controls on accessing those records are sufficiently strong. At the same time, we will take her steer in terms of providing a clearer definition of what constitutes a criminal record and reviewing precisely which convictions and other disposals should be recorded on national systems. Looking further forward, and following establishment of the long-term arrangements for the management and delivery of the PNC services after the NPIA has been closed, we will consider the need for alternative options for sharing and managing criminal records. Similarly, we will review and update the strategy for international exchange of criminal records.

I am clear that, taken as a package, the implementation of Mrs Mason's recommendations will make a key contribution to our commitment to scale back the criminal records regime to common-sense levels.

JUSTICE

Forfeiture Rule and Law of Succession

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Jonathan Djanogly): I am today announcing that I have made an order to bring sections 1, 2 and 3 of the Estates of Deceased Persons (Forfeiture Rule and Law of Succession) Act 2011 (the Act) into force on 1 February 2012. The Act implements, with modifications, recommendations of the Law Commission.

The Act amends the law of succession in England and Wales where a person disclaims (that is, rejects) an inheritance or is disqualified from receiving an inheritance by reason of the forfeiture rule. The forfeiture rule is defined in section 1 of the Forfeiture Act 1982 as meaning the rule of public policy which in certain circumstances precludes a person who has unlawfully killed another, or unlawfully aided, abetted, counselled or procured the death of that other, from acquiring a benefit in consequence of the killing.

In both these situations, the Act has the effect that the person who disclaims or whose inheritance is forfeited is treated, for the purpose of deciding who may inherit, as having died immediately before the testator or intestate. This will have the effect on intestacy that persons claiming through the person who is deemed to have died, such as his or her children, will be able to inherit. Where there is a will, the identity of the person entitled to the property instead of the person who is deemed to have died will depend on the terms of the will.

The Act also amends the law so that a child is able to inherit his or her parent's interest in an intestate estate, where the parent dies neither married nor civil partnered before the age of 18 and the child is alive at the time of the intestate's death.

SCOTLAND

Parliamentary Written Question (Correction)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Scotland (David Mundell): I regret that the written answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Harwich and North Essex (Mr Jenkin) on 15 November, Official Report, column 665W, contained an error. The answer stated that the TaxPayers Alliance applied for permission to bring judicial review against the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of the Glasgow Commonwealth Games Act 2008 (Games Association Right) Order 2009. This is not correct. The application for permission to bring judicial review was made by Big Brother Watch and not by the TaxPayers Alliance.

The correct answer is as follows:

David Mundell: In the last Parliament there were two applications:

(1) Derek Traynor and James Fisher raised petitions for judicial review against the Secretary of State for Scotland and Scottish Ministers in respect of the Scottish Parliament (Elections etc.) Order 2007. The applications were unsuccessful at first instance in the Court of Session, the petitioners appealed, and the appeals remain pending at their request. The legal costs incurred by the Secretary of State for Scotland to date are £4,555.50.

(2) Big Brother Watch applied for permission to bring judicial review against the Secretary of State for Scotland in respect of the Glasgow Commonwealth Games Act 2008 (Games Association Right) Order 2009. The application was refused. The Scotland Office's legal costs were £7,080. The Scotland Office applied for costs against the applicant. Costs were awarded in part and they have been paid.

There have been no applications for judicial review against the Scotland Office since May 2010.

TRANSPORT

Railway Stations (Access for All)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Norman Baker): Improving access to Great Britain's railway stations is a key priority for this Government. I am therefore pleased to announce today a further £37.5 million of "mid-tier" Access for All funding for projects requiring up to £1 million of Government support. This forms part of the wider £370 million Access for All programme launched in 2006 which will deliver an accessible, step-free route at 148 key stations. Rail passengers will benefit from better access through the provision of new lifts, ramps, raised "easier access humps" on platforms as well as new accessible toilets.

Major improvements will take place at stations across the country including at London Paddington, St Austell, Stratford, Stratford-upon-Avon and Ystrad Mynach. Network Rail will also receive funding to add tactile edge paving at 27 stations and £5 million to provide "easy access humps" to reduce the stepping distance between the platform and the train. The full list of successful stations will be made available on the Department for Transport's website.

All work at the stations will be completed by March 2014.

We are also taking the opportunity to increase the funding allocated to train operating companies. This funding will increase from £5 million a year to £7 million a year for the next three years, beginning in April 2012. It is based on the number of stations that they manage and is used to deliver smaller scale or more locally focused access improvements at stations.

Finally, I have agreed to release £57 million from the existing budget earlier than planned to allow the accelerated delivery of obstacle-free routes at 27 stations.

Business Plan (Update)

The Secretary of State for Transport (Justine Greening): The Department for Transport's business plan says that, following the consultation on high-speed rail which was held earlier this year, we would complete the analysis of consultation responses and announce our subsequent decisions to Parliament in December.

Since taking up office in October I have been considering the issues, raised as part of the consultation and additionally have listened to the views of hon. Members. In order to ensure that my decision is based on a careful consideration of all relevant factors, I have concluded that I should allow myself until early in 2012 to announce my decisions. I am therefore notifying the House that I will not be making a further statement on the subject of high-speed rail this year, but I expect to announce my decisions in January.

Defending Against Piracy (UK Ships)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mike Penning): The rise in the number of incidents involving pirates in certain parts of the world has highlighted the need to ensure UK-flagged vessels are able to adequately protect themselves against such threats. Evidence shows that ships with armed guards are less likely to be attacked and taken for ransom, and the House will be aware that the Prime Minister confirmed last month that the Government now recognise the use of private armed guards as an option to protect UK registered ships and their crews from acts of piracy. This applies in exceptional circumstances as defined below:

- when the ship is transiting the high seas throughout the high-risk area (an area bounded by Suez and the straights of Hormuz to the north, 10°S and 78°E); and
- the latest "Best Management Practices" is being followed fully but, on its own, is not deemed by the shipping company and the ship's master as sufficient to protect against acts of piracy; and
- the use of armed guards is assessed to reduce the risk to the lives and well-being of those onboard the ship.

I am therefore today, publishing interim guidance to shipping companies on the use of armed guards onboard UK flagged ships. This guidance covers, among other things, the factors to be included in the risk assessment, advice on selecting a private security company, and a requirement for the shipping company to produce a counter-piracy plan and submit a copy to my Department.

A private security company (PSC) employed to put armed guards on board UK ships will require authorisation from the Home Office for possession of any prohibited firearms as defined in the Firearms Act 1968 (as amended). Checks will be carried out by the Home Office and police into the PSC and its personnel before an authorisation is granted.

The guidance to shipping companies and the Home Office process for authorising the possession of prohibited firearms are both interim and will be reviewed within 12 months so that they reflect continuing national and international work to ensure high standards in the provision of armed guards in the maritime domain.

Roads Classification

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Norman Baker): I am pleased to announce that, following consultation, the Department will be devolving responsibility for roads classification and aspects of the primary route network from April 2012.

This marks the first major revision of these systems since the first Wilson Government, and represents a major decentralisation of power. It will greatly improve the ability of local authorities to make changes on their roads, and greatly reduce the amount of central Government resource needed to run the system.

Under the new system:

- Local authorities will have control over roads classification decisions in their area, determining which roads should be "A" roads, "B" roads, etc.
- Local authorities will be able to set the roads used by the primary route network ("A" roads with green signs), while central Government retain oversight of the whole system.
- Central Government will continue to look after the strategic road network.

For roads classification and the primary route network, the Department for Transport will reduce its role to handling appeal cases and any disputes which might arise between local authorities, leaving local authorities to manage their roads in the manner they judge most effective.

As part of the consultation, we also took the opportunity to examine whether there might be better ways to link the management of the system with sat-nav technology. The Department will be taking this work forward, and will make a further statement in the new year.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Remploy (Annual Report)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Maria Miller): The Remploy annual report and financial statements 2011 are published today. Copies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses and will be available in the Vote Office and the Printed Paper Office later today. Electronic copies will be available on the Remploy website:

http://www.remploy.co.uk/about-us/corporategovernance/annualreports.ashx

I have written to the chairman of Remploy formally approving the agreed 2011-12 performance and resources agreement between the Department and the company, as follows:

Target Description	Target
To live within the company's financial means in the 2011-12 financial year and achieve:
operational funding result of	£97.7 million
modernisation of the business within a cost of	£5.4 million Factory businesses to achieve:
an operating result (loss) of	£52.5 million
cost per disabled employee of	£24,000
Employment Service business to achieve an operating result of	£28.2 million
total job outcomes of	18,000
—of which total disabled job outcomes	16,500
—of which Work Choice job outcomes	7,500
—of which other Grant-in-Aid funded outcomes	1,000
—of which other disabled job outcomes	8,000

Written Ministerial Statements

TREASURY

Asset Protection Agency

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): The Asset Protection Agency (APA) has today published two legal agreements relating to the asset protection scheme (APS). Copies of the agreements have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

The first of these agreements moves the main focus of asset management governance to the riskiest assets in the APS, to ensure that the level of APA oversight is commensurate with our current view of the risk associated with the APS. The second principally introduces revised rules for overdrafts that are outside the scope of the supplemental agreement relating to operational alignment outlined in the written ministerial statement laid on 14 July 2011, Official Report, column 35WS. This resolves an agreement to agree in the original accession agreement.

These agreements are in addition to the supplemental agreement on aligning the operation of the APS with RBS's "business as usual" finance and risk management process, as outlined in the WMS on 14 July 2011. Details of other previous supplemental agreements are contained in the WMS laid on 15 February 2011, Official Report, column 72WS .

CABINET OFFICE

Central Office of Information

The Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General (Mr Francis Maude): I announced on 23 June 2011 that the Government's changes to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of Government communication would include the closure of the Central Office of Information (COI). The Central Office of Information Trading Fund (Revocation) Order 2011, laid before the House of Commons today, provides for the COI trading fund to cease to exist on 30 December 2011. On the same day as the COI trading fund ceases to exist, the Prime Minister has agreed that the existing functions of COI should be transferred to the Cabinet Office and therefore that COI will cease to exist as a separate non-ministerial Department.

DEFENCE

EU Foreign Affairs Council (Defence)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Gerald Howarth): The EU Foreign Affairs Council met in Defence Ministers formation on 30 November 2011 in Brussels. I represented the UK.

The agenda items covered were current operations, partnerships, the Athena mechanism review (the method for calculating common funding for military operations), and the European Defence Agency (EDA) budget.

Foreign Affairs Council (Defence)

The three current EU operations, Operation Atalanta (counter-piracy). Operation Althea (Bosnia and Herzegovina) and EU training mission Somalia (military training mission) were discussed in the Council. While expressing concern about the difficulty in meeting the commitments to which member states have agreed, I expressed the UK's support for these ongoing operations and presented the UK's offer to continue to command Operation Atalanta from the UK's operational headquarters at Northwood.

EU/NATO partnerships were also discussed, re-emphasising the importance of close working relations while avoiding duplication.

There was no discussion at the Council on the Athena mechanism review (the method for calculating common funding for military operations) as nations had been unable previously to reach agreement. The noble Baroness Ashton proposed that further work should be carried out and the Council conclusions noted the ongoing work on the review with a view to an agreement by the end of 2011.

I made clear that, in the current economic climate, with most member states, including the UK, reducing their defence budgets, I could not agree to an increase in the budget of the EDA for 2012. The Council subsequently agreed to freeze the EDA budget for 2012 at the same level as 2011 (€30.5 million) in accordance with the recommendation of Baroness Ashton.

Defence and Foreign Secretaries' Joint Dinner

In the Defence and Foreign Secretaries' joint dinner, the EU's performance in planning and conducting missions and operations was discussed with further discussions taking place at the Foreign Affairs Council on 1 December 2011. The outcome of these discussions is reported separately in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's written ministerial statement on the Foreign Affairs Council (FAC).

In the FAC, Council conclusions on common security and defence policy (CSDP), missions and operations, capability development and improving the EU's performance in planning and conducting missions and operations were agreed. These can be found at:

http://www.consilium.europa.eu/uedocs/cms_data/docs/pressdata/EN/foraff/126504.pdf.

The European Defence Agency Steering Board

An EDA steering board at Defence Ministers level was held immediately before the Foreign Affairs Council (Defence). This meeting agreed the EDA work programme 2012, the EDA work plan for 2012-14, the annual defence data report, and the establishment of the helicopter training programme category B project which meets the UK's requirement for EDA preparations to deliver real capability. I announced the UK's intention to join the helicopter training programme project. There was a substantive discussion on pooling and sharing; in particular on the opportunities identified by the EDA and member states expressed their interest in engaging in specific projects and programmes.

HEALTH

NHS Outcomes Framework 2012-13

The Secretary of State for Health (Mr Andrew Lansley): The White Paper "Equity and Excellence: Liberating the NHS" (Cm 7881) outlined a vision of an NHS that achieves health outcomes that are among the best in the world. It explained that an NHS outcomes framework would be developed to provide national level accountability for the outcomes that the NHS delivers.

I have today published "The NHS Outcomes Framework 2012-13". This refreshes the first NHS outcomes framework published for England in December 2010 and includes updated definitions for some of the indicators in the framework.

The framework has three main purposes, which remain the same in this updated version:

to provide a national level overview of how the NHS is performing against certain outcome measures; to act as a mechanism for the Secretary of State to hold the NHS Commissioning Board to account for delivering improvements in outcomes, from April 2013; and to act as a catalyst for driving improvement and a focus on outcomes throughout the NHS.

A copy of "The NHS Outcomes Framework 2012-13" has been placed in the Library. Copies are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office and to noble Lords from the Printed Paper Office.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

High-Level Forum on Aid Effectiveness (Busan)

The Secretary of State for International Development (Mr Andrew Mitchell): I would like to inform the House of the outcomes from the fourth high-level forum on aid effectiveness, which I attended in Busan, Republic of Korea on 29 November to 1 December 2011.

I am pleased to report that Britain's three priority areas for Busan—results, transparency and fragile states—formed the core of the Busan outcome document, and that our goal of getting an agreement that the emerging economies could support was also met.

A major achievement of the forum was the establishment of a new global partnership for effective development co-operation, which for the first time includes emerging economies like China and Brazil as participants in a development partnership based on recognised common goals and shared principles. This followed significant work by the UK to ensure China joined the partnership, including discussions I held with Chinese Minister of Commerce Chen Deming in Beijing immediately ahead of Busan. The global partnership also includes civil society, Parliaments and the private sector, recognising the important role played by each in achieving development results.

The Busan outcome document: "Busan Partnership for Effective Development Co-operation" places the UK's focus on results, transparency and fragility at the heart of the international development agenda. It includes agreement to a new shared principle to "Focus on Results", aimed at ensuring our development efforts have a lasting impact on eradicating poverty, and reflecting UK-led work over the past 18 months to build international support for this agenda. There was also agreement to a new shared principle on transparency, and further success in this important area with the US, Canada and CDC all signing up to the UK-led international aid transparency initiative. This will significantly boost further the information available to citizens about aid, helping enable them to hold their Governments to account.

Another achievement in Busan was the launch of the "New Deal" for ways of working in fragile and conflict-affected countries, which are often furthest from reaching the millennium development goals (MDGs). The UK has played a key role in developing this "New Deal", which includes five new peace-building and state-building goals aimed at making progress in areas where it is most urgently needed, including justice, security and jobs. I was pleased to announce in Busan that the UK will be partnering South Sudan and Afghanistan to implement the "New Deal".

I am determined to ensure that the agreements reached there are followed up and that the new global partnership achieves the goals set out. As part of this we will be working with others to maintain the clear focus on results needed to improve the lives of millions of poor people around the world, and to ensure value for money for the UK taxpayer.

PRIME MINISTER

Strategic Defence and Security Review (First Annual Report)

The Prime Minister (Mr David Cameron): Along with the Deputy Prime Minister, and the other members of the National Security Council, I am pleased to provide the House with the following update on implementation of the 2010 strategic defence and security review. This review was undertaken at a time of immense challenge for UK defence and security: a severe mismatch between future defence plans and budgets inherited from the previous Government; the absence of any up-to-date strategy within the Ministry of Defence (MOD), due to the lack of a defence review for 12 years; a major global economic crisis that required action across the whole of Government to tackle the deficit; and armed forces engaged in a major campaign in Afghanistan. As the Government made it clear at the time, the challenges facing defence were too great to solve in a single review. But the SDSR took the first vital steps to transform UK defence and security to face the challenges of the 21st century.

Based on the conclusions of the new national security strategy, "A Strong Britain in an Age of Uncertainty", the SDSR described the National Security Council's chosen policy response: an adaptable defence and security posture able to respond flexibly to a wide range of potential crises while continuing to fulfil our standing commitments. This is an approach that depends upon integrated effort across Government, achieving greater effect by combining defence, development, diplomatic, intelligence and other capabilities. Events over the last year, especially the profound changes under way in north Africa, have underlined the wisdom of this approach: few predicted an Arab spring even six months before it occurred—powerfully illustrating the need for a highly adaptable posture The campaign in Libya showed it was right to keep balanced armed forces, right to retain a significant RAF fast-jet capability, right to focus on building practical co-operation with the UAE and Qatar, and right to be buying more drones, tanker aircraft, helicopters and intelligence gathering capability.

We undertook in the SDSR to report annually to Parliament on its implementation. Today the Deputy Prime Minister and I are placing copies of the first SDSR annual progress report in the Library of the House. The report describes the work that has been carried out in the last year. Key developments include agreement on a radical plan to transform the MOD, based on the conclusions of the review by Lord Levene; taking the very difficult further steps necessary to close the £38 billion shortfall in funding over the next 10 years; completion of a review into the future of the reserve forces; establishment of a transformative cyber-security programme; new measures to tackle both the terrorist and organised crime threats to the UK; and expanding and strengthening our network of influence in a fast changing world.

Decisions taken during the SDSR and the 2010 comprehensive spending review ensured that we will continue to meet the NATO target of spending at least 2% of GDP on defence over the spending review period: in 2014-15, the UK defence budget will be £33.5 billion. Further work was undertaken this year to address the longer-term financial position so that on 18 July the Government were able to set out plans to increase in real terms the investment in defence equipment by 1% per annum between 2015-16 and 2020-21. On the same day, the Government announced detailed plans to return the Army from Germany and £1.5 billion of additional investment in our reserve forces, expanding their size after years of decline, enhancing their role and adjusting the long-term balance between the regulars and reserves. Taken together with a range of further measures this has brought the defence programme broadly into balance with the resources available for the first time in many years and ensured that the Government can deliver the long-term vision for our armed forces: Future Force 2020.

These measures ensure that Britain retains the fourth largest military budget in the world and that we will invest around £150 billion in equipment for our armed forces over the next 10 years. By tackling the imbalance in the defence programme, the Government have been able to commit to a range of new equipment programmes for which funding had previously not been identified, including 14 new Chinook helicopters and refurbishment of the Army's fleet of Warrior vehicles. In May this year, formal approval was granted to begin the assessment phase for the programme to replace the Vanguard-class submarines. In addition, to assist the Liberal Democrats make the case for alternatives to the Trident system, the Government initiated a study into the costs, feasibility and credibility of alternative nuclear deterrent systems and postures. Progress has also been made on implementing the new nuclear assurances policy and the reduction in our nuclear weapon stockpile to no more than 180 warheads, both commitments set out in the SDSR.

The past year has seen significant changes in the threat from international terrorism. Al Qaeda's leadership is now weaker than at any time since 9/11. But al-Qaeda continues to pose a threat and groups affiliated to al-Qaeda in countries such as Yemen and Somalia have emerged as a threat in their own right. We are implementing a revised counter-terrorism strategy to tackle the terrorist threat to the UK and our interests overseas. In keeping with the approach in the SDSR, we are also working hard to tackle the underlying causes of instability in Yemen and Somalia.

The SDSR recognised the rapidly changing nature of opportunities and risks from cyberspace. Following the April launch of the UK's £650 million national cyber-security programme, the new cyber-security strategy, published on 25 November, sets out the UK's approach to cyber-security in four priority areas: securing opportunities for UK growth, including overhauling the UK's approach to tackling cybercrime; strengthening and securing UK infrastructure and improving our ability to protect our national interests in cyberspace; helping shape an open, vibrant and safe cyberspace; and improving national cyber-security skills and capabilities. November's London conference on cyberspace demonstrated the UK's continued lead in international cyber-thinking and enabled us to build alliances with like-minded nations, the private sector and civil society.

The organised crime strategy, "Local to Global", was published in July, setting out the Government's response to organised crime, a key element being the creation of the National Crime Agency—a powerful new body of operational crime fighters that will make the UK a hostile environment for serious and organised criminality. The NCA will incorporate a border policing command which will provide a co-ordinated, multi-agency, cohesive approach to securing the border.

Tackling the root causes of instability and helping to resolve conflicts overseas are key national security tasks. We have put development at the heart of an integrated approach that supports the world's most vulnerable people and protects Britain from external threats. The FCO, DFID and MOD launched the building stability overseas strategy on 19 July. The three Departments are now working with the rest of Government and with NGOs and international partners to implement the strategy. In other areas too, the SDSR committed us to focusing existing resources better in a more co-ordinated Government response. On natural hazards, the last year has seen the largest ever multi-agency exercise to test the UK's response, as well as a review of arrangements for an influenza pandemic and vital steps to reduce the vulnerability of critical national infrastructure.

In a rapidly changing world, alliances and partnerships are more important than ever to the UK's international influence and therefore our national security and prosperity. Internationally we rarely act alone. We are working more closely with established allies, including through the two ground-breaking defence treaties signed with France last year and our continuing close co-operation with the USA. We continue to deepen our defence co-operation with France and to explore the potential to open such co-operation to other nations willing to invest in developing and deploying modern military capabilities. The UK has led the debate on tougher action on piracy, commanding EU Operation Atalanta, the EU mission to counter piracy off the coast of Somalia. On 11 May, the Foreign Office also announced plans to expand its diplomatic network in India, China, Brazil, Turkey, Mexico and Indonesia, and re-open embassies in Côte D'Ivoire, El Salvador and Madagascar. We will use this strengthened diplomatic network to develop the partnerships the UK needs not only to ensure our security but also to promote British commercial interests—as we did through the UK business delegations that have accompanied ministerial visits to China, India, Brazil and Russia.

The acid test of any defence and security strategy is its ability to deal with a crisis. The UK's prompt and flexible military, diplomatic and stabilisation activity in Libya confirmed the validity of many of the key conclusions of the SDSR. The outstanding performance of our armed forces and civilians demonstrated the UK's continued ability to project power flexibly and to take a leading role in shaping international events. NATO again demonstrated its centrality. And the excellent political and military cooperation with France, other NATO partners and Gulf states demonstrated the vital importance of strengthening defence ties with existing allies and new partners in tackling defence and security.

Work continues across Government to implement the SDSR and we will provide a further annual update to Parliament in 2012.

TRANSPORT

EU Transport Council

The Secretary of State for Transport (Justine Greening): I will attend the second Transport Council of the Polish presidency which will take place in Brussels on 12 December.

The presidency will be seeking a political agreement on a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing a single European railway area (Recast). The European Parliament had its first reading of this proposal on 16 November. Many of the Parliament's amendments differed significantly from the Council's general approach text. Following discussion at the one Council working group meeting that took place following the first reading it is expected the presidency will seek a political agreement, which incorporates only those amendments that do not alter the general approach, and thus will be acceptable to the UK.

The Council will be asked to reach a partial general approach on a draft regulation amending Regulation 3821/85 on recording equipment in road transport and amending Regulation 561/2006. The UK supports elements of the proposal that aim to reduce burdens on business. I will want to resist provisions that might impose unnecessary burdens or additional costs on Government or industry, including the proposal to ban operators from installing and calibrating tachographs in their own vehicles. I will be seeking to minimise the risks of increases in costs and burdens via future decisions taken by the European Commission ("the Commission") under a delegated or implementing act, by pressing for clearly specified constraints on the scope of proposed action.

The Council will be asked to reach a general approach on a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Directive 2008/106/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the minimum level of training of seafarers. Although we would question the merit of a European database of seafarer certification, we have negotiated important changes which would require the anonymisation of seafarer personal data to be a mandatory precondition of the obligation to transfer data. We have also negotiated changes to align the text more closely with the deadline for the implementation of the amendments to the international convention on standards of training, certification and watchkeeping for seafarers to avoid placing additional burdens on EU member states which would put our flags at a competitive disadvantage with other countries' flags.

The Council will be asked to reach a general approach on a proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on the accelerated phasing-in of double-hull or equivalent design requirements for single-hull oil tankers (Recast). The UK is in favour of the general approach proposed for the draft recast of these regulations which brings European law in line with amendments agreed at the International Maritime Organization.

There will also be a progress report on a proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on Union guidelines for the development of the trans-European transport network. The UK recognises that the TEN-T network should be focused on projects that carry clear EU added value and should be supported by guidelines on projects seeking EU funding. We do not support standards and requirements being expanded to the wider TEN-T network on a mandatory basis. We believe that decisions on national projects to be prioritised for development and investment should remain with the member states and the transport operators concerned. Furthermore, the UK is keen to ensure that this proposal does not impose any additional financial or administrative burdens.

The main items under any other business include the Commission's presentation on its proposal for an airport package, the implementation and exploitation of European satellite navigation systems and the connecting Europe facility. The Commission will also provide information on the European aviation safety management system and air cargo security action plan.

The Polish presidency will provide information on the ministerial conference on Eastern Partnership held in Krakow on 24-25 October 2011 and on the high-level conference on the implementation of the single European sky and its extension to third countries held in Warsaw on 28 November 2011.

The Danish delegation will also provide information on the work programme of their forthcoming presidency of the EU.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Innovation and Research Strategy

The Minister for Universities and Science (Mr David Willetts): The UK has a global reputation for innovation and research and our future prosperity rests on our ability to continue to compete in a global economy. Innovation and research is a key priority for this Government, and the Secretary of State and I are today publishing the Government's "Innovation and Research Strategy for Growth" which seeks to build on our existing strengths. A copy of the strategy is being placed in the House Library.

Our universities, research councils and businesses are national assets that form the foundation of the UK's future competitiveness. However, if we are to realise our vision for the UK's future we need to strengthen our innovative capability and encourage further investment in innovation.

The Government have already made clear our commitment to the UK knowledge base by maintaining the annual £4.6 billion budget for science and research programmes with £150 million each year supporting university-business interaction. Going further, we intend to maximise the impact of our research base on economic growth and have announced £610 million to science capital investment projects since January 2011.

We will improve incentives for companies to innovate, especially small and medium-sized enterprises. In addition to our successful changes to the SME research and development tax credit we will invest an additional £75 million to support small business innovation including additional funding for Smart grants that support SME research and development. We will implement a new innovation voucher programme enabling small businesses to engage with universities and the wider knowledge base.

We will also support research innovation and collaboration overseas, focusing on innovation hot spots and high-growth economies, starting with China and India. We will make it a priority to secure greater European funding to support research and development by UK businesses.

The coalition Government are putting innovation and research at the heart of their growth agenda through greater investment and increased collaboration, ensuring that the UK has a promising future.

Unlocking Growth in Cities

The Minister of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (Greg Clark): The Government are today publishing "Unlocking Growth in Cities", which describes a new framework for the relationship between our largest cities and central Government. In particular, the document sets out the terms for a system of "city deals"—binding agreements which enable cities to negotiate the devolution of specific powers, resources and responsibilities required to meet locally-determined economic and social objectives.

The Government are committed to the decisive action required to restore confidence in our economy. This, above all, rests on the principle that sustained recovery and long-term prosperity can only be achieved through private sector growth. This will not occur in the abstract, but through the success of real businesses in real places—especially our cities which, together with their wider commuting areas, account for 74% of England's population and 78% of English jobs.

To achieve their full potential, our urban communities must be empowered to act in support of their local economies. It is widely recognised that, compared to their European counterparts, English cities have less influence over the key decisions that affect their competitiveness in national and international markets. Because power and influence over relevant policy making areas has been so heavily skewed towards Whitehall and Westminster, civic leaders have been forced to look upwards to central Government to resolve problems, rather than through direct engagement with existing and potential sources of private and voluntary sector investment and innovation.

We are therefore committed to revitalising the role of city leadership through a radical shift in power, allowing cities to take on certain responsibilities and resources from Government wherever they can make the case that this would improve the efficiency and outcomes of public policy.

The document sets out a series of indicative options for the transfers of control that could be considered as part of each deal making process. This list is not intended as a statement of policy or as an automatic entitlement for all cities, it is neither prescriptive nor exhaustive. Rather, the specifics of each city deal negotiation will be determined by city-led initiative and its conclusion dependent on the strength of the case presented. From the Government side, we will look for a clear economic rationale, a robust evidence base, an appropriate geography, the acceptance of a proportionate degree of risk and proper standards of governance, co-operation and accountability.

Supported by the Cities Policy Unit in the Cabinet Office, and in partnership with the Department for Communities and Local Government and the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, I will, as Minister for Cities, work closely with city leaders and with colleagues across Whitehall Departments to agree a series of city deals over the coming months. Our timings will reflect the needs and readiness of each city, but given the national imperative to boost economic growth, and the enthusiasm in our cities for moving this agenda forward, we intend to move at pace, agreeing the first wave of city deals by spring next year.

Because of their size and economic importance, we are currently focusing on the largest cities in England. However, taking account of the lessons to be learned from this first wave, we will consider the case for extending the city deal process to other communities in due course.

I have placed copies of "Unlocking Growth in Cities" in Libraries of both Houses.

TREASURY

Bank Levy Double Taxation Agreement (UK and Germany)

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): A double taxation agreement with Germany was signed on 7 December 2011 in relation to both countries' bank levies. The text of the agreement has been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses and made available on HM Revenue and Customs' website. The text will be annexed as a schedule to a Treasury Order and laid before the House of Commons in due course.

RDEL Revisions

The Chief Secretary to the Treasury (Danny Alexander): The autumn statement announced that public sector pay awards will average 1 % for each of the two years following the end of the current pay freeze, and that departmental budgets will be adjusted in line with this policy.

The pay policy will be applied to health, schools, and international development, but the savings will be recycled within existing budgets.

Departmental resource DEL budgets (excluding depreciation) will adjusted by the following amounts:

[1] The budget for schools will be unaffected

[2] Local Government DEL includes funding for fire and rescue authorities and some police funding (shared with the Home Office)

[3] Home Office DEL includes some police funding (shared with local government)

[4] The total DEL reductions are greater than the total managed expenditure (TME) savings scored in the autumn statement, because the TME savings take into account the costs of reduced pension contributions that result from lower pay growth

Reductions to budgets will be made immediately and will be reflected at the main estimate, which will go before Parliament next year.

This represents an average reduction of approximately 1% of affected resource budgets in 2014-15.

As a result of this reduction in departmental budgets, there will be a consequential Barnett reduction in the resource allocation to the Scottish Government, Welsh Government, and Northern Ireland Executive. However, the overall effect of the autumn statement will be a net increase in current budgets for the devolved Administrations. Scotland will see an increase of £69 million, Wales an increase of £22 million, and Northern Ireland an increase of £37 million over the spending review period as a result of the measures announced.

Departments will have flexibility over how they implement the pay policy across their work forces, with pay review bodies and negotiating machinery playing their usual role.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government Finance

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Robert Neill): I am today publishing the Government's formal proposals on distribution of formula grant to English local authorities for 2012-13. Total formula grant for 2012-13 will be £27.8 billion, of which redistributed business rates will be £23.1 billion, revenue support grant £477 million and police grant £4.2 billion.

The 2010 spending review set out how the Government are tackling the deficit we have inherited from the last Administration and put the public finances back in order. Every bit of the public sector needs to do its bit to help pay off the deficit, including local government, which accounts for a quarter of all public spending. The settlements for 2011-12 and 2012-13 set out on 13 December 2010 sought to achieve fair and sustainable settlements for local government between different parts of the country—from urban to rural, north to south, metropolitan to shire.

This settlement is supported by our extension of the successful council tax freeze scheme to a second year, building on the 2011-12 freeze offer taken up by all eligible councils. The offer being made to local authorities for 2012-13 is set out in the written statement of 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 27WS. Council tax more than doubled since 1997 and the freeze will offer real help to hard working families and once again save up to £72 compared to a 5% rise in council tax on top of this year's saving of up to £72. All eligible authorities took up the offer of Government funding to freeze or reduce their council tax in 2011-12. By offering their local residents a council tax freeze again this year, it will offer real help now with the cost of living to local residents, including pensioners, private sector workers and public sector workers.

The estimated yield from business rates in England will be £23.119 billion in 2012-13. Since this is greater than the formula grant control total for 2012-13 agreed at the spending review, the second year's funding for authorities which froze or reduced their council tax in 2011-12 has been included in formula grant for this year. This increases the total amount included as formula grant for 2012-13 to £27.791 billion.

The overall settlement is in keeping with that first proposed in February 2011. The sum of the provisional 2012-13 formula grant as at 7 February 2011 and the 2011-12 council tax freeze grant, therefore, form the allocations of formula grant for 2012-13. The council tax freeze grant allocations remain separately identifiable, and the subtotal given in the breakdown table for each authority is the same as the provisional 2012-13 formula grant allocations as at 7 February 2011 (my written statement of 7 February 2011, Official Report, column 1WS). This is in line with the Government's policy on multi year settlements, which is that we will not change the provisional proposals first published in February 2011 except in entirely exceptional circumstances.

We have continued to focus resources in a way that gives more weight to those parts of the country with the highest levels of need. These are often the areas which are most reliant on central Government grant. As in 2011-12, in calculating the grant distributions we have acted to insulate them by distributing less money on a per capita basis, and giving more weight to the levels of need within different areas. We have also grouped councils into four bands and set different "floors" for their grant reductions. This is a fairer and more progressive system of calculating grant than before.

This year's settlement means that the average spending power reduction for 2012-13 is expected to be limited to 3.3% (or £75 per household), less than last year's comparable figure of 4.5%. We have also again made sure that no council will see their overall spending power fall by more than 8.8%. To fund this, I have transferred £20 million of my Department's budget to local government for 2012-13. This additional funding will smooth the impact of this year's settlement. Councils will have an average spending power of £2,186 per household at their disposal in 2012-13. Reflecting the fairness of the settlement, the average spending power per household in Hackney will be £3,050 compared with £1,537 in Windsor and Maidenhead.

Many councils have successfully shown that they can deliver significant efficiencies but there is still more to be done. Smarter procurement, reducing management and support services costs, greater transparency to cut waste, sharing services and tackling fraud can all deliver significant savings to help protect front-line services and taxpayers' interests. And to support councils the Localism Act will trigger the biggest transfer of power in a generation to local communities.

Moreover, I would note that in the coming year, local government will have access to new financial measures including over £430 million of funding under new homes bonus, up to a £1 billion in community infrastructure levy, and access to the £2.4 billion regional growth fund and the £500 million growing places fund (through their local enterprise partnerships).

The Localism Act also includes powers to abolish Whitehall capping in England and instead allow local residents to veto excessive council tax rises. I can confirm that we are moving ahead with introducing arrangements for council tax referendums if an authority sets a council tax which exceeds principles endorsed by Parliament (i.e. is "excessive"). These provisions will be implemented for 2012-13 and I am also today giving an indication of the principles I am minded to propose for that year. I propose that local authorities will be required to seek the approval of their local electorate in a referendum if, compared with 2011-12, they set council tax increases that exceed:

3.5% for most principal authorities;

3.75% for the City of London;

4% for the Greater London Authority, police authorities, and single purpose fire and rescue authorities.

I am proposing that no equivalent principles will apply for town and parish councils for 2012-13, although they may in future years.

Of course, should all eligible local authorities take up the new council tax freeze offer for 2012-13 there will be no need for council tax referendums next year. After considering any representations from authorities, I will set out the final principles in a report to the House and seek approval for these in parallel with the final report on the 2012-13 local government finance settlement.

Any town hall that turns down the council tax freeze offer and tries to hike council tax bills unreasonably will now have to ask at the ballot box whether hard-working families and pensioners are willing to shoulder an increase in their cost of living.

Finally, this is a transitional settlement where we have set out details of the settlement for two years, striking a balance between the need to help councils plan for the future and the need to reform the system. Ministers believe the current system we have inherited from the last administration is broken. As the National Audit Office has observed, the formula grant system is "highly complex and not transparent"

and

"the complexity of the four-block model... [serves to] obscure the link between needs, resources and funding"

We have recently consulted on proposals that would lead to fundamental reform to the funding of local government, moving away from the existing arrangements where there is no connection between the health of the local economy and the funding of the local authority. Our proposals will provide councils with greater control over their funding, developing a direct link between the growth of businesses in their area, and the revenues available to them. These proposals, which we intend to introduce from 2013-14, will deliver direct financial incentives for authorities that promote economic growth and help many councils break free from dependency on grants from central Government. The Government will set out their response to the consultation proposals to the House shortly.

Today also marks the start of a period of statutory consultation with local government on formula grant distribution and I welcome their responses. Consultation closes on 16 January 2012.

I shall be making available full supporting information on the Department for Communities and Local Government website at:

http://www.local.communities.gov.uk/finance/1213/grant.htm.

This includes a "Plain English Guide to the Local Government Finance Settlement" for 2012-13 which I hope will be helpful in cutting through the jargon and the sheer complexity of the current system.

I have placed copies of the consultation paper and the Plain English Guide, as well as details of the location of other supporting material, in the Vote Office and the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Libya (Operation Ellamy)

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Philip Hammond): In a written statement on 23 June 2011, Official Report, column 24WS, my predecessor the right hon. Member for North Somerset (Dr Fox) informed the House that the costs of Operation Ellamy—the United Kingdom's contribution to coalition operations in Libya in support of United Nations Security Council Resolution 1973—for the six months from mid-March to mid-September were estimated to be £120 million. In addition, an estimated cost of replenishing munitions of up to £140 million.

On 12 October 2011, Official Report, column 30WS, my predecessor revised the figure for the whole operation, from mid-March to mid-December, to £160 million with an estimate of the cost of replenishing munitions used in Libya at £140 million.

I have previously informed the House, on 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 568, that I would provide a final estimate of the cost of operations in Libya in early December. With operations now over we estimate that the net additional cost of Operation Ellamy will be £212 million. This estimate is made up of £145 million of operating costs, plus a further £67 million on the cost of replenishing munitions.

As previously announced, the additional costs incurred by the Ministry of Defence on Operation Ellamy will be borne by the reserve, and will be in addition to the core defence budget. The fully audited cost of Operation Ellamy will be published in the Ministry of Defence's annual report and accounts.

Submarine Service

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Philip Hammond): I am pleased to inform the House that, following a review, women in the Royal Navy will be allowed to serve in submarines in the future.

The decision follows an 18-month thorough analysis, which included a study of legal, operational, health, social, technical, and financial issues. Key to this was the naval service's operational effectiveness now and in the future. This decision to allow women to serve in submarines will enable the Royal Navy to maximise the deployability of its talent pool.

Recent medical research has shown that there are no risks to female health during normal submarine operations, so there are no medical reasons for excluding women from service in submarines, provided they are not pregnant. An independent peer review of this work concluded that, while there was no medical risk to women, there remains a risk to a foetus, which could emanate from the higher level of carbon dioxide in submarines in comparison to normal atmospheric conditions. There is no danger from radiation; the average annual dose of radiation accrued by Royal Navy submariners is actually less than the average annual background dose received by the general population of the UK (as submariners are not as frequently exposed to the sun). External legal counsel has advised that the scientific and medical evidence did not justify a ban on female submariners, but did require the exclusion of pregnant submariners.

Female officers will be introduced first into the Vanguard class as soon as the policy and practical changes can be made, which is expected to be towards the end of 2013, with a small number of volunteers commencing submarine training in late 2012. The first female ratings to join a Vanguard class submarine will be recruited and trained from 2014, to join sometime in 2015. Women will also be permitted to serve in the Astute class, but probably not before 2016, when the necessary modifications to accommodation and facilities have been made.

EDUCATION

Academies Funding Transfer

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): I am today publishing a consultation setting out my "minded to" decision in relation to the academies funding transfer for 2011-12 and 2012-13.

The decision has been reached in consultation with the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government and takes account of the responses received from local authorities to our consultation, issued in July 2011, about the basis for the decision.

The decision takes account of the need to ensure that both academies and local authorities are funded fairly for the pupils they provide services for and the responsibilities which they hold. We have also considered how best we can ensure that the amount transferred better reflects the distribution of academies between local authorities.

We plan to make changes from April 2012 to the methodology for calculating the level of the transfer to ensure that the amount transferred properly reflects the services which transfer to academies from their local authority. We will do this in two ways. First we will, in future, only take account of net expenditure on education services; and secondly, in areas where some responsibilities remain with the local authority, we will only use a proportion of spend in those areas to determine the amount to be transferred.

To provide financial stability and certainty to local authorities we will cap the maximum amount to be transferred in 2012-13 at the level of the top-slice of formula grant which has been announced by the Department for Communities and Local Government. In addition we will make a calculation for each authority in January 2013 of the costs of the local authority element of local authority central spend equivalent grant (LACSEG) based on the number of academies in each authority. Where the costs calculated for an authority are below the amount top-sliced from formula grant, we will make a specific grant payment to that authority equivalent to the difference between the costs and the top-slice.

To provide further certainty to local authorities we plan to make no changes to the previously announced top-slice for 2011-12 as we believe that taking action to redistribute costs at this stage in the financial year would cause unnecessary turmoil and instability.

This arrangement, whilst providing financial certainty and stability to local authorities, means that the Government will continue to provide a considerable amount of double funding in this area. Given the poor value for money which this provides the taxpayer these arrangements should only be seen as transitional.

The Government are committed to resolving the double funding of local authorities for services which devolve to academies permanently from 2013-14. As part of the local government resource review, we will explore removing the funding for these services from formula grant into the budget of the Department for Education. In this option, the Department would then a administer a grant to authorities and to academies proportionate to the number of pupils for which they are responsible according to a national rate. We plan to consult, jointly with the Department for Communities and Local Government, in 2012 on how we could put our commitment permanently to solve this issue into effect.

I have placed copies of the consultation paper in the Vote Office and the House Libraries.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

New Nuclear Waste and Decommissioning Financing

The Minister of State, Department of Energy and Climate Change (Charles Hendry): I have today laid before Parliament Funded Decommissioning Programme (FDP) guidance for prospective operators of new nuclear power stations, together with the Government response to the December 2010 consultation on draft FDP guidance and a Waste Transfer Pricing Methodology for the disposal of higher activity waste from new nuclear power stations.

The FDP guidance is statutory guidance that is provided for in the Energy Act 2008. It sets out the factors which may be appropriate for the Secretary of State to consider in deciding whether or not to approve an FDP, approve it with conditions, or modify an FDP which has already been approved. The guidance also sets out information about the preparation, content, modification and implementation of FDPs under the Energy Act.

The Waste Transfer Pricing Methodology is a technical document the purpose of which is to set out how the Government will determine the price for the transfer of title to and liability for intermediate level waste and spent fuel from a new nuclear operator to the Government, for disposal in the geological disposal facility that the Government will construct for the disposal of legacy wastes. The methodology also provides some worked examples.

I have placed an electronic copy of each document in the Libraries of the House. A copy of each document is also available on the DECC website at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/meeting_energy/nuclear/new/waste_costs/waste_costs.aspx.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Water White Paper

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mrs Caroline Spelman): I am today laying before Parliament "Water for Life", our water White Paper. This sets out the Government's vision for securing sustainable and resilient water supplies through to 2050. It builds on the success of the sector since water privatisation, while recognising that population growth and climate change will place extra demands on a system designed to meet the needs of today, not tomorrow.

The White Paper includes new scenarios of water availability in the 2050s. We need to start planning now to build flexibility and resilience into our water and sewerage infrastructure. Our approach must include better management of demand, but we will also need substantial new investment in infrastructure so we can capture more water and start to use the supplies we have more efficiently. We need to connect up our water system more effectively so that we can move supplies to areas where they are scarcer. We also need to ensure our drainage system can continue to operate effectively as infrastructure ages and pressure on capacity grows as the population increases.

The White Paper sets out how we will take forward our commitment in the natural environment White Paper to long-term reform of the water abstraction regime. Reform is vital given the challenges of climate change and population growth and the lack of flexibility in the existing regime to deal with them. This will be a complex task, and we will work closely with abstractors and other stakeholders to deliver it. We plan to consult on proposals in 2013, and aim to introduce legislation subsequently, implementing the new regime fully by the mid to late 2020s.

As well as looking to the future, we want to tackle the problems of pollution and over-abstraction affecting our rivers and wetlands currently. We can succeed only by drawing in the enthusiasm and knowledge of those with a clear stake in their local environment. We set out how Government and regulators are already starting to make this happen through new catchment pilots as well as a concerted effort to align advice, incentives and regulatory tools to address diffuse pollution and improve the environment. The White Paper explains how we will extrapolate from around 70 catchment scale pilot projects, and provide intensive support to 25 of them, as a precursor to rolling out this approach across the country.

We know that affordability of water bills is a growing problem for householders, and we want to enable businesses to keep their costs down. We set out our new framework to enable water companies to target more help on those household customers who need it most by introducing company social tariffs.

If bills are to be kept affordable over the longer term, and customers are to receive better service from their water companies, the regulatory framework governing the industry must change. The White Paper sets out how we are helping business customers and public bodies to reduce unnecessary costs by a package of deregulatory reforms to introduce more competition into the water industry. The reforms we propose will provide non-household customers with more choice and open up the market to new entrants, removing the anti-competitive barriers in the existing regime. Our proposals will increase the size of the market to include all non-household customers; remove a restrictive access price mechanism that makes it difficult for new entrants to compete on price and which unduly protects incumbents and replace it with a more transparent wholesale access price regime; increase opportunities for new entrants by extending the regime to cover sewerage services; and introduce changes to the existing regime for upstream competition to encourage new entrants and stimulate the market. We will work with the Scottish Government to enable a cross-border market in water and sewerage services.

As a result, we expect business and public sector customers to receive a range of benefits from more customer-focused suppliers with an incentive to improve the services they offer, such as aggregated purchasing, discounts for direct debits or improved information on how to improve water efficiency and cut costs.

However, we do not propose to introduce more fundamental structural reform of the water industry, for example through mandating legal separation of the retail arm of water companies. Given the challenges we are facing to build resilience in the sector, which will require ongoing investment in infrastructure, I am not proposing to make changes which could reduce the attractiveness of the water sector as a low-risk, stable home for investment.

If we are to deliver our vision for the future of a sustainable and resilient water system we must change the way we all value water. We need to start using water more efficiently, and recognising it as the precious and limited resource it is. We need to build awareness of the connection between water in the home and the condition of local rivers to encourage behaviour change. The White Paper sets out our approach to encouraging more efficient use of water, including through the linkage to the green deal.

The White Paper is available on the DEFRA website at http://www.defra.gov.uk/environment/quality/water/legislation/whitepaper/

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan (Outcomes of Bonn International Conference)

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr William Hague): On 5 December, Germany hosted and Afghanistan chaired the international Afghanistan conference in Bonn, entitled "Afghanistan and the International Community: From Transition to the Transformation Decade". The UK, together with over 100 international delegations, reiterated the international community's long-term commitment to Afghanistan. I represented the UK.

The conference conclusions set out a plan for the international community's long-term engagement with Afghanistan beyond 2014. They included commitments to provide economic support to Afghanistan for the decade after 2014, until Afghanistan becomes economically self-sustainable. The conference also agreed to produce a clear plan for the future structure and funding for the Afghan National Security Forces in advance of the NATO Chicago summit next May. In addition the conclusions set out an agreed set of guiding principles for the reconciliation process and its outcomes. This builds on the recent Traditional Loya Jirga in Afghanistan with support for an inclusive, representative peace process.

The Afghan Government committed themselves to make further progress on key development priorities, including governance, anti-corruption and rule of law. The Afghan Government also promised to uphold all their international human rights obligations and to protect women's rights as enshrined in the constitution.

I reinforced the UK's long-term commitment to Afghanistan and the aims of the international community post-2014 including development aid and support for the ANSF. I welcomed the political and economic framework agreed at the conference and the importance of regional engagement, building on the successful Istanbul conference in November. I reaffirmed our support for the Afghan Government in upholding human rights, including women's rights.

President Karzai was due to visit London immediately after the Bonn conference to sign the UK's own long-term partnership agreement with Afghanistan. President Karzai had to cancel his visit to the UK because of the tragic sectarian attacks in Afghanistan on 6 December. We had planned to sign the enduring partnership with President Karzai during his visit to London. Instead, we will sign this partnership in the near future. I condemn this attack and the terrorist attacks of 7 December that resulted in the loss of many innocent lives. While we strongly condemn such atrocities, these acts of terrorism will not undermine the commitments made at the Bonn conference by the UK and the international community. We will continue to build on these commitments to see the emergence of a stable and secure Afghanistan where the rights of individuals are respected.

HEALTH

Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health (Anne Milton): The health part of the Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs (EPSCO) Council met on 2 December in Brussels. Andy Lebrecht, Deputy Permanent Representative to the European Union, represented the United Kingdom .

Council conclusions were adopted on:

closing the gap in health between member states through action on determinants of health, especially nutrition and physical activity;

non-communicable diseases: prevention and control of respiratory diseases in children; and prevention and control of communication disorders in children, including innovative approaches to treatment.

The Commission provided an update on the health for growth programme and the presidency asked member states to comment on the priorities for the programme. The Commission underlined that the programme would focus on areas where the EU could genuinely add value, in particular, ensuring a smarter investment in health.

The UK welcomed the intention of the proposed programme, but indicated a preference for it to be brought forward as a decision rather than a regulation. A number of member states also emphasised that the programme should respect the principle of subsidiarity, particularly in relation to the health system elements.

The Commission gave an update on the suggestion of splitting the pharmacovigilance provisions from the Commission's recently published information to patients proposals. It confirmed it would positively pursue this approach.

In addition, Denmark spoke about the plans for its presidency. It confirmed the intention to focus on innovation in health, anti-microbial resistance, and chronic disease (taking diabetes as a model).

Winterbourne View

The Minister of State, Department of Health (Paul Burstow): I promised to update the House about ongoing activity in relation to Winterbourne View private hospital.

The House will wish to note that 10 people employed at Winterbourne View have now been charged with offences of ill-treatment and neglect under the Mental Health Act. They are due to appear in Bristol magistrates court on 15 December. A further three people who have also been arrested on suspicion of causing ill-treatment under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 remain on police bail pending inquiries.

PricewaterhouseCooper's report on Castlebeck Care services was published on 25 November and Castlebeck has committed to taking forward all the action points from that report. The report can be found at:

www.castlebeck.com/docs/pwc_recommendations_report.pdf

In October, I advised the House that the Care Quality Commission (CQC) had started its programme of unannounced inspections of services for people with learning disabilities. This review is now well under way—as at 2 December some 76 inspections had been completed. CQC is also carrying out around 1,000 inspections a month which include undertaking inspections where there are concerns that providers may not be meeting the essential safety and quality requirements

The first five reports from the focused learning disability inspections have been published today and can be found at www.cqc.org.uk/ldreview. We will, of course, ensure that the NHS and local authorities are continuing to take action required to address any concerns raised and review their own commissioning, care planning and oversight arrangements to support improvements and service transformation.

The results of the CQC inspections programme will feed into the wider departmental review of Winterbourne View. We are still gathering evidence from the serious case review and the NHS serious untoward incident review, and from other investigations and reports.

The departmental review is actively engaging with people with learning disabilities or autism and challenging behaviour and their families about how services can be improved. Ministers will report findings from the departmental review to Parliament and determine what further action is necessary.

I will continue to update the House as things develop.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Advancing Transgender Equality

The Minister for Equalities (Lynne Featherstone): At the very heart of the coalition Government is a commitment to fairness and equality. Celebrating the diversity of the UK and enabling all to be able to play their full part will lead to a strong society which values all of its citizens. The UK has a record to be proud of in advancing equality for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people but we must not be complacent. We know that challenges still exist and we need to take bolder actions to deal with these issues. Too many transgender people still face outdated prejudice at every stage of their lives, from discrimination in the workplace to tragic incidents of hate crime. This not only blights people's lives, but undermines the principles upon which this country prides itself. This Government are committed to addressing these issues and advancing transgender equality.

In March 2011, the Government published "Working for Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Equality: Moving Forward", which included cross-Government commitments to tear down barriers and advanced equal opportunities for lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender people in all areas of society—including in schools, at work and in healthcare.

This document recognised that transgender people face distinct and specific challenges that sometimes need to be addressed separately.

Today we are publishing "Advancing Transgender Equality: A Plan for Action", which builds on our programme of work to tackle outdated prejudices and ensure equal chances for everyone whatever their gender identity. It shows a real commitment across Government to take concerted action to tear down barriers to equal opportunities and to build a fairer society. This document also mirrors the aims of the Government's "The Equality Strategy—Building a Fairer Britain" which aims to address inequality in social mobility, tackling deprivation, developing a fair and flexible labour market, promoting greater participation and opening up public services, and changing culture and attitudes.

Copies of the action plan have been placed in the House Library and will also be available on the Home Office website: http://homeoffice.gov.uk/equalities/

G6 Meeting (Paris)

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): The informal G6 group of Ministers of the Interior from France, Germany, Spain, Italy, Poland and the UK held their most recent meeting in Paris on 1 December under the French presidency of the group. The meeting was chaired by the French Interior Minister Claude Guéant. The meeting was divided into two working sessions which were attended by the G6 Ministers of the Interior. Additional guests included the US Attorney-General, Eric Holder; the US Secretary of Homeland Security, Janet Napolitano, and European Commissioner for Home Affairs, Cecilia Malmström.

The first working session of G6 Ministers and the Commission considered Schengen governance, asylum and itinerant (mobile) criminality. Delegates agreed on the need for a stronger political governance of the Schengen area that would preserve the achievement of the border-free zone while retaining the necessary safeguards. G6 Ministers agreed that member states should retain the possibility of re-imposing internal border controls in the event of a major failure of the external border or a large, unexpected migratory pressure. They called for an early warning mechanism to alert Schengen states in this regard, as well as a strengthening of the Schengen evaluation mechanism. On asylum, the meeting recognised the need for the Common European Asylum System (CEAS) to provide those member states taking part in it with the tools and procedures to respond quickly and effectively to asylum claims. Delegates noted the European Council's desire to conclude the CEAS negotiations in 2012, and as far as possible before the end of Denmark's EU presidency. I underlined the need to deal with asylum cases as swiftly as possible and to ensure that decisions were made properly to distinguish between those claims that were genuine and those that were not. On itinerant criminality, Ministers discussed the need to direct more effectively existing EU resources, such as Europol and Eurojust, to tackle the threat of mobile organised crime groups. I raised the issue of metal theft which affects G6 countries as well as the UK.

The second session, including the US representatives, focused on the recovery of criminal assets and transatlantic data sharing. Delegates discussed the ongoing difficulties associated with recovering the proceeds of organised crime, and agreed on the need for greater international co-operation and more robust asset recovery procedures. The US Attorney-General underlined the importance of civil procedures in asset recovery. I emphasised that financial investigation skills and techniques were not an addition but rather an essential part of the wider armoury of techniques required to investigate criminality. Delegates then discussed the progress of negotiations around the EU-US PNR and EU-US data protection agreements.

In addition to the two plenary sessions, I spoke about the preparations under way for the 2012 Olympic games, and presented the UK's plans to reform the European Court of Human Rights under our chairmanship of the Council of Europe. I also held separate bilateral meetings with some of the other heads of delegation to discuss a range of issues including extradition, illegal migration, passenger name records and data protection. The next meeting of the G6 is expected to be held in Germany in June.

Provisional Police Funding Announcement

The Minister for Policing and Criminal Justice (Nick Herbert): I have today placed in the Library my proposals for the aggregate amount of grant to police authorities (referred to in the report as the police core settlement) in England and Wales for 2012-13, for the approval of the House. The indications I gave last year for revenue funding in 2012-13 have remained unchanged and are set out in table 3.

Today the Department for Communities and Local Government also published proposals for the distribution of formula grant to English local authorities for 2012-13. The Welsh Government will shortly be setting out their proposals for the allocation of funding in 2012-13 for the four police authorities in Wales.

Overall police settlement

As set out in the Chancellor's autumn statement on 29 November, public sector pay awards win average at 1% for the last two years of the spending review period. As a result, the Home Office budget will be adjusted in line with this policy. Subject to any recommendations from the police negotiating board and agreement on staff pay, we expect that this policy should also apply to the police. This revision should not reduce the overall revenue spending power of the police service. I will make decisions on damping levels for these years at a later date.

For 2012-13 I have applied damping as previously announced at the time of the spending review.

The total cash reduction in Government funding to the police remains at 5% this year.

I will continue to provide a specific neighbourhood policing fund for 2012-13. This recognises that neighbourhood policing provides a dedicated, consistent and visible presence in communities. From 2013-14 this funding will be rolled into the police main grant, enabling the new directly elected police and crime commissioners to have full discretion over their funding, recognising their accountability to the communities they serve. In London, the Metropolitan Police Authority received autonomy over this funding from 2011-12, in recognition of the role the Mayor of London and the Deputy Mayor, policing already play. That will continue in 2012-13.

I win also continue to provide specific funding for counter terrorism policing and have provided relative protection to this budget throughout the spending review period to ensure that critical national counter terrorism capabilities are maintained. Authorities and forces will receive their specific counter terrorism allocations in January.

In addition to the police core settlement, the Olympic safety and security budget has been prioritised. These provisions are detailed below.

The introduction of Police and Crime Commissioners

During 2012-13 the public will elect their first police and crime commissioners in England and Wales. It is the will of the House that police authorities will be replaced on the 22 November 2012 with directly elected individuals who will have the statutory duty to deliver an efficient and effective police force, which clearly demonstrates value for money and, above all, delivers policing and community safety services in the local and national interest of the communities within their force area. The precept that police authorities will set for 2012-13, will not be affected by the election of police and crime commissioners in November 2012. Once elected police and crime commissioners will begin to prepare their police and crime plan and budget for 2013-14.

Some £50 million was set aside for 2012-13 to fund the first elections of police and crime commissioners. This £50 million was added to the police settlement for this specific purpose. Additional funding has been set aside now that the 2012 elections are being held in November. The funding of the elections has had no impact on the amount of funding available to forces over the four-year period of PCC office and we expect it to represent no more than 0.15% of annual police funding.

I have set out below how I propose to allocate the police settlement between the different funding streams in 2012-13.

Table 1: Police Revenue Funding – Proposed Figures for 2012-13

	2012-13 £m
Total Formula Funding
Comprising:
Home Office Police Main Grant	4,251
National, International and Capital City Grant (MPA/MoPC only)	189
DCLG General Grant	3,213
Of which council tax (11-12) freeze grant	75
WAG General Grant	151
Total Home Office Specific Grants
Comprising:
Welsh Top-up	13
Neighbourhood Policing Fund (NPF)	338
Counter Terrorism Specific Grant	564
PCC Elections	50*
PFI Grant	54
Total Government Funding	8,830
% Cash Change in Total Government Funding	-5%

*Any additional funding required will be provided from outside the police settlement.

This includes a small amount of funding that will form part of a contingency fund, which is not shown in the table above.

Provisional allocations of these grants (with the exception of counter-terrorism funding) for each force in England and Wales for 2012-13 are set out in table 3.

Neighbourhood Policing Fund

The neighbourhood policing fund specific grant will continue until 2013-14, when directly elected police and crime commissioners will be in place. Funding totalling £338 million in 2012-13 win be made available. Approximately 90% of the grant will be ring-fenced for police and community support officers (PCSOs)—contributing up to 75% of their salary costs. The remaining 25% will need to be match-funded by the police, councils, businesses and other organisations. This does not apply to the Metropolitan Police Authority/Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime which has had full discretion on the spending of this funding from 2011-12. From 2013-14 this fund will be consolidated into police main grant.

Counter Terrorism

Counter-terrorism has been prioritised to ensure that the police will have the necessary resources to respond to the changing demands posed by the terrorist threat. We have allocated £564 million to support counter terrorism policing in 2012-13.

Forces will be notified of their individual allocations in early January. For security reasons, these allocations will not be available in the public domain.

Private Finance Initiatives Grant

Specific funding will be given to cover the costs of police private finance initiative projects which are currently operational. This funding was added to the police settlement for this specific purpose. The Home Office will also support the two police PFI projects that are currently in procurement, and which are not yet operational.

National, International and Capital City Grant

The national, international and capital city grant will be paid to the Metropolitan Police Authority/Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime in 2012-13 when the funding will be £189 million.

Council Tax Freeze

The Government announced a council tax freeze in England for 2011-12 which all police authorities in England accepted. As a result, they are all receiving a grant equivalent to a 2.5% increase in their 2010-11 precept. This grant has been baselined and will continue to be paid to all police authorities in each year of this spending review period.

The Government have recently announced help for local authorities in England, including police authorities, to freeze their council tax for a further year. Police authorities which decide to freeze or reduce their council tax in 2012-13 will receive additional one-off funding, equivalent to raising their 2011-12 precept by 3%.

Council tax referendums

The Localism Act 2011 includes powers, already used, to abolish capping in England and to introduce arrangements for council tax referendums. A referendum will take place if an authority, including a police authority, proposes a percentage increase in council tax that exceeds the level agreed by the House of Commons. These provisions will be implemented for 2012-13 and the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, in consultation with the Home Secretary, has today given an indication of the principles he is minded to propose for 2012-13. After considering any representations from authorities he will set out the final principles in a report to the House and seek approval for these in parallel with the final report on the local government finance settlement.

In Wales, council tax capping is the responsibility of Welsh Ministers.

OTHER FUNDING

Police Capital

I am minded to amend the capital allocations for police authorities in order to support the establishment of the National Police Air Service. I will consider carefully any representations on this matter before taking my decision in time for the final settlement debate in February 2012. This change would mean that the proportion of police capital that goes to the NPAS would be increased to £10.8 million in 2012-13—£6 million more than I suggested this time last year. These proposed figures are set out in table 2.

Table 2: Proposed Division of Police Capital Between Funding Streams

	2012-13 £m	2013-14 £m	2014-15 £m
Capital Grant	118	106	109
National Police Air Service	11	13	10
Special Grant Capital	1	1	1
Total	130	120	120

I still intend to allocate the majority of capital funding directly to police authorities and the Metropolitan Police Authority/Mayor's Office for Policing and Crime, who will all receive the same percentage change in funding. I will also continue to maintain a capital contingency. These proposed allocations are set out at table 4.

Olympic Safety and Security

Delivering a safe and secure games remains a priority for the Government. With eight months to go, the policing and wider security programme is progressing well, with many aspects already operational.

The Government announced last year that £600 million will be available for safety and security during the London Olympics in 2012. However, the Government are confident they can deliver this for around £475 million.

JUSTICE

Abolition of Committals

The Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Kenneth Clarke): It is in the interests of victims and witnesses, and of the criminal justice system generally, that court procedures should be made as efficient as possible, for example by cutting out unnecessary court hearings. More than 10 years ago, committal proceedings were abolished in indictable-only offences, and replaced by a new "sending" procedure. The Government have decided that the time has come to complete that reform by extending it to offences triable either way. This will enable the Crown court to manage such cases from an earlier stage, and facilitate efforts to encourage defendants who intend to plead guilty to do so sooner.

The change will be effected by bringing into force schedule 3 to the Criminal Justice Act 2003 on a phased basis from April 2012. Following the practice adopted when the existing sending procedure in section 51 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 was first introduced, commencement will initially be limited to certain geographical areas, which will be announced later. Subject to a satisfactory assessment of the first phase, the intention is to complete implementation over the next year.

The Government believe that this reform has the potential to contribute to their aim of reforming and improving the criminal justice system.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Independent Reviewer of the Justice and Security (Northern Ireland) Act 2007 (Annual Report)

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr Owen Paterson): I have arranged for copies of the fourth report of Robert Whalley CB, Independent Reviewer of the Justice and Security (Northern Ireland) Act 2007 (the "2007 Act"), to be laid before Parliament.

This fourth report provides an assessment of the operation of sections 21 to 32 of the 2007 Act and the procedures adopted by the Brigade Commander 38 (Irish) Brigade for receiving, investigating and responding to complaints. The report covers the period 1 August 2010 to 31 July 2011.

The report highlights the continuing security threat posed by residual terrorist groups, the activity of organised criminals and incidents of public disorder. The reviewer comments on the importance of the powers under the 2007 Act in dealing with this broad range of security-related threats, and therefore recommends that the powers be retained for a further year.

The reviewer states that the residual terrorist threat has continued on broadly the same level as 2010, but there have been positive signs of suppression of activity. He notes that the number of persons stopped under the 2007 Act has increased significantly but that overall stop activity by the PSNI has fallen by 36% over the last year. The reviewer welcomes the authorisation procedure for the use of stop-and-search powers which the Government are introducing through the Protection of Freedoms Bill. He comments on the importance of cross-border co-operation and points to the activity by An Garda Siochana, which has led to a number of arrests.

The report also reflects on the regrettable public disorder which we saw in Northern Ireland earlier this year and the attacks on the police, and the subsequent operational need for powers under the 2007 Act, such as stop and question and entry of premises, as part of the police response. The reviewer also acknowledges the significant reduction in complaints to the military over the last year.

The Chief Constable and the Brigade Commander 38 (Irish) Brigade have both welcomed the independent reviewer's report and the recommendations made. I would like to thank Robert Whalley for his work and for the recommendations contained in this report. I will consider them carefully.

TRANSPORT

Court Notification of Drink-Drive Offences

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mike Penning): In conjunction with my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Justice, the Member for Huntingdon (Mr Djanogly), I wish to inform the House of serious errors that have been identified in the way in which data on drink drive convictions are shared between the police, courts and the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA).

At the end of last year, I asked the DVLA to review communication between the courts and the DVLA. As a result of these investigations it became clear that the alcohol levels for some drink-driving convictions were either not provided to the DVLA by the courts, or were inconsistent when there was a delay between the court sending the information and the reconciliation of this information by DVLA. These errors have been happening for more than 20 years. As a result, in some cases, driving licences were reissued to individuals whose ban had expired, but without them undergoing legally required medical tests.

As soon as the problem was reported to me in August 2011, DVLA put in place manual checks so that any court notification received at DVLA without an alcohol reading was immediately investigated and no licences were re-issued without the alcohol level being provided. In addition, DVLA have worked to identify cases where information was incomplete in the backlog of data since 1991.

The courts and DVLA are now implementing IT changes which will mean that their systems will not allow cases to be processed at either the courts or DVLA unless valid alcohol readings are provided. Furthermore, new operational guidance has been issued to staff who deal with these cases.

Drivers convicted of drink-driving offences with more than two and a half times the permitted legal alcohol limit are regarded as high-risk offenders (HROs). The law requires that such convicted drivers are required to prove their medical fitness before they can be re-licensed at the end of their disqualification period.

As a result of the review DVLA has undertaken, I was informed that some convicted drivers who should have been treated as HROs have been granted a driving licence at the end of their disqualification on the basis of their own declaration of health, without undertaking the required medical assessment.

In total, 265,225 driver records have been found to be missing the relevant information on alcohol levels. Correct alcohol levels have now been obtained for 50,330 of these. We have identified within this group 3,895 drivers who should have been treated as HROs—and therefore should have undergone a medical assessment—before being granted a licence following their disqualification. These drivers present a potential risk to road safety and are being contacted so that they can undergo a medical assessment immediately. Those who fail to comply, or cannot demonstrate their medical fitness to drive, will lose their entitlement to drive.

The Ministry of Justice, Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals Service, The Scottish Courts Services and the police are working together urgently to identify the correct alcohol readings for a further 28,830 records. Any further HROs identified from these will also be required to undergo a medical assessment.

We have identified that of the 265,225 cases, some 53,028 relate to convicted drivers who have not yet applied to renew licences. These individuals do not therefore pose an immediate road safety risk. Their records have been blocked to ensure that if they do apply for a licence in future any identified as being HROs will have to undergo the medical assessment before a licence can be issued.

Records retention policy and the time limits set under the terms of the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974, means that it will not be possible to act upon the alcohol readings in the remaining 133,037 cases identified. We cannot therefore say how many of these drivers would have been HROs at the time of their conviction.

It is with great regret that I inform the House that we have identified two cases in 1996 and 2006 where a driver who was issued a licence without first proving their medical fitness to drive, has subsequently caused death while driving under the influence of alcohol. Every death on the road is a tragedy and we have the deepest sympathy for anyone affected by the actions of these drink-drivers. It is not possible to say whether the drivers in these cases would have got their licences back following a medical examination. Every effort is being made to contact the victims' families to inform them and to ensure they receive full and proper support.

I can assure the House that we regard road safety and ensuring convicted drivers are treated correctly as of critical importance. Everything possible will be done to take action, where we are legally able, against those who represent a risk to other road users. The Under-Secretary of State for Justice and I have ensured that immediate action has been taken to deal with this issue and to make sure it does not happen again. I must make clear that this investigation is continuing but due to the complexity of accessing very old court data, final figures will not be known for a number of months.

Bus and Community Transport

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Norman Baker): I am pleased to announce today a £60 million package of bus measures to improve buses and community transport coupled with the £30 million investment to improve the environmental performance of the bus fleet that was announced by the Chancellor in the autumn statement, this is a £90 million boost for our buses.

A new £50 million better bus area fund will provide grants of up to £5 million to a minimum of 10 local authorities working in partnership with local bus operators for them to spend in 2012-13. The aim of the fund is to increase bus patronage in busy urban areas, and the Department's aims of creating growth and cutting carbon.

Authorities wishing to bid for bus funding will be asked to submit bids in February to allow the Department to make awards by the end of March. Detailed bidding guidance will be placed on the departmental website shortly.

To support further the establishment and development of community transport, I am also making available £10 million to be distributed to 76 local authorities in England, outside London, by formula; this is a repeat of the Supporting Community Transport Fund announced in March 2011. Letters will be sent to eligible local authorities in the new year, with details of the timing of payments. This comes on top of the £10 million distributed back in March 2011.

As well as these two new funds, last week the Chancellor announced £25 million of funding for environmental improvement to buses. £20 million of this will be available to bus operators to help them buy low-carbon emission buses through a further round of the green bus fund, for which detail bidding guidance will be published shortly. The remaining £5 million will allow older buses in London to be retrofitted with pollution-reducing equipment to help deliver air quality improvements in the capital. Together with additional funding from Transport for London, the total amount being committed is £10 million. Not only should this deliver a step change in the environmental performance of buses in the capital, but it will help promote jobs across the UK in the companies that supply clean vehicle technology.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions (Chris Grayling): The Employment, Social Policy, Health and Consumer Affairs Council met on 1 December 2011 in Brussels. I represented the United Kingdom.

There were two negotiations at this Council. In the first negotiation, the presidency secured a general approach on a package of amendments to Regulation (EC) No 883/2004 on the co-ordination of social security systems. One of the proposals in the package would take UK income support out of the regulations. Some member states expressed concerns at some elements but accepted the package in the spirit of compromise. I intervened to stress that a broader policy debate was required at the political level on mechanisms to prevent benefit tourism.

In the second negotiation, the presidency failed to reach political agreement on extensions of the crisis derogations to the European globalisation adjustment fund. I intervened to state that in our view EGF did not add value and that we could not accept any compromise amendments. A blocking minority which included the United Kingdom held out comfortably during the vote.

There was a policy debate on the implementation of the Europe 2020 strategy in the field of employment and social policy. The debate was informed by three papers; the Commission's annual growth survey (including the joint employment report); a set of conclusions on the European semester; and an opinion of the Social Protection Committee on the social impact of the crisis. I intervened to welcome the annual growth survey and emphasised the need for all member states to have a credible and determined approach to fiscal consolidation and, structural reform, including through deeper growth-friendly labour market reforms. I also stressed that it was vital that the EU did not take any counter-productive measures which might actually end up having the effect of reducing employment. I suggested that Ministers bring specific ideas to the February EPSCO for further discussion.

There were progress reports on three topics; minimum health and safety requirements regarding the exposure of workers to the risks arising from physical agents (electromagnetic fields); the pregnant workers directive; and the equal treatment of persons irrespective of religion or belief, disability, age or sexual orientation.

Ministers adopted three sets of Council conclusions; ageing as an opportunity for the labour market and the development of social services and community activities; the review of the implementation of the Beijing platform for action; and the follow-up of the first European semester and thematic surveillance in employment and social policies.

The Commission presented a report on the functioning of the transitional arrangements on the free movement of workers from Bulgaria and Romania.

Under any other business the presidency and Commission reported on the first annual convention of the European platform against poverty and social exclusion. The presidency provided information on the legislative proposals in the area of migration (single permit, intra-corporate transfers and seasonal workers) and reported on the informal meeting of Ministers for family and gender equality. The Commission provided an update on the review of the working time directive; the posting of workers directive; and the state of play on the European debate on women on company boards.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Green Investment Bank

The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (Vince Cable): On 24 May 2011, I made an oral statement setting out the Government's plans for a green investment bank (GIB). I explained that establishing an effective, enduring GIB would be a major undertaking and gave a commitment to update the House on further milestones in future.

The Government have made significant progress towards the establishment of an independent GIB, which will be a key component of the UK's transition to a green economy. As I explained in May, the Government will need to ensure that the GIB complies with state-aid rules. We have had a constructive dialogue with the European Commission and are now in a position to formally notify our proposals. The Government will be seeking a broad remit for the GIB, including approval to make investments on commercial terms across the full spectrum of the green economy. Where we are seeking scope for the GIB to provide finance on state-aided terms, we have developed strong evidence that such aid is necessary in the particular sector concerned and that this will not unduly distort competition or interstate trade.

It will be important that GIB is in a position to be fully operational as soon as possible after state-aid approval. I therefore intend to form the company shortly and to begin the formal recruitment process for the board and senior management team next month, with a view to appointing the chair in spring 2012.

The bank will operate independently from Government, but will agree its strategic priorities with the Government for each spending review period. Subject to approval by the European Commission, we have identified the following priority sectors over the spending review period to 2015-16:

- offshore wind power generation;
- commercial and industrial waste processing and recycling;
- energy from waste generation, including gasification, pyrolysis and anaerobic digestion for the production of heat and/or power;
- non-domestic energy efficiency, including onsite renewable energy generation and heat; and
- support for the green deal.

At least 80% of the funds committed by the bank over the spending review period will be invested in these priority sectors.

As I explained in May, the initial capitalisation of the GIB will be £3 billion. From 2015, the GIB will be given powers to borrow, subject to public sector net debt falling as a percentage of GDP. The GIB will work to a "double bottom line" of both achieving significant environmental impact and making financial returns. Potential investments will be assessed against the following objectives:

Green Impact—Accelerating investment to advance the UK's transition towards a green economy, including reducing greenhouse gas emissions; improving resource efficiency; and protecting and enhancing the natural environment and biodiversity, which includes improving water and air quality, reducing noise pollution and improving land use amenity;

Sound Finances—Deploying capital and expertise as a responsible investor and managing risks to achieve positive portfolio returns and, in so doing, preserving and building its capital base as an institution with enduring green impact; and Additionality—Operating alongside other market participants in response to market failures, leveraging their capabilities where appropriate, to introduce and mobilise additional investment and achieve green impact.

There has been considerable interest in the location of the GIB, with around 20 locations expressing interest to date. The Government welcome this, and are committed to an open and transparent process for deciding the location of the GIB. I have today published a document setting out details of the process that will be followed and the criteria which I will be taking into account in reaching my decision on location. The document also provides information about the likely structure of the GIB, and explains that it is expected to have between 50 and 70 staff in the period to 2015. Copies of the document have been placed in the House Libraries and will be available to download on the BIS website. I intend to announce my decision on the bank's location in February 2012.

I announced in May that Sir Adrian Montague had agreed to chair an advisory group, comprising independent finance experts, to advise Government on the setting up and strategic direction of the new institution. I appointed nine other members in August, and the group has met three times. Its advice has greatly contributed to the progress made towards establishment of the GIB, particularly in relation to the detailed drafting of the GIB's strategic priorities.

It is, however, clear that, in advance of state-aid approval for the GIB, we need to take immediate action to accelerate private sector investment in the UK's transition to a green economy. I have therefore set up a new team within my Department to drive investment in the UK's green infrastructure from April 2012. The team, which will be called UK Green Investments, will be staffed by finance professionals, whose track records are widely known and respected in the City.

Drawing on funding of £775 million for the next financial year, UKGI will invest up to £100 million in commercial and industrial energy efficiency projects and will stand ready to make major co-investments with private finance in offshore wind projects. UKGI is also seeking managers for up to £100 million to invest in waste projects and is now calling for expressions of interest from experienced fund managers in the waste infrastructure sector.

The Government will make investments during this period under section 8 of the Industrial Development Act 1982. I have established an Investment Committee, including members of the Industrial Development Advisory Board, to advise me on investment proposals made by UKGI.

DEFENCE

Accommodation

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Andrew Robathan): Following a review into support provided to senior officers, the Ministry of Defence (MOD) has disestablished the status of "Official Service Residence" this financial year.

The MOD is committed to identifying efficiencies and savings where possible whilst maintaining essential operational capability. As part of this commitment a comprehensive review into the support provided to senior officers has been conducted and concluded that areas of the business could be improved by simplifying the management of service families accommodation and by harmonising the support provided to senior officers across defence.

In the past, a number of service properties were granted official service residence status if the post held by the occupant involved significant official entertaining duties. This status conferred an enhanced package of furniture, fixtures and furnishings but it has now been discontinued, so service families accommodation is now all managed to the same standard. In addition, the support provided to more senior officers, such as domestic assistance for official hospitality, has been reduced and harmonised across the services. These changes are captured in a new tri-service policy which also revises the rules and regulations in relation to official hospitality.

These measures will ensure that the support provided is appropriate and driven by business need, and they will lead to savings in due course. The properties that were formerly classed as official service residences will no longer form a separate grouping for purposes of management information.

EDUCATION

Pupil Premium 2012-13

The Minister of State, Department for Education (Sarah Teather): I am today confirming the funding available for schools in England in 2012-13, through the pupil premium and what this means in terms of funding per pupil. The pupil premium targets additional money at pupils from the most deprived background to help them achieve their full potential.

In 2012-13 the amount available for the pupil premium will double from £625 million in 2011-12 to £1.25 billion. It will further rise to £2.5 billion by 2014-15.

The Government have decided that eligibility for the pupil premium in 2012-13 will be extended to pupils who have been eligible for free school meals (FSM) at any point in the last six years. Earlier this year we consulted on options for extending the coverage of the pupil premium. As a group, children who have been eligible for FSM at any point in time have consistently lower educational attainment than those who have never been eligible for FSM. Up to £50 million of the £1.25 billion will be used to support a summer school programme to help the most disadvantaged pupils make the transition from primary to secondary school. This approach received the highest support with 44% of those responding backing its introduction.

Increasing overall funding for the premium next year to £1.25 billion will enable the coverage of the premium to be extended to a further 500,000 million pupils, while at the same time increasing the level of the premium from £488 to £600 per pupil. This will ensure that a higher proportion of underachieving children are able to benefit from the extra funding provided through the premium.

Schools will have the freedom to spend the premium, which is additional to the underlying schools budget, in a way they think will best support the raising of attainment for the most vulnerable pupils.

We urge schools and local authorities to encourage parents to register their child as eligible for free school meals so that each school receives their maximum pupil premium entitlement.

To ensure transparency and accountability, schools will be required from September 2012 to publish online information about how they have used their pupil premium allocations. New measures will be included in the performance tables that will capture the attainment of pupils covered by the pupil premium.

We will continue to provide the pupil premium for children in care who have been looked after for more than six months, recognising that they need additional support to help them raise their educational achievement.

We will also continue to provide a premium for children of parents in the armed services, who face particular challenges. The level of this service child premium will be £250 in 2012-13, up from £200 in 2011-12.

Review of Teachers' Standards

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): Sally Coates is today submitting to me the second and final report of her independent review of teachers' standards.

I established the review in March this year. Chaired by Mrs Coates, principal of Burlington Danes Academy, it brought together leading head teachers, teachers and other educational experts. The review was tasked with establishing new standards that are clear, unequivocal and easy to use, and which can support teachers' professional development and performance management.

The review's first report, submitted to me on 14 July 2011[1], recommended that a single new set of teachers' standards should be established to replace the existing standards for qualified teacher status and the core professional standards. I accepted those recommendations, and the new teachers' standards will come into effect in September 2012[2].

The Government welcomed Mrs Coates's recommendations to establish streamlined new teachers' standards that set out very clearly and concisely the elements of high-quality teaching that should be expected of every teacher. The new standards place a welcome emphasis on the importance of good subject knowledge, behaviour management, and meeting the needs of pupils of all abilities and aptitudes. We are committed to raising the quality of teaching in all our schools, so that pupils and their parents can be confident that they are receiving the highest quality education. Clear and rigorous standards play an important role in ensuring that high quality of teaching that all should expect.

The review's second report is now recommending that the existing post-threshold, excellent teacher and advanced skills teacher standards should be discontinued as standards. Further, the review recommends that a new master teacher standard should be introduced to define the characteristics of the most effective classroom teachers.

We welcome the proposal to establish a new standard that identifies and recognises those teachers who are demonstrating excellent practice in the classroom, and who are making the most significant positive impact on their pupils. The proposal of a single master teacher standard has the potential to bring much greater simplicity and clarity to what is at present a complex and highly bureaucratic system of standards.

My Department will now take forward further work to explore the implications of discontinuing the current post-threshold, excellent teacher and advanced skills teacher standards. This will include asking the school teachers' review body to consider the implications for teachers' pay.

The first and final reports of the review are published on the Department for Education's website:

http://www.education.gov.uk/schools/teachingandlearning/reviewofstandards

Copies of both reports, and of my correspondence with Mrs Coates, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Environment Council (19 December 2011)

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mrs Caroline Spelman): I will represent the UK at the Environment Council in Brussels on 19 December.

At this Council, the presidency will seek the adoption of Council conclusions on the EU biodiversity strategy to 2020: towards implementation; and on the road map to a resource efficient Europe.

Ministers will exchange views on the outcome of the 17th session of the conference of the parties to the United Nations framework convention on climate change and the 7th session of the meeting of the parties to the Kyoto protocol in Durban, 28 November to 9 December 2011.

Ministers will also hear progress reports on: a proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council concerning the export and import of hazardous chemicals (recast); a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Directive 1999/32/EC as regards the sulphur content of marine fuels; and a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council on control of major accident hazards involving dangerous substances.

The following topics will be covered under "any other business", either via a report or presentation from the Commission, presidency, or a member state:

- Convention on migratory species;
- Preparing a global legally binding instrument on mercury;
- Preparatory meetings for Rio+20;
- "Planning for biodiversity";
- EU eastern partnership countries' co-operation in climate policy;
- Restriction or prohibition of genetically modified organisms;
- Protection and sustainable development of the Carpathians;
- Priority substances in water policy;
- Programme for the environment and climate action (LIFE);
- Monitoring and reporting greenhouse gas emissions relevant to climate change at a national and European Union-level;
- Fuel quality directive;
- Implementation of regulation on fluorinated greenhouse gases;
- EU steps to reduce plastic carrier bag usage;
- Establishing a common European industrial risk sharing facility;
- Solution for a green economy;
- Emissions trading scheme/aviation;
- Combating desertification;
- Control of trans-boundary movement of hazardous wastes and their disposal;
- REACH and the candidate list of substances of very high concern;
- Annual growth survey;
- Work programme of incoming presidency.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

General Affairs Council (5 December 2011)

The Minister for Europe (Mr David Lidington): I attended the General Affairs Council (GAC) in Brussels on 5 December.

The GAC was chaired by the EU presidency, Mikolaj Dowgielewicz, Secretary of State for European Affairs of Poland. A provisional report of the meeting and all conclusions adopted can be found at:

http://www.consilium.europa.eu/uedocs/cms_data/docs/pressdata/EN/genaff/126578.pdf.

The agenda items covered were as follows:

Multiannual Financial Framework (MFF)

In a public session, Ministers noted the presidency's report on MFF which can be found at:

http://register.consilium.europa.eu/pdf/en/11/st17/st17448-re01.en11.pdf.

The incoming Danish presidency undertook to take forward this work with the aim of adopting the MFF by the end of 2012.

Preparation for the December European Council

Ministers discussed preparations for the December European Council with the President of the Council, Herman Van Rompuy.

On the eurozone, I and others stressed the need for increased transparency and full interaction between the 17 eurozone members and the 10 non-members.

During discussions on Council conclusions, I set out UK views on energy and made proposals for references to our shared concerns about the regime in Iran.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister will report to Parliament after he has attended the European Council on 8-9 December.

Commission Work Programme for 2012

The Commissioner for Inter-Institutional Relations and Administration, Maros Sefcovic, presented the Commission's work programme for 2012 (see following link). The report cites restoring the EU's economy as its top priority.

http://register.consilium.europa.eu/pdf/en/11/st17/st17394.en11.pdf.

Annual Growth Survey

Commissioner Sefcovic also outlined key elements of the 2012 annual growth survey (see following link). The incoming EU presidency, Denmark, added that they would hold a series of bilateral discussions with member states on the report in January 2012.

http://register.consilium.europa.eu/pdf/en/11/st17/st17229.en11.pdf.

Enlargement

In its conclusions (see link at the beginning of this statement) the Council reiterated the importance of the enlargement process in generating far-reaching political and economic reform and securing stability and democracy; and looked forward to developing a new approach towards those negotiating chapters dealing with judiciary and fundamental rights and justice, freedom and security, tackling them early in the enlargement process. The Council welcomed Turkey's continued commitment to the negotiation process and the political reform agenda, and, with strong support from me, positively noted the Commission's proposal for a positive agenda with Turkey in support of negotiations. The Council welcomed the successful completion of accession negotiations with Croatia, while also highlighting the need for continued efforts to reform further where necessary, and looked forward to the signature of the accession treaty in the margins of the December European Council.

On the western Balkans, I reiterated the UK's strong commitment to the future of all countries of the western Balkans being in the EU once the required conditions are met. Discussion was particularly focused on Serbia and Kosovo. On Serbia, the Council agreed that progress on Serbia's relationship with Kosovo was the key criterion for movement on their EU path. A decision on Serbia's candidate status would be taken at the December European Council. The Council also agreed further tangible steps towards Kosovo's EU future. The Council took note of the progress Montenegro has made towards opening accession negotiations, which would also be considered at the December European Council.

European Court of Justice

The presidency made a short presentation on the state of play regarding proposals to improve the efficiency of the Court.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Justice and Home Affairs Pre-Council Statement

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): The Justice and Home Affairs Council is due to be held on the 13 and 14 December in Brussels. My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Justice, the Scottish Solicitor-General, (Lesley Thomson) and I will attend on behalf of the United Kingdom. As the provisional agenda stands, the following items will be discussed.

The Council will begin in mixed Committee with Norway, Iceland, Liechtenstein and Switzerland (non-EU Schengen states). There will be an update, supported by a written report, on the Commission-led project to implement the central element of the second generation Schengen Information System (SIS II); the UK will continue to reiterate its support for the continuation of the current SIS II project.

There will also be a state of play on certain issues regarding the draft regulation amending Council Regulation (EC) No 539/2001 which lists the third countries whose nationals must be in possession of visas when crossing the external borders and those whose nationals are exempt from that requirement. The UK is not bound by this regulation as we do not participate in the migration aspects of the Schengen acquis.

The presidency will invite an exchange of views by member states on the EU response to increased migration pressures. This item builds on discussions at the last two Councils; it will include combating illegal migration in the context of migration flows from the south-east (including the Greek-Turkish border) and the southern Mediterranean. The UK supports increased efforts to combat illegal flows across the external border and within the EU, including closer co-operation between Frontex, the European Asylum Support Office and Europol. We believe this should be linked to further work "upstream" in countries of origin and transit, using the tools of the EU's global approach to migration, as well as joint efforts to combat the abuse of free movement.

Over lunch the presidency will seek a steer from Ministers on the key issues blocking negotiations regarding Schengen governance, namely the choice of legal base for the Schengen evaluation mechanism and the role the Commission should play in taking decisions to reintroduce border controls.

In both mixed Committee and main Committee there will be a presentation by the Commission and first exchange of views on proposals for new JHA funding programmes under the multi-annual financial framework (MFF) 2014-2020. The package includes a communication and proposals for four regulations establishing a new internal security fund and the asylum migration fund (AMF). While the Government welcome the flexibility and potential efficiency that will be offered from merging the six existing funding programmes into two programmes, we are concerned about the size of the overall budget proposed by the Commission. We will also need to consider our participation under the JHA opt-in arrangements.

The presidency will seek support for its proposal on a process for early warning, preparedness and management of asylum crises. Instead of a clause allowing transfers under the Dublin regulation to be suspended, the proposal would envisage a provision in the Dublin regulation requiring member states to provide data about their asylum system to the European Asylum Support Office (EASO) and for action plans to be drawn up if it appears that their systems may be facing difficulties. The Government can support this in principle provided the action plans are drawn up by the member states themselves, acting through EASO, and not by the Commission.

The Commission will then present its proposals on the global approach to migration and mobility. The current global approach provides the overarching framework for much of the EU's work with third-country partners on migration. The UK welcomes the Commission's proposals for a renewed global approach, which should provide additional opportunities to work in conjunction with EU and international partners on migration, including combating illegal immigration. While we welcome a more comprehensive global approach, it is essential that it remains non-binding, and allows member states to decide on participation in various initiatives on a case-by-case basis. The Government will continue to ensure that any participation is compatible with the UK's immigration policy.

The presidency may attempt to secure agreement on the date for the removal of controls on Bulgaria and Romania's sea and air borders with countries in the Schengen area. This is dependent on the outcome of discussions at the European Council on 9 December. The UK will not have a vote at this Council on this issue as it concerns borders elements in which we do not participate.

The Council will be presented with a package of counter-terrorism (CT) items covering the EU action plan on combating terrorism, the EU CT strategy and the report on the implementation of the strategy on terrorist financing. The UK welcomes the work that is being done at an EU-level to mitigate the terrorist threat, in particular the work around data-sharing and aligning internal and external CT activities. It will be important moving forward that the member states stay focused on the implementation of the chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear (CBRN) and air cargo security action plans.

The presidency will want to adopt the Council decision and to sign the EU-US passenger name records (PNR) agreement, which was published on 24 November. The agreement will provide an unequivocal basis in EU law for the transfer of PNR data by EU-based carriers to the US Department of Homeland Security. The Government support this proposal and have agreed to waive our treaty rights to three months consideration of opt in so that the Council can proceed without us. However, the text remains subject to scrutiny in Parliament and we have therefore not exercised our opt-in in order to give the Committees an opportunity to consider the agreement.

There will be a discussion on cross-border itinerant criminality. The issue of "mobile itinerant organised crime groups" was identified as one of the eight EU crime priorities for 2012-13 and is being addressed as one of eight projects under the EU policy cycle (on tackling organised crime), being overseen by the Standing Committee on operational co-operation on internal security (COSI). The UK has decided not to participate in this project at this time as the UK does not focus on itinerant criminals as a distinct group ("itinerant groups" do not feature in the UK threat assessment as we consider all organised crime by crime-type and threat area).

The Justice day will begin with the presidency seeking to obtain general agreement on the provisions of the proposed regulation on succession and wills. As the UK has not opted in to this proposal it will not participate in any vote on these guidelines.

The presidency will also be looking to reach agreement on certain elements of the proposal to modify the regulation on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters (Brussels I). The regulation lays down rules governing the jurisdiction of courts and the recognition and enforcement of cross-border judgments in civil and commercial matters in the member states. The Government opted-in to the proposal in March.

Next there will be a debate of specific issues of the regulation on a EU common sales law. This proposal was presented at the October JHA Council where the Commission confirmed it would offer an alternative contract law regime that would form part of the law of each member state but would not harmonise national contract law systems.

The Council will discuss the European Investigation Order (EIO). The EIO is a draft directive aimed at streamlining the process of mutual legal assistance between participating EU countries. The UK has opted in. The presidency will be seeking to reach a general approach (agreement) on the EIO. A partial general approach to articles 1-18 was achieved at the June JHA Council. There have been significant improvements to the original draft of the EIO and we are considering our position in relation to the current text. The EIO also remains subject to parliamentary scrutiny.

There will then be a debate on the draft directive on establishing minimum standards on the rights, support and protection of victims of crime. The presidency will be looking to agree a general approach and a scrutiny waiver has been granted by both Houses.

The presidency will then provide an update regarding the draft directive on the right of access to a lawyer in criminal proceedings and on the right to communicate upon arrest. This is the third proposal on the EU's criminal procedural rights road map which sets minimum standards for the rights of the defence. This presidency also gave an update on this directive at the October JHA Council.

Next, the Commission will present proposals for two new funding programmes in the area of justice, rights and citizenship for the period 2014-2020. These are to replace the existing funding programmes in the current fundamental rights and justice framework. The overall objectives of the proposed justice programme are to promote judicial co-operation in civil and criminal matters, facilitate access to justice and to prevent and reduce drug supply and demand, while the objective of the rights and citizenship programme is to contribute to the creation of an area where the rights set out in the treaty on the functioning of the European Union, and in the charter of fundamental rights are promoted and protected.

Finally, the presidency will be providing a state of play update to Council on the negotiations on EU accession to ECHR. The negotiating mandate was agreed at the JHA Council in June 2010, and a draft version of an accession agreement was produced by experts with knowledge of the convention system in June 2011. This is now subject to further consideration.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Bereavement Benefit (Public Consultation)

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions (Steve Webb): One of the key tasks that the Government have faced over the past year and a half has been to fundamentally reassess the role the welfare system should play in the 21st century.

We recognise that spousal bereavement is a life-changing event. Emotionally, socially, economically, bereaved people face the task of re-establishing themselves and adjusting to their new circumstances. We know that this journey varies considerably according to personal circumstance, with people drawing on a wide range of support mechanisms to get them through. Bereavement benefits form an important part of the state safety net at this time.

But these benefits have fallen outside the recent reviews of the wider welfare system. Indeed, they have rarely undergone any kind of critical scrutiny to establish whether they provide effective support after the loss of a spouse or civil partner.

To address this we are today publishing a consultation paper on the future of bereavement benefits. We are seeking views on how in the future these payments should support those of working age who suffer the loss of a husband, wife or civil partner. We are aware we need to strike a balance between providing appropriate support at a critical time, while encouraging those of working age to support themselves and their families through employment when they feel able to do so.

Payments made under the war pensions scheme or armed forces compensation scheme will not be affected by this review. The review will not impact those already in receipt of bereavement benefits at the point at which a new scheme is introduced.

A copy of the document will be available in the Vote Office later today.

Further details will be available on the Department for Work and Pensions website at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/consultations/2011/bereavement-benefit.shtml.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Social Security Benefits Uprating

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions (Steve Webb): I am pleased to announce the proposed social security benefits rates for 2012, which are set out in the table below. The annual up-rating of benefits will take place for state pensions and most other benefits in the first full week of the tax year. In 2012, this will be the week beginning 9 April. A corresponding provision will be made in Northern Ireland.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

EU Competitiveness Council

The Minister for Universities and Science (Mr David Willetts): My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, Baroness Wilcox, has today made the following statement:

The EU Competitiveness Council took place in Brussels on 5 and 6 December 2011. I represented the UK on internal market and industry issues on 5 December, and the Minister of State for Universities and Science, represented the UK on research issues on 6 December. A summary of those discussions follows.

The main internal market and industry issues discussed on 5 December were: patents; industrial policy; business competitiveness; impact assessment in the Council; results of the single market forum; customs co-operation; and companies registers. Additionally, there was a lunchtime discussion regarding patents.

A lengthy discussion on patents failed to conclude after the presidency presented a compromise proposal on political aspects of the draft Court agreement. The proposal included the seats of different bodies, principles of financing, an extended transitional period during which users of the Court could continue to use the existing litigation arrangements for European (non-unitary) patents, and greater opportunities to bring infringement cases directly to the central division. Discussions continue and the presidency is planning an initialling ceremony on 22 December, if agreement can be reached.

The Council agreed conclusions on industrial policy without discussion. The Council also took note of a presentation by the Commission on a proposal for a competitiveness and SME (small and medium-sized enterprise) programme 2014-2020.

On impact assessment in the Council, the presidency introduced draft conclusions, recalling the recent Court of Auditors report on impact assessment, the inter-institutional agreement on better law-making and the recent Council conclusions adopted by ECOFIN on impacts of legislation. The UK and other member states stressed the need for the Council to act quickly to translate agreements into practice. The conclusions were adopted.

Conclusions from the single market forum were also adopted, which responded to the outputs of the single market forum held in Warsaw. I did not intervene, but other member states did both to congratulate the Polish presidency on hosting the event and to push for the "professional card" idea, likely to feature in forthcoming proposals on professional qualifications.

Conclusions were also adopted on a further substantive agenda item regarding customs co-operation with eastern neighbouring countries. The presidency and the Commission stressed that co-operation on the eastern border was a priority to facilitate trade and ensure safety of EU citizens.

The final substantive agenda item was regarding interconnection of business registers. The Council agreed a general approach on a directive that will facilitate the interconnection of business registers across the EU. The presidency proposed a Council statement as drafted by Germany to clarify concerns from some member states. This was agreed.

There were also a substantial number of AoB items on the agenda. Of note were the discussions on REACH and services of general economic interest. I intervened in both cases.

The Czech and Slovak delegations presented a paper on EU chemicals legislation (REACH) emphasising the need to focus on the original principles of REACH relating to smart regulation and the "think small first" principle. I supported the paper, and questioned the Commission's intention to set a numerical target for the candidate list.

Some member states had written to the Commission to criticise a number of elements in the services of general economic interest package. The Commissioner, Alumnia, defended the proposals. I defended the importance of controls on state aid which are instrumental in ensuring a level playing field for competition and promoting competitiveness, as well as the overall thrust of the Commission's package.

Other AoB items that were covered included: the state of European shipbuilding; European standardisation; results from the European tourism forum; the lead markets initiative; Horizon 2020; the annual growth survey; customs enforcement of intellectual property rights; the single market and services directive states of implementation; European observatory on counterfeiting and piracy; protection of orphan works; the consumer marker scoreboard; alternative and online dispute resolution; and the consumer programme.

The Danish delegation also reported on the Work programme of their incoming presidency.

The main research items discussed on 6 December were: Horizon 2020; joint programming initiatives regarding "healthy and productive seas", "urban Europe", "connecting climate knowledge for Europe", "water challenges for a changing world", and "the microbial challenge"; partnering in research and innovation; and a Council resolution on space orientations.

The primary discussion concerned Horizon 2020, the EU's research funding programme for the period 2014-20. The UK supported the package. We, along with other member states argued that the international thermonuclear experimental reactor (ITER) and global monitoring for the environment and security (GMES) programmes should be included in the multi-annual financial framework (MFF) proposal.

The Council adopted conclusions on joint programming initiatives and on partnering in research and innovation without comment.

Day two also covered several AoB items. These were: framework programme of the European atomic energy community for nuclear research and training activities; cohesion policy; plan for the European innovation partnership on active and healthy ageing; information about the Budapest declaration on agricultural research; and report of the informal ministerial expert group on simplification.

Future of the High Street

The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (Vince Cable): Together with the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister, I would like to inform the House that Mary Portas has today presented the Government with a report presenting the findings of her independent review of the high streets, and recommendations for action.

This timely report is published alongside new Government commissioned research, "Understanding High Street Performance", which shows that although some high streets continue to thrive, a third are degenerating or failing, and by 2014 less than 40% of retail spending will be on the high street.

In May, with town centre vacancy rates doubling in the space of two years, the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister asked Mary to look into how we can create more prosperous and diverse high streets.

The report sets out Mary's recommendations which include:

Free car parking in all town centres and a national league table of the best places to park in England.

Introduction of "Town Teams" made up of landlords, shopkeepers, businesses, local politicians and residents to put in place a visionary management structure to create high streets that people want to use.

Empower successful business improvement districts (BID) to take on more responsibilities and powers and become "Super-BIDs".

A new "community right to try" allowing local people who do not have the means to buy empty property to test co-operative ventures.

Making explicit a presumption in favour of town centre development in the wording of the national planning policy framework.

A new national market day to encourage the talent of the future and bring people into our high streets.

A number of pilots across the country to put the recommendations of the report into practice.

The report is the culmination of six months of diligent inquiry by Mary Portas and we thank her for her hard work.

The Government will respond to the recommendations in the spring.

Copies of the Portas report have been placed in the Library, Vote Office and Printed Paper Office, and an electronic copy is being sent to all MPs.

CABINET OFFICE

Cabinet Committees List

The Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General (Mr Francis Maude): Today I am publishing an updated Cabinet Committee list. I have placed a copy of the new list in the Libraries of both Houses.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Fire and Rescue National Framework for England

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Robert Neill): I have today published a consultation document on the fire and rescue national framework for England. A statutory requirement under the Fire and Rescue Services Act 2004, the consultation sets out our proposed priorities and objectives for fire and rescue authorities in connection with the discharge of their functions. A copy of the document has been placed in the Library of the House.

The document marks a key milestone in resetting the relationship between fire and rescue authorities and Government. It proposes moving away from Whitehall prescription, enabling fire and rescue authorities to deliver their services in a way that makes sense locally, while continuing to meet the wider needs of national resilience. This includes working collectively with other fire and rescue authorities and collaboratively with a wide range of other organisations to improve public safety and cost-effectiveness.

It sets out the risk that occasionally we may be faced with incidents of such scale or complexity that all available resources could be overwhelmed, even if pooled or reconfigured. Her Majesty's Government retain an over-arching responsibility for defence of the realm, ensuring we are resilient as a nation to such risks but this must be based on and drawn from local capability, expertise, knowledge and leadership. This will be supported by a new strategic governance arrangement in partnership with the fire sector to be developed with key partners alongside the consultation.

This more localist approach builds on the approach of the coalition Government in ending the regionalisation of the fire service and dismantling regional government in England. We have already announced that fire and rescue authorities no longer have to work through regional management boards, and we have stopped the forced regionalisation of fire control rooms through the termination of FireControl.

The Government are continuing to fund the existing national resilience capabilities to build specialist capability to manage fire and rescue related risks, for example: additional, specialist urban search and rescue capability; high volume pumps; mass decontamination equipment; detection, identification and monitoring equipment for chemical, biological and nuclear incidents; and additional command and control capability.

The document builds on existing notable practice by fire and rescue authorities to promote greater accountability to local taxpayers, more partnership working and open data transparency. It proposes high level expectations for fire and rescue authorities to develop arrangements that are effective locally along with a requirement to produce assurance statements and to make comparable performance data available to communities.

I am grateful to the national framework partner working group for its assistance in developing this consultation document and look forward to receiving responses from across the fire and rescue sector and more broadly. The consultation closes on 19 March 2012.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Local Television

The Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (Mr Jeremy Hunt): Today, the Government are publishing their response following two public consultations on a proposed new framework for local TV in the UK. The Government received over 310 responses from interested parties, members of the public and businesses who commented on the proposals or advocated a specific town or city to receive a local TV service. The Government will shortly lay three orders that will put in place the framework to give new powers to Ofcom and to incentivise the market to provide local TV services.

The framework the Government are creating combines market incentives and regulatory mechanisms to provide new local TV opportunities. The outcome will see a new generation of genuinely local TV services broadcast on Freeview (and potentially satellite and cable) across the UK. The Government are providing Ofcom, the communications regulator, with a power to award a series of local content licences and a multiplex licence for these purposes. Upon enactment of the legislation, the Government expect Ofcom will award a first tranche of 20 local TV content licences in 2012 along with the single multiplex licence. Further licence awards and roll-out to additional locations will follow, depending on market demand and cost viability.

The orders the Government intend to lay in the very near future will do three things: require Ofcom to make available sufficient local spectrum for the purposes of local TV; create new provisions to enable Ofcom to run a fit-for-purpose local licensing award process; and require electronic programme guide providers to give appropriate prominence to the licensed local TV services. In addition, up to £40 million from the television licence fee will be provided to support capital build and content acquisition.

The published Government response lists the principal locations expected to be in the first tranche of licence award and offers further details on how the framework will work in practice.

The Government believe the new local TV services will contribute towards the local democratic process through news and other programming, offering information, reporting and content which will hold institutions and individuals to account; it will provide opportunities for journalism, creative industries and syndication across local media.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Recall of MPs

The Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office (Mr Mark Harper): Today the Government have published draft legislation and a White Paper setting out proposals to introduce a power of recall, allowing voters to force a by-election where an MP is found to have engaged in serious wrongdoing and having had a petition calling for a by-election signed by 10% of his or her constituents, as set out in the coalition programme for Government.

These proposals form a key part of our efforts aimed at rebuilding trust in politics, ensuring that politicians are properly accountable to the people they represent.

Currently a Member could commit serious wrongdoing but will only be disqualified if convicted by the courts and sentenced to more than 12 months in prison. Otherwise such a Member may not have to account to their constituents until the next general election.

Key to any recall mechanism is the trigger for a recall petition. Members must not be left vulnerable to attack from those who simply disagree with them or think that they should have voted a different way on a particular measure. Recall should be used to hold to account Members who have not maintained the high standards of behaviour that are rightly expected of elected representatives. Recall should not be used as a way of re-running elections.

The draft Bill provides that a Member should face a recall petition if one of two conditions are met. The first would fill the existing gap in the disqualification regime by providing that where a Member receives a custodial sentence of up to 12 months they will automatically face a recall petition. The second is the House of Commons passing a resolution stating that a Member should face a recall petition. This is designed to supplement the House's existing disciplinary powers, and ensure that MPs who have committed serious wrongdoing which has not resulted in a prison sentence may be recalled, if the wrongdoing is considered to be sufficiently serious. The draft Bill deliberately does not set out the internal procedures of the House of Commons which would lead to such a resolution; such matters fall within the exclusive cognisance of the House. We would hope, however, that the House would put into place procedures based around those which it already has to deal with reports from the Commissioner for Parliamentary Standards.

The draft Bill proposes that the recall petition should be open for signature for eight weeks and will be administered by the local returning officer. The petition may be signed by anyone on the parliamentary electoral register for the relevant constituency, provided that they made their application for registration before the recall petition procedure was started. If, at the end of that period, more than 10% of those on the electoral register have signed the petition, then the Member's seat will be vacated and a by-election will be held. The former Member will be free to stand in the by-election.

There is no precedent for a recall mechanism in the United Kingdom. In bringing forward this draft Bill the Government hope to stimulate a debate on what would be the best model for a recall mechanism.

We are publishing this White Paper and draft Bill for pre-legislative scrutiny, and I am inviting the Political and Constitutional Reform Committee to scrutinise the draft Bill. We will consider the results of this process with great care.

EDUCATION

Education Funding

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): Today I am announcing details of education funding for 2012-13. My announcement includes the dedicated schools grant (DSG), funding for 16-19 education and training and capital funding for maintained schools, academies, the voluntary aided sector and 16-19 provision.

School funding

As set out in the "Consultation on School Funding Reform", issued in July, we will continue with the current methodology for funding schools in 2012-13 through the dedicated schools grant (DSG). The underlying school budget will be kept at flat cash per pupil for 2012-13.

To protect local authorities with falling pupil numbers we will continue with arrangements to ensure that no authority loses more than 2% of its budget in cash terms.

Although the overall schools budget will stay at the same level on a per pupil basis before the addition of the pupil premium, the actual level of each school's individual budget will vary. It will depend on local decisions about how best to meet needs and priorities. This does mean that some schools will see budget reductions, either because they have fewer pupils or local changes to funding distribution. To protect schools from significant budget reductions, we will continue with a minimum funding guarantee that ensures no school sees more than a 1.5% per pupil reduction in 2012-13 budgets (excluding sixth form funding) compared to 2011-12 and before the pupil premium is added.

Details of these arrangements, including per pupil funding for each local authority, are being sent to local authorities today and have been published on the Department for Education's website.

The "Consultation on School Funding Reform" set out proposals for the funding system from 2013-14. I am grateful to all those who have responded to these important issues. I am publishing today a report on the consultation responses: there was a good deal of consensus around some proposals, such as the factors to include in both any national and local formulae, and the need for careful transitional arrangements. However, the responses also reflect a variety of views over some of the key aspects of the system. We are now working on developing further proposals in the light of the responses.

Funding for 16-19 provision

The Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA) is today publishing a statement setting out the funding to be made available for 16-19 education and training for 2012-13. The funding statement shows that the Government plan to fund an increased number of places as we approach the raising of the participation age. We plan to fund 1,577,000 places in the 2012-13 academic year compared with the 1,543,000 learners we expect providers to have recruited in 2011-12.

Transitional protection was introduced in 2011-12 in order to help schools and colleges to manage unit cost savings that need to be made. We will continue to provide transitional protection for these policy changes for 2012-13 and will continue to make this available until 2015-16.

Capital funding

Today's capital announcement covers funding for 2012-13 and includes allocations for basic need (funding for additional pupil places), maintenance and devolved formula capital. This is a further one-year allocation. This will enable me to reflect, for subsequent allocations, the rapidly changing situation in local areas on both demographic growth and numbers of schools converting to academy status.

At a national level, overall capital funding remains the same as last year—£800 million to address the shortage in pupil places and £1.4 billion for maintenance, including £200 million for devolved formula capital. I have agreed however to change the methodology for allocating funding for pupil places to better reflect local need.

Funding for pupil places needs to take account of the capacity of schools. For this reason, I have agreed that basic need allocations for 2012-13 will be decided using both numbers on roll and capacity data. That is, it combines the two methodologies used in 2011-12 for allocating basic need funding. Moving to this method will result in changes in levels of funding for some local authorities. Because of this, I have introduced a protection so that no local authority will receive, in 2012-13, less than 80% of the funding they would have received had we taken the same approach as taken for 2011-12.

This allocation does not include the additional £600 million for basic need allocated to my Department in the autumn statement. I am considering how best to allocate this funding. I will also consider how we can improve the collection of local data on pupil numbers and available school places so that allocations for the remainder of the spending review period are better targeted towards need.

Maintenance funding for local authorities will remain at the same level as last year and will be allocated in the same way. Some local authorities will see a reduction because their maintained schools have converted, or are about to convert, to academy status. Local authorities should take into account the maintenance needs of all maintained provision, including Sure Start centres, when deciding how to prioritise this funding.

I can also confirm the same funding levels for the locally co-ordinated voluntary aided programme (LCVAP) as in 2011-12 and we are taking the same approach to its allocation.

Devolved formula capital will remain at similar levels to last year so that the limited capital available can be more strategically targeted.

We have retained £276 million centrally to meet the maintenance needs of academies. This amount is based on numbers of academies already open and those due to open in the coming months. We expect local authorities to honour any commitments they have made to fund projects in their maintained schools, including where those schools may be intending to become academies during the next year.

The academies central fund next year will be administered in a similar way to this year, and we will provide further details early in 2012 when we are ready to receive applications for funding. We will also consult with sponsors and academy chains to explore options for giving them more flexibility to address the maintenance needs of their whole academy estate.

Capital funding for 16-19 provision

Over £107 million of capital funding will be available in 2012-13 to meet maintenance and building needs of sixth form colleges and demographic pressures for new 16-19 places in schools, academies and sixth form colleges.

Some £59 million of this funding will be allocated to the sixth form college building condition improvement fund (BCIF) in 2012-13 to address priority building condition needs within the sixth form college sector. All sixth form colleges will remain eligible for devolved formula capital (DFC) and it will remain at the same rate as 2011-12.

In addition, I want to ensure that funding is available to meet the need for additional places where there are demographic pressures in schools, academies and sixth form colleges. I have therefore made a further £44 million available in the coming financial year for basic need funding for additional places for 16-19 year old students in these areas. This funding will also support the provision of new places in mainstream settings, including in FE colleges, for students with learning difficulties and disabilities.

The Capital Review

The consultation on the capital review ended in October and I intend to publish a final Government response to their recommendations in January 2012.

The Priority School Building Programme

Finally, I would like to update the House on the latest position on the priority school building programme (PSBP). Partnerships for Schools (PfS) is currently reviewing applications to ensure there is a fair and rigorous selection of schools for admission to the programme. Until applications have been fully assessed, I will not be able to announce which schools will be in the programme. I understand the high level of interest in this programme and expect to be able to make an announcement in the new year.

More details about today's capital allocations are being sent to local authorities and will be published on my Department's website at: www.education.gov.uk.

A list of resources associated with today's announcement can be found at annex A and I shall also make copies available in parliamentary Libraries.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Integrity in the Police Service (HMIC Report)

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): On 18 July, I informed the House that I was asking Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary (HMIC) to consider instances of undue influence, inappropriate contractual arrangements and other abuses of power in police relationships with the media and other parties and to make recommendations as to what needs to be done. I am pleased to tell the House that HMIC have concluded their review and have today published their report: "Without Fear or Favour: a review of police relationships". A copy will be placed in the House Library.

The integrity of the men and women who work in the police service of England and Wales is critical to public trust in policing. Real or perceived conflicts of interest dent that trust and make policing by consent more difficult. The vast majority of police officers behave appropriately and conscientiously and I welcome HMIC's conclusion that corruption is not endemic in the police service. HMIC do however identify a range of integrity issues on which the service is neither robust enough nor consistent in its approach. HMIC found that police force and authority leaders have, on the whole, failed to grasp the importance of integrity and are therefore insufficiently compelling in setting the values and standards that should apply across all aspects of policing, as well as in setting a personal example to their staff.

Where forces and authorities get this right and police officers and staff operate to the highest standards of integrity, it is because of the presence of strong and effective leadership by example, setting both the direction and the tone. I want all forces and authorities to recognise this and to aspire to the standards of the best. I welcome HMIC's work and accept the recommendations they have made. It is now time for all police service leaders to work together urgently and constructively to agree and apply a coherent set of national standards of integrity and behaviour for police officers and staff.

HMIC's findings will be supplemented in the next few months by the work that Elizabeth Filkin has been undertaking in the Metropolitan Police Service and by the view of the Independent Police Complaints Commission as to whether there are further powers necessary to enhance their ability to be able to hold the police service to account. The Serious Organised Crime Agency (SOCA) will also be concluding a review next summer into the extent of corruption by organised criminals operating in the public and private sectors, including recommendations for addressing this. The police service's leaders should draw on these, as well as the findings that will emerge next year from the inquiry being led by Lord Justice Leveson. The standards they set need to give the public confidence in the integrity of those who police their communities, and the service's leaders themselves. I will expect a clear set of proposals to be ready for wider consultation by spring 2012.

To support police leaders in this, the Government have been consulting on establishing a national professional body for policing, the scope of which I intend to say more on to this House shortly. This is in addition to legislating to make the inspectorate itself more robust, better equipped to act and to shine an expert light on policing.

I intend to accept the offer made by HMIC to re-visit these issues next October. In doing so, they will be able to offer the public, and the police and crime commissioners who will be elected in November 2012, a clear view as to the effectiveness of the service's leadership on these matters, as well as the progress made towards both operating, and being clearly seen to operate, to the highest standards of integrity.

TRANSPORT

Dartford Crossing Petition (Correction)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mike Penning): On 14 September 2011, the hon. Member for Dartford (Gareth Johnson) presented to the House a petition:

"The Petition of residents of Dartford and readers of the Dartford Messenger newspaper, declares that the Petitioners are opposed to any increase in tolls charged for the Dartford Crossing. The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Department for Transport not to increase tolls on the Dartford Crossing and to reconsider the emergency measures to lift the barriers during severe congestion and extend the local residents discount scheme. And the Petitioners remain, etc". [P000960]

Regrettably, the "Observations by the Secretary of State" published by the Department for Transport on 14 October were incorrect, and related to another petition. The observations should have been as follows:

The Government set out its intention to revise the road user charging regime at the Dartford-Thurrock River Crossing as part of the outcomes of the Government's 2010 Comprehensive Spending Review in October 2010.

Subject to consultation, the Government proposed increasing the levels of road user charges in 2011 and 2012, in order to continue the prioritisation of improvements to the Crossing in the short, medium and longer term. The improvements include the suspension of charges at the times when an emergency exists such as severe congestion, the implementation of new, free-flow, charging technology, and the review of options for additional crossing capacity.

The Department for Transport published for consultation the details of its proposed revisions to the road user charging regime on 30 June 2011 and the consultation period closed on 23 September 2011.

The Department recently announced that there will be no increase in charges in November 2011 or April 2012.

The Department is considering the responses made during the consultation, and will consider carefully all the representations made before making any announcements on its conclusions.

The Highways Agency began a six month trial of an operational charge suspension protocol in July 2011, and it will review the effectiveness of the trial following its conclusion in December 2011.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mike Penning): The DVLA has a long history of providing driver and vehicle licensing support to Great Britain's drivers and motorists and in providing essential services to the police and other agencies to keep our roads safe. But times change and so do the needs of customers. To make sure the DVLA meets those changing needs, I am announcing today the launch of a consultation on a programme of work which will transform the way that the DVLA delivers its services to customers.

This programme will make it easier for motorists to carry out their business with the DVLA. This will be achieved by centralising services and providing much more choice and flexibility around how and when motorists deal with the DVLA. The proposals could deliver significant efficiencies with an estimated £28 million year on year saving.

As a result of these proposals I expect the DVLA to centralise services at its Swansea offices and to deliver those services electronically and in partnership with others. To this end, the DVLA will withdraw from its network of expensive, regionally located offices by the end of 2013. As this proposed centralisation of services is expected to have an impact on resources, the DVLA will now consult staff in these offices and the trade unions on the impact of the changes.

Also, motorists in Northern Ireland currently do not have access to all vehicle services that are available on the mainland, for example, the facility to tax a vehicle online is currently unavailable in NI. As part of this programme, the DVLA will also look to offer the full range of services to motorists in Northern Ireland.

The DVLA will ensure that the motor trade and customers are fully involved in the consultation on the transformation programme and that service delivery will not be adversely affected; rather, the expectation is that for many, services will be enhanced.

I am committed to improving the service all motorists receive while increasing efficiencies. I believe these changes will bring service improvements, better value for money and a faster, more responsive service for customers, while at the same time delivering greater productivity from the DVLA's workforce.

Written Ministerial Statements

Wednesday 14 December 2011

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Foreign Affairs Council (Pre-Council Statement)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (Mr Edward Davey): The EU Foreign Affairs Council will take place in Geneva on 14 December 2011. The agenda will cover items relating to the eighth World Trade Organisation ministerial meeting to be held in Geneva, 15 to 17 December. I will represent the UK.

The substantive agenda items will be: the position to be taken on the accessions of Russia, Samoa and Montenegro to the World Trade Organisation and mandates for deep and comprehensive free trade agreements (DCFTAs) with the middle eastern and north African (MENA) countries.

The Government's objective for the Council is to support the accessions of Russia and Samoa to the World Trade Organisation and the mandates for DCFTAs with the MENA countries.

TREASURY

Annual European Union Finances Statement

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): I am today laying before Parliament the annual European Union finances "Statement on the 2011 EU budget and measures to combat fraud and financial mismanagement" (Cm 8232). It is the 31st in the series.

The statement gives details of revenue and expenditure in the 2011 EU budget and covers recent developments in EU financial management and measures to counter fraud against the EU budget. It also includes updated details on the UK consolidated statement on the use of EU funds in the UK and changes related to the multi-financial framework.

Looking forward to future years' budgets, and particularly in the current economic and financial climate, the Government remain determined to ensure better value for money in EU budget spending, to oppose unacceptable budget increases, and to push for improvements in EU financial management.

EDUCATION

New Schools

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): I am committed to responding to calls from employers for an education system that develops the future work force with the skills they need. Business leaders say that equipping young people with employability skills—such as punctuality, good communication, reliability and teamworking—should be a top education priority for the Government.

Studio schools offer academic and vocational qualifications, but teach them in a practical and project-based way. Study is combined with paid work placements with local and national employers that are involved in the school.

I am pleased to confirm today that 12 new studio schools have been approved with a view to opening in September 2012:

Bradford International Food and Travel Studio School, Bradford
Da Vinci Studio School of Science and Engineering, Hertfordshire
Discovery Studio School, Stoke-on-Trent
Fulham Enterprise Studio School, Hammersmith and Fulham
Hull Studio School, Hull
Hinckley Studio School, Leicestershire
Hyndburn Studio School, Lancashire
Bournemouth Learning and Achievement Foundation Studio School, Bournemouth
Ockendon Studio School ,Thurrock
Parkside Studio School, Hillingdon
Tendring Studio School, Essex
The Studio, Liverpool

These schools respond directly to the demand of parents, communities and business.

I have approved the very strongest applications today. I fully expect some of the groups that are disappointed today to submit even stronger applications in the future and I encourage them to do so. Indeed, the application process to set up new free schools, university technical colleges and studio schools in 2013 and beyond has already been announced. I want particularly to urge groups to submit applications to set up new schools in areas of deprivation and basic need and where skills shortages are particularly evident.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

UK Oil and Gas Regulatory Scheme (Review)

The Minister of State, Department of Energy and Climate Change (Charles Hendry): My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, in a statement to the House on 14 June 2010, indicated that a review of the regulatory regime for the offshore oil and gas sector would be undertaken. I am pleased today to have deposited in the House the report of that review conducted by a panel under the independent chairmanship of Geoffrey Maitland, Professor of Energy Engineering at Imperial College, London.

The impetus for this exercise was, of course, the disaster which befell the Deepwater Horizon rig during drilling operations in the gulf of Mexico in April 2010. The tragic loss of life and widespread pollution which arose as a consequence of the blow-out on that rig were a salutary reminder to industry and regulators alike of the need for the highest standards of safety and environmental control in this potentially hazardous industry. Inevitably the incident led to a number of both internal and independent investigations in the US which have shed a great deal of light on the causes of the disaster and given rise to recommendations designed to ensure that the risks of a repeat are minimised.

Given the infrequency with which such serious incidents occur in the offshore industry, it is important that we learn all available lessons from them. I am, therefore, grateful that Professor Maitland and his colleagues have examined the US evidence with obvious rigour and distilled from it such a constructive road map for driving ever higher standards in the UK.

I am pleased to note the report acknowledges as the starting point the strengths of the UK's safety and environmental control regime and the high regard in which the authorities are held both domestically and by international observers. I trust that the industry itself will be reassured to note that the report also acknowledges the extent to which UK operators and industry bodies have mobilised themselves since Deepwater Horizon in an effort to raise those standards. The review has, however, identified a number of important areas, particularly around the assured implementation of regulatory requirements and the promulgation of best practice, where there appears scope for further improvement.

A great many of the insightful recommendations of the report are characterised by the theme of collaboration, whether that be between regulators, among operators or across those boundaries. In this respect, as one of the responses to the Deepwater Horizon incident, a new memorandum of understanding (MoU) has already been signed between DECC and the Health and Safety Executive (HSE). I have asked that the joint board, which has been established as a result, provides advice to myself and Department of Work and Pensions (DWP) Ministers on the recommendations which are relevant to the regulators. I have also asked my officials to work with HSE and, where relevant, Maritime and Coastguard Agency colleagues in considering with industry the broader recommendations with a view to identifying and embedding the improvements this report suggests are achievable.

I have requested that regulators work with industry to produce an agreed response and action plan by July next year.

HEALTH

Revenue Allocations 2012-13 (Primary Care Trusts)

The Secretary of State for Health (Mr Andrew Lansley): Today I am announcing revenue allocations to primary care trusts (PCTs) for 2012-13.

The PCT revenue allocations in 2012-13 will grow at 2.8%, which represents a real-terms increase, taking account of the Office for Budget Responsibility figure for the GDP deflator in 2012-13. This represents continued positive investment in front-line NHS services.

This means total investment in local NHS services in 2012-13 of £91.6 billion, an increase in excess of £2.5 billion in total allocations assigned in 2011-12. It puts the NHS in a strong position to deliver the Government's national priorities set out in the 2012-13 operating framework published on 24 November.

To allow the NHS financial stability during a period of transition, the weighted capitation formula, normally used to determine PCTs fair shares of available resources, has not been applied to the allocations. For 2012-13, all PCTs will receive the same percentage uplift in their recurrent allocations.

This will be the last round of allocations made to PCTs as, subject to the passage of the Health and Social Care Bill, the NHS Commissioning Board would be responsible for the allocation of resources and pace of change policy to clinical commissioning groups (CCGs) from 2013-14.

In common with previous practice, I have today written to all hon. Members to inform them of the revenue allocations made to the PCTs covered by their constituencies.

Full details of all local allocations, including details of other, specific allocations (to support primary dental care, pharmaceutical services, general ophthalmic services and joint working between health and social care) have been placed in the Library. Copies are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office and to noble Lords from the Printed Paper Office. They can also be found at www.dh.gov.uk/health/2011/12/pct-allocations.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Domestic Violence

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): I am launching today a consultation on the cross-Government definition of domestic violence. The consultation will run until 30 March 2012 and a consultation paper is available on the Home Office website. A copy of the consultation document will also be placed in the House Library.

The ambition of this Government is nothing short of ending violence against women and girls. As we set out in our strategic vision—"Call to End Violence Against Women and Girls"—prevention will be key to achieving that ambition. Effective prevention can only happen when it involves all agencies, working together to common goals and common understanding. That is why we are now consulting on a definition of domestic violence that all agencies and all parts of Government should use.

There are a number of aspects to the definition that this consultation considers. We are seeking views on whether the current cross-Government definition of domestic violence is working and should remain. We are also consulting on whether the definition of domestic violence should include younger victims below 18 years of age, including boys, and whether coercive control should also be reflected in the definition.

JUSTICE

Employment Tribunals and the Employment Appeal Tribunal (Fees)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Jonathan Djanogly): I have today published a consultation paper on introducing fees in the employment tribunal and the Employment Appeal Tribunal. The introduction of fees to these bodies will relieve pressure on the taxpayer by transferring some of the cost burden from taxpayers to users. It will also encourage parties to think through whether they might settle their disputes earlier and faster by using other less adversarial methods of dispute resolution, such as ACAS conciliation, which will continue to be provided free to users.

At a time of economic difficulty, I also recognise that Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunal Service provides a vital service to business, and must play its part in the Government's determination to confront the structural barriers that create unnecessary delay or cost to business, or impede competitiveness, employer confidence and the creation of jobs.

These tribunals cost the taxpayer over £84 million per annum and currently no financial contribution is sought from users. The Government think it is right that those who cause the system to be used should contribute towards the cost, in the same way as users of other parts of the justice system contribute to the costs of providing the service. Therefore the principle of charging fees is not in question in this consultation.

The purpose of the consultation exercise is to seek views on two options for a fee charging structure in the employment tribunals and the fee structure proposed for the Employment Appeal Tribunal—all of which incorporate safeguards to protect access to the tribunal for those unable to afford fees.

The consultation closes on the 6 March 2012. For those of you who wish to respond the document is available online, at www.justice.gov.uk.

TRANSPORT

Carriage of Passengers and their Luggage by Sea

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Transport (Mike Penning): I wish to inform the House that the Government have opted in to the Council decision concerning the accession of the European Union to the protocol of 2002 to the Athens convention relating to the carriage of passengers and their luggage by sea, 1974, as regards articles 10 and 11 thereof. The UK notified its intention to the Council and to the Commission that it wishes to accept the measure soon after the Council decision was adopted at Transport Council on 12 December 2011.

The Council decision sets out the basis for the Union's competence in respect of articles 10 and 11 of the 2002 protocol and authorises the Council to conclude the 2002 protocol on behalf of the EU. A separate Council decision relating to the other provisions of the 2002 protocol was adopted in parallel to this decision. The Union has exclusive competence as regards articles 10 and 11 of the 2002 protocol as it affects the jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters in the Union.

The UK has decided to opt in to this Council decision to ensure that it is in a position to ratify the 2002 protocol within the framework of the UN's International Maritime Organisation, as soon as it is ready to do so. The UK must have opted in to the Council decision if the appropriate provisions on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments are to apply.

The UK strongly supports the entry into force of the 2002 protocol because it will significantly enhance the international regime of liability that exists for damage suffered as a result of the death of, or personal injury to, a passenger and the loss of or damage to luggage, by sea—established by the 1974 Athens convention. The 2002 protocol will require shipowners to maintain compulsory insurance up to approximately £250,000 per passenger per voyage to cover liability in respect of the death of and personal injury to passengers on board ships and significantly raise the limits of liability from approximately £46,000 to £400,000 per passenger on each distinct occasion. It will also introduce other mechanisms to assist passengers in obtaining compensation, based on well-accepted principles applied in existing liability and compensation regimes dealing with environmental pollution. These include replacing the fault-based liability system with a strict liability system for shipping-related incidents and introducing the right of direct action against the insurer.

The Union has already adopted EU Regulation 392/2009 on the liability of carriers of passengers by sea which incorporates the 2002 protocol into EU law and ensures the uniform application of the 2002 protocol in the EU from 31 December 2012. It is, however, important that the UK and other EU member states ratify, or accede to, the 2002 protocol to ensure that both instruments apply simultaneously within the EU as soon as possible. Such an approach will greatly simplify the application of Athens regime in the shipping industry.

A copy of this statement has been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Local Authority Major Transport Schemes

The Secretary of State for Transport (Justine Greening): Following the 2010 spending review the Government committed to a £1.5 billion programme of investment in major transport schemes promoted by local authorities, recognising the impact that such schemes can have on growth and the economy.

Our aim was to ensure that the programme of investment for the spending review period would be affordable, would promote growth and would achieve better value for money for the taxpayer. All local authority promoters with schemes already in the pipeline were challenged to improve their scheme design, reduce costs and secure a greater proportion of funding from local sources.

In February 2011 we confirmed funding for the first nine of these schemes and announced an expanded development pool of 45 schemes that would be considered in more detail.

The local authority promoters of the development pool schemes were invited to submit revised funding bids in September 2011. Funding for 20 of these schemes was confirmed on 29 November as part of the autumn statement.

I am today announcing funding for a further 21 schemes as follows. These represent a mix of road and public transport schemes across England.

A684 Bedale-Aiskew-Leeming Bar Bypass[1]
Bath Transportation Package
Beverley Integrated Transport Plan
Camborne-Pool-Redruth Transport Package
Chester Road (Birmingham)
Coventry-Nuneaton Rail Upgrade
Croxley Rail Link (Watford)
Darlaston (Walsall)
Elmbridge Transport (Gloucester)
Leeds Inner Relief Road Maintenance
Loughborough Town Centre Transport Scheme
Luton Town Centre Transport Scheme
Morpeth Northern Bypass
North Fringe to Hengrove BRT (Bristol)
Norwich Northern Distributor Road (NNDR)[2]
Nottingham Ring Road
Pennine Reach (East Lanes Rapid Transit)
South Yorkshire Bus Rapid Transit Phase 1 (Sheffield/Rotherham)
Sunderland Strategic Corridor
Weston Package
Worcester Transport Strategy.

[1]The Department has offered North Yorkshire county council a lower level of funding than that applied for. The council has until the end of January 2012 to accept this offer.
[2]Subject to Norfolk county council agreeing to fund a package of sustainable transport measures in Norwich city centre.

This is a major programme of investment. The schemes announced today will cost £854 million with a DFT contribution of up to £586 million in this spending review period and beyond. The total DFT contribution to all 41 schemes will be up to £972 million, compared to the £1.575 billion that was previously requested for these schemes prior to the spending review—a 38% reduction. This means that a far greater number of schemes can go ahead than would otherwise have been the case.

All the schemes announced will now be able to progress towards construction subject to securing any remaining necessary planning and statutory approvals and subject to confirmation of value for money where material changes to the scheme have been proposed.

We are not yet able to make decisions for a further four of the development pool schemes.

In two cases, we have not yet been provided with sufficient evidence to allow us to assess the schemes' value for money. These are the Leeds new generation transport (Trolleybus) and South Essex rapid transit schemes. In these cases the promoters will have until 31 March 2012 to provide the necessary additional information, and we will make decisions within two months of receipt.

The Waverley link road proposed by Rotherham borough council is opposed in its current form by Sheffield city council, whose land is required for the proposed route. We recognise that there is a case for additional transport capacity in this area but the currently proposed scheme does not appear to be deliverable. We are inviting Rotherham to work with Sheffield and other stakeholders and to propose a resolution to the issue by 31 March 2012.

We recognise the critically important role that transport improvements could play in the regeneration of the Bexhill-Hastings area and the economic case underpinning the Bexhill-Hastings link road, though we are also aware of concerns regarding the proposed scheme, including its environmental impact.

Before we take a final decision on the scheme we want to be sure that it offers the best approach for regenerating the area and also to consider other transport options to achieve this, including local trunk roads such as the A21, A259 and local rail. We also want to consider whether further environmental mitigation measures could be deployed to address the impacts of the proposed Bexhill-Hastings scheme.

Over the next three months the Department will work alongside the scheme's promoters and other local and regional partners to gather further evidence on the optimal solution for the area. We would intend to make a decision swiftly thereafter.

Details of each of the schemes and the funding offered by the Government are available on the DFT website and will be followed by a more detailed document setting out the details of our decision-making process, and information on our assessment of the schemes.

Written Ministerial Statements

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

EU General Affairs Council (Pre-Council Statement)

The Minister of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (Mr Mark Prisk): The General Affairs Council will take place in Brussels on 16 December 2011. The agenda will cover structural and cohesion funds. I will represent the UK.

The substantive agenda item will be a policy debate on the structural and cohesion funds for 2014-20.The Polish presidency has tabled three questions for discussion: whether the common strategic framework should be approved by the Council and the European Parliament, or adopted solely by the European Commission; whether country-specific recommendations or national reform programmes should provide a linkage between EU2020 goals and the development needs of regions and member states; and whether funds should be ring-fenced for specific objectives. There will also be an informal lunch which will look at whether both negative and positive incentives are necessary to ensure that funds deliver on EU2020 objectives.

The Government's objective for the Council will be to ensure the funds contribute to addressing the priority areas to support growth and are delivered in a way consistent with member state's broader economic strategies.

TREASURY

NICs Holiday Factsheet

The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury (Mr David Gauke): In line with my commitment during the passage of the National Insurance Contributions Act 2011, I am today placing in the Libraries of both Houses a report on the functioning of the NICs holiday scheme.

The report provides information on: the number of applications received, the number of businesses benefiting in 2010-11, the amount by which they benefited and the number of jobs supported through the NICs holiday. The information is presented by region and constituency where possible. To date, just over 10,000 applications have been made for the scheme.

The holiday was announced in the June 2010 Budget and is designed to encourage the creation of private sector jobs in regions reliant on public sector employment by reducing the cost to new business of employing staff. The holiday exempts qualifying new businesses in eligible regions from up to £5,000 of employer national insurance contributions for each of the first 10 employees hired in the first 12 months of business. This is part of a wider set of policies designed to help businesses and stimulate growth in the regions.

Terrorist Asset-Freezing etc. Act 2010

The Financial Secretary to the Treasury (Mr Mark Hoban): Mr David Anderson QC has completed his first annual report as independent reviewer of terrorist asset-freezing legislation. The report covers the first nine months' operation of the Terrorist Asset-Freezing etc. Act 2010 and will be laid before the House today.

The Government are grateful to Mr Anderson for his detailed report and will consider carefully his recommendations. The Government's response to his report will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses on or before 15 February 2012.

CABINET OFFICE

Public Bodies Reform

The Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General (Mr Francis Maude): The coalition Government made a commitment to review public bodies, with the aim of increasing accountability for actions carried out on behalf of the state. Royal Assent of the Public Bodies Act 2011 marks an important milestone in this process which will allow Departments to get on with the important task of delivering the reforms I announced on 14 October 2010. Today, I am placing in the Library of the House an updated list of proposals for the reform of public bodies and guidance to support the programme of orders that will follow Royal Assent of the Public Bodies Act 2011. Copies will also be available in the Vote Office.

This Government made a presumption that state activity, if needed at all, should be undertaken by bodies that are democratically accountable at either national or local level. A body should only exist as a quango if it meets one of three tests, to which all existing public bodies have been subjected. These tests are:

Does it perform a technical function?

Do its activities require political impartiality?

Does it need to act independently to establish facts?

Some14 months on from my original announcement, we have made strong progress. We now have a legislative mechanism in place to implement current and future proposals for reform. We have announced that cumulative reductions in administrative spending of £2.6 billion will flow from public bodies over the spending review period. Where legislation was not required we have already completed more than half of the abolitions proposed by the 2010 review, and we have already started the process of conducting regular, triennial reviews of all non-departmental public bodies. These triennial reviews will ensure that never again will the quango state be allowed to spiral out of control.

Today I am able to confirm the 31 non-departmental public bodies that Departments have identified for reviews in the first year of the three-year review cycle:

Advisory Committee on Business Appointments, Cabinet Office;

Committee for Standards in Public Life, Cabinet Office;

Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills;

Industrial Development Advisory Board, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills;

Treasure Valuation Committee, Department for Culture, Media and Sport;

Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art, Department for Culture, Media and Sport;

Independent Agricultural Appeals Panel, Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs;

High Speed 2, Department for Transport;

Industrial Injuries Advisory Council, Department for Work and Pensions;

Fuel Poverty Advisory Group, Department of Energy and Climate Change;

Committee on Radioactive Waste Management, Department of Energy and Climate Change;

Foreign Compensation Commission, Foreign and Commonwealth Office;

Advisory Committee on the Design of Coins, Medals and Decorations, HM Treasury; Migration Advisory Committee, Home Office;

Technical Advisory Board, Home Office;

Veterans Advisory and Pensions Committees, Ministry of Defence;

Central Advisory Committee on Pensions and Compensation, Ministry of Defence;

National Employer Advisory Board, Ministry of Defence; and Legal Services Board, Ministry of Justice;

Triennial reviews will be based on the success of the methodology applied during the 2010 review of public bodies which looked at whether a function was required and, if it was, whether it should exist at arm's length from Government. Quangos will be required to meet one or more of the three tests listed above.

Triennial reviews will build on this methodology by including a further stage to examine whether the body's control and governance arrangements continue to meet the recognised principles of good corporate governance. As well as an opportunity for continuous improvement the reviews will help departments consider new and more innovative models for delivering services through public bodies.

Once the first tranche of reforms have been delivered, and the process of ongoing triennial reviews is firmly established, the UK public bodies landscape will look radically different and be substantially smaller. We will ultimately have reformed more than half of the 904 public bodies in scope of the 2010 review and the landscape will contain more than 250 fewer public bodies. The landscape will be more accountable, with Ministers taking strategic policy decisions and controlling core costs and releasing the front line to deliver services. Public bodies will no longer be seen as confusing, distant and impenetrable to the public, and Ministers will be clearly and transparently accountable for decisions that should be taken by elected representatives.

The landscape will be smaller, more efficient and will cost less, offering better value for money to the public. Our reforms will also help to realise a power shift away from Whitehall, placing control of the delivery of public services in the hands of people who use them, and contributing to important reforms in health, education and economic growth. Unlike previous attempts to reform the public bodies landscape, our reforms will ensure that public bodies will no longer operate long after their job is complete or continue in a form that is outdated or inefficient. I believe that these reforms will lead to a permanent, and long overdue, shift in the role of public bodies and much clearer lines of accountability.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Troubled Families

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Mr Eric Pickles): The coalition Government are committed to turning around the lives of the 120,000 most troubled families in England by the end of this Parliament.

I am working with Cabinet colleagues and local areas to ensure that these families are supported into education and employment, that their crime and antisocial behaviour are tackled, and, that overall costs to the state are reduced. Louise Casey is leading this work for me, as head of a new troubled families team in my Department.

I can announce today that a total of £448 million will be made available from the existing budgets of six Departments to meet this commitment over the next three years. £420 million of this will fund action and interventions in areas across England by local authorities and their partner agencies, and £28 million will be used to boost the Department for Work and Pensions' support for troubled families.

Central to the Government's approach is for local agencies to be to able to clearly identify and focus on their priority families. I am therefore also sending out an estimate of the number of families that should be targeted in each local authority area. I will set clear expectations for results to be achieved with these families, and will use this funding to incentivise local authorities to ensure the lives of these families are turned around, and to give them and their children the opportunity to succeed.

Local authorities will work with their partner agencies to provide focused engagement with each family, and avoid the duplication of effort and resources that has been a feature of so much of the response to these families to date. Delivering this commitment will require the full co-operation of central Government and local government; public sector agencies and voluntary organisations—and the families themselves.

The Government will offer local authorities up to 40% of the cost of intervening in a troubled family, payable primarily on a payment-by-results basis when successful outcomes have been achieved. These successful outcomes will be simple and straightforward: ensuring children are attending school; criminal and antisocial behaviour is reduced, and adults in the family are on the path to employment.

The new programme will also fund an England-wide network of troubled family "trouble-shooters", who will be appointed by local authorities. They will oversee the work undertaken in their area, such as ensuring families are getting appropriate support, and deploying sanctions where necessary.

This small group of families—representing less than 1% of the population—have a huge impact on the well-being of those around them, and cost the public purse an inordinate amount of money: an estimated £9 billion per year, of which £8 billion is taken up merely in reacting to problems as they arise. This is not a cost that we can afford to bear any longer—either financially or in wasted lives.

I am delighted to confirm the coalition's commitment to this vital programme. I will report to the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister regularly on the progress of Ms Casey's team and our local partners.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Education, Youth, Culture and Sport Council

The Minister for Sport and the Olympics (Hugh Robertson): A meeting of the Education, Youth, Culture and Sport Council was held on 28-29 November. The UK was represented by the Deputy Permanent Representative to the EU, Andy Lebrecht, for the culture and audio-visual section of the Council. The Scottish Minister for Commonwealth Games and Sport, Shona Robison MSP, represented the UK for the sport section.

Culture and Audio-visual Section

The Council adopted a decision on the signing of the convention on the legal protection of services based on, or consisting of, conditional access. This convention is an instrument of the Council of Europe which entered into force in 2003 and its regulatory framework is almost identical to the one set out in Council directive 98/84/EC.

The aim of the two legal instruments is to establish legal protection against piracy of technological systems of pay-TV, video-on-demand, etc. They cover both TV and radio broadcasting services and also transmission by internet. After the signature of the convention, the Council will proceed with the proposal for a decision on concluding the convention, which will be sent to the European Parliament with the request for its consent.

Ministers considered that the ratification of the convention by the EU will contribute to raising its profile, encouraging ratification by other countries (only nine countries have so far ratified it, four of which are EU members), and thus extending the legal protection for paid services beyond the borders of the EU. A number of UK TV content providers have stressed the importance of being able to extend the number of countries which co-operate to enforce the legislation on conditional access and thereby to limit piracy in the pay-TV sector. The signing of the convention should support the growth of this important part of the UK digital economy.

The Commission entered two statements to the Council minutes, one regarding the legal base and EU exclusive competence to accede to the convention and another concerning the final clauses of the convention, in particular the voting of amendments and the acceptance of new contracting parties.

The UK supported the adoption of this Council decision but intervened to table a statement at the Council to record its view that, even in the absence of the citation of a legal base in treaty on the functioning of the European Union (TFEU) Title V, the European Union's competence to enter into the JHA obligations, which form a small part of the convention, derives from TFEU Title V and accordingly the UK will be bound by virtue of the fact that it has exercised its opt-in under Protocol No. 21 to the treaty on European Union (TEU).

The Council adopted conclusions on the protection of children in the digital world. The conclusions underline the need to educate children as well as their parents and teachers about how to be safe online. Furthermore, the conclusions also call upon the audio-visual industry to design their services and products so that the protection of minors is fully taken into account. These conclusions were adopted without further discussion.

The Council adopted conclusions on cultural and creative competences and their role in building intellectual capital of Europe. The UK supported the adoption of these conclusions which address the development of synergies between culture and creativity on the one hand, and education, youth, research, business and innovation on the other.

There was a ministerial debate on the contribution of the cultural and creative sectors to growth and job creation, focusing in particular on the need for reliable and comparable statistics at European level to better inform policy making. There was universal acceptance of culture's link to economic growth, as well as the strong need for data in this area. The UK outlined the importance of these sectors to our economy, including exports, and noted that this is an area where Europe has a clear comparative advantage. A number of delegations recalled that as well as economic growth, culture also has a vital role to play in developing social cohesion. A number of member states observed that this work could make a key contribution to the EU 2020 strategy. While there was widespread support for the Commission's approach to improving data measurement, member states stressed that this should be done in a light-touch way by building as far as possible on existing data and mechanisms.

Under Any Other Business, the presidency provided information on the state of play concerning the procedural arrangements for the appointment of the European panel for the European Union action for the European Heritage Label (EEL). The panel will consist of 13 experts, responsible for selecting sites to be awarded the EHL and for their subsequent monitoring. Four of them are to be appointed by the Council for a three-year period. The Commission presented its recommendation on the digitisation and online accessibility of cultural material and digital preservation. The Commission also presented its proposal for the creative Europe programme which is a new support programme for the cultural and creative sectors, bringing together the current culture, MEDIA and MEDIA Mundus programmes. The Danish delegation outlined their priorities for their forthcoming presidency, in particular examining the new creative Europe programme, developing the cultural dialogue with third countries and promoting digitisation.

Sports Section

The Council adopted a resolution on the representation of the EU member states in the foundation board of the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) and the co-ordination of the EU and its member states' positions prior to WADA meetings. The resolution establishes the practical arrangements concerning the participation of the European Union and its member states in the work of WADA, namely the preparation, negotiation and adoption inter alia of rules, standards and guidelines by the agency. The UK's concerns over the wording around the co-ordination process and the presentation of the EU position on anti-doping matters were taken into account during the negotiation of the text and the UK was therefore able to support the adoption of the resolution.

The Council adopted conclusions on the role of voluntary activities in sport in promoting active citizenship. The UK supported the adoption of these conclusions which seek to raise awareness of the value and importance of volunteering and improve conditions for the development of voluntary activities in sport.

The Council adopted conclusions on combating match fixing, aiming to foster close co-operation and information sharing between member states, the Commission, the sports world and gambling operators in order to counteract this dangerous trend. The UK supported these Council conclusions which recognise that match fixing is a threat to the very integrity of sport.

The Council held a policy debate on good governance in sport. Autonomy, transparency and responsibility were cited as key elements of good governance, though several member states noted that autonomy should not mean that sports organisations are exempt from law. A number of member states welcomed the contribution that the sub-programme for sport, in the Commission proposal for the "Erasmus for all" programme, will make to tackling match fixing and other threats to sport. The UK welcomed the work on good governance and the upcoming expert group which it will co-chair but stressed that good governance should not be dictated by Government.

Under Any Other Business, the Commission presented its proposal for the Erasmus for all programme, the new EU programme for education, training, youth and sport for the period 2014-2020. The UK presented a short promotional film on the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic games. The Danish delegation presented the incoming presidency's priorities which include examining the sport section of the Erasmus for all programme, combating doping and match fixing, developing good governance issues and enhancing voluntary activities.

Export of Works of Art and Objects of Cultural Interest

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (Mr Edward Vaizey): As part of the Government's commitment to conduct triennial reviews of their non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), I am pleased to announce today the review of the Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art and Objects of Cultural Interest.

The Reviewing Committee (RCEWA) performs the very important role of advising on the principles which should govern the control of export of objects of cultural interest under the Export Control Act 2002 and on the operation of the export control system generally and advises the Secretary of State on all cases where refusal of an export licence for an object of cultural interest is suggested on grounds of national importance.

The triennial review will build on work undertaken by the Department during the review of public bodies, as part of the spending review and will collate and publish the evidence for the continuing need of the Reviewing Committee as an advisory NDPB.

The review of the RCEWA will be conducted by the Department with the support of a small review group made up of key stakeholders with a direct interest in the export licensing process. It will assess its effectiveness, accountability and efficiency. It will evidence the continuing need for its functions and examine and evaluate alternative delivery options.

The review will clarify the RCEWA's responsibility for advising Ministers and will also clarify the roles and mechanisms for openness, transparency and accountability.

I will inform the House of the outcome of the review.

Treasure Valuation Committee

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (Mr Edward Vaizey): As part of the Government's commitment to conduct triennial reviews of their non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs), I am pleased to announce today the review of Treasure Valuation Committee.

The Treasure Valuation Committee provides the very important advisory role of recommending to the Secretary of State valuations for the treasure items brought before it and providing advice on the apportionment of any reward for the treasure item.

The triennial review will build on work undertaken by the Department during the review of public bodies, as part of the spending review and will collate and publish the evidence for the continuing need of the Treasure Valuation Committee as an advisory NDPB.

The review of the Treasure Valuation Committee will be conducted by the Department with the support of a review group made up of key stakeholders with a direct interest in the treasure valuation process. It will assess its effectiveness, accountability and efficiency. It will evidence the continuing need for individual functions and examine and evaluate a range of delivery options.

The review will clarify the Treasure Valuation Committee's responsibility advising Ministers and will also clarify the roles and mechanisms for openness, transparency and accountability.

I shall inform the House of the outcome of the review.

DEFENCE

Cyprus

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Philip Hammond): In a written statement on 24 May 2011, Official Report, columns 49-50WS, my predecessor, the right hon. Member for North Somerset (Dr Fox), informed the House that, further to the strategic defence and security review, a separate review of the British sovereign base areas in Cyprus would be undertaken.

The study has been completed. The Government accept its recommendations and confirms Her Majesty's Government's enduring commitment to the sovereign base areas in Cyprus. The key considerations in affirming this commitment were:

> The sovereign base areas are in a region of geo-political importance and high priority for the United Kingdom's long-term national security interests.
> The sovereign base areas provide an adaptable and capable forward mounting base, the utility of which has been amply demonstrated: for example, the basing of RAF aircraft that participated in operations over Libya; the regular deployment of Cyprus-based military personnel to Afghanistan; and the key role played as a logistic hub for operations in Afghanistan.

In addition, the sovereign base areas are expected to make a significant contribution to logistic draw-down from Afghanistan, as well as to wider humanitarian and conflict prevention activities in the region. They also continue to provide excellent training opportunities in this important region.

The strategic defence and security review 2010 emphasised the fundamental importance of an "ability to remain adaptable for the future". The sovereign base areas provide the United Kingdom with a unique contribution to our ability to achieve this goal.

Our military personnel, United Kingdom civilians and locally employed personnel in the sovereign base areas make a major contribution to the national security of the United Kingdom and will continue to do so in the future. In administering the sovereign base areas, the United Kingdom will continue to have as its main objectives—the effective use of the areas as military bases, maintenance of a constructive and co-operative relationship with the Government of the Republic of Cyprus, and protection of the interests of those resident or working in the areas.

RAF Scampton

The Minister for the Armed Forces (Nick Harvey): I wish to inform the House of the latest position regarding the future basing requirements for the RAF aerobatic team (RAFAT) known as the Red Arrows and of the RAF's air surveillance and control system (ASACS) units.

The previous Administration announced on 21 May 2008, Official Report, columns 23-24WS, that subject to trade union consultation, the RAFAT would in future operate from RAF Waddington, rather than RAF Scampton by 31 July 2011, although they would continue to use the dedicated airspace above RAF Scampton to enable training for their acrobatic displays.

The previous Administration announced on 28 October 2008, Official Report, columns 25-26WS, the relocation of two air surveillance and control system satellite units. Number 1 Air Control Centre at RAF Kirton-in-Lindsey and the Control and Reporting Centre at RAF Scampton, to RAF Coningsby by the end of 2014.

The strategic defence and security review (SDSR) considered a range of constraints on defence basing plans—the available estate, funding provision, plans already in train and the operational commitments of forces. In the light of the changes resulting from the SDSR, and against the background of the budgetary pressures defence faces, I have concluded that it makes sense to review the planned moves of the RAFAT and the control and reporting centre. In the meantime both units remain at RAF Scampton.

No 1 Air Control Centre has now merged and collocated with the Control and Reporting Centre at RAF Scampton and RAF Kirton-in-Lindsey will be closed by the end of March 2012, other than some service families accommodation and a combined mess for personnel at RAF Scampton.

The RAF will now consider future basing options for both the RAFAT and the ASACS units and make recommendations on options to deliver operational effectiveness and value for money. This will include recommendations on whether RAF Scampton should draw-down by 2014 as previously announced. This work is expected to complete in 2012 and I will report the outcome to Parliament at that time.

Service and civilian personnel at RAF Scampton will be briefed on the progress of this work; we will also engage with the trade union.

London 2012 Olympics

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Philip Hammond): The Government have agreed that the Ministry of Defence (MOD) will support the Home Office and the Department for Culture, Media and Sport by making a significant contribution to the security and safety of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympics games. The safety and security operation for the games remains police-led. Work continues on the precise details and numbers of the defence contribution. However, the MOD now expects to provide up to 13,500 service personnel in London, on the Thames, in Weymouth and across the UK, delivering a range of military support to the police and other civil and Olympic authorities.

The MOD has been working very closely with the Metropolitan and Dorset police forces to scope the provision of specialist support to maritime security operations on the Thames and in Weymouth bay. It is currently planned for HMS Ocean to be based at Greenwich and HMS Bulwark in Weymouth bay, providing maritime command and control, accommodation, helicopter and small boat basing, and logistics supply.

We have been building on our existing arrangements to ensure that there will be an appropriate and scalable air security plan. A multi-layered plan has been developed and will include Typhoon aircraft, forward-based at RAF Northolt, helicopters operating from HMS Ocean and appropriate ground based air defence systems.

The MOD will increase the normal capacity of the armed forces in several specialist areas which are routinely provided to the civil authorities, in order to provide an enhanced level of capability and response, including explosive ordnance disposal, military working dogs and the capability to search vehicles and buildings.

In addition to this support to wider security activity, the armed forces will provide 3,500 personnel to support the venue security operation for the Olympic and Paralympic games, rising to 7,500 for the 17-day period of the Olympic games themselves. They will form part of a total venue guard-force of up to 23,700.

A further 1,000 strong military contingency force will be available to respond to Olympic-related civil emergencies. Military personnel will also provide command and control and logistics support for the range of military capabilities involved.

In providing this support. Defence will contribute up to 13,500 military personnel at times of peak demand. These numbers will be in addition to the ceremonial role which the armed forces will play during the Olympics, which will showcase our armed forces to the world. I am also pleased to note that a number of service personnel hope to compete on behalf of our nation.

This defence contribution is on a similar scale to that deployed at other recent Olympic games and will contribute to ensuring a safe, secure and enjoyable 2012 Olympics.

Defence will continue to be able to support current and contingent operations during the games and my priority will remain the troops we have deployed on operations, including in Afghanistan, before, during and after the Olympics.

Veterans Advisory and Pensions Committees Review

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Andrew Robathan): The Ministry of Defence has concluded a review of the advisory bodies, the Veterans Advisory and Pensions Committees (formally established under a statutory instrument as the War Pensions Committees). This is in accordance with the Cabinet Office's recent guidance on public bodies, which took effect from 1 April 2011. This review examined the Committees' functions, as well as corporate governance procedures. The review concluded that the non-departmental public body model is the best way for them to deliver their functions, in a politically impartial way, in pursuing the interests of those who have served in the armed forces and their dependants.

The 13 Veterans Advisory and Pensions Committees, covering Scotland, Northern Ireland, Wales and the English regions, provide vital work by developing relationships and agreements with regional organisations to enhance the services delivered to ex-service personnel and their families, in particular those who are vulnerable. They also provide independent advice to both central and local government, health authorities and service providers in local communities. They give local support in promoting the armed forces' covenant and have actively been involved in the development of local community covenants.

War Pensions Scheme Uprating 2012

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Andrew Robathan): The new rates of war pensions and allowances proposed from April 2012 are set out in the following tables. The annual uprating of war pensions and allowances for 2012 will take place from the week beginning 9 April 2012. Rates for 2012 are increasing by 5.2% in line with the September 2011 consumer prices index.

EDUCATION

Young People in Education, Training and Work

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education (Tim Loughton): The Departments for Education, for Work and Pensions and for Business, Innovation and Skills are today publishing "Building Engagement, Building Futures: Our Strategy to Maximise the Participation of 16-24 Year Olds in Education, Training and Work". This fulfils the commitment made in "Opening Doors, Breaking Barriers", the Government's social mobility strategy published in April by the Deputy Prime Minister.

Increasing the participation of 16 to 24-year-olds in learning and work not only makes a lasting difference to their individual lives, but is central to our ambitions to improve social mobility and stimulate economic growth.

"Building Engagement, Building Futures" sets out how our radical reforms to schools, vocational education, skills and welfare provision will all make a significant difference to young people's opportunities and support. The Government recognise that in some areas we need to go further, in particular to help the most vulnerable young people, who are at risk of long-term disengagement.

The strategy outlines our plans to support all young people to develop the skills, qualifications and experience they need—to succeed in their careers and make a positive contribution to our society and economy. It sets out how we will ensure that young people are in the best possible position to realise the opportunities available to them as the economy picks up. It builds on recent announcements that we will offer more apprenticeships for young people and provide additional support through the new youth contract, which includes at least 40,000 financial incentives for small businesses to take on a young apprentice.

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions, the Minister with responsibility for employment, my right hon. Friend the Member for Epsom and Ewell (Chris Grayling) and my hon. Friend the Minister for Further Education, Skills and Lifelong Learning and I have worked together to develop this strategy, recognising the need for coherent policy approaches across education, training, skills and employment. This shared vision will help ensure that all services align in the best possible way to help every young person make progress towards adult life and successful careers.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Electricity Market Reforms

The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (Chris Huhne): I am today publishing a technical update to the electricity market reform White Paper "Planning our electric future: a white paper for secure, affordable and low-carbon electricity"[1]. The update complements the White Paper published in July 2011 and follows the release of the carbon plan on 1 December 2011, which set out the Government's long-term plans for UK decarbonisation—making a transition to a low-carbon economy while maintaining energy security and minimising cost to consumers. Electricity market reform is a key tool for achieving this long-term carbon plan.

While the current electricity market has served us well, we face a number of unprecedented challenges. Around a fifth of existing generating capacity will close over the next decade and much of the replacement will be intermittent (such as wind) or inflexible (such as nuclear) generation, threatening our security of supply. At the same time electricity demand could as much as double by 2050, driven by greater electrification of transport, heating and industrial processes.

Our long-term vision for the market is one in which low-carbon generation can compete fairly on cost. This would mean a competitive, liquid market, cost-competitive technologies, and a credible carbon price. Electricity market reform is a set of arrangements to take us through this transition, addressing market failures to help low-carbon technologies compete fairly and to ensure a secure electricity supply.

The electricity market reform White Paper set out key measures to encourage investment in new generating and non-generation capacity (such as demand-side response and storage), reduce the impact on customer bills, and create a secure mix of electricity sources which meets increased demand. This includes supporting the introduction of renewables, carbon capture and storage (CCS) and nuclear to meet our low-carbon commitments. The White Paper marked the first stage of the reform process, with a commitment to provide a technical update around the turn of the year. Today I am publishing that update, which completes the strategic framework, setting out:

- Our view that the system operator, part of National Grid, best meets the criteria for delivering the feed-in tariff with contracts for difference (FIT CfD) and the capacity mechanism;
- Our decision to legislate for a capacity mechanism, in the form of a capacity market;
- Detail on work to enable investment decisions for early projects; and
- The next steps for the electricity market Reform programme.

The institutional framework is crucial to ensuring that electricity market reform has a robust, credit-worthy delivery model to drive enhanced investment into low-carbon generation and ensure security of supply while seeking to minimise the cost to consumers. The technical update outlines the institutional framework involving Government setting policy and objectives, the system operator administering the FIT CfD and CM, and Ofgem regulating the market. It includes our rationale for the system operator acting as the delivery organisation, its roles and responsibilities, relationship with Government; governance arrangements and principles for ensuring a credit-worthy structure for the FIT CfD and capacity mechanism contractual arrangements. This model best meets the criteria set out in the White Paper and builds on strong synergies between the system operator's current role of system balancing and the delivery of the FIT CfD and capacity mechanism.

The provision of secure, reliable electricity for consumers is a key objective for Government. A capacity mechanism provides an insurance policy against the risk of a capacity shortfall. Current estimates suggest that a problem could emerge in the medium term—although accurate forecasting far ahead is difficult. That is why we need to put in place our insurance policy now; so we are covered against all possibilities and can respond as and when we need to.

Having considered the responses to our consultation on possible models of capacity mechanism, and undertaken subsequent analysis on the relative merits of the different options under consideration, the Government intend to legislate for the establishment of a capacity market. A capacity market ensures sufficient reliable capacity is available by providing incentives to invest in new capacity, including generation and non-generation approaches such as demand-side response, or for existing capacity to remain operational. We recognise that non-generation approaches could have advantages in terms of lower costs and reduced impact on carbon emissions. As well as allowing demand-side response and storage to compete on a fair and equivalent basis to generating in the capacity market, we are also assessing whether the right incentives are in place to support the efficient use of electricity, and whether further action is needed.

The technical update sets out our high-level decisions on the design of the capacity market. The detailed design of the mechanism will be developed with stakeholders' engagement from next year. I am also publishing the capacity mechanism impact assessment today which outlines the full economic assessment of the policy options for a capacity mechanism. Our modelling indicates that the introduction of a capacity market should have a limited impact on average electricity bills and could lead to both a small reduction as a result of avoiding very high prices in scarcity periods and less volatile prices.

The White Paper set out the Government's commitment to work actively with relevant parties to enable early investment decisions for low-carbon electricity generation to progress to timetable wherever possible, including those required ahead of implementation of the FIT CfD. I would encourage developers who meet the characteristics outlined within the technical update to contact DECC to initiate discussions. We are also providing further certainty for existing renewable generators by setting out in more detail the arrangements for renewables obligation certificates (ROCs) from 2027 onwards.

We have made rapid progress and are now moving to a stage of detailed policy design. Government will continue to work closely with stakeholders through a collaborative process to develop the detailed design of the mechanisms during 2012. To assist this process and maintain transparency a further update on emissions performance standards and feed in tariff with contracts for difference will be published early next year. We intend to legislate for electricity market reform in the second session of this Parliament, which begins in May 2012.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture and Fisheries Council (Agenda)

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mrs Caroline Spelman): The next Agriculture and Fisheries Council is on Thursday 15 and Friday 16 December, in Brussels. I shall represent the UK on agriculture matters on Thursday and the Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for Newbury (Richard Benyon) will be representing the United Kingdom on the fisheries items throughout the Council. Richard Lochhead MSP, Michelle O'Neill MLA and Alun Davies AM will also attend.

There are three fisheries and three agriculture items on the agenda. Discussions will take place on the following:

TACs and fishing quotas for 2012—The annual December negotiation package of fishing opportunities in the Atlantic and North sea for 2012.

TACs and quotas for fishing in the Black sea in 2012—Similar negotiations for stocks in the Black sea.

European Maritime and Fisheries Fund—The Commission will present the funding part of the CFP reform package which provides for a new instrument to replace the EFF and to integrate into it spending on the new EU integrated maritime policy.

CAP reform rural development proposal—A public debate focusing on the rural development proposal.

GM approvals—Council vote on approvals for use as food and feed of four GM varieties (three maize and one cotton).

Agricultural products promotions policy—Consideration of Council conclusions commenting on the green paper on promotion measures.

There are currently five points notified under any other business:

Commission presentation of a proposed regulation on sanctions against countries allowing non-sustainable fishing.

Cypriot item on aid for processed citrus fruit.

Protection of animals during transport—Commission report on implementation of the animal transport rules.

Codex Alimentarius—A presidency report back on the recent meeting of this UN body for international food standards.

Hungarian item on a technical aspect of the authorisation of GM products.

Finally, there is a ministerial lunch on Thursday 15 December to discuss certain aspects of rural development, including promoting innovation and risk management measures.

Independent Agricultural Appeals Panel

The Minister of State, Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Mr James Paice): A review of the independent agricultural appeals panel (IAAP) has been commissioned and will start work today. The IAAP is an advisory non-departmental public body, sponsored by DEFRA, which provides advice to Ministers on appeals made by claimants under the single payment scheme and other CAP schemes administrated by the Rural Payments Agency (RPA). This triennial review is part of a rolling programme of reviews that DEFRA is undertaking in line with Government's commitment to reducing the number and cost of public bodies and ensuring accountability for public functions by examining all non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) at least once every three years.

The IAAP review is to be conducted in accord with Government guidance for reviewing non-departmental public bodies, and will consider the effectiveness of how the functions of IAAP are currently delivered, whether there is a need for the function and the advisory NDPB to continue, and if so, how the function might best be delivered in future. The review will be led by a member for the DEFRA senior civil service who is not involved with the day-to-day business of the IAAP or RPA.

The review will compliment ongoing work by RPA to improve its complaints and appeals procedures. Key stakeholders are being informed of the review and invited to submit views. Further information, including how to participate in the review are available on DEFRA's website http://www.defra.gov.uk/food-farm/farm-manage/review-iaap.

An announcement will be made about the outcome of the review in due course.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Overseas Security and Justice Assistance Guidance

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr William Hague): I would like to inform the House of the introduction of the Overseas Security and Justice Assistance (OSJA) guidance.

On 13 October, I announced in a statement to the House the conclusions of the Government's review of policy and practice with regard to the export of equipment that might be used for internal repression, in light of events in the middle east and north Africa. I also announced that the Government had considered how we could strengthen our decision making when we provide security and justice assistance overseas. I said that guidance on assessing the human rights implications of such assistance would be issued to all Government officials and that it would be published before the end of 2011. A copy of the "Overseas Security and Justice Assistance Human Rights Guidance" has now been deposited in the Library of the House.

The guidance is part of a package of improvements that responds to the lessons of this year, and our wider commitment to strengthen and uphold the record of the United Kingdom as a defender and promoter of human rights and democracy. This guidance will assist HMG staff who are called upon to advise on security and justice matters overseas. It will ensure greater consistency in the human rights approach to security and justice assistance overseas across HMG; it will assist in the identification and consideration of applicable legal obligations; and it will ensure that our security and justice activities, whilst meeting HMG's national security priority, are also consistent with a foreign policy based on British values including human rights.

UK security and justice assistance to international partners to tackle threats such as terrorism, serious organised crime and conflict, and to support sustainable development, remains crucial to implementing our foreign policy and development priorities. As well as strengthening our relationships with other Governments and increasing our prospects for future cooperation with security institutions, this type of work can have a direct impact on our national interests. For example, the strategic defence and security review recommended that HMG increase efforts to tackle the terrorist threat at source, overseas. Our counter-terrorism programme aims to do just this by increasing the capacity of overseas authorities, such as the police, military and intelligence, to detect, investigate and disrupt terrorist threats.

At times, this will mean working with countries, institutions or units where we have concerns about their adherence to and respect for human rights and democracy. Often, it is these countries or institutions where security and justice assistance is most needed. While it is in our national interest to continue to provide such assistance, in doing so we must ensure that such assistance supports our values and is consistent with applicable domestic and international human rights obligations.

Today's publication of the OSJA guidance is a reflection of our determination to ensure that when we provide assistance in these countries, we do so in a manner that promotes, rather than undermines, human rights and democracy.

Making these decisions is not always straightforward. While UK justice and security assistance can help achieve both security and human rights objectives in a given country, it can also present a variety of human rights risks. The OSJA guidance was produced in order to provide practical support to Government officials making these difficult decisions. It provides a clear framework to help officials identify the human rights risks, propose appropriate measures to mitigate these risks and produce a final assessment. It also sets out when the decision to provide assistance should be taken by senior personnel or Ministers. The guidance covers case specific assistance such as the deployment of specialist police officers to assist with an investigation, as well as broader capacity building assistance.

The OSJA guidance already applies to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and is currently being rolled out to other Government Departments. An internal review of the guidance will take place in April 2012.

The Government are committed to tackling issues related to security and human rights in an open and transparent way. This is why we published the Consolidated Guidance to Intelligence Officers and Security Personnel on the Detention and Interviewing of Detainees Overseas, and on the Passing and Receipt of Intelligence Related to Detainees. And it is why we have taken the decision to publish the "Overseas Security and Justice Assistance Guidance" today.

HEALTH

Tobacco Control Legislation

The Secretary of State for Health (Mr Andrew Lansley): The Government will publish a consultation on the packaging of tobacco products in spring 2012.

In March 2011 the Government published "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: A Tobacco Control Plan for England" which set out how our comprehensive, evidence-based programme of tobacco control will be delivered within the context of the new public health system over the next five years.

The tobacco control plan included a commitment to explore options to reduce the promotional impact of tobacco packaging and to publish a consultation paper.

The Government take very seriously the need to reduce the number of young people who take up smoking. Each year, in England alone, around 330,000 children under 16 first try smoking and the majority of smokers start smoking regularly before they are 18 years old.

I am pleased to confirm that this consultation will be carried out on a UK-wide basis. Ministers in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are also eager to gain a better understanding of whether the plain packaging of tobacco products could be effective in reducing the number of young people who take up smoking and in supporting adults who want to quit. Participating in this consultation will help them in making decisions about how they wish to take forward this matter in their own Administrations.

It is also important to create a supportive environment for adults who want to quit smoking. Most smokers report that it takes many attempts before they succeed in quitting. Removing sources of temptation that undermine quit attempts can be of great help.

The Government want to make it easier for people to make healthy choices. To do this, we need to understand whether there is evidence to demonstrate that the plain packaging of tobacco products would have an additional health benefit, over and above existing tobacco control initiatives. The Department of Health has, therefore, commissioned an independent academic review of the existing evidence relevant to the effects of tobacco packaging. This systematic evidence review will be peer reviewed and made available alongside the consultation.

Department of Health officials are also working with colleagues across Government to explore the implications and likely impacts of options for tobacco packaging.

This presents a complex series of issues and we will need to take all the relevant factors into account.

In view of these requirements, the consultation will not be available prior to the new year. The consultation will be published in spring 2012 and I would encourage all those with an interest to respond.

HOME DEPARTMENT

National Policing Improvement Agency

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): As part of the wider reform of policing, I wish to update the House on plans to phase out the National Policing Improvement Agency (NPIA), to transfer its critical national functions and to establish a police professional body and a new IT company. I am also, today, placing in the Library a summary of the responses that were received in relation to Peter Neyroud's report, "Review of Police Leadership and Training".

I am committed to a methodical and careful phase-out of the NPIA in 2012. Good progress is being made. The NPIA's headcount has reduced by 25%. The NPIA has announced its departure from its site at Harrogate. Some of NPIA's procurement functions have already transferred to the Home Office, and important detailed work has been done to identify successor bodies for the NPIA's critical national functions and services that are required to support an effective and modern police service.

In response to the policing leadership challenge set out by Peter Neyroud's review (which I placed in the House Library in April 2011), I intend to create a new police professional body. This is a unique opportunity to further professionalise policing, creating a body that directly supports police officers at all ranks and civilian policing professionals. It will also create opportunities to open up the closed system of leadership within the police service, to harness greater diversity and experience at a senior level, and to equip the service with the skills it needs to deliver effective crime fighting in a changing, leaner and more accountable environment.

Peter Neyroud, in his review, outlined a policing professional body which held chartered status. This will be an issue for the professional body itself to pursue when it has developed a body of evidence demonstrating it reaches the rigorous criteria required.

Whilst the police professional body will focus on policing in England and Wales, it will be important that it takes into account, and works closely with, forces in Scotland and Northern Ireland, particularly on cross-border issues.

The police professional body will develop policing as a single profession; it will represent the entire service and will act only in the public interest. Chief constables also need to come together for discussion, focusing on key operational issues, when it is in the public interest for them to do so. I envisage a need for a chiefs' council, and I am working with ACPO and key partners to consider the precise remit of the chiefs' council and its relationship with the police professional body.

As announced in July, the Government also intend to establish an information and communications technology (ICT) company. The company will be responsible for the procurement, implementation and management of complex contracts for information technology, related business change and outsourcing services, supplying both national and local services for police. The company will be owned by police authorities and subsequently police and crime commissioners, with the police service as its customer. It will provide:

- better value to forces for their ICT spend;
- greater innovation in police ICT, so that operational officers have better systems;
- freedom for chief constables to focus on fighting crime rather than managing ICT;
- services and products that support forces and other customers in their drive for inter-operability.

We are discussing the key design elements of the new company with representatives of forces and authorities to ensure that it meets their needs first and foremost.

It will operate in such a way that forces can more quickly, easily and efficiently collaborate and procure IT solutions which meet local requirements.

Turning to plans for other NPIA functions, not in scope for either the police professional body or the ICT company, I intend to:

transfer key national critical operational functions to the National Crime Agency (NCA), which naturally fit with its new national crime fighting remit. Those areas already identified include the Central Witness Bureau, Crime Operational Support, the National Missing Persons Bureau, the Serious Crime Analysis team, and the Specialist Operations centre. In the short term, these important functions will move to the Serious Organised Crime Agency, one of the major precursor bodies to the NCA; transfer responsibility for the 101 non-emergency phone service, crime mapping, pathology services, forensic and other non-ICT procurement and the programme for implementing Schengen Information System (II) (SIS II), to the Home Office. These moves follow the non-ICT procurement transfers that were completed in October 2011; hand over, to a lead force, the hosting of the new National Police Air Service; end the work NPIA currently does advising on value for money by November 2012. In its place, police and crime commissioners will drive value for money in the police service, with further support where necessary.

All other NPIA functions are the subject of further detailed analysis and consultation with the wider police service. I expect to be able to make an announcement about the future of the NPIA's estate in the spring of 2012.

Of particular note will be reviews into the future viability of Bramshill House and the utilisation of Hendon Data Centre (HDC), which provides vital IT services at the very heart of policing. The HDC review will consider how services should be delivered in the future, by whom, and any transitional arrangements that will be necessary to ensure public safety is protected.

JUSTICE

Fines, Confiscation Orders and Fixed Penalties

The Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Kenneth Clarke): Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals Service ("HMCTS") has prepared a trust statement providing an account of the collection of revenues which, by statute or convention, are due to be paid to HM Treasury. The statement includes the value of fines and confiscation orders imposed by the judiciary; fixed penalties imposed by the police; the value of collections; the balances paid over to third-parties including victims of crime, the Home Office and HM Treasury; and the balance of outstanding impositions.

Enforcement of all court impositions is a priority for this Government. The Ministry of Justice has been working closely with the Home Office, Crown Prosecution Service, the Serious Organised Crime Agency and others to improve enforcement through a range of current and planned measures. These include "Operation Crackdown", a targeted blitz on persistent defaulters, telephone and text chasing, action to increasing deduction of court fines direct from salary and benefits, greater use of tracing tools like credit checks, and 24-hour telephone and internet payment facilities.

We are also exploring how we can reduce the level of "aged debt" on the Government's books—including fines, compensation and costs orders which have been imposed but have yet to be successfully collected after a minimum of 12 months. In some cases, these date back a number of years—some as far as the early 1990s. We are piloting new approaches with three commercial suppliers to establish the collectability of financial penalties over a year old, testing a combination of techniques and innovation and providing evidence on which to develop a strategy to manage this debt in the future.

The statement shows that in 2010-11 over £497 million of cash was collected by HMCTS—an increase of £25 million on the previous year. The overall total of outstanding impositions increased from £1.5 billion to £1.9 billion. The principal driver for this has been an increase in the use of confiscation orders, which have been more aggressively imposed in the Crown Court over the last year to deprive criminals of assets—their use by the courts in 2010-11 rose by 158%, and accounts for £1.2 billion of the total. In some cases, such as joint criminal enterprise, two separate orders can be issued for the total sum—in one case two individuals are separately liable for the same sum of £92 million, a total order of £184 million.

The Ministry of Justice is responsible for the direct collection of 16% of confiscation orders by value. Enforcing confiscation orders presents a challenge right across Government, as criminals use increasingly complex ways to mask or offshore their assets—it is estimated that over 60% of the total are "hidden" assets or held overseas. All agencies involved in confiscation orders are committed to improving enforcement performance.

The Comptroller and Auditor General (C&AG) has today published a report on the trust statement, and provided a disclaimer with his certificate. This reflects the fact that the IT systems used in the enforcement of impositions are live "case management" systems, rather than accounting systems: they are fully effective in reporting the value of money owed to ensure targeted enforcement, but cannot be used for retrospective reporting of individual transactions for audit. The IT system was rolled out in 2007-8: the requirement to produce a trust statement first arose for 2010-11. We estimate that to implement a new accounting system for these purposes would cost at least £3 million, and would not present good value for public money. We are, however, taking steps to ensure that we are better able to evidence the robustness of the historical figures for audit purposes in future.

Public Bodies Reform

The Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Kenneth Clarke): Today I have laid before Parliament a public consultation response document; "Response to Consultation on reforms proposed in the Public Bodies Bill—Reforming the public bodies of the Ministry of Justice".

The response confirms the Ministry of Justice's intentions in relation to the Department's bodies included in the Public Bodies Bill, which received Royal Assent yesterday. Reform of these bodies through the powers provided in the Public Bodies Act 2011 will increase Government accountability, eliminate duplication of activity and discontinue activities that no longer need to take place.

The response confirms the Government's intention to abolish the following bodies: the Administrative Justice and Tribunals Council; Courts Boards; the Crown Court Rule Committee; HM Inspectorate of Courts Administration; the Magistrates' Courts Rule Committee; and the Public Guardian Board. The Department will also use the powers in the Bill to merge four bodies or offices to create The National Archives as a legal entity to reflect current administrative arrangements. These bodies and offices are: the Public Record Office, HM Stationery Office, The Keeper of Public Records and the Advisory Council on Public Records.

I have decided that the Government should not pursue the abolition of the Youth Justice Board (YJB) and that the office of the chief coroner should be established but without the bespoke appeals system that would have been attached to that office. Amendments to that effect were made to the Public Bodies Bill on 23 November during Lords Consideration of Commons Amendments.

The Government continue to believe that there is a need for reform of youth justice in order to increase direct ministerial accountability for this important and distinct area of the justice system. The Ministry of Justice will shortly bring forward new proposals for youth justice reform. The Department will also announce in the new year further details of the timetable for the implementation of the office of the chief coroner.

Orders that give effect to the decisions set out in the response paper will be laid from early in 2012. As provided for in the Public Bodies Act 2011, all such orders will be subject to the enhanced affirmative parliamentary procedure.

Coroner Services (Charter)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Justice (Mr Jonathan Djanogly): The Government are today publishing their response to the consultation on the charter for current coroner services.

The charter will help those who come into contact with coroner services in England and Wales by for the first time setting out the standards that bereaved family members and others can expect to receive. It also sets out what someone can do if they are unhappy with the level of service provided.

The charter forms an integral part of the Government's plans for reform of the coroner system, and, alongside the appointment of a chief coroner and implementation of most of the provisions in part 1 of the Coroners and Justice Act 2009, will help to ensure much more consistent standards of service between coroner areas.

The charter consultation closed on 5 September 2011. A total of 135 responses were received from a range of stakeholders including coroners, local authorities, voluntary organisations, medical professionals and members of the public. Our response document summarises the views of respondents, and shows where we will subsequently make revisions to the charter.

Overall, there was support for the charter to be published, as proposed, alongside the Ministry of Justice's current "Guide to Coroners and Inquests". This combined document will ensure that people can easily access one document setting out first the processes in a coroner inquiry (the guide) and secondly the standards that can be expected throughout (the charter).

Hard copies of the final version of the combined guide and charter booklet will be printed and distributed to all coroner jurisdictions in early 2012. The guide and the charter will then be updated as and when changes to the coroner system are introduced in the future.

The response paper is available online, at http://www.justice.gov.uk/consultations/closed-with-response.htm.

TRANSPORT

EU Transport Council

The Secretary of State for Transport (Justine Greening): I attended the second Transport Council of the Polish presidency in Brussels on 12 December.

The Council reached political agreement on a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing a single European railway area (Recast). At its First Reading of the proposal on 16 November the European Parliament made amendments which differed significantly from the Council's general approach adopted at the June Transport Council. However, the political agreement text only incorporates those amendments that do not alter the general approach, and are acceptable to the UK. The Commission hopes a Second Reading deal can be struck with the European Parliament under the Danish presidency.

The Council agreed a partial general approach on a draft regulation amending Regulation 3821/85 on recording equipment in road transport. This proposal would amend the specification for tachographs, which measure hours spent at the wheel by commercial lorry and bus drivers.

The Council also agreed a general approach on:

a proposal for a directive of the European Parliament and of the Council amending Directive 2008/106/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council on the minimum level of training of seafarers to bring the extant directive into line with the latest International Maritime Organization rules; and a proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on the accelerated phasing-in of double-hull or equivalent design requirements for single-hull oil tankers (Recast). The amendments reflect changes to the international regime for tankers adopted at the International Maritime Organization between 2002 and 2009.

The Council noted a progress report on a proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on Union guidelines for the development of the trans-European transport network. This item generated substantial discussion. I intervened to acknowledge the importance of good cross-border infrastructure for the single market, but expressed concern about binding obligations proposed and the financial and administrative burdens they would place on member states at a time when fiscal constraints are substantial and also stressed the need for member states to retain their responsibility for planning decisions, processes and implementation. On the proposed increase to the TEN-T budget, I said budgetary restraint must be the priority.

Under Any Other Business, the Commission presented its new proposals on a "better airport package" which covers a recast of the slot allocation regulation, and revisions to the current directives on ground handling and noise which are intended to address issues of capacity, growth, environmental concerns and competitiveness. The proposals on ground handling and noise have been recast as (directly applicable) regulations.

The Commission reported on the European aviation safety management system and air cargo security action plan. I intervened in strong support of the European aviation safety management system and to request that the Commission report back on progress at a future Transport Council.

The Commission, at the request of Finland, reported on the current state of play with regards to the aviation EU emissions trading system (ETS). There had been three main developments since the June Transport Council: the US House of Representatives had approved a Bill that would prohibit US airlines from complying with ETS; there had been political messages against ETS emerging from the ICAO Council in November; and President Obama had specifically raised the issue at the EU/US summit on 28 November, noting the need to avoid confrontation. The Commission's assessment was that while international opposition was strong, so was the EU response. The Commission acknowledged there still could be a challenge in ICAO under the Chicago convention, and that it was important to understand what forms retaliatory action could take. Following a legal challenge from the US Air Transport Association and three US airlines the European Court of Justice will deliver its judgment on the case on 21 December.

Antonio Tajani, Commissioner responsible for industry and entrepreneurship, updated Ministers on recent developments within the Galileo programme and indicated that since the successful launch of the first two satellites in October the system was now up and running with real momentum behind it. The Commission also presented its proposed regulation on Galileo governance and exploitation.

Before the Council, I met Ministers from Finland and Ireland, the German State Secretary, and the Northern Irish Transport Minister to discuss items on the Transport Council agenda, in particular TEN-T. In a separate discussion after Transport Council, I exchanged views on TEN-T and better regulation with the Siim Kallas, the Transport Commissioner.

The UK did not participate in the vote on one item on the A point list, namely article 81 based Council decision authorising the EU to accede to the 2002 protocol to the Athens convention relating to the carriage of passengers and their luggage by sea. The UK has, however, subsequently notified its intention to opt in to the Council decision.

The Danish delegation presented the work programme of their forthcoming presidency of the EU. The incoming Danish presidency's overarching aim in the transport sector will be "green growth" and they will take forward work on current Council dossiers. For example, they will be seeking to reach a Second Reading agreement with the European Parliament on the recast of the first railway package. They will also commence work on proposals included in the recently published Commission work programme, such as the airport package and the proposals on driving licences and the satellite navigation programmes, as well as on an expected proposal on enforcement of the maritime labour convention. Their main priorities are the TEN-T guidelines and the airport package, especially ground handling and noise reduction proposals.

Red Tape Challenge (Reform of Road Transport Regulations)

The Secretary of State for Transport (Justine Greening): In May, my Department launched the road transportation theme of the red tape challenge—part of the Cabinet Office's project to review all of the outstanding regulations currently on the statute book. Following a detailed process of challenge, stakeholder discussion and public feedback, I am now pleased to announce the results.

Within the road transport red tape challenge, my Department put forward every secondary regulation relating to road transportation for public discussion—415 in total. Some 376 of these are judged still to be live, and of these I propose to scrap, merge, simplify, amend or improve 142—well over a third. The detailed breakdown I propose is:

	Keep as is	Improve	Scrap	Moved [1]
Number	226	84	58	8
Percentage	60.1%	22.3%	15.4%	2.1%
Number non-EU	180	75	54	8
% non-EU	55.9%	23.6%	18.0%	2.5%

[1] Moved regulations will be finalised under a different section of the red tape challenge.

Among the measures we are pursuing, we will be:

Scrapping the regulation requiring motorists to hold a paper counterpart to their driving licence by 2015—saving drivers up to £8 million;

Improving the regulation surrounding the notification process for vehicles that are not in use on the road (Statutory Off Road Notification or SORN). Once drivers have notified the DVLA that their vehicle is SORN, they will no longer have the burden of annual SORN renewal;

Only issuing hard-copies of V5C vehicle registration certificates for fleet operators when needed (with the potential to offer the same to private motorists);

Introducing a limited exemption from drivers' hours rules so that those who also drive as Territorial Army reservists in their own time can continue to do so.

The Challenge has also considered various administrative measures that are not based in legislation and has examined pieces of primary legislation that can be amended or simplified.

Other proposals include:

Removing the need for an insurance certificate. The Department for Transport will work with the insurance industry on removing the need for motorists to have to hold an insurance certificate.

Abolishing the requirement for drivers to prove they have insurance when applying for tax, meaning 600,000 more people will be able to tax their car online. This has been made possible by new checks of existing databases for insurance under new continuous insurance enforcement rules. (The DVLA's records are now compared regularly with the motor insurance database (MID) to identify registered keepers of vehicles that appear to have no insurance).

We will look at experience in other countries on driver certificates of professional competence (CPC)—the qualification for professional bus, coach and lorry drivers. In particular, to see if we could remove the need for some sectors, such as farmers who drive stock to market, from needing a CPC.

Local authorities will now have to ensure business interests are properly considered as part of any future proposed workplace parking levy scheme. They must show they have properly and effectively consulted local businesses, have addressed any proper concerns raised and secured support from the local business community.

Abolishing the regulations on the treatment of lost property on buses. Bus companies currently have to wait 48 hours before they can throw away perishable items left on the bus.

The full list of 376 regulations, explaining what actions we are taking on each, is available on my Department's website at http://www.dft.gov.uk/consultations/gov-20110520.

Overall, this represents an ambitious programme of deregulation, some elements of which will represent a major shift in the way my Department does business. I am pleased with the results of this section of the red tape challenge and the deregulatory mindset it has helped foster. I look forward to similar outcomes from the ongoing rail and maritime theme and next year's examination of aviation red tape.

WORK AND PENSIONS

European Social Fund Support for Troubled Families

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions (Chris Grayling): I am pleased to announce today that the Government have put in place additional support in England for troubled families and where either no one is working or there is a history of worklessness across generations.

This support, which is funded through money received by DWP in England from the European social fund, will offer these families the opportunity to engage in work related activities, address issues which are preventing them from working and enhance their chances of returning to the labour market either directly or through the Work programme. This supports the wider cross-Government agenda on troubled families led by Louise Casey, to help turn around the lives of such families.

The provision will be employment focused and tackle barriers which prevent individual family members from returning to the labour market. The provider will take a whole family approach with support being tailored to meet individual needs. Local authorities in England have a key role identifying families who are ready for this specific support and have been working with the DWP providers to enable this to happen. This joint working and engagement will be ongoing.

Workplace Pension Reform

The Minister of State, Department for Work and Pensions (Steve Webb): I am pleased to announce that today we have achieved key milestones that will help secure a robust, efficient workplace pensions system for the 21st century.

First, we are publishing "Meeting future workplace pensions challenges: improving transfers and dealing with small pots" (Cm 8184). This paper sets out actions that the Government are taking to make sure people get the most out of the money they save:

We will abolish short service refunds for defined contribution occupational schemes. These rules jeopardise pension savings for low to median earners and will not be part of the automatic enrolment world. We expect this rule change to happen as soon as 2014, provided we are able to implement an accompanying solution for small pot transfers at the same time. A full impact assessment is being published alongside the paper to take account of this change.

Abolishing short service refunds will create more small pension pots for defined contribution (DC) occupational schemes, but this is part of a much wider problem. We anticipate that automatic enrolment and a highly mobile jobs market will lead to around 4.7 million additional small pension pots in our pension system by 2050. The burden of these small pots is compounded by the fact that systemic barriers, like cost and complexity, prevent people from moving and consolidating their pensions into one place.

So our paper seeks views and evidence from stakeholders on how we can reduce the number of small pots and improve transfers. We discuss possible solutions: ranging from minimal changes to the current system to an automatic transfer system where pension pots can be collected in one or more "aggregator" schemes or could follow people from job to job. We welcome feedback on these possible approaches.

Alongside this paper we are also publishing a consultation on the 2012-13 review and revision of the automatic enrolment thresholds. This consultation invites contributions to inform how we take this review forward for the first year of automatic enrolment live running. It is important that we get this review right—so that we target the correct group for automatic enrolment while carefully weighing the cost to business and the impact on the pension industry.

I would like to thank the pensions community for their input to this work so far. This collaboration needs to continue if we are to make automatic enrolment a success.

Copies of the paper will be available in the Vote office and Printed Paper office later today.

Copies of the consultation document and the impact assessment will be placed in the library.

These publications will be available later today on the Department's website: http://www.dwp.gov.uk/consultations/2011/

TREASURY

Red Diesel

The Economic Secretary to the Treasury (Miss Chloe Smith): I am today announcing that, following an internal review of the use of rebated fuel or "red diesel" for community and charitable activities in rural areas, HMRC is launching a formal consultation exercise on extending the use of red diesel to allow tractors to grit roads in rural communities.

HMRC's review examined the scope for extending the use of red diesel by farmers to allow them to undertake a range of community-based activities, including allowing farmers to use their tractors to undertake gritting in rural communities. Following an informal consultation exercise, HMRC will now consult formally on permanent changes to the Hydrocarbon Oil Duties Act 1979 to allow farmers to use their tractors to grit roads in rural areas.

This change builds on HMRC's temporary relaxation of its enforcement procedures during the last two severe winters, and will provide much-needed support to rural communities that are often too remote to benefit from municipal gritting activities and may find themselves cut off during periods of extreme weather. While the consultation is carried out, HMRC will continue to stand ready to temporarily relax enforcement procedures in the event of severe weather this winter.

For other community activities, the review concluded that it would not be possible to extend the use of red diesel to accommodate other community activities in a way that would be consistent with EU legislation (Directive 2003/96—the energy products directive).

However, the Government are clear that HMRC should take a pragmatic approach when farmers undertake community activities. To reinforce this approach further, HMRC intends to issue revised guidance to remind its officers that a degree of common sense should be used when dealing with these types of cases. If there is sufficient evidence to suggest someone has mistakenly breached the rules governing the use of red diesel, a warning should normally be given. The Government also recognise that the best way to minimise instances of mistaken use of red diesel is to increase awareness. To assist farming communities to comply with the law, HMRC will also refresh its internet guidance on the use of red diesel for grass cutting, to remove any confusion that may exist.

HMRC will launch the formal consultation exercise on its website early in the new year.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government Finance

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Mr Eric Pickles): Later today, I am introducing legislation which will take forward proposals designed to encourage local economic growth, reduce the financial deficit, we have inherited from the last Administration, promote welfare reform and drive decentralisation of control over local government finance.

The Local Government Finance Bill will take forward key proposals which were considered as part of the local government resource review and announced in the spending review 2010. The local government finance system that we inherited from the last Administration is one of the most complex and centralised in the world. These reforms will address this, and increase transparency over the local finance system.

The Local Government Finance Bill will take forward our commitment to introduce a local business rates retention scheme which will enable local authorities to retain a proportion of the business rates generated in their area.

Today, I have published the Government response to the consultation on business rates retention which sought views over the summer on how a rate retention scheme would operate. The response puts forward a strong scheme that I believe will provide a strong financial incentive for local authorities to grow their local economies with the necessary safeguards to ensure authorities with high need and low tax bases are still able to meet the needs of their areas. These reforms will also provide local authorities with the framework to implement tax increment financing. Businesses will see no difference in the way they pay business rates or the way that they are set. Local charities, voluntary groups and small businesses will continue to be eligible for the same reliefs.

These reforms will boost local firms and local jobs as councils are given more autonomy over their own financial circumstances, and rewarded for building stronger relationships with business to strengthen the local economy. They have the potential to increase the aggregate income from business rates, compared to the status quo, due to greater enterprise and economic growth.

The Bill will also enable local authorities in England to set up local schemes of support for council tax, replacing council tax benefit. This will give local authorities the flexibility to design schemes which reflect local priorities, giving them a greater financial stake in the economic future of their area and enabling them to deliver a saving of 10% on the current council tax benefit expenditure bill. This saving is an important contribution to Government's vital deficit reduction programme.

The new system will be a fairer one, where taxpayers can be more confident that the spiralling benefits bill is controlled and where work pays. Councils will be much better placed to attract new business and industry, better placed to help their residents get off welfare and reap the benefits of work instead. They will directly benefit from improving the prosperity of the local area that will in turn drive down the costs of offering support with council tax.

I have today published the Government's response to the recent consultation on localising support for council tax, setting out the Government's policy and how we plan to support local authorities in implementing schemes in their areas.

Local authorities will have much greater freedom to administer rebates in a way that best meets local needs and best supports local people while safeguards will be put in place to protect pensioners from any reduction in the support that is on offer as a result of the introduction of this reform.

Subject to consultation, the Bill will propose changes to council tax rules to provide further flexibility on the council tax local authorities can charge on empty properties, and other small changes aimed at modernising the system. By treating everyone equally and fairly and removing the special tax breaks for empty homes and second homes, councils have the potential to cut £20 a year off families' council tax bills.

I intend to continue to work closely with local authorities, representative groups and other key parties in the design of the framework to be set out in secondary legislation, and welcome the excellent contribution I know they will make to the ongoing development and implementation of these proposals.

These proposals on council tax stand alongside the Government's two-year council tax freeze, the cancellation of a council tax revaluation, the abolition of new bin taxes on family homes and new rights for local residents to veto excessive council tax rises.

These reforms also complement a wide package of financial measures that the Government are pursuing to support local authorities and local economies. These measures include over £430 million of funding under new homes bonus, up to £1 billion in community infrastructure levy, access to the £2.4 billion regional growth fund and £500 million growing places fund through local enterprise partnerships.

EDUCATION

Positive for Youth

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Education (Tim Loughton): Young people matter. They are important to us now, and to our future, and we need them to flourish. Now more than ever we need to engage young people and support them to face economic challenges and tackle negative stereotypes.

Published today, "Positive for Youth" is a new approach to cross-Government policy for young people aged 13-19 in England. It brings together a range of the Government's policies for this age group across the interests of at least nine Departments. It has been produced with young people and youth professionals through extensive collaboration and consultation.

"Positive for Youth" sets out a shared vision for how all parts of society—including councils, schools, charities, businesses—can work together in partnership to support families and improve outcomes for young people, particularly those who are most disadvantaged or vulnerable. This means working towards a common goal of all young people having a strong sense of belonging, and the supportive relationships, strong ambitions, and good opportunities they need to realise their potential.

Parents and families have the primary responsibility for helping young people succeed. They need to be supported and any services to young people need to take them into account. Communities, including businesses, also need to take responsibility for helping young people belong and succeed.

Raising young people's aspirations and educational attainment is crucial to their success in life. The Government have already announced significant reforms and investment to improve education standards and increase young people's participation in learning and work. Young people's experiences outside the classroom at home and in their community are also crucial to helping them form and pursue their ambitions. "Positive for Youth" emphasises the importance of young people's personal and social development to educational, employment, and other long-term outcomes—and the role of services such as youth work in supporting this development. It promotes early intervention to address issues young people may face to prevent them escalating and causing harm.

Councils are accountable primarily to local people for how well young people do, and how well their services support them. Young people must be in the driving seat to inform decisions, shape provision, and inspect quality.

The Government are taking a wide range of actions to facilitate local reform, including:

- clarifying their expectations on local authorities through revised statutory guidance to be published shortly for consultation on their duty to secure activities and services for young people;
- empowering young people by enabling them to inspect and report on local youth services and setting up a national scrutiny group for them to help "youth proof " Government policy as part of funding of £850,000 to the British Youth Council in 2011-2013;
- funding improved business brokerage with projects for young people through investment of £320,000 to April 2013;
- providing capital investment to complete 63 myplace centres by April 2013, and developing a national approach to exploiting their potential to be autonomous hubs led by communities and businesses for transforming local services;
- expanding national citizen service to offer 30,000 places to young people In 2012, 60,000 in 2013, and 90,000 in 2014.

The Government will publish annually national measures of young people's positive outcomes, and an audit at the end of 2012 of overall progress towards creating a society which is more positive for youth.

"Positive for Youth" and an executive summary are available on the Department for Education website at www.education.gov.uk/positiveforyouth. Copies of "Positive for Youth" have also been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

National Curriculum in England (Review)

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): Over the past year the review of the national curriculum in England has been looking at curricula in the highest-performing, and fastest-improving, jurisdictions internationally. Today I am publishing a set of initial findings and recommendations.

The review team's work has uncovered a consistent theme: these high-performing jurisdictions set materially higher expectations in terms of what they believe children can and should master at different ages. This comes as no surprise. Over the past 10 years our education system as measured by performance in the OECD's PISA international league tables has deteriorated significantly. If our schools, and young people, are to become internationally competitive again we must learn from the best in the world.

The recommendations made by the review's expert panel set out the scale of the challenge we face, and raise fundamental questions about educational practice in this country. For example:

> The expert panel recommend that we learn from the approach to assessment and pupil progression used in many high-performing jurisdictions, including the most successful south-east Asian education systems, which ensure that every pupil has mastered the subject content before the class moves on to tackle the next part of the curriculum. They express concern that our existing assessment model assumes that a certain proportion of young people will never be able to master crucial curriculum content, leading to an unjustified lowering of expectations.
> The international evidence shows that all successful jurisdictions expect pupils to study a broad curriculum to 16, built around a core of academic subjects. The expert panel argue that England narrows its curriculum for the majority of pupils too early.
> The evidence identifies the higher expectations of pupils in maths, English and science in high-performing jurisdictions. For example,
> In Singapore, pupils are expected to know all their times tables and related division facts by the end of year 4; here our national expectation is at year 6.
> Pupils in Singapore are also expected to learn about plant and animal cells in year 6, including how cell division forms the basis of growth, while we leave this until secondary.
> All high-performing jurisdictions—like Singapore, the Canadian province of Alberta and the US state of Massachusetts—have a separate section on grammar in their curricula with clear standards which must be met.
> Poland, a fast-improving education system, has high expectations in their recommended reading, including Homer, Chekhov and Shakespeare alongside great works of Polish literature.
> The panel also recommend that we should look again at the "key stage" structure of the curriculum which they argue can lead to a lack of pace and ambition at key points in pupil's education.

It would, of course, be wrong to conclude that England should simply import systems used in other countries wholesale. But it is absolutely clear that these findings challenge fundamental tenets of our current system.

The expert panel also raise crucial questions about the complex interaction between curriculum and qualifications in secondary schools. Evidence shows that what is taught is determined as much, if not more, by examinations as by the national curriculum. This means we need to consider GCSE reform alongside the development of the new curriculum.

As the recent revelations in the Daily Telegraph have confirmed, far-reaching reform to our examinations system is vital—and must be considered in parallel with changes to the secondary curriculum. While immediate action is needed to deal with the improper practices that have been revealed, we need also to take the opportunity to ensure that deep-seated problems with how GCSEs have been developed and delivered can be addressed. We must ensure that qualifications support excellent teaching that develops in pupils a broad and deep understanding of the subject.

In light of the far-reaching and complex nature of the expert panel recommendations, and to allow for more radical reform of both curriculum and qualifications, I have decided to change the planned timetable for the introduction of the new national curriculum. Instead of new curricula for English, mathematics, science and PE being introduced from 2013, and the remainder in 2014, the new curriculum for all subjects will be introduced in 2014.

The longer time scale will allow for further debate with everyone interested in creating a genuinely world-class education system; teachers, governors, academics, business leaders and parents, as well as giving schools more time to prepare for a radically different and more rigorous approach.

A detailed timetable for the conduct of the remainder of the review, as well as a refreshed remit, will be published in the new year and copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Alongside this statement I am publishing a suite of documents which, taken together, provide a summary of the findings to date of the review. This suite includes:

> The report of the review's expert panel setting out their recommendations in relation to the framework for the new national curriculum;
> A summary of the evidence gathered about curricula for English, mathematics and science in high-performing jurisdictions;
> A research report that looks at subject breadth in the curricula used in other education jurisdictions; and
> A summary report of the responses to the review's call for evidence.

A copy of each of these documents has been placed in the Library of the House.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Flood Risk Management

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Richard Benyon): I am today publishing a report following the three flood insurance working groups established in 2010. The working groups were made up of representatives from Government, the insurance industry and community groups. Building on their conclusions, the Economic Secretary to the Treasury and I have agreed to sponsor further work to analyse the options for managing the future financial risks of flooding.

Government and the insurance industry remain committed to making sure flood insurance remains widely available. Together we are working towards an announcement in the spring of a new shared understanding which sets out more clearly what customers can expect from their insurer, and from Government.

The existing statement of principles currently enables insurers to price according to risk. Risk-based pricing has not been commonly applied in the past because of a range of factors including commercial decisions by individual insurers and historic limitations in the availability of flood risk information. However, the market is evolving with the development of more sophisticated tools for assessing a customer's flood risk with the reality being a continuing trend towards more risk-based pricing.

Taking steps to reduce flood risk, whether by Government, local communities or individuals, minimises damage occurring in the first place and thereby plays a vital role in bearing down on insurance costs. In accordance with this Government's determination to deliver solutions which offer taxpayers greatest value for money and which will endure over the long-term, the priority will continue to be to invest in reducing the risk of people and properties being flooded in the first place, rather than re-directing funds into subsidising insurance premiums, which would do nothing to protect against the wider, non-monetary, health and well-being impacts of flooding.

Hence we propose to:

Continue to target Government funding towards those most at risk and living in the most deprived areas through flood and coastal resilience partnership funding launched in May of this year. There is already progress: 36% of households protected by new flood alleviation schemes proposed for 2012-13 are at significant risk and in the most deprived communities, compared with 6% during the previous spending period. Overall, the Government plan to invest £2.17 billion on flood and coastal erosion risk management in England over the current spending review period.

Continue to improve the quality and availability of flood risk maps published by the Environment Agency including surface water flooding maps, so that individuals and communities can be more aware of levels of local flood risk and better informed about what action could be taken at an appropriate level to provide better protection.

Continue to extend the flood warnings service so that by 2015 at least two thirds of households and businesses in the highest risk areas are signed up to receive the floodline warnings direct service.

Explore with the insurance industry how to create an environment where those at risk are incentivised and supported to proactively reduce flood risk with the consequent effect being seen in their long-term insurance costs.

Over the next few months we will continue to work with insurance companies to consider what additional measures might help safeguard the affordability of flood insurance for households. As part of this ongoing work we will be considering the feasibility, value for money and deliverability of targeting funds to help those most in need, building on the analysis undertaken by the working groups established after last year's flood summit. This may include models where communities might work together to secure affordable insurance.

These options will be considered over the winter months in order to make further announcements in the spring. However, in the interests of keeping the Members and their constituents abreast of these ongoing discussions I wanted to give this interim update.

Copies of the report of the flood insurance working groups are available on the DEFRA website.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan

The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (Mr William Hague): I wish to inform the House that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, together with the Ministry of Defence and the Department for International Development, is today publishing the 12th progress report on developments in Afghanistan since November 2010.

The second tranche of areas to enter the security transition process was announced on 27 November. This demonstrates continuing progress in the development of the Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF). The announcement, which includes Nad-e-Ali in Helmand, means that Afghan forces will soon begin to take lead responsibility for the security of approximately half the country's population. While the security situation throughout Afghanistan remains challenging, progress is being made. The ANSF have demonstrated that they are able to lead on security effectively and competently in the areas that started the transition process earlier this year. They also demonstrated their growing capability at November's traditional Loya Jirga where, despite insurgent intent, there were no security breaches.

The IMF board has approved a new three-year programme of support for Afghanistan. This decision shows that the Afghan Government have reassured international donors and ordinary Afghans alike that they are serious about providing a safe economic and business environment. Now that a new IMF programme is in place, donors including the UK are able to resume support to the Afghanistan Reconstruction Trust Fund, which helps the Afghan Government deliver vital basic services and key reforms for the Afghan people. In the meantime, with UK support the Afghan Government continue to make good progress in raising their own funds: revenue collection reached record levels last quarter.

The international conference on Afghanistan in Bonn on 5 December agreed a framework for the international community's long-term engagement with Afghanistan to 2014 and beyond and agreed to produce a clear plan for funding the ANSF in advance of the Chicago conference to be held in May 2012.

At the traditional Loya Jirga, President Karzai reiterated his commitment to stand down as president in 2014, in accordance with the constitution.

I am placing the report in the Library of the House. It will also be published on the Foreign and Commonwealth Office website (www.fco.gov.uk).

HOME DEPARTMENT

Control Orders

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): Section 14(1) of the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005 (the 2005 Act) requires the Secretary of State to report to Parliament as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of every relevant three-month period on the exercise of the control order powers during that period. Paragraph 5 of schedule 8 to the Terrorism Prevention and Investigation Measures Act 2011 (the 2011 Act) requires the Secretary of State to report to Parliament covering the period that begins immediately after the end of the last three-month period and ends immediately before commencement.

The level of information provided will always be subject to slight variations based on operational advice. This report covers both reporting periods.

The transition to TPIMs

The 2011 Act commenced on 15 December 2011. A copy of the Act can be found on Parliament's website. The home page for the Act is:

www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2011/23/contents/enacted.

The 2005 Act has now been repealed but the control orders in force at the time of commencement of the 2011 Act will remain in effect for a 42-day transitional period concluding on 25 January 2012 unless revoked before then. This is to allow for an orderly, managed and—above all—safe transition to the new system.

The exercise of the control order powers in the relevant periods

As explained in previous quarterly statements, control order obligations are tailored to the individual concerned and are based on the terrorism-related risk that individual poses. Each control order is kept under regular review to ensure that the obligations remain necessary and proportionate. The Home Office continues to hold Control Order Review Groups (CORGs) every quarter, with representation from law enforcement and intelligence agencies, to keep the obligations in every control order under regular and formal review and to facilitate a review of appropriate exit strategies. During the reporting periods, two CORGs were held in relation to the control orders in force at the time. Other meetings were held on an ad hoc basis as specific issues arose.

During the period 11 September 2011 to 10 December 2011, no non-derogating control orders were made or served. Two control orders were revoked during this period and two control orders have been renewed in accordance with section 2(6) of the 2005 Act. No non-derogating control orders were made, served, revoked or renewed during the period 11 December 2011 to 14 December 2011.

In total, as of 10 and 14 December, there were nine control orders in force, all of which were in respect of British citizens. All of these control orders were non-derogating.

Two individuals were charged with breaching their control order obligations during this period. One further individual was acquitted of two counts of breaching a control order; the jury failed to return a verdict on the remaining 13 counts against the same individual.

During the period 11 September 2011 to 10 December 2011, 76 modifications of control order obligations were made. Nineteen requests to modify control order obligations were refused. No further modifications were made or requests refused during the period 11 December 2011 to 14 December 2011.

Section 10(1) of the 2005 Act provides a right of appeal against a decision by the Secretary of State to renew a non-derogating control order or to modify an obligation imposed by a non-derogating control order without consent. Two appeals have been lodged with the High Court during this reporting period under section 10(1). A right of appeal is also provided by section 10(3) of the 2005 Act against a decision by the Secretary of State to refuse a request by a controlled person to revoke their order or to modify any obligation under their order. During this reporting period one appeal was lodged with the High Court under section 10(3), and then withdrawn.

One judgment has been handed down by the High Court during this reporting period in relation to a control order case.

On 3 October 2011, the High Court handed down a judgment in relation to five appeals brought by a controlled individual under section 10(3) of the 2005 Act. In AM v. Secretary of State for the Home Department [2011] EWHC 2486 (Admin) the High Court upheld the Secretary of State's decisions.

Most open judgments are available at http://www.bailii.org/.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Draft Parliamentary Privilege Bill

The Parliamentary Secretary, Office of the Leader of the House of Commons (Mr David Heath): The Leader of the House of Lords and I are today setting out the next steps in the Government's preparation of a draft Bill on parliamentary privilege.

The Programme for Government announced our intention to "prevent the possible misuse of parliamentary privilege by MPs accused of serious wrongdoing".

Following this, the Queen's Speech set out that we would publish a draft Bill during this Session on parliamentary privilege. I can now announce that the Government intend to publish a Green Paper alongside the draft Bill. The Green Paper and draft Bill will be published before the end of this parliamentary Session.

In the Green Paper, the Government will consult on the desirability of certain changes that could be made to the operation of parliamentary privilege. In that Green Paper, we intend to set out the Government's thinking on each of the principal areas where it has previously been suggested that reform is necessary or desirable. Where we believe there is a case to be made for legislative change, this thinking will be supported by clauses in the draft Bill.

In line with the commitment in the coalition agreement, the Government are considering whether there are potential obstacles that ought to be removed to the prosecution of Members of either House for ordinary criminal acts. This is notwithstanding the Supreme Court ruling in R v Chaytor and others, which established that the criminal courts did have jurisdiction over dishonest claims for allowances, as these were not proceedings in Parliament under article 9 of the Bill of Rights 1689, and did not fall within the exclusive jurisdiction of the two Houses.

The Green Paper will also discuss, among other questions:

whether legislation is necessary or desirable to ensure that the powers of Select Committees can be satisfactorily enforced;

whether legislation is desirable to establish that the principle of exclusive cognisance applies only to activities directly and closely related to proceedings in Parliament;

whether a statutory definition of proceedings in Parliament is needed; and whether there should be changes to the law on reporting of parliamentary proceedings in the media.

The Government will not be proposing to constrain by legislation the ability of hon. Members to name in proceedings in Parliament individuals who are the subject of anonymity injunctions made by the courts. It will be for each House to consider whether to make changes to their internal procedures to address this issue.

In setting out their views, the Government will be mindful of the views previously expressed by a number of Select Committees, including the 1998-99 Joint Committee on Parliamentary Privilege, the Committee on Standards and Privileges, the 2009-10 Select Committee on the Issue of Privilege, the Joint Committees on the draft Corruption, Bribery and Defamation Bills, the House of Commons Procedure Committee, the Justice Committee and the Culture, Media and Sport Committee. The Government also wish to take into account any proposals from the Joint Committee on Privacy and Injunctions that impinge on parliamentary privilege.

Following correspondence earlier this year with the chairs of the Liaison Committees in both Houses, the Government believe it would be appropriate for the Green Paper to be considered, and for the draft Bill to be subject to pre-legislative scrutiny, by a Joint Committee, and will be holding early discussions in both Houses about the establishment of and timetable for such a Committee.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Northern Ireland (National Security Matters)

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (Mr Owen Paterson): The Government have received and welcomed a report from Lord Carlile of Berriew on the operation of arrangements for handling national security matters in Northern Ireland for the year to date.

Lord Carlile commends the engagement he received in producing this report which recognises that the context in which national security activities are performed in Northern Ireland is changing and challenging.

The report points out that there have been serious incidents during 2011, including the murder of PC Ronan Kerr in Omagh in April and states that the overall picture is of a very dangerous, unpredictable terrorist threat. The situation is faced with additional challenges due to the many connections which terrorists appear to have with organised crime. Lord Carlile points out that organised crime is an area which helps fund their politically motivated activities.

Lord Carlile believes that, compared with last year, this year has seen more success in containing and stabilising the threat, and notes that there have been fewer incidents and fewer major attacks. He is also satisfied that there are no difficulties of any significance in the inter-operability between the PSNI and the Security Service and identifies this is a sound working partnership and one that is to be commended.

I welcome the content of this report and have made it available to the Home Secretary. Given its sensitive nature I do not, however, intend to place copies in the Library.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Support Management of Payments and Arrears Amendment Regulations 2012

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (Maria Miller): The Government are committed to tackling the legacy of £3.8 billion in child maintenance arrears owed by non-resident parents. They are determined to pursue every penny which can be collected, and the Child Support Agency is pursuing a range of initiatives and deploying its enforcement powers more effectively to pursue those parents who refuse to pay.

We have, however, to be mindful of the fact that not all of the arrears that are owed can realistically be collected; and indeed, not all arrears are actually wanted by the relevant parents with care.

I am therefore today publishing a consultation document on commencing powers contained within the Child Maintenance and Other Payments Act 2008 to write off arrears of child maintenance in certain, limited circumstances and to accept a part payment of child maintenance in full and final satisfaction of the total amount due.

The use of the write-off power is limited—by the 2008 Act—to circumstances where it would be "unfair or otherwise inappropriate" to collect or enforce the recovery of child maintenance.

The power to accept a part payment will enable a non-resident parent to pay a proportion of the total amount due, with the full liability being treated as met. A part payment may only be accepted where the parent with care has given his or her express permission.

None of this undermines the Government's determination to pursue those parents who refuse to live up to their responsibilities. The Government believe that failure to pay child maintenance must never be considered as an option.

The consultation document and draft regulations will be available on the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission (CMEC) and Department for Work and Pensions websites later today. A link to the CMEC website is attached below.

Copies of the consultation document will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses. http://www.childmaintenance.org/en/publications/consultations.html

Written Ministerial Statements

Tuesday 20 December 2011

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

EU Trade Foreign Affairs Council (Post-Council Statement)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (Mr Edward Davey): I represented the UK at the trade session of the above Foreign Affairs Council in Geneva, Switzerland, on 14 December.

Trade Ministers met immediately before the eighth World Trade Organisation (WTO) ministerial conference to take a number of decisions related to the conference, notably the accessions of Russia and Samoa to the WTO and the least developed countries services waiver, as well as to approve the mandates for deep and comprehensive free trade agreements (DCFTAs) with Egypt, Jordan, Morocco, and Tunisia.

The main items for discussion were the position to be taken by the European Union on the Doha development agenda (DDA), the future path of the WTO and the negotiations on the revision to the Government procurement agreement (GPA). There was broad agreement on the former, in particular the importance of messages on resisting protectionism, on strengthening the WTO and maintaining its relevance for tackling 21st century issues, and on the need for an active negotiating agenda in order to deliver "early harvests" of those areas that were most advanced in the DDA such as trade facilitation.

The UK, supported by the majority of member states, called for the EU to conclude the 10-year long process of reviewing the Government procurement agreement. I argued that a successful deal would pave the way for the opening of negotiations with China on its possible future accession to the GPA. I also stressed the value of obtaining a business-friendly deal at such a critical moment for the EU and the WTO.

Subsequent to the trade FAC, I represented the UK at the World Trade Organisation's eighth ministerial conference (MC8) in Geneva from 15 to 17 December.

The conference agreed to Russia's accession to the WTO after an 18-year negotiation. Agreement was also given to accession by Samoa and Montenegro. All will become members of the WTO during 2012 when domestic ratification is complete. With the approval of the accession of Vanuatu earlier this year, this will take the WTO's membership from 153 to 157. Samoa and Vanuatu are the first least developed countries (LDCs) to join since 2004.

The conference also agreed a waiver from WTO rules to allow preferential market access to LDC providers of services, extended the deadline for LDCs to bring in rules to protect intellectual property, and agreed provisions aimed at speeding up LDCs' membership negotiations. Members also reaffirmed their commitment to working towards the implementation of promises on duty free quota free access (DFQF) and cotton, first made at MC6 in Hong Kong in 2005.

Finally, the 42 signatories to the Government procurement agreement (a plurilateral agreement within the WTO framework allowing access to each others' procurement market) agreed, after 10 years of negotiation, a revision to the Agreement. The deal expanded market access within the signatories, including, for the EU, access to €100 billion-worth of PFI contracts related to reconstruction in Japan.

On the Doha development agenda negotiations the agreed chair's summary noted that negotiations were at an "impasse", that members had "significantly different perspectives", and that it was "unlikely that all elements could be concluded simultaneously in the near future."

Despite this, Ministers remained committed to further work, to the need "to more fully explore different negotiating approaches", and to advancing negotiations to allow

"Members to reach provisional or definitive agreements based on consensus earlier than the full conclusion of the single undertaking"

(i.e. "early harvests").

Finally, the conference agreed to "intensify their efforts to look into ways that may allow Members to overcome the most critical and fundamental stalemates in the areas where multilateral convergence has proven to be especially challenging".

Skills Funding and the Skills Funding Agency (Chief Executive)

The Minister for Further Education, Skills and Lifelong Learning (Mr John Hayes): Further to my announcement on 1 November, I would inform Parliament about the outcome of the review into the status of the chief executive of skills funding and the Skills Funding Agency.

The review has concluded that the existing arrangement of a statutory post holder should be replaced with a more traditional Executive agency model. This is consistent with the Government's wider commitment to improve radically the transparency and accountability for all public services, providing clarity and focus to the work of the agency and ensuring that skills and apprenticeship programmes are delivered within an overarching strategic framework set by Government.

The Skills Funding Agency will continue to play a vital role in funding the education and skills training that our country needs to tackle the very real challenges that lie ahead; and the outcome of this review reflects the Government's ongoing commitment to building on the strength of the further education system, while ensuring rigorous accountability structures are in place.

I can confirm that both the Skills Funding Agency and wider stakeholders have been fully engaged in the review process, and I will be writing to them today about the outcome of this work.

We will bring forward legislation for this change as and when parliamentary time allows.

ECOFIN

The Chancellor of the Exchequer (Mr George Osborne): The Economic and Financial Affairs Council was held in Brussels on 30 November 2011. The following items were discussed:

Breakfast: debrief from Eurogroup meeting of 29 November and discussion of the economic situation

Council heard that Eurogroup had agreed the sixth tranche of funding for Greece under its assistance package. It also received an update on the options for leveraging the European financial stability facility. Council then discussed bank capital and funding, following up on the European Council of 26 October, and agreed that capital requirements needed to be met without deleveraging, I made it clear that if required, funding schemes needed to be at national level. This was agreed. I also called for early discussion of progress on the capital requirements directive.

Follow-up to the G20 Summit of 3-4 November in Cannes

France provided a debrief of the summit. They confirmed that the major topic of discussion had been the euro area crisis and that the EU had been urged to agree a comprehensive approach to the crisis. They also noted that the summit had discussed ways of increasing IMF resources.

Annual Growth Survey (AGS)

The Commission presented its second annual growth survey and set out five key priorities: fiscal consolidation (while taking account of the need for growth and for differentiation between member states); restoring normal lending conditions, with particular attention to SMEs; completing the single market; reforms to modernise labour resources (in particular ensuring wages better reflect productivity, improving labour mobility, and addressing youth unemployment); and efficient public administration.

Second economic governance package

The Commission presented two legislative proposals and a discussion paper. The first of the legislative proposals relates to strengthening budgetary surveillance within the euro area, particularly for member states in excessive deficit. It would require euro area member states to submit their draft national budgets to the Council and the Commission by 15 October of the preceding year for assessment. The second proposal is a draft regulation on the surveillance of euro area member states experiencing severe financial disturbance. It set out a process of more comprehensive monitoring for member states receiving a programme of financial assistance from EU and IMF-backed funds. Such monitoring could also be applied to member states not receiving assistance but considered to be at risk.

The Commission discussion paper proposed three options for stability bonds: full substitution of national issuance by stability bonds with joint and several guarantees; partial substitution of national issuance with joint and several guarantees; or partial substitution of national issuance with several but not joint guarantees. The Commission noted that stability bonds would create a deepening of economic and monetary union and this would need to be accompanied by parallel measures to strengthen economic governance. Some options would also require treaty change. The Commission said that it would prepare further steps on euro area economic governance by the end of 2011.

There was no substantive debate, particularly not on stability bonds, but a number of member states expressed support for the general principle of further strengthening euro area economic governance.

Recommendation on a nomination to the executive board of the European Central Bank

This was added to the agenda as a result of discussion over breakfast. Council adopted a recommendation on the nomination of Benoît Coeuré of France, to replace Lorenzo Bini Smaghi of Italy, who has announced his resignation.

Economic and financial impact of EU legislation

Council discussed conclusions addressing the need for impact assessments of proposed EU legislation, and for all such legislation to take account of the need to ensure sustainable public finances and create jobs and growth. The UK intervened to support the conclusions. After much discussion conclusions were agreed with a number of amendments.

Court of Auditors' 2010 Report on the EU Accounts

The President of the Court of Auditors presented its report. In the auditors' view, the budget presents fairly the position and cash flow of the EU, although there remains scope for improvement. Control systems are only partially effective and overall there has been an increase in the level of errors. The Commission highlighted that the report showed progress had been made. The UK, the Netherlands and Sweden all expressed concern at the increased error rate. The presidency noted the report, which will be further considered by Council in February 2012, when Ministers will vote on discharge of the 2010 accounts.

EU Statistics

Council adopted conclusions welcoming the report of the European Statistical Governance Advisory Board and inviting the Commission to put forward proposals regarding the professional independence of national statistical authorities and EUROSTAT.

Code of Conduct (business taxation)

This item was withdrawn from the agenda by the presidency and is now expected to be considered by Council in January 2012.

CABINET OFFICE

Civil Service Pensions

The Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General (Mr Francis Maude): On 2 November the Chief Secretary to the Treasury made a statement to the House setting out an improved offer on public service pensions to public sector workers (Cm 8214). This offer provided a more generous cost ceiling for scheme-specific discussions to work within, and protected all those within 10 years of their pension age from any further change. This generous offer was conditional on the Government and trade unions reaching agreement by the end of the year, including in the principal civil service pension scheme, bringing to a conclusion talks that have lasted since February 2011.

Since 2 November my officials and I have been engaged in detailed and intensive talks with the National Trade Union Committee for the civil service. I can now report to the House on the heads of agreement on the scheme design for the principal civil service pension scheme to be introduced in 2015, on which talks have concluded. The Government have made it clear this sets out their final position on the main elements of scheme design, which the FDA, Prospect, GMB Prison Governors Association and the Immigration Services Union have agreed to take to their Executives as the best that can be achieved through negotiations. There is a specific outstanding issue relating to mechanisms for prison officers to retire earlier than state pension age where we are continuing to have discussions with the Prison Officers Association. We will invite these unions to join us in further work on the remaining details in the new year, and their Executives will consult members as appropriate. The continued union engagement includes a commitment to suspend any further industrial action while the final details are resolved and unions are consulting their members.

The core parameters of the new scheme are set out below:

a. a pension scheme design based on career average;

b. a provisional accrual rate of 2.28% (equivalent to 1/43.9) of pensionable earnings each year, subject to further agreement on final details.

c. revaluation of active members' benefits in line with CPI;

d. a normal pension age equal to state pension age, which applies both to active members and deferred members (for new scheme service only);

e. pensions in payment to increase in line with prices (currently CPI);

f. benefits earned in deferment to increase in line with prices (currently CPI);

g. average member contributions of 5.6%, with some protection for the lowest paid (the detailed structure of which is still to be agreed);

h. optional lump sum commutation at a rate of 12:1, in accordance with HMRC limits and regulations;

i. spouses/partner pension of three-eighths of pension, in line with the current open scheme ;

j. lump sum on death in service of two-times salary;

k. ill-health benefits in line with those in the current open scheme;

l. actuarially fair early/late retirement factors on a cost-neutral basis; and,

m. an employer contribution cap to provide backstop protection to the taxpayer against unforeseen costs and risks and allowance for an improvement in member benefits if the value of the scheme falls beyond a fixed level;

n. the scheme will support the use of partial retirement and will follow the recommended approach set out in the Independent Public Service Pensions Commission final report of 10 March 2011 on abatement (details to be finalised); and

o. a guarantee, outside of the scheme designs parameters set out above, of no further reform for the next 25 years.

Transitional arrangements

Scheme members who, as of 1 April 2012, have 10 years or less to their current pension age will see no change in when they can retire, nor any decrease in the amount of pension they receive at their current normal pension age. They will be allowed to remain members of their existing schemes up to and including the point at which they draw their pension rights and all current scheme rules will continue to apply.

Members who are within a further 3.5 years outside this protected group will have an additional degree of protection, in the form of further accrual in their existing schemes. This protection will be tapered in a linear fashion depending on the age of the member.

Areas for further detailed discussion

Discussions with the trade unions identified above will continue early next year, to shape the remaining elements of the scheme design such as abatement, re-employment, treatment of re-joiners and public sector transfers and contribution rates structures including years 2 and 3 of the employee contribution increases. Any of these issues that affect the final cost of the scheme will need to be taken into account in the final rate of benefit accrual. The requirement to fit the new scheme within the revised cost ceiling for the reference scheme published on 2 November will remain, and agreement on these issues will also be subject to review by HM Treasury to agree the approach taken to risk management and impact on cash flows.

The Government Actuary's Department has confirmed that this scheme design does not exceed the cost ceiling set by the Government on 2 November. Copies of the heads of agreement and the scheme actuary's verification have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Local Government Pension Scheme

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (Mr Eric Pickles): On 2 November the Chief Secretary to the Treasury made a statement to the House setting out an improved offer on public service pensions to public sector workers (Cm 8214). This offer provided a more generous cost ceiling for scheme-specific discussions to work within, and protected all those within 10 years of their pension age from any further change. This generous offer was conditional on the Government and trade unions reaching agreement by the end of the year, including the local government pension scheme in England and Wales, bringing to a conclusion talks that have lasted since February 2011.

Since 2 November, I have been engaged in talks with the local government trade unions and the Local Government Association (LGA) to enable purposeful discussions on local government pensions reform. I can now report to the House on the heads of agreement signed jointly by the local government trade unions and the LGA on the principles governing the scheme design, ongoing cost management and governance of the new scheme to be introduced in 2014. Further work on these agreed principles will commence in the new year under the supervision of a newly appointed project board representing key scheme partners. The Government have made it clear this sets out their final position on the main elements of scheme design, which unions have agreed to. This includes a commitment to suspend any further industrial action while the final details are resolved and unions are consulting their members.

The core parameters of the agreed new scheme design are set out below:

a. a single solution to both the short and long term issues by the early introduction of the new scheme in April 2014, with regulations in place by April 2013;

b. the single solution to be built on the basis of career average earnings;

c. can include zero increases in employee contributions for all, or the vast majority of members, provided that overall financial constraints set by the Government are met;

d. some elements of choice to encourage retention of existing membership and encourage new membership; and

e. flexible retirement age built around the scheme's normal retirement age equal to the state pension age or age 65, whichever is later, and applies both to active members and deferred members (new scheme service only). If a member's state pension age rises, then normal pension age will do so too for all post 2015 service.

A copy of the heads of agreement has been placed in the Library of the House.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Telecoms Council

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (Mr Edward Vaizey): I represented the UK at the Telecoms Council in Brussels on 13 December 2011. The meeting was chaired by the Polish presidency.

There were four substantive agenda items:

1. Proposal for a Decision of the European Parliament and of the Council establishing the first Radio Spectrum Policy Programme (RSPP): Adoption of Council's position at first reading. (EM 13872/10)

This item was for member states to agree to a Council position to enable a First Reading deal to be reached with the European Parliament on the Commission's proposed RSPP (EM 13872/10). The Council adopted this position without substantive comment.

2. Proposal for Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on roaming on public mobile networks within the community—Progress Report and Exchange of views (EM 12639/11 and EM 12666/11)

This item was an exchange of views based around three questions on the above proposal as detailed in my pre-Council statement and was the only item that resulted in a round-table debate. I intervened as indicated in my pre-Council statement.

The main points of the discussion were:

Most member states agreed that the aim should be to adopt the new regulation before the expiration of the current regulation to avoid any gaps in consumer protection;

Most member states would prefer a technology-neutral regulation that does not contain the technical details of the structural solutions to be adopted. Thus, any technical detail would be contained in BEREC guidance and subject to consultation with key stakeholders;

Many member states were in favour of promoting the European approach to mobile roaming regulation within worldwide forums such as the ITU. However, the UK and others noted that Europe should strive to lead by example, rather than impose its approach on the world; and

A number of member states stressed the importance of ensuring the establishment of effective competition within the EU roaming market before price caps are lifted.

3. Proposal for a Regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council concerning the European Network and Information Security Agency (ENISA—Progress Report (EM 14358/10)

This item was a progress report from the presidency (EM 14358/10). I did not intervene on this item and there were no substantive interventions from other member states.

The Commission stated that it will publish a comprehensive internet security plan during 2012, the aim of which will be to: ensure that IT-related products and services are designed to survive cyber-attacks; and ensure that member states computer emergency response teams can exchange information more freely, thus allowing them to co-operate more effectively.

4. Lunchtime discussion on the future of universal service in telecommunications, with regard to the communication of the European Commission presented in the end of November (EM 17466/11)

The Council broke after the ENISA item for lunch. During the lunch, there was a debate on the issue of whether broadband should be added to the universal service directive, with debate framed by the three questions posed by the presidency as detailed in my pre-Council statement. This debate was prompted by the publication of the Communication from the Commission on the results of the public consultation on the role of the universal service obligation in electronic communications. (EM 17466/11)

I intervened along the lines set out in my pre-Council statement. Member states generally welcomed the decision by the Commission to leave to them when to decide to introduce a universal service obligation that would include broadband.

5. Communication from the Commission on Net Neutrality —Adoption of Council conclusions (EM 9350/11).

After lunch, the Council then considered the adoption of the Council conclusions that cover the recent communication entitled "The open internet and net neutrality in Europe". (EM 9350/11). The conclusions were adopted without any substantive comment. However, I did intervene to highlight the self-regulatory initiative that UK stakeholders were engaged in.

This concluded the formal substantive business items for Council. However, there were eight items that were taken under Any Other Business. They were:

a) Digital agenda for Europe—information from the Commission (EM 9981/10).

b) Ministerial conference on perspectives for the development of the electronic communications market in the EU (Warszawa 19-20 October 2011)—information from the presidency.

c) Sixth ministerial conference e-government (Poznan 17-18 November)—information from the presidency.

d) Communication from the Commission on the results of the public consultation on the role of the universal service obligation in electronic communications (EM 17466/11).

e) Open data—an engine for innovation, growth and transparent governance—presentation by the Commission.

f) Connecting Europe facility—proposal for a regulation of the European Parliament and of the Council on guidelines for trans-European networks and repealing Decision No. 1336/97/EC (EM 17176/11 and EM 16006/11)—presentation by the Commission.

g) State of play on implementation of the electronics communication framework—information from the Commission.

h) Work programme of the incoming presidency—information by the Danish delegation.

My only intervention under AOB was on item a. I intervened as per my pre-Council statement by stating that the Commission should bring forward actions that lead to the creation of a true pan-European digital single market. Other member states including Denmark, Netherlands and Sweden also highlighted the importance of this issue during similar interventions.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces Covenant

The Secretary of State for Defence (Mr Philip Hammond): Our armed forces make great sacrifices on the nation's behalf, not only on operations overseas, but in their service in the UK too. This Government recognise that the nation in turn has a responsibility properly to support them and their families. That is why the Armed Forces Act 2011 recognises the armed forces covenant in law for the first time, and creates an obligation on the Defence Secretary to publish an annual armed forces covenant report.

The Government are today publishing an interim armed forces covenant annual report, in advance of the statutory requirement created by the Act. It has been compiled in consultation with the covenant reference group, which brings together officials from across Government with service charities and family federations. The interim report covers the full scope of the armed forces covenant, published on 16 May 2011, and provides a baseline for future statutory reports.

On 16 May 2011 we also published "The Armed Forces Covenant: Today and Tomorrow", copies of which are available in the Library of the House. This document outlines the commitments made by the Government in support of the covenant. In contrast, today's interim report is focused on recording progress and a broad survey of areas of interest and concern. These include housing, education, health care and the operation of inquests, as the statutory armed forces covenant report will from next year. It also considers whether our service men and women are disadvantaged in their ability to access public services, or whether in any areas there is a case that special treatment is justified, and again the statutory report will do the same.

Overall the report makes clear that while more can and will be done, much has been achieved since the coalition programme for government was published:

We have doubled the tax free operational allowance so that those serving on eligible operations now receive a lump sum of just over £5,000 for a six-month tour;

We have improved rest and recuperation leave for those on operations;

We have endorsed the proposals by my hon. Friend the Member for South West Wiltshire (Dr Murrison), for making improvements in mental health care provision, the majority of which have been implemented fully, and the provision of enhanced prosthetic services for military amputees;

We have delivered a scheme to provide scholarships to bereaved service children—to date a total of 22 further education and 61 higher education scholarships have been awarded for academic years 2010-11 and 2011-12;

We have delivered more help for those leaving the service to go on to higher/further education—not least through payment of tuition fees, which has been extended to the spouses or partners taking up the entitlement because of bereavement or injury of a discharged service person;

We have introduced the pupil premium for the children of those currently serving (£200 per child, rising to £250 next year), amounting to £9 million for 2011-12. In addition, we have made available £3 million per year for state schools with service children, including those of reservists. Since the launch of this fund, 139 bids from schools have been approved, amounting to £2.9 million for this financial year;

We have announced a community covenant scheme supported by a £30 million community covenant fund. Over 20 councils have signed a covenant with the armed forces community in their areas, with more planned in the coming months. More than £750,000 has already been released to support local projects, with further bidding rounds taking place quarterly;

We have doubled council tax relief for those on eligible operations overseas;

We are working with credit reference agencies to ensure service people are not disadvantaged by mobility requirements in accessing credit.

Recognising the key role played by the covenant reference group, the Government have committed themselves to publishing, alongside the annual report, any observations which the external members of the group might have on it. The external members have offered their observations on this interim report, and they are reproduced within it. They have drawn attention not only to the progress which has been made, but also to how much remains to be done. The Government welcome their constructive input and will take careful note of the points made. We are extremely grateful to them for their continued engagement and assistance, as we jointly take work forward on the armed forces covenant.

The armed forces covenant is a matter for the whole of Government, and sustained progress requires both close collaboration across Whitehall and clear ministerial leadership. My right hon. Friends, the Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister, have therefore agreed to establish a new ministerial Committee, led by the Minister of State, Cabinet Office, the Minister with responsibility for Government policy, the right hon. Member for West Dorset (Mr Letwin) to oversee this work and ensure that momentum is maintained. The Prime Minister will chair the first meeting of this new Committee early next year. This new forum will work closely with the covenant reference group, whose key roles, including monitoring progress and holding the Government to account, will be unchanged. I will chair an annual joint meeting between the two bodies to ensure that the covenant reference group have the opportunity to engage with Ministers directly.

EDUCATION

Early Years Foundation Stage

The Minister of State, Department for Education (Sarah Teather): I am today publishing the Government response to the consultation on the early years foundation stage (EYFS).

The consultation has shown broad support for the Government's proposals for a reformed EYFS, implementing the recommendations of Dame Clare Tickell's independent review. The reforms will reduce paperwork and bureaucracy for professionals; focus attention on the areas most essential for children's healthy development; support early intervention with children who face difficulties; and secure a stronger partnership with parents.

The Government response confirms our plans, including simplified assessment at age five and a new progress check for children aged 24 to 36 months, focused on the most important areas of children's development. We also set out how we propose to refine the early learning goals (in particular literacy and maths), and minor changes to the guidance on assessment at age five to ensure it is relevant to all children including those with special educational needs and disabilities.

I am launching an additional one-month consultation on the EYFS early learning goals and educational programmes, and the relevant statutory instrument. This further consultation is required by the Childcare Act 2006.

The new early years framework is an important element in our plans to ensure families in the foundation years are supported, to give children the best possible start in life, and ensure that all children have the knowledge and skills that provide the right foundation for their future progress through school and life. The revised EYFS statutory framework (and the associated regulations) will be published in spring, to enable schools and other providers to prepare for implementation of the new EYFS from September 2012.

I have placed a copy of the Government response in the Libraries of both Houses.

Reform of the Teachers' Pension Scheme (England and Wales)

The Secretary of State for Education (Michael Gove): On 2 November the Chief Secretary to the Treasury made a statement to the House setting out an improved offer on public service pensions to public sector workers (Cm 8214). This offer provided a more generous cost ceiling for scheme-specific discussions to work within, and protected all those within 10 years of their pension age from any further change. This generous offer was conditional on the Government and trade unions reaching agreement by the end of the year, including in the teachers' pension scheme, bringing to a conclusion talks that have lasted since February 2011.

Since 2 November I have been engaged in detailed and intensive talks with the teacher and lecturer trade unions and employer representatives. I can now report to the House on the heads of agreement on the scheme design for the teachers' pension scheme to be introduced in 2015, on which talks have concluded. The Government have made it clear this sets out their final position on the main elements of scheme design, which unions have agreed to take to their Executives as the outcome of negotiations on the main elements of scheme design. This includes a commitment to seek Executives' agreement to the suspension of any industrial action on pension reform while the final details are being resolved. Further detailed work will take place in the new year and Executives will consult members as appropriate.

The agreement includes changes to the Government's reference scheme to reflect the priorities of the teaching profession in relation to early retirement and other issues, consistent with the need to remain within the Government's overall cost ceiling.

The agreement reached allows for further discussions on variations to the balance between the accrual rate and the career average revalued earnings revaluation factor within the limits of the Government's cost ceiling.

The core parameters of the new scheme are set out below:

a. a pension scheme design based on career average;

b. a provisional accrual rate of 1/57th of pensionable earnings each year, and the resolution of outstanding issues not covered by this agreement.

c. revaluation of active members' benefits in line with CPI + 1.6%.

d. normal pension age equal to state pension age, which applies both to active members and deferred members (new scheme service only);

e. pensions in payment to increase in line with prices index (currently CPI);

f. benefits earned in deferment to increase in line with CPI;

g. average member contributions of 9.6%, with some protection for the lowest paid;

h. optional lump sum commutation at a rate of 12:1, in accordance with HMRC limits and regulations;

i. spouses/partner pension in accordance with current provisions;

j. lump sum on death in service of three times FTE salary;

k. ill-health benefits the same as those in the current open scheme;

l. actuarially fair early/late retirement factors on a cost-neutral basis except for those with a NPA above age 65, who will have early retirement factors of 3% per year for a maximum of three years in respect of the period from age 65 to their NPA; and

m. an employer cost cap to provide backstop protection to the taxpayer against unforeseen costs and risks.

The Government Actuary's Department has confirmed that this scheme design does not exceed the cost ceiling set by the Government on 2 November. Copies of the heads of agreement and GAD verification have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Canal and River Trust (Transfer Order)

The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (Richard Benyon): On 12 September 2011, I launched a supplementary consultation on the detail of the order to transfer the functions of British Waterways (BW) in England and Wales to a new waterways charity, the Canal & River Trust (CRT). The consultation closed on 24 October 2011.

Today, I am announcing the publication of the Government's response to this consultation, which is available at http://www.defra.gov.uk/consult/closed/.

The consultation asked for views on the detail of certain aspects of the transfer order. The majority of responses to the consultation supported the overall direction of the Government's proposals, and, subject to obtaining parliamentary approval in due course, the Government intend to proceed as follows:

We will remove the ministerial power to direct disposal of property under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980, since it will not be needed by the CRT;

We will not extend the provisions in the Transport Acts 1962 and 1968 on employment to the CRT, on the basis that they have largely been replaced by more recent employment legislation;

We will amend sections 104 and 105 of the TransportAct 1968 to give the CRT an enhanced "statutory proposer" role in relation to ministerial orders on classification and maintenance of its waterways;

We will amend section 27 of the Transport Act 1962 to restrict the power of direction to circumstances in the interests of national defence;

We will not apply the House of Commons Disquaification Act 1975; Scottish Parliament (Disqualification) Order 2010; National Assembly for Wales (Disqualification) Order 2010 or the Northern Ireland Assembly Disqualification Act 1975 to the trustees of the CRT, because this would not be appropriate for trustees of a charitable body.

In addition, the Government intend, also subject to parliamentary approval, to apply the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) to the CRT, in respect of all those statutory functions that the CRT will inherit from BW through the proposed transfer order. This limited application of the FOIA will have the effect of excluding from the provisions of the Act those broader charitable functions carried out by the CRT. It will also exclude bodies that merge with the CRT, unless the FOIA already applies or is made to apply to them at the point of merger.

Recognising that, as concerns administrative burdens, this will initially put CRT in a potentially disadvantageous position with regard to other statutory navigation authorities, the Government will, within two years, launch a procedure, under section 5 of the FOIA, to consider extending the provisions of the Act to other statutory navigation authorities, with the intention of creating a level playing field.

In these circumstances, the Environmental Information Regulations (EIRs) may be considered to apply to the CRT to the extent that the CRT is carrying out "functions of public administration". Ultimately, this will be a question for the courts to decide. In the meantime, I have asked the CRT trustees to make a public commitment to adopt a transparency policy that closely follows the provisions of the EIRs; we are seeking to capture this commitment in the funding agreement being negotiated between DEFRA and the CRT trustees.

The Government's response also includes, by agreement, the Scottish Government's response to the Scottish issues raised in the consultation.

HEALTH

NHS Pension Scheme

The Secretary of State for Health (Mr Andrew Lansley): On 2 November the Chief Secretary to the Treasury made a statement to the House setting out an improved offer on public service pensions to public sector workers (Cm 8214). This offer provided a more generous cost ceiling for scheme-specific discussions to work within, and protected all those within 10 years of their pension age from any further change. This generous offer was conditional on the Government and trade unions reaching agreement by the end of the year, including in the NHS pension scheme, bringing to a conclusion talks that have lasted since February 2011.

Since 2 November I have been engaged in detailed and intensive talks with the health trade unions and employer representatives. I can now report to the House on the heads of agreement on the scheme design for the NHS pension scheme to be reached in 2015, on which talks have concluded. The Government have made it clear this sets out their final position on the main elements of scheme design, which unions have agreed to take to their Executives as the best that can be achieved through negotiations. Further work on the remaining details will take place in the new year, and Executives will consult members as appropriate. This includes a commitment to suspend any further industrial action while the final details are resolved and unions are consulting their members.

The main parameters of the new scheme are set out below:

a. a pension scheme design based on career average ;

b. a provisional accrual rate of 1/54th of pensionable earnings each year, subject to further agreement on outstanding issues not covered by this agreement (see annex A);

c. revaluation of active members' benefits in line with CPI plus 1.5% per annum;

d. a normal pension age equal to the state pension age, which applies both to active members and deferred members (new scheme service only). If a member's SPA rises, then NPA will do so too for all post 2015 service. Those within 10 years of NPA are excluded and accrued rights will also be related to existing NPA;

e. pensions in payment to increase in line with prices index (currently CPI);

f. benefits to increase in any period of deferment in line with prices index (currently CPI);

g. average member contributions of 9.8%, with tiered contributions. Member contributions in year 1 to increase between 0% and 2.4% in year 1. There will be no increase in year 1 for staff with WTE pensionable pay less than £26,557. There will be further discussions on contribution rates and increases in years 2 and 3;

h. optional lump sum commutation at a rate of £12 of lump sum for every £1 per annum of pension foregone in accordance with HMRC limits and regulations;

i. early/late retirement factors on an actuarially neutral basis;

j. ill-health retirement pensions to be based on the current ill-health retirement arrangements but with enhancement for higher tier awards to be at the rate of 50% of prospective service to normal pension age;

k. spouse and partner pensions to continue to be based on an accrual rate of 1/160th. For deaths in retirement spouse and partner pensions will remain based on pre-commuted pension;

l. an employer contribution cap as detailed in the heads of agreement.

There will be transitional protection:

all accrued rights are protected and those past benefits will be linked to final salary when members leave the scheme;

all active NHS pension scheme members who as of 1 April 2012, have 10 years or less to their current pension age, including MHOs and members of the special classes will see no change in when they can retire, nor any decrease in the amount of pension they receive at their current normal pension age. This will be achieved by allowing such members to remain in their current arrangements until they retire (for 2008 members until they have taken all their 2008 pension benefits); members who are within a further 3.5 years of their normal pension age, (i.e. up to 13.5 years from their NPA) will have limited protection with linear tapering so that for every month of age that they are beyond 10 years of their normal pension age, they lose two months of protection. At the end of the protected period, they will be transferred into the new pension arrangements; and the costs associated with the protection outlined above sit outside the costs of the reference scheme.

On the basis that the scheme design within the heads of agreement is agreed, the Government agree to retain fair deal provision and extend access to public service pension schemes for transferring staff. This means that all staff whose employment is compulsorily transferred from the NHS under TUPE, including subsequent TUPE transfers, will still be able to retain membership of the NHS pension scheme when transferred. These arrangements will replace the current provisions for bulk transfers under fair deal, which will no longer apply. In addition, a partnership review of the implementation of the provisions set out in this paragraph for staff working in "Any Qualified Providers" (AQP) will be carried out.

The Government Actuary's Department has confirmed that this scheme design does not exceed the cost ceiling set by the Government on 2 November. Copies of the heads of agreement and GAD verification have been placed in the Library.

Public Health System

The Secretary of State for Health (Mr Andrew Lansley): Today I am publishing policy updates on the new public health system, covering local government's new public health functions and the operating model for Public Health England (PHE). Subject to the passage of the Health and Social Care Bill, PHE will be established in April 2013.

The Government have an ambitious programme to improve public health through strengthening local action, supporting self-esteem and behavioural changes, promoting healthy choices and changing the environment to support healthier lives.

The updates define the Government's plans, set out in the White Paper "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: Our strategy for public health in England", in November 2010, to change the way public health is delivered nationally through establishing Public Health England as an executive agency and locally, through moving responsibility and accountability for public health to local government.

These reforms will see local authorities taking the lead for improving health and co-ordinating local efforts to protect the public's health and well-being, and ensuring health services effectively promote population health. Local political leadership will be central to making this work.

In addition, a new executive agency, Public Health England will:

deliver services: health protection, public health information and intelligence, and services for the public through social marketing and behavioural insight activities; lead for public health by encouraging transparency and accountability, building the evidence base, building relationships promoting public health; and support the development of the specialist and wider public health work force by appointing directors of public health with local authorities, supporting excellence in public health practice and bringing together the wider range of public health professionals.

The NHS will continue to play a full role in providing care, tackling inequalities and ensuring every clinical contact counts.

In "Healthy Lives, Health People: update and way forward", published in July 2011, we included commissioning of termination of pregnancies as one of the areas for which local authorities will be responsible. I have now reflected further on whether it would be appropriate for local authorities to be responsible for commissioning procedures that will involve surgical procedures and the associated need for strong clinical governance arrangements to ensure people receive a safe, legal service. I therefore intend to consult on whether commissioning termination of pregnancies should in the longer term be the responsibility of clinical commissioning groups or local authorities. In the interim, as a practical measure, CCGs will be responsible for commissioning these services for April 2013.

The update documents have been placed in the Library. Copies are available to hon. Members from the Vote Office and to noble Lords from the Printed Paper Office. The updates are also available at http://healthandcare.dh.gov.uk/category/public-health.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Rules of Engagement (HMIC Review of August 2011 Disorders)

The Secretary of State for the Home Department (Mrs Theresa May): On 15 August I wrote to ask Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary, Sir Denis O'Connor, to undertake a review of public order policing and to consider further work to support clearer guidance to forces on the size of deployments, the need for mutual aid, pre-emptive action, public order tactics, the number of officers (including commanders) trained in public order policing and an appropriate arrests policy. I am pleased to be able to tell the House that HMIC has concluded its review and have today published its report, entitled "The Rules of Engagement: A Review of the August 2011 Disorders".

HMIC recognises that the events of August 2011 were "unparalleled in terms of speed, scale and geographical spread of disorder".

HMIC also recognises the achievements of the police in bringing the disorder under control and in particular, the individual acts of bravery displayed by police officers across the country.

The report confirms that the initial response, in particular to the disorder which broke out in Tottenham, was too slow. This has been acknowledged in the interim reports released by the crime and victims panel and by the Metropolitan police themselves.

This review makes a number of interrelated recommendations which will require careful and serious consideration by the Government and the police service working together. This work will be aligned with the development of the strategic policing requirement.

The way in which the police respond to public disorder is a matter of key public interest. The August disturbances brought havoc to some of our cities and communities. HMIC has, in a short period of time, produced a wide-ranging and detailed report and this is to be commended. The report contains a significant amount of detail and evidence which will require detailed assessment by the Government and the police service as a whole.

A copy of this report will be placed in Library of the House.

SCOTLAND

Energy Towing Vessels

The Secretary of State for Scotland (Michael Moore): On 10 October 2011, I announced to the House that the Scotland Office would lead efforts to secure a long-term replacement for the emergency towing vessels (ETV) service in waters surrounding the Northern Isles and Western Isles. Extensive discussions have since taken place with a very wide range of interested parties, including senior representatives of the oil and shipping industries as well as public sector organisations.

I am pleased to confirm that the north sea oil industry, led by Oil & Gas UK and its member companies, has indicated its willingness to offer support by establishing a call-off arrangement for their chartered vessels to be deployed in support of HM coastguard in the event of an emergency. Detailed work is under way between operators, vessel owners and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency on working practices and necessary protocols governing the arrangements. During the last meeting of the Scottish ETV working group, I discussed the matter in depth with Oil & Gas UK, local authorities and other interested parties who have responded positively to this proposal. With that in mind, I have instructed that work should proceed quickly with a view to putting a framework in place as early as possible in the new year.

This is a very positive development offering additional reassurance to local communities, particularly those in the Northern Isles. This step also demonstrates active support by the oil industry for corporate social responsibility and I greatly welcome their helpful contribution and constructive engagement.

The Government intend to use the remainder of the £3 million funding provided by the Department for Transport to maintain cover until no later than 31 March 2012. Further work will continue with local authorities along the west coast to examine all viable long-term options for those waters, and I will reconvene a further meeting of the working group early in the new year.

Antibiotic Action Initiative

The Petition of supporters of Antibiotic Action, a national initiative of the British Society for Antimicrobial Chemotherapy, Declares that the Petitioners believe that the treatment of common and serious bacterial infections will be seriously compromised unless urgent steps are taken to stimulate investment in the discovery and development of new antibiotics, further declares that to support the discovery, development and bringing-to-market of new antibacterial agents, opportunities should be identified to safely streamline and accelerate the licensing processes for new antibiotics; declares that the commercial challenges faced by industry in developing and bringing new antibiotics to the marketplace should be addressed, and declares that more partnership between academia and pharmaceutical and diagnostics companies in the UK should be encouraged, in order to maximise the conversion of discovered-candidate molecules into licensed antibiotics available for use on the NHS.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to review the licensing processes for new antibiotics, conduct a review of the commercial challenges faced by the pharmaceutical industry in developing and bringing new antibiotics to the marketplace and encourage more partnership between academia and pharmaceutical and diagnostics companies in the UK.

[P000983]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Health, received 2 December 2011:

Antibiotic resistance is a complex global public health issue. To tackle it effectively requires an integrated approach at national, European and International level.

The UK is signed up to the WHO European Strategic Action Plan on Antibiotic Resistance which encourages the sharing of information, developing effective interventions to prevent and slow down the development of multi-resistant bacteria and working together to stimulate the development of new drugs and diagnostics.

The Government recognise that the importance of antibiotics in the treatment of resistant bacterial infections and are focusing their efforts at a national level on monitoring infections, promoting responsible prescribing and use of antibiotics as well as good infection control measures.

Work to improve the licensing process is already underway with the development of a revised guideline on new antibacterial clinical development. We are also pursing national initiatives to improve prescribing practice by healthcare professionals through the development of guidance such as the new "Start Smart Then Focus" and further guidance for GPs which will be published next year, as well as work which is being progressed through the Technology Strategy Board to help stimulate new developments for example in diagnostics. In addition, we are working with partners to explore how best to stimulate development of new antibiotic drugs.

We are also pushing for concerted action at an EU and international level and expect the recently published European strategic action plan to facilitate greater research collaboration with industry and others and build on the recommendations of the Transatlantic Taskforce on Antimicrobial Resistance (TATFAR).

TRANSPORT

Closure of Liverpool Coastguard Station

The Petition of residents of Merseyside,

Declares that the closure of Liverpool Coastguard Station would result in the loss of vital local knowledge and a reduction in the efficiency of rescues of people in difficulty along our coastline and at sea.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to take steps to ensure that Liverpool Coastguard Station remains open.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by Bill Esterson, Official Report, 26 October 2011; Vol. 534, c. 435.]

[P000973]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Transport:

Having decided in July that one coastguard centre from each existing operational pair should remain open in the new coastguard rescue co-ordination structure, the Government consulted specifically on whether there were factors that would suggest that Liverpool should be retained in preference to the centre at Holyhead. Consultation ended on 6 October. No new and compelling arguments were put forward and the Government therefore announced on 22 November that given the concerns raised after the first round of consultation about the importance of familiarity with Welsh place names, it would be right to retain a rescue co-ordination function at the Holyhead centre. However, there will still be a coastguard and MCA presence at the Liverpool site in support of the volunteer Coastguard Rescue Service and the existing local Marine Office.

Swansea Coastguard Station

The Petition of residents of the constituency of Blaenau Gwent,

Declares that there is a fierce reaction to the wholly unexpected proposed closure of the Swansea Coastguard Station, which will affect 28 staff, and declares that the Petitioners fear that lives will be put at risk if the proposal goes ahead, as the Petitioners are unconvinced that new technology would be an adequate substitute for close proximity between the coastguard and other emergency services.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Transport to reconsider the decision to close Swansea Coastguard Station and ensure that a coastguard station remains at Swansea.

[P000975]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Transport:

Having decided in July that one coastguard centre from each existing operational pair should remain open in the new coastguard rescue co-ordination structure, the Government consulted specifically on whether there were factors that would suggest that Swansea should be retained in preference to the centre at Milford Haven. Consultation ended on 6 October. No new and compelling arguments were put forward and the Government therefore announced on 22 November that given the Department for Transport's existing employment profile in the Swansea area, it would be right to retain a rescue co-ordination function at the Milford Haven centre. However, there will still be a coastguard presence at the Swansea site in support of the volunteer Coastguard Rescue Service.

HMS Concord

The Petition of William Leitch,

Declares that the Petitioner believes that it is a grievous injustice that the 1949 ship's complement of HMS Concord were not recognised as a unit involved in the 1949 Yangtze campaign, due to what the Petitioner believes was a wrongful omission of important relevant documents relating to the role of HMS Concord between 28 and 31 July 1949, and declares that the Petitioner believes that those who served on HMS Concord between 28 and 31 July 1949 deserve justice, remedy and reparation.

The Petitioner therefore requests that the House of Commons sets up a Select Committee to conduct a comprehensive enquiry into the role of HMS Concord in the Yangtze campaign between 28 and 31 July 1949.

And the Petitioner remains, etc.—[Presented by Graeme Morrice.]

Proposed cuts to BBC Radio Merseyside

The Petition of listeners to BBC Radio Merseyside,

Declares that the Petitioners oppose the 20% cut to BBC Radio Merseyside's budget proposed by the BBC management; that the Petitioners note that BBC Radio Merseyside is the most listened to of the BBC's 39 local radio stations outside of London with over 300,000 listeners who tune in for an average of 16.2 hours per week to popular programmes such as the Roger Phillips Show and the Billy Butler Show; further note that there are more staff at Radio 4 who work on the You and Yours programme than the whole of the current team of BBC Radio Merseyside; and that the Petitioners believe any efficiency savings should be fairly distributed, protecting local services and jobs where possible, in order to guarantee quality of programming which remains locally relevant and to preserve a service that is depended on by millions of listeners up and down the country, rather than maintaining the budgets of bigger channels and national radio stations.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to encourage the BBC to reconsider its cuts to BBC local radio.

[P000965]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport:

The Government understand the important role BBC Radio Merseyside plays in the lives of its listeners. Its contribution to culture and life across the region to which it broadcasts is widely recognised.

The BBC is looking closely at what it does and how it should prioritise its resources in future. It is right that the BBC (like other parts of the public sector) should be expected to make savings. How best to achieve that, whilst securing the interests of viewers and listeners, is a matter for the BBC Trust. The BBC is operationally and editorially independent of Government under the terms of the BBC's Charter and Agreement, and there is no provision for the Government to intervene in its day-to-day operations.

Delivering Quality First has been and will continue to be subject to extensive scrutiny by the BBC and the BBC Trust. The Government notes that the BBC's proposals are subject to a full public consultation by the BBC Trust. This gives the public an opportunity to respond and put their views to the BBC. Details are available at http://consultations.external.bbc.co.uk/bbc/dqf/. The consultation closes on 21 December 2011.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Proposed Development on Coastal Road, Bolton-le-Sands (Lancashire)

The Petition of residents of Bolton-le-Sands and others,

Declares that the Petitioners are opposed to planning application 10/00830/0UT, relating to a proposed development on Coastal Road, Bolton-le-Sands, as the Petitioners believe that there is no demand for any further development in the area as many properties are not fully occupied and many are already on the market; that there are insufficient employment opportunities in the area for any incoming inhabitants; that there is insufficient space in local schools for incoming children; that there will be increased pressure on what the Petitioners believe are already overstretched local NHS services; that the development will change the character of the area, with a detrimental impact on the landscape and residential amenities, including causing the loss of open spaces that enhance the quality of life of everyone in the area; that the development will cause a loss of grazing land and essential hedgerow habitats; that the development presents a risk to the canal and species in the canal ecosystem; that the development will result in the joining up of the villages of Bolton-le-Sands and Hest Bank and that there will be an increase in vehicular traffic on already busy roads, particularly on Coastal Road which has seen numerous accidents in recent years.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to use any means possible to overturn the decision of Lancaster City Council to approve the development on Coastal Road, Bolton-le-Sands.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by David Morris, Official Report, 24 November 2011; Vol. 536, c. 562.]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, received 9 December 2011:

The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government is aware that a planning application was submitted to Lancaster City Council in respect of the above development. He is advised that on 14 November the council resolved to grant planning permission subject to a section 106 legal agreement being signed.

The Secretary of State might decide to call-in an application for his own determination if he considers that it raises matters of more than local importance, but his policy is to be very selective about this. The Government are committed to give more power to councils and communities to make their own decisions on planning issues, and believe planning decisions should be made at the local level wherever possible.

The Secretary of State has carefully considered this application but in his opinion, the proposals do not: involve a conflict with national policies on important matters; have significant effects beyond their immediate locality; give rise to substantial regional or national controversy; raise significant architectural and urban design issues; or involve the interests of national security or of foreign Governments. Nor does he consider that there is any other sufficient reason to call the application in for his own determination. He has therefore decided the application should be determined at local level, and has not called it in.

The decision as to whether to grant planning permission will therefore remain with the council.

JUSTICE

Sentencing (Knife Crime)

The Petition of residents of the London Borough of Enfield,

Declares that the creation of a new offence of using a knife to threaten or endanger a person is welcome, as is the proposal to introduce a mandatory six month custodial sentence for those convicted of this offence; further declares that the new offence and sentence is only set to apply to those over 18 years of age, despite serious knife crimes being committed in this borough and elsewhere by people younger than 18.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Secretary of State for Justice to give urgent consideration to amendments to ensure that the new offence also applies to under 18s.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.—[Presented by Nick de Bois, Official Report, 21 October 2011; Vol. 533, c. 1249.]

[P000970]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Justice:

The Government are determined to tackle the scourge of knife crime that can blight people's lives. This is why new offences of using an article with a blade or point or offensive weapon to threaten another person and cause an immediate risk of serious physical harm to that other person are being introduced in the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill.

When introduced in the Bill the offences applied a minimum custodial sentence of six months' imprisonment for an adult but did not apply a minimum sentence to juveniles aged under 18 years.

In the light of concerns raised about the need to send a clear message to under-18s that the Government consider knife crime unacceptable, the Secretary of State for Justice has decided that it is appropriate to extend a minimum custodial sentence of a four-month detention and training order to 16 and 17-year-olds found guilty of these new offences. Amendments providing for this were tabled on 31 October 2011 in the House of Commons Report Stage of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill.

As has been the case for mandatory sentences other than murder, these provisions allow for a court to disapply the minimum sentence where the particular circumstances of the case, which for a 16 or 17-year-old will include having regard to the welfare of the child, would make it unjust to apply it.

The Government concluded it is right to apply a minimum custodial sentence to 16 and 17-year-olds for these aggravated knife offences which risk serious physical harm, but do not consider it appropriate to apply this to younger children who may be dealt with more effectively within the community. This does not mean that younger children will not get custody but that the court will decide on the basis of the individual case what penalty should apply.

OBSERVATIONS

JUSTICE

Legal Aid for Gypsies and Travellers

The Petition of the Community Law Partnership on behalf of Gypsies and Travellers, Declares that the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill, if brought into force, will have disastrous effects on the provision of advice and representation to Gypsies and Travellers on accommodation issues. Gypsies and Travellers are one of the most disadvantaged groups in the United Kingdom. The Bill denies them access to the legal advice and assistance which is available to any other group. It is due to the failures of successive central and local governments to ensure adequate site provision that some 25% of the Gypsy and Traveller population who live in caravans are on unauthorised encampments and unauthorised developments. This is through no fault of their own.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to ensure that legal aid in the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill is available for Gypsies and Travellers to defend evictions from unauthorised encampments and to be advised and represented in the County Court and High Court planning matters.

[P000982]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Justice:

The Government recognise that the Community Law Partnership is concerned about the potential impact on Gypsies and Travellers of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill.

Under the Bill, legal aid will generally continue to be available for any person facing repossession or eviction from a property or site where they are residing. Advice and representation will therefore continue to be available for planning matters in the County Court and High Court where that matter might result in the individual being legally required to leave their home or the land on which their home is situated.

However, the Government do not believe that providing legal aid funding for possession and eviction matters is a justifiable use of taxpayers' money where the individual entered, and has remained on, the property or site as a trespasser.

Legal aid will also be retained for most judicial reviews.

The Government consider that the Bill's proposed changes to the provision of legal aid are necessary and proportionate to the Government's objective of targeting legal aid to those who need it most whilst achieving a more affordable legal aid system.

In addition, the Government are encouraging local authorities to provide an appropriate number of Traveller sites that reflect local and historic demand. Work is also under way to explore incentives for site provision and innovative ways to fund and maintain traveller sites.

Movement of Permanent Secretaries in Anguilla

The Petition of members of the Anguillan community resident in the UK,

Declares that the Petitioners oppose the transfer of Permanent Secretaries in Anguilla at such a time when the Anguillan economy is struggling, and that the Petitioners believe that it is essential that the expert Permanent Secretaries in Anguilla stay in their posts in order to meet the demands of the Foreign and Commonwealth office to balance the budget by 2013.

The Petitioners therefore request that the House of Commons urges the Government to ask the Governor of Anguilla to ensure that current Anguillan Permanent Secretaries remain in their posts.

And the Petitioners remain, etc.

Blaydon Races 150th Anniversary

The Humble Petition of the organising group of the Blaydon Races 150th Anniversary Campaign, namely Mr Steven Campion, Mr David Minikin, Mr Aidan Oswell, Mrs Lisa Christer Ovenden, Mr Andrew Ridley and Mr Anthony Pearson, that the Petitioners are campaigning to encourage all those who cherish the history, culture and traditions of their beloved Tyneside to celebrate the 150th anniversary of Mr George Ridley's famous Blaydon Races anthem in June 2012.

Wherefore your Petitioners pray that your Honourable House will urge the Government to actively encourage the local authorities of Gateshead and Newcastle upon Tyne to work together to co-ordinate a properly-scaled programme of appropriate celebrations.

And your Petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c.—[Presented by Chi Onwurah, Official Report, 9 November 2011; Vol. 535, c. 410.]

[P000979]

Observations from the Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport:

The Government are wholly committed to arts and culture and Ministers are determined to do everything they can to support cultural activity, across all the regions of England. Central Government funding for the arts comes primarily through Arts Council England (ACE), which makes funding decisions at arm's length from Government. Ultimately it is for organisations like ACE, or for local authorities such as Newcastle or Gateshead Council to make funding decisions based on the needs and priorities of the local area as they know the needs of their area better than central Government.

WALES

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by her Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84217]

Mr David Jones: As at 30 November 2011, there were four staff employed in the Communications team. They each have a mix of duties and so do not fall readily into the roles referred to in the question.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what receptions and events have been hosted by her Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by third parties. [84216]

Mr David Jones: The Secretary of State for Wales, my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs Gillan), and I have hosted the following receptions and events:

16 December 2010: LATCH charity Christmas reception

1 March 2011: St. David's Day reception

1 March 2011: LATCH charity St. David's Day reception.

The following events were sponsored by a third party:

13 July 2010: BBC Cymru Wales reception

13 October 2010: Older People's Commissioner for Wales reception

6 November 2010: Wales in London reception

28 February 2011: Community Foundation in Wales reception

21 March 2011: University of Wales Cybersecurity Summit reception

29 June 2011: National Museum of Wales reception

9 November 2011: CBI Wales/Sainsbury dinner

21 November 2011: Probation Trust Wales reception.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether any senior staff in her Department are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if she will publish her policy on such payments. [85069]

Mr David Jones: No, all staff in the Wales Office have their salaries paid into their personal bank accounts.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85055]

Mr David Jones: The following table shows the number of named day PQs that received a substantive answer within five working days of the date specified.

	Named day PQs
June 2011	4
July 2011	2
August 2011	—
September 2011	—
October 2011	2
November 2011	4
Total	12 (100%)

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Severn River Crossing

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent discussions she had with the Secretary of State for Transport on the 2012 toll rise for the Severn river crossings. [84969]

Mrs Gillan: The toll level for the Severn river crossings is set by a prearranged statutory formula set out in the Severn Bridges Act 1992 and rises automatically each year in line with inflation.

Students: Loans

Stephen Mosley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions she has had with the Welsh Government on the availability of the tuition fees subsidy for Welsh students to students from other EU countries studying in England. [84487]

Mr David Jones: The Secretary of State for Wales, my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesham and Amersham (Mrs Gillan), and I have regular discussions with the Welsh Government on a wide range of issues. Policy on tuition fees is devolved to the Welsh Government and as such we have not discussed the availability of the tuition fees subsidy for Welsh students to students from other EU countries studying in England.

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Correspondence

Mr Iain Wright: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to respond to the e-mail of 22 June 2011 from St Hild's School in Hartlepool constituency on lowering the voting age. [84005]

The Prime Minister: A reply has been sent.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85066]

The Prime Minister: All named day written parliamentary questions received a substantive answer within five working days.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Prime Minister when he plans to answer the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 18 October 2011 with regard to Mr A Challenger. [85149]

The Prime Minister: A reply has been sent.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Air Passenger Duty

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has made to HM Treasury on the rate of air passenger duty for direct long-haul passengers departing from airports in Northern Ireland. [84403]

Mr Paterson: I refer the hon. Member to the written ministerial statement made by the Economic Secretary to the Treasury, my hon. Friend the Member for Norwich North (Miss Smith), on 18 October 2011, Official Report, column 57WS. This set out the Government's position which the Chancellor of the Exchequer, my right hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr Osborne), confirmed again in the autumn statement on 29 November 2011.

Corporation Tax

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what his policy is on the devolution of powers relating to corporation tax to the Northern Ireland Assembly and Executive; [84404]

(2) what discussions he has had with HM Treasury on the devolution of powers over corporation tax to the Northern Ireland Assembly and Executive. [84405]

Mr Swire: The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, my right hon. Friend the Member for North Shropshire (Mr Paterson), and I have had regular discussions with ministerial colleagues in HM Treasury on the potential benefits of devolving the power to vary corporation tax rates to the Northern Ireland Assembly. A ministerial working group will meet for the first time on 15 December 2011 to consider in detail the issues raised in response to the recent Government consultation on this issue. The work to be undertaken by this group is necessary to inform any decision on the devolution of powers relating to corporation tax.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by third parties. [84210]

Mr Swire: Since May 2010, my Department has hosted three receptions. The Northern Ireland Office also manages Hillsborough castle which is used to host garden parties and is also available for use by other Government Departments, community groups and charities.

Departmental Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84226]

Mr Paterson: Comparable figures for the Department as it is now configured are not available following the completion of the devolution of policing and justice functions on 12 April 2010.

Since 12 April 2010, as a small Department of less than 200 staff, the Northern Ireland Office receives a range of corporate services under service level agreements from other Departments. It has not outsourced any services to providers outside the civil service.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85062]

Mr Paterson: The following table shows the number of named day PQs that received a substantive answer within five working days of the date specified.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84225]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office has not outsourced any services in the last five years.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84212]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office does not use postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail.

Summertime

Thomas Docherty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what budget his Department has allocated for the review of moving to central European time in the UK. [84957]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office has not allocated any funding for the review. The Daylight Saving Bill has yet to complete parliamentary consideration. Should the Bill be enacted, we anticipate any costs largely falling in the next financial year. Details of how to allocate expenditure have yet to be considered.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Arts: Business

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to help small and medium-sized arts organisations increase their business and marketing skills. [84530]

Mr Vaizey: Arts Council England is running fundraising workshops to help medium-sized arts organisations make a step change in diversifying their income streams by increasing private giving. Business and marketing skills will be addressed at these events.

In addition this Department, in partnership with Arts Council England and the Heritage Lottery Fund, has announced details of the £100 million Catalyst scheme to boost private giving to culture. Catalyst Arts and Catalyst Heritage fundraising capacity building grants are open access grant schemes aimed at arts and heritage organisations with little or no fundraising experience. Grants of between £15,000 and £25,000 will be awarded to organisations for the purpose of building fundraising capacity and capability so that they can attract new donors, strengthen their financial resilience and enhance their artistic output or engagement with the public.

Arts: Finance

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with Arts Council England on increasing the condition of funding for arts organisations that receive public funding. [84531]

Mr Vaizey: Arts Council England (ACE) informed this Department about the overall approach they would be taking in moving from their previous system of Regularly Funded Organisations to one of National Portfolio Organisations and in general terms how they planned to set this out in funding agreements. Conditions on individual funding agreements are a matter for ACE, not Government.

BBC: Sports

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (1) what discussions he has had with the BBC Trust regarding the nomination process for Sports Personality of the Year; and if he will make a statement; [84958]

(2) what discussions he has had with the BBC Trust on the promotion of positive sporting role models in respect of (a) gender and (b) disability; and if he will make a statement; [84959]

(3) what discussions he has had with the BBC Trust on the range of sports to which the BBC gives airtime; and if he will make a statement. [84960]

Mr Vaizey: The Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport, my right hon. Friend the Member for South West Surrey (Mr Hunt), has not had any discussions with the BBC Trust on these matters.

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [84831]

John Penrose: This Department has not awarded any contracts to Capita since May 2010.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85082]

John Penrose: There are no senior civil servants in this Department or its Executive agency, the Royal Parks, who are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary. We do not collate this information for our non-departmental bodies. Accordingly I have asked each of their chief executives to write directly to the Member for Harrow West. Copies of the replies will be placed in both House Libraries.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84231]

John Penrose: The Department has outsourced the following services in the last five years:

	Service outsourced	Company outsourced to:
2007	The Department's managed IT service	Atos
2008	No services outsourced	n/a
2009	The Department's financial and accounting transactional service	Liberata
2010	The Department's Facilities Management (Carillion) and Mailroom Services (Ecovert)	Carillion and Ecovert
2011	No services outsourced	n/a

Departmental Responsibilities

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many (a) museums and art galleries, (b) music teachers and schools, (c) ballet and dance schools, (d) theatres and concert halls, (e) drama schools and (f) libraries he expects to be operational in each of the English regions in each of the next four years. [84492]

Mr Vaizey: The Department has not made any estimate of future numbers of museums and art galleries; music teachers and schools; ballet and dance schools; theatre and concert halls; drama schools and libraries.

Information on the current provision of library services in each of the English regions is held in the House Libraries. We publish visits to all the sponsored museums and galleries:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/what_we_do/museums_and_galleries/3375.aspx

Arts Council England reports that currently there are 1,699 accredited museums in the UK:

http://www.artscouncil.org.uk/media/uploads/pdf/Statistical_Report_2011_11_04_Accreditation_Final.pdf

The Department will continue to monitor participation in all cultural activities through the Taking Part Survey.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85058]

John Penrose: The proportion of named day parliamentary questions which received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months is shown in the following table.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Music: Curriculum

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education concerning the inclusion of music in the National Curriculum. [84635]

Mr Jeremy Hunt: The Minister for Culture, my hon. Friend the Member for Wantage (Mr Vaizey), and I have regular discussions with the Secretary of State for Education, my right hon. Friend the Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove), on a range of issues including music education.

National Lottery: Grants

Steve Rotheram: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what steps his Department is taking to increase the number of National Lottery grant applications in deprived areas. [84558]

John Penrose: The Lottery distributing bodies—rightly—make their funding decisions independently of Government. I understand they are working actively to encourage applications from deprived areas and 'cold spots' that have received little Lottery funding.

Steve Rotheram: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with National Lottery grants distribution bodies about the process for grants awards after the London 2012 Olympics. [84559]

John Penrose: I have had no such discussion as the Lottery distributors make their funding decisions independently of Government, against their published criteria for particular programmes, and this process will not change after the London 2012 Olympic Games.

Steve Rotheram: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what the ratio is of National Lottery funding given in grants in (a) Liverpool, Walton, (b) Sunderland Central and (c) Ashfield constituencies to how much is spent in those constituencies on National Lottery tickets. [84629]

John Penrose: The distribution of National Lottery grants is based on need for funds in each good cause and the impact that the funding could have in each case, rather than on the volume of ticket sales or on other criteria. I understand that Camelot does not collect data on National Lottery spend by constituency, but detail on Lottery grants awarded is available and is searchable at:

http://www.lottery.culture.gov.uk/

Olympic Games 2012: Mass Media

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what steps he is taking to ensure that local media organisations have adequate access to cover the London 2012 Olympics. [84538]

Hugh Robertson: The British Olympic Association (BOA), as the National Olympic Committee for Great Britain and Northern Ireland, is responsible for allocating accreditation for the Olympic games for media based in the United Kingdom. I am corresponding with Lord Moynihan, chairman of the BOA, to request if further accreditations can be made available. A copy of the most recent letter from Lord Moynihan to the Minister for Sport and the Olympics on this matter has been placed in the House Libraries.

Olympic Games 2012: Scotland

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what proportion of residents in Banff and Buchan reside within (a) 10 miles and (b) 20 miles of the route of the Olympic Flame. [83317]

Hugh Robertson: The London 2012 Organising Committee (LOCOG) is responsible for the Olympic torch relay route.

LOCOG did not devise the route by constituency, and as such, they have not measured the proportion of residents on a constituency basis.

The communities through which the torch will pass were published on 7 November 2011, bringing the Olympic flame to within 10 miles of 95% of the UK population. Further detail can be found at:

http://www.london2012.com/olympic-torch-relay

Over a period of 70 days it is not possible for the Olympic flame to visit every community. As you will see from the published route the torch does not pass through Banff and Buchan, but will go close by, on its journey between Inverness and Aberdeen, and residents are invited to celebrations along this route. The street-level route of the Olympic torch relay will be confirmed nearer to the time of the relay.

The locations directly on the route were selected after two years of extensive UK-wide consultation, including with the Scottish Government but also local authorities and representatives of the tourism, heritage, sustainability, culture, education and sport sectors. A Scotland Torch Advisory Group was set up to support the delivery of an operationally feasible route that visits as many people and communities as possible, without regard to political constituency boundaries.

Overseas Visitors

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the number of overseas visitors likely to visit the UK in each of the next 10 years. [84564]

John Penrose: An estimate of the contribution that overseas visitors will make to the UK economy by 2020 is included in a report which was undertaken by Deloitte last year. Their analysis (at chapter 6) can be found on VisitBritain's website by using the following link:

http://www.visitbritain.org/Images/Economic%20case%20for%20the%20Visitor%20Economy%20-%20Phase%202%20-%2026%20July%202010%20-%20FINAL_tcm29-14561.pdf

The Government are committed to ensuring that the UK tourism industry creates a sustainable legacy as a result of the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games and Diamond Jubilee celebrations. Over the next four years, VisitBritain will invest around £127 million in a new international marketing programme which is expected to deliver 4.6 million extra visitors from overseas and £2.27 billion in extra visitor spend.

Public Libraries: Fees and Charges

Caroline Nokes: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many county councils charge for the borrowing of audio books from libraries. [84869]

Mr Vaizey: The Public Libraries and Museums Act 1964 prevents libraries from charging for the loan of material in a form which is readable without the use of electronic apparatus. Library authorities can therefore lawfully charge to lend audio books and other audio-visual material (music, films etc.).

While information on the number of authorities that do so is not collected centrally, figures showing income derived from audio-visual lending are included in the annual statistical report on public library services produced by The Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) and information is available at local authority level. Where no data are provided this may indicate that the authority does not generate income from audio-visual loans. CIPFA reports are available in the House Libraries.

Video Games: Wales

Jonathan Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with Welsh Ministers on the implementation of the Next Gen report for the (a) video games and (b) visual effects industry in Wales. [84748]

Mr Vaizey: I have had no meetings with Welsh Ministers specifically on the Next Gen report. However, in producing the Government's response to Next Gen (published 28 November) my officials engaged with all Government Departments, and representatives of the devolved Administrations, in considering the implications of the recommendations across the UK.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund

Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will take steps to reinstate the Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund. [77187]

Richard Benyon: We have no plans to reinstate the Aggregates Levy Sustainability Fund.

Agriculture: Subsidies

Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what subsidies have been identified as environmentally harmful under the (a) framework of the Nagoya summit on biodiversity, (b) G-20 Pittsburgh summit and (c) Roadmap to a Resource Efficient Europe of the European Commission; and what steps she is taking to phase out support for such subsidies. [77962]

Richard Benyon: The Nagoya meeting for the convention on biological diversity in October 2011 agreed a new Strategic Plan for Biodiversity 2011-20. Under this, target 3 requests that by 2020 at the latest, incentives, including subsidies, harmful to biodiversity are eliminated, phased out or reformed in order to minimize or avoid negative impacts, and positive incentives for the conservation and sustainable use of biodiversity are developed and applied, consistent and in harmony with the convention and other relevant international obligations, taking into account national socio-economic conditions. DEFRA is currently examining the requirements under this commitment, along with the other commitments agreed at this meeting. However, we have not yet identified any subsidies that are harmful to biodiversity.

With reference to the G-20 Pittsburgh summit, we are still committed to the aim to:

"phase out and rationalize over the medium term inefficient fossil fuel subsidies while providing targeted support for the poorest."

The Roadmap to a Resource Efficient Europe, published on 20 September 2011, proposes a new pathway to action on resource efficiency. It proposes addressing markets and prices, taxes and subsidies that do not reflect the real costs of resource use and which lock the economy into an unsustainable path. The Commission's vision is to phase out environmentally harmful subsidies by 2020, with due regard to the impact on people in need.

The Government are examining the Commission's Communication. We support the aim of addressing environmentally harmful subsidies and will work constructively with the Commission and other member states to reduce them significantly. However, we may wish to retain some flexibility, for example, to address issues such as fuel poverty.

Agriculture: Water Abstraction

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of national freshwater resource is extracted for use in agriculture. [84046]

Richard Benyon: Agriculture uses approximately 1% of abstracted water resources in England and Wales, although this masks significant seasonal and regional differences. In East Anglia, for example, agriculture uses 16% of abstracted water.

Biodiversity

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to carry out a comprehensive assessment of the condition of habitats in England. [84124]

Richard Benyon: In May 2012, we will publish the latest condition assessments available for priority habitats in England. This will update the previous 2007 assessment of progress on targets within the former England Biodiversity Strategy, and contribute to the suite of indicators for measuring progress with 'Biodiversity 2020: a strategy for England's wildlife and ecosystem services'. Natural England will pilot a new programme of habitat surveillance next year, which will lead to ongoing improvements in the quality of our information on the condition of habitats in England.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish the results of the review of the current set of biodiversity indicators. [84385]

Richard Benyon: The results of the review will be published with the new biodiversity indicator set in May 2012.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr Bain: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what new scientific evidence has emerged since the Bovine TB Eradication Group for England issued its report on Developing a Bovine TB Eradication Programme for England in October 2009. [70639]

Mr Paice: There is a large amount of ongoing research into the epidemiology of TB and the development and evaluation of potential methods of controlling the disease, both within DEFRA's research programme and through other funding sources (such as the research councils) and new evidence is constantly becoming available.

A significant source of new evidence on culling badgers comes from the ongoing monitoring of TB incidence in the areas of the Randomised Badger Culling Trial. Ongoing monitoring since the end of the RBCT shows that the positive effect of culling on herd breakdowns was maintained for at least 5.5 years after culling stopped and that the negative effect on confirmed herd breakdowns on surrounding land disappeared by 12-18 months after culling stopped. When cattle TB incidence figures from the period after culling are included, the benefits of proactive culling are greater than those observed during the trial itself.

Neil Parish: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs for what reason farmers in England receive more compensation for non-pedigree cattle over 36 months old affected by bovine TB than for pedigree cattle. [76672]

Mr Paice: Compensation for most TB affected cattle is determined objectively through table valuations which are true average open market prices for same category animals. To support table valuations, sales data are collected from a large number and wide range of sources.

A higher compensation rate for non-pedigree cattle (in the same category) will be a reflection of the underlying sales data. Although unusual, we do see this occasionally in a small number of categories, including the one highlighted in the question.

Dangerous Dogs

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what meetings she has had on dangerous dogs since May 2010; and what meetings she plans to have in the next three months. [80991]

Mr Paice: The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman) and her ministerial team have held numerous meetings between June 2010 and September 2011 to discuss issues including dangerous dogs with various groups and organisations including: the Dogs Trust; The Dog Advisory Council; the Communication Workers Union; the RSPCA; Battersea Dogs and Cats Home; Blue Cross; and the Assistant Chief Constable of the North Wales Police Force.

A recent stakeholder meeting on irresponsible dog ownership was chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Taylor of Holbeach, on 15 November 2011.

Ministers will continue to meet with relevant stakeholders on this issue as part of our ongoing programme of engagement.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she last met individuals injured in dangerous dog attacks. [80994]

Mr Paice: There are no records of Ministers having met directly with individuals injured in dangerous dog attacks. However, meetings have been held, including recently, with representatives of organisations who represent victims of dog attacks, such as the Communication Workers' Union.

Advertising: Job Vacancies

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on advertising job vacancies since May 2010. [75633]

Richard Benyon: DEFRA has spent £4,173.93 on advertising job vacancies since May 2010.

Departmental Allowances

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much members of her departmental management board have claimed in expenses since May 2010. [74951]

Richard Benyon: Business costs for directors generals, the permanent secretary and non-executive directors of the departmental board in DEFRA are published and updated quarterly on the DEFRA website:

http://www.defra.gov.uk/corporate/about/who/management/

Details for quarters April to June 2011 and July to September 2011 will be published in due course.

Departmental Correspondence

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has received representations concerning (a) the Big Society Bank, (b) the Work Programme and (c) volunteering since June 2011; and if she will make a statement. [75070]

Richard Benyon: Since June 2011, neither the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman), nor I have received any representations on the Big Society Bank or the Work programme. One representation has been received with respect to volunteering—a letter from Tom Flood, chief executive of BTCV (formerly the British Trust for Conservation Volunteers), providing information about and requesting support for BTCV's Carbon Army Big Green Weekend.

Departmental Flags

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 10 June 2010, Official Report, column 207W, on departmental flags, whether her Department has flown the Union flag each day of the year at each official building for which her Department is responsible which has a flag pole since June 2010. [73692]

Richard Benyon: The Department adheres to the current published guidance issued by the Department for Culture Media and Sport for flying the Union flag in respect of those premises having a flag pole under departmental management control.

The current guidance is available to view at:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/what_we_do/honours/7124.aspx

Freedom of Information

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many requests under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 her Department has received in each month since May 2010; how many responses given in each such month disclosed (a) the full information requested, (b) part of the information requested, with some information withheld under exemptions in the Act and (c) none of the information requested; and in respect of how many requests received in each such month (i) (A) substantive and (B) holding responses were issued within 20 working days of the date of receipt, (ii) no substantive response was issued within 40 working days of the date of receipt and (iii) no substantive response has yet been issued. [78876]

Richard Benyon: The information requested is set out in the following table. Comprehensive statistics will be published by the Ministry of Justice for the third and fourth quarters of 2011 in due course.

	Fully disclosed	Partial	No disclosure	20 days	Extension	No reply in 40	No reply yet
May 2010	20	4	3	31	0	0	0
June 2010	14	4	5	27	4	2	0
July 2010	20	4	3	27	1	1	0
August 2010	27	2	1	41	3	1	0
September 2010	16	5	3	30	2	2	0
October 2010	20	5	2	29	1	4	0

February 2011	31	2	4	41	1	1	0
March 2011	17	3	5	28	1	4	0
April 2011	11	2	3	23	1	1	0
June 2011	27	5	5	34	7	2	0

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs in respect of how many responses to requests for information received by her Department under the Freedom of Information Act 2000 the reason of (a) commercially sensitive information, (b) information not held, (c) information too costly to provide and (d) vexatious or repeated requests has been given in response since January 2010. [78877]

Richard Benyon: The information requested is set out in the following table. Comprehensive statistics for the third and fourth quarters of 2011 will be published by the Ministry of Justice in due course.

	Commercially sensitive information	Not held	Too costly	Vex/repeated
June	2	3	1	0
July	0	4	3	0
August	0	5	0	0
September	1	6	1	0
October	1	6	2	0
November	0	2	2	0
December	0	2	1	0
2011
January	0	7	1	0
February	1	3	1	0
March	1	4	2	0
April	0	5	2	0
June	1	4	1	0

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which Minister in her Department is responsible for determining whether exemptions to the Freedom of Information Act 2000 should apply to responses to requests for information under the Act; and which other Minister is responsible for making such determinations should the subject matter of the request fall within the ministerial responsibilities of the Minister with lead responsibility. [78878]

Richard Benyon: Responsibility for the decision rests with the business area which holds the information. No additional clearance will be required for the release of routine and non-sensitive information. However, releases of sensitive information, or cases where exemptions were considered, will always require sign-off at a responsible official level and from time to time, in cases involving policy development, at ministerial level.

For cases where the "reasonable opinion of a qualified person" is necessary, e.g. under section 36(2) and (3) of the Freedom of Information Act 2000, the qualified person is "any Minister of the Crown" (section 36(5)(a)), and the Minister with lead responsibility for that area would take the decision.

Departmental Responsibilities

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs who the lead Minister in her Department is for (a) infectious diseases: animal and plant, (b) flooding and (c) food and water workstream of the Capabilities Programme. [79505]

Richard Benyon: The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman), leads overall on emergencies. I, as Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Natural Environment and Fisheries, am responsible for the flooding and water work streams of the Capabilities Programme. The Minister of State for Agriculture and Food, my right hon. Friend the Member for South East Cambridgeshire (Mr Paice), leads on food and animal disease. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary, Lord Taylor, has ministerial responsibility for plant diseases, however, this is not part of the Capabilities Programme.

Earth Summit 2012

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what consultation she plans to undertake on her policy for the Rio Earth Summit 2012. [84022]

Richard Benyon: Rio+20, the UN Conference on sustainable development in June 2012, is an opportunity to agree specific steps to help the global economy make the transition to greener growth. The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman), is leading the Government's preparations for Rio+20, and as part of this is engaged with partners across Government, business, civil society, in the EU, and with key international partners. We will shortly be responding to the Environmental Audit Committee's report on Rio+20.

Fisheries

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the monetary value of fish caught by the 10 metre and under fleet was in each of the last five years; and if she will make a statement. [84579]

Richard Benyon: The monetary value of fish caught by the UK 10 metre and under fleet in each of the last five years was as follows:

	Value (£ million)
2006	75.0
2007	87.1
2008	85.4
2009	76.9
2010	79.9

Marine Management Organisation 2011

Work is currently under way to reform the fisheries management arrangements in England, with the aim of securing a more profitable, sustainable and unified fishing industry in the long term. It specifically seeks to tackle some of the difficulties currently facing the English under-10 metre fleet.

We are aiming to set up some pilot groups next year, to trial alternative management approaches for the under-10 metre fleet. Part of this work will look at ways to improve the marketing of the catch to increase profitability of the fishermen involved. The pilots will contribute to decisions on the final reform package.

Fishing Catches

Dr Wollaston: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on the proposals in the 2012 draft common fisheries policy to ban discards of certain species which are believed to have a good chance of survival if discarded promptly. [83996]

Richard Benyon: The UK Government strongly support the European Commission's ambition in seeking to end the wasteful practice of discarding of dead and dying fish, which has rightly attracted so much public interest. Through a reformed common fisheries policy (CFP) we need a flexible regulatory framework that drives the necessary changes in fishing activity and behaviour to end these discards.

There are some species which have a good chance of surviving if discarded, and it is important that the provisions of the CFP reflect this.

Fuels: Waste

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much refuse derived fuel was exported in 2010. [84023]

Richard Benyon: In England and Wales, 13,247 tonnes of exported refuse derived fuel was received at recovery facilities between 1 January 2010 and 31 December 2010. 98,500 tonnes of exported refuse derived fuel was shipped under notifications permits consented to between 1 January 2010 and 31 December 2010.

Marine Conservation Zones

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what additional work her Department has commissioned to support the designation of marine conservation zones; and if she will publish the terms of reference of any such work. [84139]

Richard Benyon: DEFRA is commissioning an in-depth review of evidence available for the recommended Marine Conservation Zones (MCZs) to ensure that all the relevant evidence has been gathered and used appropriately.

Discussions are under way between DEFRA and delivery partners on the best approach to commissioning additional sea bed and habitat monitoring in English waters to ensure we make the best use of the additional funding to support marine conservation zone designation.

The terms of reference will be published on the DEFRA website in due course when they have been agreed.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what weighting she plans to give to (a) social, (b) economic and (c) environmental consequences when designating marine conservation zones. [84141]

Richard Benyon: The Marine and Coastal Access Act 2009 allows for social and economic factors to be taken into account when deciding where marine conservation zones (MCZs) should be located, and what associated management measures will be implemented to meet their conservation objectives. The Government are aiming to designate sites and identify possible management measures that will meet the site's conservation objectives while having the least social and economic impact, as the Government want to achieve the right combination of environmental care and sustainable economic development in their decisions to implement the Act.

The weight to be attached to socio-economic interests will depend on a number of factors and will need to be considered in the light of the particular circumstances that apply in each area. Where areas contain features which are rare, threatened or declining and come with limited options for their location, ecological considerations are likely to carry greater weight in considering the area's suitability for designation as an MCZ.

Natural Capital Committee

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how frequently she expects the Natural Capital Committee to report to Government; [84128]

(2) whether the Natural Capital Committee's advice to Government will be laid before Parliament; [84129]

(3) whether the Government plan to respond publicly to the advice they receive from the Natural Capital Committee. [84130]

Richard Benyon: The Natural Capital Committee will advise the Government on the state of English natural capital and it will be set up initially for the duration of this Parliament. The work of the committee will be available to Parliament and will be set out in a series of reports. The Economic Affairs Committee will be the recipient of the reports and advice from the Natural Capital Committee, and it will consider how the Government might best respond. All the advice from the Natural Capital Committee to the Government will be made public.

Nature Conservation: British Overseas Territories

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to protect critically endangered species in British overseas territories. [84126]

Richard Benyon: The Government's Darwin Initiative provides strong support to conservation work in the UK overseas territories (UKOTs) and has a specific funding stream for the UKOTs. To date, the Darwin Initiative has committed over £3.8 million towards conservation projects in the UKOTs through 33 projects. The Darwin Challenge Fund ear-marked £1.5 million for the period 2009-12 to provide funding for scoping potential projects in the UKOTs.

We also provide funding for specific projects to support conservation in UKOTs. For example, the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman), announced a contribution of £200,000 at last year's Nagoya Biodiversity conference, towards rodent eradication on the world heritage site of Henderson Island in the Pitcairn group of islands, which hosts many endangered species of birds, including the Henderson petrel. In addition, I announced at the Overseas Territories Consultative Council, which took place on 24 November 2011, a commitment of just under £400,000 towards initiatives in the UKOTs, including a £250,000 contribution towards the RSPB's initiative to eradicate mice on Gough Island, which is a site of international significance for breeding seabirds. We are also currently funding three research projects on the control of non-native invasive species in UKOTs in the south Atlantic, at a cost of £223,000.

DEFRA supports a range of other initiatives benefiting biodiversity in the UKOTs, such as the Agreement on the Conservation of Albatrosses and Petrels co-ordinator post promoting implementation of the agreement in the UK south Atlantic territories.

Nature Conservation: Crime

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many prosecutions have resulted from detection by the National Wildlife Crime Unit in each of the last four years. [84435]

Richard Benyon: The Ministry of Justice court proceedings database holds information on offences provided by the statutes under which proceedings are brought, but not all the circumstances of each case. It is not possible to identify the proceedings resulting from detection by a specific agency from the centrally held data.

Rural Areas: Broadband

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much of the £20 million to be provided for the Rural Community Broadband Fund is being provided by (a) Broadband Delivery UK and (b) the Rural Development Programme for England. [84654]

Richard Benyon: The Rural Community Broadband Fund is made up of £10 million of European funding from the Rural Development Programme for England and £10 million of Exchequer funding from Broadband Delivery UK.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how often sites of special scientific interest are monitored that are considered as high risk. [84123]

Richard Benyon: The monitoring of sites of special scientific interest follows a risk based cycle, with a frequency of every four years for those identified as high risk.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department has a target for the number of sites of special scientific interest that should be in favourable condition by the end of the Parliament. [84125]

Richard Benyon: The new England Biodiversity Strategy includes the outcome that by 2020, at least 50% of the area of England's sites of special scientific interest (SSSIs) should be in favourable condition. There is no specific target for the number of SSSIs being in favourable condition by the end of this Parliament.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many sites of special scientific interest are considered to be at high risk. [84387]

Richard Benyon: As of 29 November 2011, Natural England assessed that 820 of England's 4,113 Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs) are at risk of a decline in condition from either unfavourable recovering or favourable; this equates to 23% of the 1.04 million hectare area of SSSIs.

Natural England uses condition assessment and other site based work, to identify and record risks to site condition, facilitating follow up work with partners and land managers to address relevant issues.

Water

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to encourage improved water efficiency in (a) industrial processes and (b) commercial buildings. [84044]

Richard Benyon: DEFRA manages the 'Water Technology List', which specifies water efficient products and systems covering a range of industrial and commercial applications. Businesses that purchase items on the list are eligible for an enhanced capital allowance of 100% in the first year of operation. In the food and drink sector, DEFRA's delivery body, the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) works with the Food and Drink Federation, to deliver the Federation House Commitment, which helps companies reduce their water usage. WRAP continues to catalyse water savings through inter-business transfers of resources through the National Industrial Symbiosis Programme.

In respect of commercial buildings, WRAP has published model specifications that enable organisations to specify water efficiency outcomes when procuring new buildings, or facilities management services for existing buildings. Further work in this area will integrate water efficiency with a more comprehensive set of model specifications, resource management templates and tools.

Water Abstraction

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has made an estimate of the likely available national annual water resource up to 2050. [84045]

Richard Benyon: The Environment Agency has recently been working to explore the future availability of water for abstraction in 2050 in England and Wales under a range of different scenarios of climate change, water demand and water flows required for the environment. This will be published in December, in parallel with the Water White Paper as part of the underpinning evidence base.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the likelihood of the annual level of water withdrawals exceeding 40 per cent. of the available national water resource in the future; and if she will make a statement. [84047]

Richard Benyon: The Environment Agency has done some recent work for DEFRA to explore future availability of water for abstraction in 2050 in England and Wales under a range of different scenarios of climate change, water demand and water flows required for the environment. This will be published in December, in parallel with the Water White Paper as part of the underpinning evidence base.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the annual water withdrawal as a proportion of available water resource nationally. [84048]

Richard Benyon: The Environment Agency's 2009 assessment found that for the majority of England, approximately 10% of available water resources are withdrawn for abstraction; for the South and East of England the proportion is just over 20%. Less than 5% of available water resources are withdrawn for abstraction in Wales.

Departmental Written Questions

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to answer question 74208 tabled by the hon. Member for Dundee East on 10 October 2011. [83832]

Richard Benyon: I answered the hon. Member's question on 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 944W.

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she intends to answer question 74898 tabled by the hon. Member for Angus on 12 October 2011 on London weighting and London living allowance. [83833]

Richard Benyon: I answered the hon. Member's question on 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 943W.

JUSTICE

Appeals

Mr Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 13 January 2011, Official Report, column 404W, on appeals, how many appeal cases were heard (a) with and (b) without legal representation in each category in 2010-11; and in what proportion of cases (i) with and (ii) without legal representation the original ruling was upheld. [84642]

Mr Djanogly: It has not been possible to collate the number of cases heard and the proportion of cases upheld within the time available. However, I will write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy in the Library of the House.

Ashfield Prison: Reoffenders

Damian Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many people who participated in the project run by 2nd Chance at HM Prison Ashfield reoffended following release; what proportion of the total number of participants this represents; and what the average reoffending rate for people who have served a sentence at HM Prison Ashfield was in the latest period for which figures are available. [84749]

Mr Blunt: The reoffending data MOJ produces do not identify offenders who participated in a project run by 2nd Chance. Therefore reoffending rates cannot be calculated for these offenders.

The following table shows the proven reoffending rates for adults (aged 18 or over) and juveniles (aged 10 to 17) who reoffended within one year of being released from HM prison Ashfield between January and December 2009.

		Number of offenders	Reoffending rate (percentage)
Adults	Sentence less than 12 months	40	65.0
	Sentence of 12 months or more juveniles	53	54.7
Juveniles		334	72.5

Proven reoffending is defined as any offence committed in a one year follow-up period and receiving a court conviction, caution, reprimand or warning in the one year follow up. Following this one year period, a further six months is allowed for cases to progress through the courts.

Birmingham Prison

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what expenditure has been incurred by his Department on new locks at HM Prison Birmingham since G4S took over the running of that prison. [84328]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice has not incurred expenditure on new locks at HM Birmingham since G4S took over the running of that prison.

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the cost was to (a) his Department and (b) the National Offender Management Service of preparing for HM Prison Birmingham to be operated by G4S. [84332]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice does not hold the requested information for the individual competitions for the five establishments (HMP Birmingham, HMP Buckley Hall, HMP Doncaster, HMP Featherstone 2, and HMP Wellingborough), as these competitions were managed as one programme to ensure the most efficient use of resources. I am able to provide actual and estimated aggregated costs for these five prisons as follows.

The costs supplied as follows are the most accurate that we can provide. Staff costs are based upon the person-hours that have been charged to the project for budget purposes. Generally, neither the Ministry of Justice nor NOMS implement time sheets. Therefore, it is not possible to attribute costs to the project for the actual hours worked, as this information is not known.

The costs of all contracts included in the 'other costs' category are actual costs.

All costs are given to two significant figures.

(A) For their contribution to the work on the competitions for the five prisons listed above, we estimate the combined spending of Ministry of Justice Procurement and Ministry of Justice ICT to be:

(i) £750,000 on staff;

(ii) £0 on travel and subsistence; and

(iii) £1,600,000 on other costs

(B) The overall agreed value of the Public Sector Bids Unit/Business Development Unit for prison competitions was £1,100,000. It is not possible to provide details of actual spending for the reasons described in my earlier response of 17 October 2011, Official Report, column 669W.

(C) For their contribution to the work on the competitions for the five prisons, we estimate that the combined spending of NOMS Business and Service Development Group, NOMS ICT and Estates is:

(i) £830,000 on staff;

(ii) £86,000 on travel and subsistence; and

(iii) £800,000 on other costs.

Operational input to supplier dialogue and evaluation phase have been excluded from these costs for Estates.

Chelmsford Prison: Foreign Nationals

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many foreign nationals remained at Chelmsford Prison after completing their prison sentences in each of the last five years; for what length of time; at what cost to the public purse in each year; and if he will make a statement. [83270]

Damian Green: I have been asked to reply.

Establishing how many foreign national offenders in the last five years remained at HMP Chelmsford under immigration detention beyond the end of their custodial sentence and the length of time they were detained would require cross referencing a large volume of electronic records and this would incur a disproportionate cost.

It costs the UK Border Agency £102 per night to keep an individual in immigration detention.

Courts: Security

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many complaints HM Courts and Tribunals Service have received on the conduct of security staff contracted from MITIE in the last 12 months. [82953]

Mr Djanogly: Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals Service (HMCTS) records all complaints and is able to identify which of these complaints relate to staff conduct. However, it is not possible to identify how many of these complaints are about MITIE security staff within the cost threshold. HMCTS uses MITIE security staff at approximately 500 venues and would have to examine the complaints for each of these venues to establish how many were about security staff.

HMCTS investigates all complaints made about the conduct of staff. Our contracts with MITIE specify the requirements for security staff employed on the contract, and HMCTS refers all complaints against MITIE contracted staff to MITIE for joint investigation at the location in which the incident took place. However, there is no operational requirement for MITIE to record the number of complaints made against them either regionally or centrally, so it is not possible to identify how many complaints have been reported at each individual court and hearing centre within the cost threshold.

Crown Lands and Estates: Cornwall

Dan Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice from which category of Crown land fee simple owners in Cornwall hold title to their properties. [85021]

Mr Djanogly: The Crown is the ultimate owner of all land in England and Wales, including Cornwall. The owner of a fee simple holds the land of his or her feudal lord by the tenure of free and common socage for an estate in fee simple. For most purposes the identity of the relevant lord is immaterial as directly or indirectly the land will be held of the Crown. If a freehold estate in land determines, so that the land escheats, it will pass, depending on its location, to the Crown, the Duchy of Lancaster or the Duchy of Cornwall. The possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall and the Duchy of Lancaster are considered to be held of the Crown even when the Duchy is vested in the Crown.

Cybercrime: Sentencing

Steve Rotheram: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what plans his Department has to extend the imprisonment term for people found guilty of breaching section 127(3) of the Communications Act 2003. [82032]

Mr Vaizey: I have been asked to reply.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) have no plans to extend the imprisonment term for people found guilty of breaching section 127(3) of the Communications Act 2003.

Departmental Internet

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the total cost to the public purse was of developing the You be the Judge interactive facility on his Department's website. [84410]

Mr Blunt: The total cost of developing You be the Judge was £56,403.60 (excl. VAT) which was incurred for script-writing and production of the videos. Web design and coding were undertaken in-house by MOJ staff at no extra cost.

Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83915]

Mr Djanogly: The Ministry of Justice does not have a set policy on the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review but will normally seek an order for costs where successful on the claim. The majority of litigants are legally aided and in relation to them an order is not enforced unless there is a change in financial circumstances. Even where funds are potentially available, Departments make an assessment on a case by case basis as to whether securing payment will be cost-effective when the costs of enforcement are taken into account.

Magistrates Courts: Wales

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many magistrates' courts premises in Wales he expects to make available for (a) sale, (b) rent and (c) uses other than as court houses. [84717]

Mr Djanogly: 11 magistrates courts premises in Wales have been identified as being surplus. All will be sold for alternative usage.

Malicious Communications Act 1988

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions for offences under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 there have been; and what estimate his Department has made of the proportion of such prosecutions and convictions which relate to messages sent via the internet. [84751]

Mr Blunt: The number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts for offences under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 in England and Wales, from 2006-10 (latest available) can be viewed in the following table.

Information held on the Ministry of Justice court proceedings database does not identify those proceedings under the Malicious Communications Act 1988 which specifically relate to messages sent via the internet.

Annual court proceedings data for 2011 are planned for publication in spring 2012.

Number of defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts and found guilty at all courts under the Malicious Communications Act 1988, England and Wales, 2006-10[1, 2, 3]

	2006		2007		2008		2009		2010
Malicious Communications Act 1988	182	121	251	166	329	245	507	396	694	498

[1] The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences, it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

[3] Excludes data for Cardiff magistrates court for April, July and August 2008.

Offenders: Community Care

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) violent criminals, (b) sex offenders and (c) sex offenders with convictions relating to paedophilia have been released into the community from mental health facilities in each of the last five years; and what proportion have subsequently reoffended in each such year. [84416]

Mr Blunt: The Mental Health Act 1983 makes provision for mentally disordered offenders convicted of any imprisonable offence except murder to be sent to hospital for treatment for their mental disorder as an alternative to custody. The higher courts may also impose a restriction order, if this is necessary for the protection of the public from serious harm.

All offenders sentenced to a hospital order have the right to have their detention reviewed by an independent tribunal. In addition, the Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr Clarke), may discharge "restricted patients", while "unrestricted patients" may be discharged, if their responsible clinician considers that they no longer require treatment in hospital.

Figures on the number of unrestricted patients discharged from hospital are not collated centrally. The following table sets out the number of all restricted patients discharged from hospital in each of the past five years:

Discharges from hospital

	Number
2006	375
2007	381
2008	416
2009	413
2010	509

Systems do not enable these figures to be broken down into the categories requested.

Among all restricted patients who were discharged from hospital for the first time between 1999 and 2007, 5.8% were reconvicted within two years of their discharge.

Figures on reconviction rates for unrestricted patients are not collated centrally.

Prior to discharge from hospital, patients will have increasing access to the community by means of community leave. This is an important part of rehabilitation. No restricted patient may access the community without the permission of the Secretary of State. The Secretary of State will grant permission only after a thorough risk assessment based on the clinical evidence available in each case.

Perjury: International Co-operation

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what assessment he has made of the requirements of Chapter 2 Article 5 Section 3 of the United Nations Convention in respect of measures to prevent perjury by experts in secret court hearings. [82040]

Mr Djanogly: Article 5(3) of the United Nations convention against corruption requires state parties to:

"endeavour to periodically evaluate relevant legal instruments and administrative measures with a view to determining their adequacy to prevent and fight corruption."

The offences in the Bribery Act 2010, which came into force on 1 July 2011, are capable of applying to conduct in connection with court proceedings which amounts to bribery. There are, in addition, a number of offences which deal specifically with perjury, set out, for example, in the Perjury Act 1911. Together with judicial oversight and the appeals process the Government consider these measures are adequate to deal with both perjury and bribery which arise in court proceedings.

Prison Accommodation

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 578W, on prison accommodation (1) if he will provide a breakdown on the new prisons accommodation which became available between 29 July and 18 November 2011; [84560]

(2) what proportion of the increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells between 29 July and 18 November 2011 was in (a) privately and (b) publicly run prisons. [84561]

Mr Blunt: The answer that I provided the right hon. Member on 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 578W, identified that between Friday 29 July and Friday 18 November 2011 338 places were delivered as a result of new prison accommodation becoming available and 630 places were delivered as a result of an increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells.

The 338 new places were delivered at HMP Erlestoke (124 places) and HMP Stocken (214 places).

Of the 630 places delivered as a result of an increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells, 117 places were delivered in privately run prisons, with the remaining 513 places delivered in publicly run prisons. These constituted contingency accommodation in response to population pressure following widespread public disorder in August, the majority of which have since been de-activated.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much increased operational capacity in each prison in England and Wales was due to (a) new prison accommodation becoming available, (b) existing accommodation being returned to use, (c) an increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells and (d) other measures between 1 May 2010 and 31 July 2011. [84640]

Mr Blunt: Between 30 April 2010 and 29 July 2011 the operational capacity of the total prison estate increased by a net 766 places, comprising 4,572 increases and 3,806 decreases. The following table breaks down the increases in accommodation by (a) new prison accommodation becoming available, (b) existing accommodation being returned to use, (c) an increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells and (d) other measures

(a) new prison accommodation becoming available	2,329
(b) existing accommodation being returned to use	1,044
(c) an increase in multiple occupancy of prison cells	203
(d) other measures (these are places returning to use following change of function and those places reclaimed for use as prisoner accommodation)	996
Total	4,572

The table does not reflect those places that have been taken out of use during this period. Places can be taken out of use for a number of reasons. These include the operational closures of HMPs Ashwell, Lancaster Castle and Morton Hall (which later returned to use as an immigration removal centre). Other decreases are the result of accommodation being taken out of use for essential maintenance or refurbishment, these include places taken out of use following prisoner damage.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what existing unused prison accommodation was brought back into use in each prison in each month from 1 May 2010 to 1 November 2011. [84641]

Mr Blunt: The following table identifies that between Friday 30 April 2010 and Friday 28 October 2011 1,828 places were delivered as a result of existing accommodation returning to use.

The places identified in the table include places returning to use following maintenance or refurbishment and places returning to use following prisoner damage.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Existing accommodation being returned to use between Friday 30 April 2010 and Friday 28 October 2011

Prison Service: Convictions

Mark Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many employees of HM Prison Service have criminal convictions. [83873]

Mr Blunt: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) does not hold a central record of employees of HM Prison Service that have received criminal convictions.

If serving members of staff receive a criminal conviction, they will be subject to potential disciplinary action. Depending on the nature of the conviction, this could lead to dismissal, including summary dismissal. This would be in addition to any criminal sanctions imposed by the courts.

Prior to beginning employment with NOMS, applicants must declare criminal convictions and consent to additional background checks where appropriate. Previous criminal convictions are not an automatic disbar to employment with NOMS. Each case is considered on its merits.

Prison Service: Wales

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many people the Prison Service employed in Wales in each of the last five years; [84718]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people expected to be employed by the Prison Service in Wales in each of the next five years. [84719]

Mr Blunt: Information on the full-time equivalent number of staff employed within Welsh Prison Service establishments and the National Offender Management Service Headquarters (NOMS HQ) based in Wales between 2007 and 2011 is contained in the following table. The figures include staff employed by the contractor that manages HMP Parc.

HM Prison Service and NOMS HQ staff in Wales—31 March 2007 to 2011

As at 31 March each year	Full-time equivalent staff in post
2007	1,779
2008	2,024
2009	2,198
2010	2,150
2011	1,621

Note:
In June 2010 approximately 640 staff at the NOMS National Shared Service Centre transferred to the central Ministry of Justice.

Detailed plans of staffing within Wales over the next five years are not available. The three public sector prisons in Wales have submitted staffing plans that indicate a reduction in funded posts compared to April 2011 of 19 by April 2012, 30 by April 2013 and 29 by April 2014. These plans are subject to adjustment in line with budgetary constraints. Information on the projected fall in staff within NOMS HQ in Wales is not available but will contribute to the need to reduce costs across NOMS HQ. No staffing projections have been provided by the contractor for HMP Parc.

Prisoners: Compensation

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much compensation was paid to prisoners in each of the last five years in each claim category; and to how many cases such claims related in each such year. [84419]

Mr Blunt: Prisoners may seek compensation through internal complaints procedures, correspondence, civil litigation and through the parliamentary and prison and probation ombudsman. To provide the information requested would require a trawl through thousands of individual complaint/letters received at each prison site and in MOJ headquarters. This could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Prisons: Employment

Mark Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisoners at HM Prison (a) Preston and (b) Kirkham were receiving paid employment of more than (i) £10, (ii) £25 and (iii) £50 per week in the latest period for which figures are available. [83872]

Mr Blunt: As of 28 November 2011, 158 prisoners at Preston were earning £10 or more per week. No prisoners at Preston were earning more than £25 per week. 527 prisoners at Kirkham were earning £10 or more but less than £25, 64 were earning £25 or more but less than £50, and 39 were earning £50 or more. All of those prisoners earning over £25 per week are either employed in private industry within the prison or in full-time employment in the community.

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with reference to Prison Service Instruction 48/2011, (1) how much revenue has been raised in respect of the levy charges on prisoner earnings under remittance notices labelled Transfer of Prisoner Earnings Receipts to Victims and Witnesses Unit—Business Entity Code RB311; and how many prisoners are subject to the levy; [84406]

(2) how many employers have made payments into the GBS Re NOMS Agency account; which prisons such payments relate to; and how much was raised. [84407]

Mr Blunt: These figures are due to be published for the first time in April 2012. They are currently in preparation and have not yet been through the relevant production and quality assurance processes required prior to public release. I will write to my hon. Friend with the figures when they are published.

Prisons: Repairs and Maintenance

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what renovation, refurbishment and redecoration works in prisons have been cancelled or postponed since July 2011; and what the reason was in each case. [84639]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice does not hold a central record of all renovation, refurbishment and redecoration works undertaken across the prison estate. There may be a wide range of projects which are dealt with at a local level and the information requested can be collected only at a disproportionate cost.

Probation Service: Wales

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many people the probation service employed in Wales in each of the last five years; [84720]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people expected to be employed by the probation service in Wales in each of the next five years. [84721]

Mr Blunt: A snapshot of permanent probation service staff employed in Wales on 31 December in each of the last five years (2006-10) is provided in the following table. The latest published figures for 2011 have also been provided.

	Full-time equivalent
2006	1,350.97
2007	1,318.60
2008	1,332.67
2009	1,201.87
2010	1,095.43
2011 (at 30 September)	1,042.72

It is not possible to forecast staffing levels over the next five years, as the responsibility for resourcing levels lies with the individual probation trust. It is for them to take the necessary action at a local level to ensure they can deliver the required service within available resources.

Smoking: Motor Vehicles

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prosecutions for smoking in vehicles used for work have resulted in a conviction in each year since 2007. [84759]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice court proceedings database holds information on offences provided by the statutes under which proceedings are brought but not all the circumstances of each case. It is not possible to identify from offences under the Health Act 2006, "smoking in a smoke-free place", those instances where the offence was committed in a vehicle used for work.

Trials: Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice on how many occasions defendants have been found not guilty by a jury due to mental impairment attributable to post-traumatic stress disorder in the last five years. [84733]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice Court Proceedings Database holds information on offences provided by the statutes under which proceedings are brought but not all the circumstances of each case. It is therefore not possible to identify from these centrally held data whether the defendant has been found not guilty by a jury due to mental impairment attributable to post traumatic stress disorder.

The law provides for persons who are not responsible for their acts due to a 'disease of the mind' to be found not guilty by reason of insanity.

The number of defendants found not guilty by reason of insanity at the crown Court in England and Wales, from 2006 to 2010 (latest available) can be viewed in the following table.

Defendants found not guilty by reason of insanity at the crown Court, England and Wales, 2006-10[1,2]

	Not guilty by reason of insanity
2006	16
2007	10
2008	22

[1] The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Witnesses: Intimidation

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate he has made of the number of cases where a witness has been intimidated by prisoners on remand in each of the last five years. [84421]

Mr Blunt: This information is not collected centrally but it is clear that where intimidation occurs the impact can be serious. For that reason arrangements were put in place in September which enable the police, CPS, courts and prisons to work together to protect victims and witnesses from unwelcome contact where such a risk is identified.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Biofuels

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2011, Official Report, column 35W, on biofuels, whether his definition of stemwood corresponds to that used by the European Commission. [84147]

Gregory Barker: We are not aware of any officially-recognised definition of stemwood. For the purpose of my answer of 21 November, stemwood is considered as referring to the wood from the main stem of a tree; so excludes branches, leaves, stump and root but includes residues such as sawdust and offcuts from sawmill processing of stemwood.

Boilers: Government Assistance

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many households in St Helens South and Whiston constituency have replaced a boiler under the boiler scrappage scheme. [84661]

Gregory Barker: The boiler scrappage scheme's evaluation data were broken down into nine major demographical regions, not local constituencies. For the North West region 17,897 vouchers were issued, the second largest total for any region. This is 15.2% of the total number of installations, which was 118,108.

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether he has had any recent discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the future of the boiler scrappage scheme. [84662]

Gregory Barker: DECC Ministers and officials meet regularly with their counterparts in HM Treasury and other Departments to discuss a range of issues. As has been the case with successive administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such meetings.

Carbon Emissions

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the revenue that will be generated from the first sale of emission allowances to Carbon Reduction Commitment participants in spring 2012. [84399]

Gregory Barker: The Government's decision to remove revenue recycling from the CRC Energy Efficiency scheme was taken in order to clarify the price signal to participants and to support the public finances. The spending review 2010 policy costings document sets out the impact of the CRC Scheme on Government expenditure, which can be viewed at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/spend_sr2010_policycostings.htm

The allowance price has been set at £12/tCO_2 for the first year, and future years' prices will be published as part of the Budget process.

Annually managed expenditure (AME)

	£ million
2011-12	+716
2012-13	+731
2013-14	+995
2014-15	+1,020

The Department has not revised this estimate.

Civil Nuclear Constabulary: Arrests

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many arrests the Civil Nuclear Constabulary has made since May 2010; and how many of those arrests resulted in prosecutions. [84001]

Charles Hendry: The Civil Nuclear Constabulary has made 16 arrests since May 2010. All arrests were handed over to the relevant Home Office or Scottish police force for investigation and potential prosecution. After initial arrest, CNC involvement was limited to providing witness statements and the CNC does not keep records of the number of cases proceeding to prosecution.

Climate Change: Developing Countries

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what proportion of the long-term finance from the Government's International Climate Fund for developing countries is projected to be delivered through (a) his Department, (b) non-governmental organisations and (c) multilateral agencies. [85152]

Gregory Barker: £1 billion of the £2.9 billion International Climate Fund will come from the Department of Energy and Climate Change's budget. This funding will be delivered through others.

The International Climate Fund started in April 2011. Given we are only eight months through a four-year fund, we are still deciding on potential delivery partners. The choice of delivery partner will be based on maximising impact and ensuring value for money.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84193]

Gregory Barker: As at 1 December 2011, DECC had 20 professional communicators, working across a range of disciplines.

As of the same date, the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority had 17 professional communicators; the Civil Nuclear Police Authority had two part-time professional communicators; the Coal Authority had one professional communicator; and the Committee on Climate Change had two professional communicators.

The Committee on Radioactive Waste Management, the Fuel Poverty Advisory Group and the Nuclear Liabilities Financing Assurance Board did not have any professional communicators.

DECC has no executive agencies.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85080]

Gregory Barker: The Department's policy is that staff salaries are paid into their bank accounts.

An investigation as to whether each bank account relates to an individual or limited company would be at disproportionate cost. Without such an in depth investigation there is no evidence that any senior civil servants in the Department of Energy and Climate Change and its non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85049]

Gregory Barker: During the period 1 June 2011 to 30 November 2011 the Department received 227 named day questions. Of these 192 (83%) were answered on the day; the remaining 37 questions were all answered within five working days.

Dounreay

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the total capital cost was of the three reactors built at Dounreay; what the total output of electricity was over their lifespan; and what the average cost was per MWh. [84425]

Charles Hendry: The total capital cost of the three reactors at Dounreay, including ancillary plant, was in excess of £55 million; based on figures published in the 1960s. One of the reactors was a materials test reactor and generated no power during its operating life. The remaining two reactors generated a total of 9,835 GWh of electricity. The average cost per MWh could be calculated only at a disproportionate cost.

Electricity Generation

Ben Gummer: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will estimate the cost to the public purse of reverting to a pool system of electricity supply. [82304]

Charles Hendry: The UK operated under a pool system prior to privatisation, thereafter we moved to a system of bilateral contracting (NETA), in common with most other European counties. A reversion to a pool system would be costly, disruptive and would take years to implement. As an illustration, estimated costs of the transition from the pool to NETA are in the region of £700 million.

Electricity: Prices

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the average costs were per MWh of electricity generated from (a) coal, (b) gas and (c) nuclear in (i) 1981, (ii) 1990, (iii) 2000 and (iv) 2010 at current prices. [84423]

Gregory Barker: In recent years DECC has carried out analysis on generation costs to inform policy decisions. The following table shows estimates of the levelised cost of electricity generation from coal, gas and nuclear that have been published by HMG since 2006. These have been converted into 2011 prices using HMT deflators.

Please note that these costs from different sources are not directly comparable as assumptions behind the reference plant and operating environment have changed over time. For example the base case estimate in the 2006 Energy Review shown here does not include a carbon price, while the cost of carbon is included in more recent estimates by Mott MacDonald (2010) and PB (2011).

While DECC does not have generation cost estimates for UK plant prior to 2006 and we are unaware of any running series of UK levelised costs data, there are other sources of data. For example, the IEA/OECD produced levelised cost estimates for coal and nuclear plants commissioning in 1995. These are shown in the following table (converted in 2011 prices). Please note that these estimates are not directly comparable to the DECC published estimates in Table 1 as they are based on different reference technologies.

Energy Performance Certificates

Mr Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of properties that (a) meet the grade C energy performance certificate standard and (b) will meet the grade C energy performance certificate standard in each year from 2012 to 2015. [84095]

Gregory Barker: The Department for Communities and Local Government (DCLG) estimates, based on a sample survey of 16,150 dwellings, indicate that 3,095,000 dwellings have an EPC rating of C or above[1].

Our analysis suggests that the uptake of Green Deal plans could lead to an average of 60,000 dwellings in bands D-G being brought up to an EPC rating of C or above each year between 2013 and 2022.

Energy Supply

Mr Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether he has made a recent assessment of the energy security and national resilience implications of the current level of diversity of ownership within the UK's (a) nuclear power and (b) renewable energy industries; and if he will make a statement. [83548]

Charles Hendry: Our energy policy is to ensure diverse and competitive electricity and gas markets. In July, we published the White Paper on electricity market reform which will deliver secure, affordable electricity from a diverse mix of sources, including renewables, new nuclear, and fossil fuels—including carbon capture and storage.

The current nuclear fleet is owned by EDF Nuclear Generation (formerly British Energy) and the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority (NDA). Our policy to facilitate investment in new nuclear has led to three consortia (EDF, Horizon and Nugen) to come forward with plans to build new nuclear power in the UK to date. Renewables assets to generate electricity and heat can come forward at a variety of scales from the household level upwards and are owned by a wide variety of individuals and companies.

This level of different ownership adds to security of supply and national resilience, and Government welcome further investment from these and other players to meet the needs of a secure and affordable low carbon economy.

Energy: Conservation

Martin Caton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will issue guidance to town and parish councils on how they may assist in delivering (a) measures to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases, (b) greater energy efficiency and (c) local green energy projects. [83559]

Gregory Barker: I have asked the Committee on Climate Change to provide a report by the end of April 2012, to include a menu of options from which all local authorities can consider the actions they may take to reduce carbon emissions in their areas.

Government will complement this, working with local authorities to develop 'how to' guidance, bringing together knowledge, experience, and advice aimed at supporting all local authorities to achieve the objectives for cutting carbon emissions.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans his Department has to work with all those organisations that did not take early action under the Carbon Reduction Commitment to ensure that they adopt energy efficiency measures in future years of the scheme. [84397]

Gregory Barker: The Department welcomes the fact that so many companies and public sector organisations have taken clear action on energy management prior to the start of the CRC which was shown in the recently published performance league table.

The CRC combines financial, behavioural and reputational elements which will drive organisations to adopt energy efficiency measures in future years of the scheme. In addition, my Department is supporting the uptake of energy efficiency and low carbon measures through programmes such as the Renewable Heat Incentive and will provide further financial support through the Green Deal.

Energy: Meters

Neil Parish: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps he is taking to ensure small and medium-sized business can participate in delivering the smart metering roll-out programme. [83864]

Charles Hendry: The smart metering roll-out is expected to generate new business and employment opportunities both throughout the supply chain for the manufacture of the meters and for their installation and maintenance. There will be further potential generated by the provision of the communications technology which will underpin the operation of the meters.

Energy: Taxation

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what his most recent assessment is of the likelihood of his Department meeting its timetable for implementation of new energy company obligations in October 2012. [84922]

Gregory Barker: We remain on track for the legal framework and supporting guidance for the new energy company obligation to be in place by October 2012.

Fuel Poverty

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of households that have been lifted out of fuel poverty as a direct result of the (a) Community Energy Savings Programme, (b) Carbon Emissions Reduction Target and (c) Warm Front scheme. [84134]

Gregory Barker: Estimates of the number of households removed from fuel poverty as a result of the Community Energy Saving Programme (CESP), Carbon Emission Reduction Target (CERT), CERT extension and Warm Front scheme were published in the following relevant impact assessments and reports:

CESP:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/consultations/cesp/1_20090710121840_e_@@_cespia.pdf

http://www.ialibrary.bis.gov.uk/uploaded/1442-ia-warm-front-eligibility100311.pdf

CERT:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/11/about-us/Science/3149-estimating-effect-cert.pdf

CERT Extension:

http://ec.europa.eu/energy/efficiency/doc/uk_-_energy_efficiency_action_plan.pdf

CESP was estimated to remove around 20,000 households from fuel poverty by the end of the programme and beyond; Warm Front was estimated to remove around 50,000 households from fuel poverty from April 2011 to March 2013 and beyond; CERT was estimated to sustainably remove around 163,000 households from fuel poverty from 2008 to 2011; and under the CERT extension to the end of 2012 around 185,000 households were estimated to receive measures to provide a long-term solution to fuel poverty.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of households that will be lifted out of fuel poverty as a direct result of the Green Deal by 1 January 2016; and whether he has set a target in respect of the effects on fuel poverty of the Green Deal. [84135]

Gregory Barker: The consultation stage impact assessment for the Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation contains an estimate and discussion of the policy's fuel poverty impacts, which can be viewed at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/11/consultation/green-deal/3603-green-deal-eco-ia.pdf.

It is estimated that, by the end of 2022, 350,000 to 550,000 households will have been removed from fuel poverty as a result of the whole Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation package, compared to how many could have been in fuel poverty in the absence of the policy. No separate estimate has been made for the proportion attributable only to the Green Deal finance mechanism.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of households that will be lifted out of fuel poverty as a direct result of the affordable warmth element of the Energy Company Obligation (ECO) by 1 January 2016; and whether he has set a target in respect of the effects on fuel poverty of the ECO. [84136]

Gregory Barker: The consultation stage impact assessment for the Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation contains an estimate and discussion of the policy's fuel poverty impacts, which can be viewed at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/11/consultation/green-deal/3603-green-deal-eco-ia.pdf

It is estimated that, by the end of 2022, 350,000 to 550,000 households will have been removed from fuel poverty as a result of the whole Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation package, compared to how many could have been in fuel poverty in the absence of the policy. No separate estimate has been made for the Affordable Warmth component of the package.

Fuel Poverty: North-east England

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of people in fuel poverty in (a) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency, (b) Middlesbrough borough, (c) Redcar and Cleveland borough, (d) Teesside and (e) the north-east in the last year for which figures are available. [81984]

Gregory Barker: Fuel poverty is measured at a household level. The most recent sub-regional data available are for 2009. The number of fuel poor households in each region in 2009 is shown in the following table:

	Number
(a) Middlesbrough South and East Cleveland constituency	9,000
(b) Middlesbrough local authority	14,200
(c) Redcar and Cleveland local authority	14,800
(e) The north-east	272,000

There is no published level of fuel poverty for Teesside. However, the combined number of fuel poor households in the local authorities of Middlesbrough, Redcar and Cleveland and Stockton on Tees (which approximately equate to the Teesside area) in 2009 was around 45,400.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions: International Co-operation

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether, in the absence of a successor to the Kyoto protocol, the Government are prepared to agree new emissions reductions targets that come into force before 2020. [85188]

Gregory Barker: The Government are committed to pushing for the EU to adopt a 30% emissions reduction target by 2020 on 1990 levels. Ongoing discussions in Durban on the Kyoto Protocol will not change this commitment.

Nationally, the Climate Change Act 2008 introduced a system of carbon budgets which provide legally binding limits on the amount of greenhouse gas emissions that may be produced over successive five year carbon budget, periods. The first three carbon budgets for 2008-12, 2013-17 and 2018-22 require emissions to be reduced by 23%, 29% and 35% respectively against 1990 levels. Should the EU adopt a 30% reduction target, we will tighten our legislated carbon budgets accordingly.

Heating Oil

Dan Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans he has to encourage households that use heating oil to switch to less carbon intensive fuels. [84613]

Charles Hendry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Heeley (Meg Munn) on 28 November 2011, Official Report, column 659-60W.

Oil and Gas: Prices

David Mowat: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate his Department used for the price of (a) oil and (b) gas in (i) 2020 and (ii) 2030 to establish the baseline scenario in the electricity market reform White Paper. [82355]

Charles Hendry: The impact assessment (IA) accompanying the electricity market reform (EMR) White Paper provides details on the fossil fuel price assumptions used in establishing the EMR baseline. These assumptions are based on DECC's 2010 updated energy projections. In the central case, for years 2020 and 2030, the estimates are shown in the following table:

	2020	2030
Oil ($/bbl)	81.8	92
Gas (p/therm)	68.5	76.1

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/11/policy-legislation/EMR/2180-emr-impact-assessment.pdf

In addition, on 23 November 2011, DECC published its updated assessment of the impact of energy and climate change policies on energy prices and bills. Further information can be found at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/assets/decc/11/about-us/economics-social-research/3593-estimated-impacts-of-our-policies-on-energy-prices.pdf

Oil: Carbon Emissions

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what information his Department holds on the amount of carbon dioxide emissions arising from the extraction and combustion of a barrel of (a) Angolan crude oil, (b) Nigerian crude oil, (c) Venezuelan crude oil and (d) oil from Canadian tar sands. [84917]

Charles Hendry: While the Department does not hold such information, the European Commission has commissioned various studies which estimate values associated with particular grades of crude oil so as to inform the implementation of the fuel quality directive.

Emissions can vary according to a range of factors, including the relative 'heaviness' of crude oil sources (countries often produce more than one grade of crude), the technology employed in processing and refining the crude and the amount of associated gas flaring.

Renewable Energy: Feed-in Tariffs

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) how many Housing Revenue Account tenanted properties have feed-in tariff installations in the UK; [84392]

(2) how many Housing Revenue Account tenanted properties have feed-in tariff solar photovoltaic installations in the UK. [84393]

Gregory Barker: Most feed-in tariffs (FITs) installations on housing revenue account tenanted properties are solar photovoltaic (PV), so the same answer applies to both questions asked.

This information is not available in the form requested.

However, latest available Ofgem data show that 19.6% of all solar PV FITs payments are made to a generator or a nominated recipient for more than one PV installation, i.e. the single entity is in receipt of payment for more than one FIT installation. This "multi-installation" category includes social housing projects and other offers (such as commercial rent-a-roof schemes) where the occupant benefits from the electricity produced but is not in receipt of the FITs payment.

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether the timetable set by his Department for implementation of the recently announced changes to feed-in tariffs conform with Cabinet Office best practice guidelines on the timetables for the introduction, removal and amendment of regulations. [84918]

Gregory Barker: This consultation period is shorter than that recommended in the code of practice on consultation for most standard consultations, but does conform with the provisions made in the code of practice for certain consultations to be held over shorter periods. The Government consider that a shorter period (eight weeks) for the consultation on solar photovoltaic tariffs is justified given the small number of issues covered by the consultation and the urgency of the budgetary risk it is focused on addressing; and that the eight-week period is consistent with the code of practice on consultation.

Following the close of the consultation on 23 December 2011, and subject to the representations received and due parliamentary process, changes will be implemented on 1 April 2012.

Renewable Energy: Heating

Dan Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with representatives of the Oil Firing Technical Association on the inclusion of bioliquids in the Renewable Heat Incentive. [84614]

Charles Hendry: Representatives of the Oil Firing Technical Association have been talking regularly to my officials. They have provided useful evidence on the costs, deployability and sustainability of the renewable heating oil blend which we are considering as part of developing the second phase of the Renewable Heat Incentive scheme.

Scottish Government

Jim McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when officials of his Department last met officials of the Scottish Government to discuss fuel poverty. [84699]

Gregory Barker: My officials work closely with their colleagues in the Scottish Government on this important issue. Their most recent policy meeting was on 3 October to discuss the Green Deal, the Energy Company Obligation and Fuel Poverty. Officials have also met at a number of recent Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation consultation events.

Solar Power

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what talks his Department has had with banks regarding loans held by companies engaged in solar panel installation. [84921]

Gregory Barker: DECC engages regularly with the finance community, including banks, and the feed-in tariff team have met with a very broad range of banks from UK high street to large international banks while developing the comprehensive review of the feed-in tariffs scheme.

Solar Power: Feed-in Tariffs

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what methodology he used to determine the figures for a return on investment for solar photovoltaic tariffs set at the proposed rate. [82245]

Gregory Barker: The DECC FITs model calculates the generation tariff necessary to deliver an intended return on capital for a well-sited solar photovoltaic (PV) installation in any given tariff band. The tariff calculations are based on a reference installation in each tariff band with a defined set of characteristics. The tariff is set at a level that equalises all costs and revenues of solar photovoltaic systems over its lifetime, after applying a 4.5% to 5% return on upfront capital. A note setting out the methodology in more detail will be placed in the Library of the House.

Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether (a) his Department or (b) Ofgem collect information on the number of solar photovoltaic panels installed under the feed-in tariff by (i) British Gas, (ii) EDF Energy, (iii) E.on, (iv) NPower, (v) Scottish Power and (vi) Scottish and Southern Energy; and if he will place a copy of any such information in the Library. [83416]

Gregory Barker: This information is not collected by the Department nor by Ofgem.

Water: Meters

Neil Parish: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what consideration he has given to ensuring flexibility in his planned smart meter procurement to allow the later addition of smart water metering. [84278]

Gregory Barker: Our recent consultation document[1] on the Data and Communications Company (DCC) set out proposals for the provision of value-added services in future, which could include water metering. We are currently analysing responses to this consultation and are conducting procurements for the provision of data and communications services, which will enable us to explore the cost of different levels of functionality and capacity, for smart energy metering and other purposes.

We have also made clear our intention that the enduring technical solution will employ open standards and protocols allowing the integration of other equipment, potentially including smart water meters.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Afghanistan: Females

Mrs Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the government of Afghanistan on the number of Afghan women attending the Bonn conference; and if he will make a statement. [84257]

Alistair Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the right hon. and learned Member for Camberwell and Peckham (Ms Harman) on 28 November 2011, Official Report, column 675W.

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will include a section on developments in gender equality and the involvement of women in his monthly reports to Parliament on Afghanistan. [84963]

Alistair Burt: The Afghanistan Monthly Report to Parliament covers progress across all relevant areas each month. We include updates on gender equality and the involvement of women when appropriate.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure there is adequate discussion on women's rights in Afghanistan at the Bonn Conference. [84974]

Alistair Burt: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 28 November 2011, Official Report, columns 674-675W.

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effects of the decision to withdraw the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team from Afghanistan. [84946]

Alistair Burt: The Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team (PRT) remains focused on strengthening Helmand's governance and development, working closely with ISAF to support Afghan provincial and district authorities. We will reduce staff numbers gradually leading up to the end of 2014 and this will be done in a responsible fashion. This is appropriate as the role of the PRT continues to evolve away from direct delivery of services to increased support to the local Afghan Government, as the latter's capacity for independent delivery continues.

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the decision was taken to withdraw the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team from Afghanistan in line with the timetable set out for the withdrawal of combat troops; and which (a) Ministers and (b) officials were involved. [84947]

Alistair Burt: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond (Yorks) (Mr Hague), agreed in June, after consultation with cross-Whitehall officials, that the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team should close by the end of 2014, the same point by which the Prime Minister has made clear that UK troops will no longer be serving in a combat role, or in significant numbers, in Afghanistan.

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether there will be any conditions attached to the withdrawal of the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team from Afghanistan. [84948]

Alistair Burt: We are confident that the end of 2014 represents a realistic and achievable drawdown date for the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team, as the capacity of the Afghan Government for direct delivery of services and maintaining security increases. It is in line with the timescale agreed between ISAF and the Afghan Government for drawdown of all Provincial Reconstruction Teams across Afghanistan. Progress will be subject to regular review of conditions on the ground.

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the decision to withdraw the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team from Afghanistan in line with the timetable set out for the withdrawal of combat troops was discussed within the National Security Council; and on what dates these discussions took place. [84949]

Alistair Burt: The decision to drawdown the Helmand Provincial Reconstruction Team was not discussed within the National Security Council.

Afghanistan: USA

Mark Menzies: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Afghanistan on the decision of the Loya Jirga on the Strategic Partnership Agreement with America; and if he will make a statement. [84775]

Alistair Burt: Our ambassador in Kabul discussed the outcomes of the Traditional Loya Jirga with Afghan National Security Advisor Spanta and Defence Minister Wardak on 22 November 2011. I expect to discuss this further with Afghan Foreign Minister Rassoul at the Bonn conference on 5 December 2011.

Armed Forces: Children

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to assist child soldiers who have been released from service. [84912]

Mr Bellingham: Britain is helping to assist the rehabilitation and reintegration of child soldiers. We do this indirectly, by funding organisations with the necessary expertise to provide children with the specialist care and approaches that they need to reintegrate into society.

For example, in 2010, the Department for International Development (DFID) funded a £2 million UNICEF project to help discharge and rehabilitate members of the Maoist Army in Nepal, approximately 3,000 of whom had been recruited as children. In the aftermath of the 2008-09 conflict in Gaza, DFID funded projects in 2009-10 which provided psychosocial support to almost 10,000 children and care-givers, and cleared unexploded ordnance at 20 schools, allowing 220,000 children to return to school.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Ugandan Government on the use of child soldiers by the National Liberation Army. [84913]

Mr Bellingham: The British high commission in Kampala is in close and regular contact with the Ugandan Government concerning the full range of conflict issues affecting that country. The Lord's Resistance Army (LRA) in particular poses the greatest threat to children in the region, and is responsible for numerous offences against children, including forced recruitment and acts of sexual violence.

The British Government remain committed to helping the victims of the LRA and to tackling the root causes of the conflict. This includes allocating £16 million of funding to help young and vulnerable individuals as part of a wider programme in Northern Uganda, and a contribution of US$35 million towards a World Bank led effort to support the demobilisation and reintegration of ex-combatants in the greater Great Lakes region of Central Africa.

The Allied Democratic Force/National Army for the Liberation of Uganda (ADF/NALU), which operates largely in the east of the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC), is also known to commit sporadic offences against children. Jamil Mukulu, the head of the ADF/NALU, is subject to sanctions under the United Nations regime applied to the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government have any diplomatic relations with countries in which child soldiers operate. [84914]

Mr Bellingham: Britain maintains diplomatic relations with the vast majority of countries worldwide. Child soldiers are present in several of those countries. We believe that maintaining diplomatic relations allows us to engage more effectively on the issue of child soldiers.

The UN, which helps to lead the international response to the issue of child soldiers, does not implicate countries as violators of children's rights. Rather it identifies and lists specific parties to a conflict which are responsible for grave violations against children.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the number of child soldiers deployed around the world. [84915]

Mr Bellingham: It is not possible to give a reliable estimate of the number of child soldiers. There are several estimates in use, ranging from 150,000 to 300,000. The reasons for this wide estimate include foremost the lack of easy access to armed groups, which prevents reliable reporting. Also, the nature of child recruitment is frequently informal, and loose associations with armed groups, such as children being used for intelligence gathering roles, are particularly difficult to document.

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking with his international counterparts to end the practice of using child soldiers. [84916]

Mr Bellingham: Britain is committed to ending the recruitment and deployment of child soldiers. We apply diplomatic pressure to offending governments and armed groups, as well as funding projects to help protect and rehabilitate vulnerable children. Britain is also a member of the UN Working Group on Children and Armed Conflict, which helps to lead the international response to the issue of child soldiers. This includes pressing offenders to enter into concrete action plans with the UN to verify and release any child soldiers associated with them.

British Overseas Territories: Biodiversity

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs on including in the Overseas Territories White Paper a target to halt overall loss of biodiversity by 2020 in all British overseas territories. [84035]

Mr Bellingham: The White Paper on the Overseas Territories will be published in 2012. There is currently a public consultation under way, including through a web-based platform to gather views on the Government's strategy towards the Overseas Territories, as announced by the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond (Yorks) (Mr Hague), on 14 September. Work is also under way across Whitehall to consider how each Government Department can contribute to delivery of the strategy. The Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs is engaged in this process, but no specific decisions have yet been taken on the structure or content of the White Paper.

British Virgin Islands: Elections

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date the Governor of the British Virgin Islands discussed his invitation of election observers to observe elections in the territory with (a) the Cabinet and (b) the Leader of the Opposition of the British Virgin Islands; and on what date the Governor arranged for invitations for observers to be extended. [84482]

Mr Bellingham: The Governor discussed the proposal to invite election observers during Cabinet meetings on 19 and 26 October. Letters of invitation were sent to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association and to the Secretary-General of the Caribbean Community (CARICOM) on 27 October. The Governor discussed the initiative with the Leader of the Opposition on 31 October, in advance of the issue of a press release.

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the invitation to the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States to observe elections in the British Virgin Islands in 1995 was at the initiative of the (a) government and (b) Governor of the territory; and who extended the invitation. [84483]

Mr Bellingham: The information requested is not readily available to either the Foreign and Commonwealth Office or the Governor's Office in Tortola.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84172]

Mr Lidington: As of October 2011, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's communications directorate had 93 members of staff. A headcount is set out as follows. Headcount has reduced from 116 reported for 2009-10. There are also embedded communications staff within directorates and staff overseas with a communications remit, but details of these are not available except at disproportionate cost.

Discipline	Total
Internal communications	5
Digital/social media	17
Strategic communications	26
Corporate communications	14
Marketing	0
Media/press	28
Senior management	1
Support staff	2

A review of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's communications directorate has now been completed. Strategic communications responsibilities will fall to relevant policy directorates within the Department. Alongside other changes, it is planned to reduce communications directorate staffing to a maximum of 69 by April 2012.

The British Council's centralised communications function was staffed as follows in November 2011. There are also staff overseas with a communications remit, but details of these are not available except at disproportionate cost.

Discipline	Total
Internal communications	4
Digital/social media	3
Strategic communications	0
Corporate communications	2

Departmental Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83913]

Mr Lidington: It is our policy to seek an order for the recovery of costs against applicants for judicial review whose applications fail. However under the Civil Procedure Rules the court has a discretion as to whether costs will be awarded against an unsuccessful party. In principle we will seek to enforce an order for costs against an unsuccessful applicant. However there may be legal constraints against recovery from the Legal Services Commission against an applicant who is in receipt of Legal Aid. In addition, in privately funded cases there may be practical constraints, for example where the costs to be recovered are minimal and the costs of enforcement are disproportionate.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84171]

Mr Bellingham: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not maintain a central record of all events and receptions hosted by the Department and so the information requested can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84242]

Mr Lidington: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) has not outsourced any new services centrally in the last five years, although it continues to manage those contracts where services have been outsourced outside of the time frame of this question.

Procurement responsibilities are devolved to directorates in the UK and our network of posts. Information on all outsourcing activities is not held centrally in the UK and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85060]

Mr Lidington: The percentage of questions answered within five sitting days was as follows:

2011	Percentage of questions answered
May	89
June	100
July	100
August	100
September	100
October	98

Foreign Relations: Education

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department has any programme in place to educate children on the UK's foreign relations. [84584]

Mr Lidington: While staff are free to make individual arrangements to speak to schools and children's groups, no central programme exists.

Iraq: Human Trafficking

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations he has made to the Government of Iraq on (a) tackling trafficking for sexual exploitation and (b) providing support to victims of human trafficking. [83997]

Alistair Burt: We have not made specific representations to the Government of Iraq on human trafficking, however, the UK continues to co-ordinate closely with the international community in Iraq on this issue. UK officials regularly attend a 'Trafficking in Persons' working group in Baghdad along with officials from the Government of Iraq and international partners. The group has been looking at a draft Iraqi law on Trafficking in Persons, which is expected to be passed in the near future.

More generally, we continue to monitor closely the situation facing women in Iraq. Some of the most vulnerable are those who have been victims of trafficking for sexual exploitation. In the Kurdistan region of Iraq, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is funding a project providing training for staff working in four shelters which provide protection to vulnerable women, including those who are victims of trafficking.

Israel: OECD

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 1 December 2010, Official Report, column 830W and 16 June 2011, Official Report, column 906W, on Israel: OECD, on which date the OECD study team was (a) presented to and (b) debated by the Committee on Statistics. [84357]

Alistair Burt: The report of the OECD study team was presented to and discussed by the Committee on Statistics on 17 June 2011 and the recommendations were adopted.

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answers of 1 December 2010, Official Report, column 830W and 16 June 2011, Official Report, column 906W, on Israel: OECD, what subsequent steps have been taken to ensure Israeli macroeconomic data no longer include data relating to the Golan, East Jerusalem or the West Bank. [84358]

Alistair Burt: The Israeli Central Bureau of Statistics (CBS) confirmed, following the visit to Israel by members of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development's (OECD) Statistics Committee in summer 2011, that it will provide statistics that distinguish pre-1967 Israel and the post-1967 areas when required to do so. This confirmed a commitment made by the CBS at the time of the OECD accession review.

The impact on Israel's macroeconomic statistics of disaggregated data was assessed to be very small—less than 4% of GDP—and it was agreed that Israel would not need to provide disaggregated statistics for this. The impact was sufficiently larger for social issues, migration and employment, and it was agreed that in these areas, Israel should be asked to continue providing disaggregated statistics for any study carried out in these areas. Israeli statistics were assessed to have been of good quality and in line with international standards.

Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill 2010-12

Mr Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment (a) he and (b) officials in his Department have made of the potential effect of the provisions of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill on the UK's adherence to the Ruggie principles on business and human rights. [84643]

Mr Jeremy Browne: Following the UN Human Rights Council's June 2011 endorsement of the UN Guiding Principles on Business and Human Rights, in which the UK played an important role, the Government are fully committed to implementing those principles as part of a wider strategy on business and human rights. We do not believe that the reforms of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Bill are incompatible with this commitment. We believe that it will still be possible to bring claims against multinational companies once these reforms are implemented, but that meritorious claims will be resolved at a more proportional cost, while unnecessary and avoidable claims will be deterred from progressing to court.

Lord Ahmed

Mr MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the decision by the Pakistani authorities to declare Lord Ahmed of Rotherham persona non grata; and if he will make a statement. [84598]

Alistair Burt: We have not been contacted by the Pakistani authorities on this matter. Such a decision would be a matter for the Pakistani authorities.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84170]

Mr Jeremy Browne: No.

Turks and Caicos Islands: Elections

Mr Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date he expects elections to take place in the Turks and Caicos Islands; and if he will make a statement. [84873]

Mr Bellingham: I want to see a return to democratic government in the Turks and Caicos Islands as soon as the necessary reforms have been put in place. It remains my intention that the milestones set out in the written ministerial statement of 9 December 2010, Official Report, columns 40-41WS, should be met and elections held in 2012. I will keep the House informed of progress.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum: Finance

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many section 4 payment cards are being used by people residing in (a) Scotland, (b) England, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland. [84269]

Damian Green: The latest breakdown by country is:

(a) 194 in Scotland;

(b) 2,014 in England;

(c) 110 in Wales; and

(d) 26 in Northern Ireland.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which retailers participate in the section 4 payment card scheme; and what plans the UK Border Agency has to extend the (a) number and (b) range of participating retailers. [84270]

Damian Green: The main retailers participating in the payment card scheme are:

Asda;

Tesco;

Sainsbury's;

Morrisons;

The Co-Operative;

Boots; and Peacocks.

Additionally, a small number of independent outlets also participate in the scheme. Approximately 8,800 retail outlets across the UK accept the payment card.

Negotiations are currently under way to add the British Red Cross and the Salvation Army to the scheme. There are currently no other plans to extend the number of participating outlets.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in unspent credit has been recovered from section 4 payment cards in each month since the scheme was introduced. [84271]

Damian Green: The figures for each month since June 2010 (when the data began to be collected) are shown in the following table:

June	29,540
July	32,527
August	22,792
September	20,157
October	21,801
November	21,142
December	19,772
2011
January	13,012
February	11,212
March	12,550
April	10,014
May	9,442
June	8,784
July	7,155
August	6,672
September	6,248
October	6,520

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will consider the merits of increasing the weekly carry-over limit for the section 4 payment card. [84272]

Damian Green: There are currently no plans to increase the weekly carry-over limit of £5 per person, per week for single supported persons. Supported persons who have children can carry over an unlimited amount.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will assess the merits of extending the section 4 payment card scheme to include charity shops. [84273]

Damian Green: Talks are taking place with a view to adding the British Red Cross and the Salvation Army to the list of retail outlets where the card is accepted. We will consider adding other charity shops to the scheme on a case by case basis.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the UK Border Agency will bring forward proposals to allow users of the section 4 payment card to check card balances (a) online and (b) in-store at participating retailers. [84274]

Damian Green: There is already an automated 24-hour telephone service that enables payment card users to check their balance. There are no plans to extend this service.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much credit is allocated to section 4 payment cards for an individual with children. [84275]

Damian Green: £35.39 per week is allocated to all supported persons, including children. Additional credits can be added to the Azure card to supported persons with children. These include a £5 per week clothing allowance, a £5 per week allowance for children under one year of age and a £3 per week allowance for children between one and three years of age.

Civil Disorder

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what her policy is on reimbursement of costs to police authorities affected by the August 2011 public disorder. [71067]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 9 September 2011]: There is an established system of special grants in place to support forces where they face unexpected or exceptional costs.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many internal audits have taken place (a) in her Department and (b) in the non-departmental bodies for which her Department is responsible in the last 12 months; and if she will make a statement. [82542]

Damian Green: Between 1 October 2010 and 22 November 2011 the following audits have been delivered.

Area	Final report issued
Home Office core
Crime and Policing Group	8
Cross Cutting	2
Financial and Commercial Group	20
Human Resources	6
Strategy and Reform	1
NDPBs
Identity and Passport Service	7
Independent Police Complaints Commission	1
Independent Safeguarding Authority	7
National Policing Improvement Agency	11
Office for Security and Counter Terrorism	5
Office of the Immigration Services Commissioner	4
UK Border Agency	20
CRB	9
Total	114

We are able to include non-departmental public body (NDPB) data due to the fact that we provide audit services over a majority of the NDPBs. This would not be possible in other Departments where there are significant numbers of external bodies and/or internal audit services are outsourced. Specifically, as the internal audit services report to the agency/NDPB accounting officer, the Department internal audit services are not directly privy to them.

The data were extracted from our internal audit management information system which is used to track the progress of our audit plan during the year. The data are held securely on our corporate network. The Internal Audit Unit provide a shared service audit to a number of agencies and NDPBs within the Home Office Group, however the process for recording audit progress is consistent across all of them.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) her Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by her Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84245]

Damian Green: The following tables show the number of press officers and communications officers employed by the Department, its agencies and each non-departmental public body.

The figures show members of staff who are Government Communications Network (GCN) accredited, between the grades of assistant information officer and senior information officer (a-d).

Other positions with a communications remit (e) include staff who carry out a communications role within their job or who are not GCN accredited and are managers.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which services her Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84239]

Damian Green: The services which the Home Department, including its executive agencies, has outsourced in the past five years are as follows:

	Contractor	Outsourced service
2007	Tele performance	Identity and Passport Service; Service to manage contact via telephone and e-mail.
2008	Tele performance	Identity and Passport Service; Handling of Passport Validation Service.
2009	Steria	Identity and Passport Service Business Process Outsourcing; mail handling, cashiering, scanning, query handling and certain data verification
2009	CSC	Identity and Passport Service; Provision of ICT services
2011	Anne's Gate Property	Home Office; Messenger Services

Deportation: Pakistan

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been deported to Pakistan from (a) Pendle constituency, (b) East Lancashire and (c) the UK in each of the last 10 years. [84282]

Damian Green: In answering this question, I have taken deportation to mean removal.

1. The number of individuals removed to Pakistan since 1 January 2004 who were living in the Pendle constituency is 89.

2. The number of individuals removed to Pakistan since 1 January 2004 who were resident in East Lancashire (including Pendle) is 333.

3. The number of individuals removed to Pakistan since 1 January 2004 is 20,588

Figures prior to 2004 are not centrally held.

Figures quoted for parts 1 and 2 are management information which has been subject to internal quality checks.

Figures quoted for part 3 are taken from the "Immigration Statistics: July - September 2011" release, which is available from the Library of the House and from the Home Office's Science, Research and Statistics web pages at:

http://homeoffice.gov.uk/science-research/research-statistics/migration/migration-statistics1/

Domestic Violence

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women who were victims of domestic violence offences in 2010 had previously been a victim of domestic violence by another partner. [83696]

Lynne Featherstone: Latest available data from the 2008-09 British Crime Survey are provided in the following table showing the proportion of victims, aged 16 to 59, of partner abuse in the last 12 months who had been abused by two or more partners since the age of 16.

Adults aged 16-59 who were victims of partner abuse in the last year by number of abusive partners since the age of 16, by sex

Percentage

Notes:
1. Partner abuse includes non-physical abuse, threats, force, sexual assault and stalking.
2. Percentages include those who could not or did not wish to answer.

Entry Clearances: Overseas Students

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps she is taking to minimise the reduction in education export levels arising from the proposed changes to student visas. [84317]

Damian Green: The Government's fundamental reforms of student visas will tighten up the system, tackle abuse and ensure we continue to attract the brightest and the best students from across the world. No permanent limit has been placed on student visas.

Extradition: USA

Mr Raab: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the contribution of the Minister for Immigration to the debate of 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 191WH, on extradition, (1) how many people were extradited from the US to the UK in (a) each year between 2004 and 2010 and (b) 2011 to date; and how many such people were US nationals; [84077]

(2) how many people were extradited from the UK to the US in (a) each year between 2004 and 2010 and (b) 2011 to date; and how many such people were UK citizens. [84078]

Damian Green [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The following table provides the figures requested.

	Number of extraditions from the US to the UK under the 2003 Act	Number of extraditions from the US to the UK under the 1989 Act	Number of US nationals[2]
2004	2	2	n/k

2011[1]	4	0	2
Totals	39	3	5

[1] Figures for 2011 are up to 29 November 2011

For the purposes of the question, we have taken the "UK" as meaning England and Wales. Scotland deals with its own US cases—as did Northern Ireland until 1 April 2008.

The figures provided on the number of US citizens surrendered to the UK in the Westminster Hall debate on 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 191WH, were incorrect. The following figures have been updated in the light of the most recent available information about the nationality of persons extradited.

Information regarding the nationality of those extradited to the UK from the United States has not in the past been routinely recorded, though records have been kept since 2007. Between 2004 and 2006 there were nine extraditions from the US to the UK, however, we have no systematic record of the nationality of the persons extradited.

The following table provides the figures requested.

	Number of extraditions from the UK to the US under the 2003 Act	Number of extraditions from the UK to the US under the 1989 Act	Number of UK nationals[2]
2004	3	5	2
2005	8	4	6
2006	16	3	[2]10
2007	8	1	0
2008	6	0	2

[2] Inc. one US/UK dual national.
[3] Inc. one UK/Iran dual national.

For the purposes of the question, we have taken the "UK" as meaning England and Wales. Scotland deals with its own US cases—as did Northern Ireland until 1 April 2008.

Firearms

Mr Umunna: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many criminal damage cases recorded by the Metropolitan police have involved the use of firearms yet have not been recorded as a gun crime in (a) 2010 and (b) 2011 to date. [83847]

Nick Herbert: The requested information is not available centrally.

Fireworks: Crime

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to how many incidents involving fireworks police were called in (a) St Helens South and Whiston constituency, (b) Merseyside and (c) England in each of the last five years. [84658]

Nick Herbert: The information requested is not collected centrally by the Home Office. It is not possible to identify either incidents or offences relating to fireworks from the police recorded crime statistics collected and published by the Home Office.

Human Trafficking: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions she has had with Ministers in the Northern Ireland Executive and the government of Ireland on human trafficking. [84849]

Damian Green: The Minister of Justice for Northern Ireland, David Ford, is a member of the Inter-Departmental Ministerial Group which I chair to oversee the work of the UK Government on human trafficking. The group last met on 11 October 2011; the Minister for Justice was unable to attend. The group will meet again in April 2012.

Identity and Passport Service: Compensation

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money the Identity and Passport Service has refunded to customers in circumstances where agreed levels of service were not met in the last 12 months. [84709]

Damian Green: For the seven months ending 31 October 2011, the Identity and Passport Service did not meet agreed levels of services in 572 instances, resulting in refunds of £24,332 to its customers. Information for the previous five months is not readily available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Identity Cards

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the final cost in (a) compensation and (b) decommissioning costs for the identity card scheme. [84246]

Damian Green: The Identity and Passport Service Annual Report and Accounts 2010-11 reported that termination costs of the identity card scheme were £20,175. Within this total was £2,126 of contractual compensation payments to suppliers to the identity card scheme, the remaining £18,049 costs were associated with decommissioning the identity card scheme.

A breakdown of these costs is provided in the Identity and Passport Service Annual Report and Accounts 2010-11, an electronic version of which is available in the Identity and Passport Service section of the Home Office website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/agencies-public-bodies/ips/

Migration: EU Countries

Richard Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many non-British EU nationals are resident in the UK; and how many UK nationals are resident in EU countries outside the UK. [85033]

Mr Hurd: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to respond to your Parliamentary Question asking how many non-British EU nationals are resident in the UK; and how many UK nationals are resident in EU countries outside the UK (85033).

The most recent estimate of the number of non-British EU nationals who reside in the UK is 2,081,000 with a corresponding margin of error of +/- 62,000. This estimate, along with other published Population by Country of Birth and Nationality estimates, is based on the Annual Population Survey and relates to the 12 month period of April 2010 to March 2011. These can be found on the ONS website, table 2.1 & 2.2 at:

http://www.ons.gov.uk/ons/publications/re-reference-tables.html?edition=tcm%3A77-235204

The margin of error refers to the 95 per cent confidence interval and is a measure of the uncertainty associated with making inferences from a sample.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) does not collect information regarding UK nationals resident outside the UK. However, Eurostat publishes figures on population by citizenship for EU countries, these are available at:

http://epp.eurostat.ec.europa.eu/portal/page/portal/population/data/database

Police: Baton Rounds

Mr Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance is issued to police forces on the deployment of baton rounds; and how any such deployment is authorised. [81056]

Nick Herbert: The police no longer use baton rounds. They were replaced in June 2005 when the attenuating energy projectile was introduced into service. The attenuating energy projectile is an impact round and performs very differently from baton rounds.

Use of the attenuating energy projectile is regulated by the Home Office 'Code of Practice on the Police use of Firearms and Less Lethal Weapons' (2003).

The Association of Chief Police Officers' 'Manual of Guidance on the Management, Command and Deployment of Armed Officers' (2011) provides operational context to the code of practice. Guidance on the use of the attenuating energy projectile in public order situations is also provided by the Association of Chief Police Officers' 'Manual of Guidance on Keeping the Peace' (2010).

Both the code of practice and the Manual of Guidance on the Management, Command and Deployment of Armed Officers make it clear that deployment and use of the attenuating energy projectile is an operational matter for the chief constable of the relevant force area to authorise.

Police: Demonstrations

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent discussions she has had with police forces in England on the policing of (a) English Defence League and (b) British National party marches; and if she will make a statement. [69211]

Nick Herbert: The Home Office routinely discusses with the police issues which raise public, media and parliamentary interest, including marches by the English Defence League and the British National party.

Police: Finance

Mr Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment she has made of the potential savings to police budgets arising from (a) centralised procurement and (b) force collaboration in (i) 2011-12, (ii) 2012-13 and (iii) 2013-14. [78997]

Nick Herbert: The Government estimate that by end of March 2015 £200 million per annum of savings can be made from the procurement of non-IT goods and services via the Collaborative Police Procurement Programme (CPPP). To date, over £70 million has been delivered against these estimates for non-IT.

The Government have been clear that there is also potential for at least £180 million of savings per annum through ICT. At its simplest, it cannot be sensible for there to be some 2,000 IT systems across 43 forces, employing 5,000 staff.

The Government have established a programme within the Home Office to oversee the establishment of a police-led ICT company. A key objective of the ICT company will be to improve the value for money that the police service receives from its spend on ICT services.

A report from Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Constabulary, due in January 2012, will provide a comprehensive picture of the types of collaboration that exist, the barriers to collaboration and equally those factors that enable progress to be made in making savings and improving efficiency. The report will, for the first time, identify the savings that can be derived from collaborating across a range of different functions.

Repatriation: Expenditure

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much her Department spent on assisted voluntary return in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and what the (a) mean and (b) median cost per return was in each such year. [84767]

Damian Green: The Assisted Voluntary Returns programme (AVR) is made up of three schemes:

Voluntary Assisted Return and Reintegration Programme (VARRP);

Assisted Voluntary Returns of Irregular Migrants (AVRIM); and Assisted Voluntary Returns for Families and Children (AVRFC).

The AVR programme includes applying for travel documentation, flights, transport to the airport, assistance on departure, transits if applicable and transport from the arrival airport. It also includes reintegration support up to a maximum of £1,500 for VARRP, £2,000 for AVRFC and £1,000 for vulnerable AVRIM departures. Not all those who leave are eligible for, or indeed take advantage of, the reintegration assistance.

The UK Border Agency spent £4,325,272 on the programme in 2008-09 to return 4,558 people. A further £4,066,623 was spent from the European Refugee Fund.

In 2009-10, £11,935,519 was spent by the UK Border Agency to return 5,132 people. A further £3,974,777 was allocated by the European Refugee Fund.

In 2010-11, £5,763,551 was spent by the UK Border Agency to return 3,989 people. A further £5,090,793 was allocated by the European Refugee Fund.

European Refugee Fund data for 2009-10 and 2010-11 are yet to be audited and we are therefore unable to provide total expenditure for those years. The mean cost per return based solely on the amount spent by the UK Border Agency is:

2008-09	949
2010-11	1,444

Information on the cost of each return is not collated centrally. To calculate the median cost per return would therefore require examination of individual records which could be done only at disproportionate cost.

UK Border Agency: Manpower

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff who have left the UK Border Agency in the last two years have been offered contract work in border control during the London 2012 Olympic Games; and at what cost. [80585]

Damian Green [holding answer 14 November 2011]: The UK Border Agency (UKBA) Olympics Programme have, to date, trained 25 former staff of which 11 left UKBA in the last two years. 16 additional former employees are currently booked in for refresher training during December and all 16 left UKBA in the last two years.

In total UKBA will be recruiting approximately 120 former staff to be deployed to the border for a maximum of 20 days during the two peak arrivals periods immediately ahead of the opening ceremonies next year. The total pay cost for that deployment next year is currently estimated to be £508,000.

TREASURY

Child Care Vouchers

Jessica Morden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps his Department is taking to encourage the uptake of child care vouchers by (a) employers and (b) employees; [84972]

(2) what information his Department holds on the number of parents who use child care vouchers. [84973]

Mr Gauke: Child care vouchers are an employer provided benefit. The Government support this benefit by providing a limited tax exemption for both employers and employees.

Since child care vouchers are not always the best option for individuals it is not appropriate for the Government to encourage their uptake. We aim to enable both employers and employees to make an informed decision by making available guidance and information principally via the HMRC website.

In addition HMRC maintains regular dialogue with the child care voucher business sector.

Figures provided to HMRC by the major voucher providers suggest that the total number of voucher recipients in the quarter ending in September 2011 was approximately 500,000.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84241]

Miss Chloe Smith: HM Treasury outsourced its Information and Communications Technology (ICT) service to Fujitsu Services Ltd in June 2009.

Enterprise Zones: Wales

Alun Cairns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has had with the Welsh Government on capital allowances in relation to the implementation of enterprise zones in Wales; and what the (a) dates and (b) details were of each such discussion. [84703]

Mr Gauke: Treasury Officials have had a number of telephone and email discussions with the Welsh Government on enhanced capital allowances in enterprise zones and met on 19 October 2011. The discussions were about the design of the allowance and the process for the Welsh Government and the Treasury agreeing the location of qualifying zones.

Equitable Life Assurance Society: Compensation

Mr Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to ensure payments are made to Equitable Life policyholders who are eligible for compensation under the Government's compensation scheme before Christmas. [85020]

Mr Hoban: The scheme started making payments on 30 June this year, and hundreds of payments have been made to date. The scheme will be publishing a report on the volume and value of payments made to date in the new year.

Excise Duties: Fuels

Stephen Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions he has met with the Federation of Small Businesses to discuss the introduction of a fiscally-neutral fuel duty stabiliser. [84015]

Miss Chloe Smith: Treasury Ministers and officials meet with a wide range of organisations and individuals in the public and private sectors as part of the usual policy making process. HM Treasury publishes a list of Ministers' meetings involving external organisations online at:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/minister_hospitality.htm

Julian Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what consideration he has given to extending the fuel duty discount pilot scheme; [84540]

(2) if he will estimate the cost of extending the fuel duty discount pilot scheme to rural North Yorkshire. [84541]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Government recently secured EU clearance for the introduction of a 5p per litre rural fuel rebate pilot scheme in the Inner and Outer Hebrides, Northern Isles, islands in the Clyde and the Isles of Scilly. The scheme will come into force on 1 March 2012. Beyond this pilot scheme, nothing has been ruled in or out.

Financial Services Compensation Scheme

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information his Department holds on the level of the Financial Services Compensation Scheme levy on the general insurance intermediary class in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11. [84283]

Mr Hoban: Information on the levies collected by the Financial Services Compensation Scheme is made publically available in their annual reports. The reports show the following figures for total levies received from the general insurance intermediation class:

	Total levies received (£ million)
2008-09	2.01
2009-10	7.98
2010-11	57.23

National Insurance Contributions

Kate Green: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to extending the national insurance contributions holiday to micro-businesses which employ a young person. [R] [84103]

Stephen Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to the proposal by the Federation of Small Businesses to reduce national insurance contributions for micro-businesses that employ a young person aged between 16 and 24 years. [84117]

Mr Gauke: On 25 November, the Government announced an ambitious programme for tackling youth unemployment. Starting in 2012, the Youth Contract will deliver:

an additional 250,000 work experience or sector based work academy places for every unemployed 18 to 24-year-old;

more Jobcentre Plus support for 18 to 24-year-olds, including, extra advisor time and a careers interview from the National Careers Service and weekly, rather than fortnightly, signing; a total of 160,000 wage incentive places (at £2,275 each) to make it easier for employers to take on young people;

additional funding to support the growth of 16-24 apprenticeships, ensuring the funding for at least 40,000 incentive payments (at £1,500 each) for employers next year to raise demand for 16-24 apprenticeships; and a new £50 million a year programme for those 16 and 17-year-olds not in employment, education or training to get them learning, on an apprenticeship or in a job with training.

Non-domestic Rates: Business

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on plans to mitigate the effect on small retail businesses of the increase in business rates planned for April 2012. [82770]

Mr Gauke: The Government's commitment to the annual RPI cap on business rates means that there has been no real terms increase in business rates since 1990.

The Government announced in the autumn statement two measures to support businesses, including small retail businesses.

The Government will extend the small business rate relief holiday for a further six months from 1 October 2012 and will give all businesses the opportunity to defer 60 per cent of the increase in their 2012-13 business rate bills as a result of the RPI uprating, to be repaid equally across the following two years.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84182]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Treasury does not use postcodes for purposes other than correspondence.

Public Expenditure

Gavin Barwell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate total public spending (a) in 2009-10 in current prices and (b) if it increased by the rate of inflation from 1997-98 onwards. [83279]

Danny Alexander: Total public spending in 2009-10 in current prices was £689.3 billion.

In real terms total public spending increased in every year until 2010-11; it then decreases until 2016-17.

Revenue and Customs: Manpower

Owen Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which HM Revenue and Customs departments redeployed staff for new anti-evasion and avoidance jobs will work in; and when they will begin work in their new roles. [83481]

Mr Gauke: Redeployment has already started and will continue throughout the whole of the spending review period.

Individuals from all businesses will be considered for redeployment into new anti-evasion and avoidance posts as their current roles within their present business areas come to an end.

HMRC is continuing to consider the bulk redeployment of whole teams into compliance-related operations and will take the opportunity to do so as these arise.

Taxation: Business

Mike Crockart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria HM Revenue and Customs uses to decide when to (a) change the terms of payment plans for companies in arrears and (b) seek a legal remedy in such cases. [84599]

Mr Gauke: An agreement allowing a company time to pay is monitored by HMRC to ensure the agreed terms are maintained.

Should the terms of the time to pay agreement be breached by the company HMRC will review the position using the same criteria that were applied when the initial request for time to pay was made. The same will apply should the company notify HMRC that its circumstances have changed during the term of the agreement.

Where the company cannot show that it is a viable concern or cannot offer payment over a reasonable period HMRC will seek a legal remedy.

Taxation: Carbon Emissions

Tim Farron: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider using revenue from the carbon tax to fund measures to promote energy efficiency. [84956]

Miss Chloe Smith: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond Park (Zac Goldsmith), on 26 October 2011, Official Report, column 237W.

Taxation: Olympic Games 2012

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what taxation arrangements will apply to visiting athletes and staff for the London 2012 Olympics; what estimate he has made of the effect on the level of revenue accruing to the Exchequer of these arrangements; and if he will make a statement. [84548]

Mr Gauke: The International Olympic Committee required all bids for the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games to include certain tax commitments.

London's bid to host the Games therefore offered, and we have legislated for, a number of tax exemptions for certain non-residents who are competing in the Games or are involved in making them a success.

The Exchequer cost of the exemption will be zero. Where tax exemptions are an explicit condition of hosting a sporting event, providing them is not considered a scoreable cost because there can be no forecast revenues before a bid is successful and the exemptions are a key factor in securing the bid.

VAT: Aviation

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on the application of VAT to (a) intra-community and (b) international flights. [84009]

Mr Gauke: No VAT is chargeable on intra-EU or international air passenger transport.

Air freight services supplied to business customers are only subject to UK VAT where the customer is based in the UK. Similar services supplied to non-business customers are subject to UK VAT where the flight begins in the UK and is wholly within the EU. However, no VAT is due where goods are either exported to—or imported from—outside the EU.

Welfare Tax Credits

Stephen Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the average amount is of tax credits paid to households with capital of (a) £15,900 and (b) between £15,000 and £15,999. [83078]

Mr Gauke [holding answer 25 November 2011]: The requested information is not available. The tax credits administrative system does not collect information on the capital of claimants.

CABINET OFFICE

Average Earnings

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the average hourly rate of pay was for (a) each decile of the working population and (b) the top 1% of earners in current prices in (i) 1981 and (ii) 2011. [84462]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what the average hourly rate of pay was for (a) each decile of the working population and (b) the top one per cent of earners in current prices in (i) 1981 and (ii) 2011. (84462)

Average levels of earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for all employees on adult rates of pay whose pay for the survey period was not affected by absence. The ASHE, carried out in April each year, is the most comprehensive source of earnings information in the United Kingdom.

The ASHE replaced the New Earnings Survey (NES) in 2004. NES covered Great Britain (GB) only and the comparative estimates available from NES are the quartiles, median and the top and bottom deciles. NES did not publish estimates for all employees and estimates for full-time employees are only published from 1984. For consistency across ASHE and NES, estimates are provided for the quartiles, median and the top and bottom deciles for full-time GB employees.

The following tables show the quartiles, deciles and the top and bottom deciles for hourly pay excluding overtime for full-time GB employees in April 1984 and April 2011 and also these estimates expressed in 2011 prices using RPI as a price deflator.

British Overseas Territories: Cabinet Committees

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office whether any Cabinet sub-committee has discussed the inclusion in the Overseas Territories White Paper of a target to halt overall loss of biodiversity by 2010 in all British Overseas Territories. [84032]

Mr Letwin: In line with the constitutional convention of collective decision-making, and section 2 of the Ministerial Code, the Government do not disclose details of the internal process through which decisions are taken. The contents of the Overseas Territories White Paper are a matter for Ministers at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office.

Communities First Fund

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what targets his Department has set for the Community First scheme; and how his Department plans to monitor performance against such targets. [85280]

Mr Hurd: Community First is a small grants programme for England with a budget of up to £30 million over four years for funding to neighbourhood groups in targeted wards, and up to £50 million for an endowment match challenge. The Community First programme has been developed to encourage people to come together to make their neighbourhood a better place to live. The design of the programme is to ensure improvements are community-led and that people take responsibility for those things that they can do themselves.

The endowment match challenge is being delivered in partnership with the Community Foundation Network. The small grants money is administered by the Community Development Foundation (CDF). The Cabinet Office monitors the performance of our delivery partners.

The programme aims to stimulate more social action. CDF will monitor this through the funding applications they receive from the panels and through monitoring the websites each panel creates to aid local visibility and transparency.

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made in establishing the Community First scheme. [85284]

Mr Hurd: Community First is a small grants programme for England with a budget of up to £30 million over four years for funding to neighbourhood groups in targeted wards, and up to £50 million for an endowment match challenge.

The small grants money is administered by the Community Development Foundation. They began the process of developing local neighbourhood Community First panels on 4 October 2011.

The endowment match challenge is being delivered in partnership with the Community Foundation Network and its members.

Cybercrime

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many meetings he has had with Ministers from the devolved administrations in (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) Northern Ireland regarding the implementation of the UK Cyber Security Strategy; and what matters have been discussed at such meetings. [84368]

Mr Maude: I have not met Ministers from the devolved Administrations to discuss implementation of the Cyber Security Strategy. However, officials from Cabinet Office met with their counterparts from the Scottish Government.

Relevant officials from the devolved Administrations in Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland were consulted during the formulation of the strategy, invited to comment on early drafts and their input was incorporated into the final strategy.

Cybercrime: Scotland

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps he is taking to ensure that the UK Cyber Security Strategy involves Scottish small and medium-sized enterprises. [84367]

Mr Maude: The Government recently launched the Cyber Security Strategy and have committed to helping small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) across the UK as they are crucial to the UK's economic growth.

We will ensure SMEs across the UK can play their part as drivers of new ideas and innovation by bringing forward proposals to help them fully access the value of public procurement as part of the Growth Review. This will include setting an expectation that at least 25% of the value of Government cyber security contracts go to SMEs.

We are also exploring options such as a Government-sponsored venture capital model to unlock innovation on cyber security in SMEs under plans to explore ways in which the world-class expertise in cyber security held by GCHQ can benefit economic growth and support the development of the UK cyber security sector.

UK Trade and Investment will also work to promote the UK's cyber security industry abroad in order to open up foreign markets to SMEs.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84223]

Mr Maude: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 16 May 2011, Official Report, columns 89-90W.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by third parties. [84222]

Mr Hurd: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84232]

Mr Hurd: The services that have been outsourced to external contractors by the Cabinet Office in the last five years are shown in the table:

	Service
2007-08	Telecommunications support services
	Security guarding services
2010-11	Training and related administrative services

Public Relations

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what the monetary value was of (a) public opinion research and (b) public relations contracts awarded by his Department in (i) London and (ii) elsewhere in each of the last five years. [12456]

Mr Maude: The information requested is not held centrally and would be available only at disproportionate cost. Through the implementation of strong controls on marketing and advertising, the Government have reduced expenditure through the Central Office of Information on relevant categories by 80%, or £400 million, in 2010-11.

Details of departmental expenditure over £25,000 by my Department are available at:

http://data.gov.uk/dataset/financial-transactions-data-co

Recruitment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will publish the list of executive search companies on (a) Lot 1 of the Cabinet Office call off contract and (b) all other lots of the Cabinet Office call off contract; and if he will make a statement. [84752]

Mr Maude: The suppliers listed under Lot 1 (All Specialist Areas, all Sectors and all Functions) of the Cabinet Office Executive Search Framework are listed as follows:

Appointments Commission
Equal Approach (formally CHH Recruitment Limited)
Egon Zehnder
Gatenby Sanderson
Hays
Hudson
Korn-Ferry Whitehead Mann
Maloney Search
Odgers Berndston
Penna
Rockpools
Russell Reynolds
Saxton Bampfylde
Veredus

Suppliers under all other lots of the Cabinet Office Executive Search Framework are shown in the following table:

	Supplier
Lot 2 (HR Function)	Green Park
Lot 3 (IT Sector)	Harvey Nash
	Elan Computing

	Supplier
Lot 4 (Communications and Marketing Sector)	CJA Group
	Green Park
	Morgan Hunt
	Taylor Bennett
Lot 5 (Commercial and Procurement Function)	Capita
	CJA Group
	Dickinson Smith Buss
Lot 6 (Social and Operational research, Economics, Statistics and Science and Engineering)	BiSGeorge Henderson
	CJA Group

	Rachel Frost
	Right Management
	Rockpools
	Tribal Resourcing

Federation of Student Islamic Societies

Mr Lammy: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2011, Official Report, column 272W, on the Federation of Student Islamic Societies, if he will place in the Library a copy of each item of correspondence between the Home Office and civil service fast stream officials regarding the status of the October Federation of Student Islamic Societies event. [82420]

Mr Maude: It is not departmental policy to release e-mails into the public domain. On that basis correspondence cannot be provided.

G4S

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many contracts his Department has awarded to G4S since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each such contract. [83921]

Mr Maude: Since May 2010, the Cabinet Office has made one payment of £337.11 (VAT inclusive) to G4S Secure Solutions (UK) Ltd. This was for additional security guards for a press event held at the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 10 June 2010.

Government Departments: Printing

Christopher Pincher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress his Department is making on encouraging greater use of shared print services across government. [84774]

Mr Maude: A phased implementation programme is fully under way to 'onboard' central Government Departments to the Print Vendor Partner contract. One Department has already joined with the remainder scheduled to join over the coming months and in line with the expiry of existing contractual arrangements.

Christopher Pincher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate he has made of the potential savings to Government Departments through use of shared print services. [84776]

Mr Maude: The Print Vendor Partner contract is estimated to save £21 million over its four-year duration.

Government Departments: Procurement

Roger Williams: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proportion of Government contracts were aggregated into larger contracts as part of the procurement process in the latest period for which figures are available. [84056]

Mr Maude [holding answer 1 December 2011]: This information is not held centrally as centralised contracts aggregate spend rather than other contracts. The data we hold show that in 2010-11, £2.5 billion of central Government expenditure was aggregated using Government Procurement Service contracts.

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made towards meeting the Government's target that 25% of central Government supplies are procured from small and medium-sized enterprises. [84878]

Mr Maude: The Government have made progress in encouraging small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) to compete for Government contracts. We have published a progress report on "Making Government business more accessible to SMEs". This can be found at:

www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/resource-library/government-business-smes

Departments' total procurement spend and direct spend with SMEs are published in their Quarterly Data Summary on departmental websites and the No. 10 website. The most recent figures are for October 2011. They can be found at:

www.number10.gov.uk/news/business-plan-data-oct11/

Infrastructure: Scotland

Angus Robertson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what critical national infrastructure is (a) based in Scotland and (b) under the legislative competence of the Scottish Government. [84369]

Mr Maude: For reasons of national security we do not publish details of what is assessed to be critical national infrastructure (CNI) or provide information about location.

Responsibility for critical national infrastructure sites within Scotland varies depending on whether sectors or sub-sectors are devolved or reserved. Devolved sectors are the responsibility of the Scottish Government; and reserved sectors the responsibility of sector sponsor Departments.

The Home Office also bears risk at Government level arising from its responsibility for UK national security and counter-terrorism policy including CNI protection (from national security threats).

Members: Correspondence

Mr Slaughter: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) when he expects to respond to the letter from the hon. Member for Hammersmith of 17 October 2011 on ministerial conflicts of interest; [81383]

(2) when he plans to reply to question 81383 on ministerial conflicts of interest, tabled on 11 November 2011 for answer on 15 November 2011. [84164]

Mr Maude [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The Cabinet Secretary replied to the hon. Member on 30 November 2011.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84221]

Mr Maude: With the exception of the Government Digital Service whose website uses a postcode look-up to direct users to services provided on local authority websites, the Cabinet Office does not use postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail or to confirm addresses.

Public Sector: Pay

Rachel Reeves: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2011, Official Report, column 706-7W, on public sector: pay, if he will provide numerical estimates for employees in each category. [84084]

Mr Hurd [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the Authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question which was pursuant to the Answer of 15 November 2011, Official Report, column 706-7W, on public sector pay, asking that numerical estimates for employees in each category be provided. (84084)

The original question asked how many public sector workers who worked (a) part-time and (b) full-time received a salary of less than £15,000 per annum in the latest period for which figures are available; and how many part-time public sector workers earned less than £15,000 per annum and received a full-time equivalent salary of greater than £15,000.(79794)

Annual levels of earnings are estimated from the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings (ASHE), and are provided for all employees on adult rates of pay, who have been in the same job for more than a year. ASHE methodology cannot be used to provide estimates of the numbers of employees whose earnings is less than a specific amount, but can be used to provide estimates of percentage of employees in that category. These proportions can be applied to employment estimates from the Quarterly Public Sector Employment Survey and the Labour Force Survey.

In April 2010 the estimate for the number of public sector jobs taken from the Quarterly Public Sector Employment Survey is 6.3 million and the estimate for the proportion of part-time employees taken from the Labour Force Survey is 30 per cent. Based on these estimates there were 4.4 million full-time public sector workers and 1.9 million part-time public sector workers in April 2010.

From these sources it is estimated that 1.3 million part-time and 0.3 million full-time public sector employees earned less than £15,000 per annum in April 2010. Of the part-time public sector employees who earned less than £15,000 per annum, ONS estimates that 0.8 million received a full-time equivalent salary greater than £15,000. Full-time equivalent salaries were derived from annual pay by pro-rating the part-time employees' paid hours worked to the median estimate of paid hours worked by full-time employees in the public sector.

Public Sector: Pensions

Mr Frank Roy: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he last met representatives of the TUC to discuss the public sector pension dispute. [84840]

Mr Maude: Details of Cabinet Office Ministers' meetings with external organisations are published at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/resource-library/ministerial-gifts-hospitality-travel-and-meetings-external-organisations

Public Sector: Redditch

Karen Lumley: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate he has made of the number of people employed in the public sector in Redditch in each of the next three years. [84822]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what estimate has been made of the number of people employed in the public sector in Redditch in each of the next three years (84822).

ONS does not produce forecasts for public sector employment, therefore figures are not available. For the 12 month period ending March 2011 it was estimated that 13,000 people were employed in the public sector in Redditch.

The Office for National Statistics (ONS) compiles employment statistics for local areas from the Annual Population Survey (APS) following International Labour Organisation (ILO) definitions.

Social Justice Committee

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many meetings of the Social Justice Committee (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department have attended since its establishment. [85282]

Mr Maude: Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees, including when and how often they meet and which Ministers have attended, is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Stationery Office: Security

Mr Watson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what discussions he has had with The Stationery Office on secure storage of Government documents prior to publication. [84058]

Mr Maude [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The Stationery Office is subject to the same security and confidentiality considerations as any other third party supplier to Government. This includes complying with best practice standards for Information Assurance such as the British Standard BS27000 series. Where sensitive Government information is concerned then more robust requirements may apply, as set out in the HMG Security Policy Framework, available from the Cabinet Office website at:

http://www.cabinet-office.gov.uk/resource-library/security-policy-framework

I have not held any meetings with The Stationery Office to discuss storage issues. The National Archives (TNA) manages the contract with The Stationery Office for the publication of legislation and statutory instruments, this includes appropriate security requirements.

Voluntary Work

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what progress has been made in establishing the Community Organisers programme. [85285]

Mr Hurd: The Community Organisers programme is currently working in over 20 areas across England in mostly disadvantaged communities, with further areas being added over the lifetime of the programme. 47 organisers have begun their 12 month training programme and are now working in their communities, with a further 41 to begin their training later this week.

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what targets his Department has set for the Community Organisers programme; and how his Department plans to monitor performance against such targets. [85286]

Mr Hurd: The coalition Government announced their commitment to train 5,000 community organisers over the lifetime of this Parliament. The Community Organisers programme is about stimulating and supporting greater social action, especially in areas of high deprivation.

The Government have appointed Locality to deliver the Community Organisers programme at arm's length from Government. Over the four-year period, Locality expects to recruit between 100-200 local organisations across England to host community organisers. Recruitment of community organisers is undertaken locally by host organisations.

The Cabinet Office monitors the quality and number of host organisations and community organisers through monthly programme board meetings and reporting cycles.

Voluntary Work: Young People

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what discussions he has had with organisations representing deaf young people on improving access to National Citizen Service programmes for (a) deaf young people and (b) other young people with a disability. [84924]

Mr Hurd: It is important that young people with disabilities, including young deaf people, are able to play a full part in the National Citizen Service. The Cabinet Office sought advice from disability organisations to produce a plan to enable young people with disabilities to take part, which providers were assessed on. We will learn from the evaluation of the 2011 pilots, due to be published in February 2012, to further ensure that there are no barriers to participating in the National Citizen Service. Department for Education staff plan to meet with The National Deaf Children's Society in the new year to discuss how to improve access to the National Citizen Service.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps his Department has taken to ensure deaf young people have access to National Citizen Service programmes. [84925]

Mr Hurd: During the bidding process for the 2012 pilots, providers were closely assessed on how they would adapt their programmes to support participants with additional needs. They have planned a range of measures for the recruitment and activity phases.

Providers of the 2011 pilots made a range of adaptations to allow deaf young people to participate. These included in-kind support from the National Deaf Children's Society including a volunteer interpreter; use of hearing loops where available; awareness training for staff working with the young person; use of text messaging; and allowing peer supporters to attend with the young person. Providers will be supported to build on this for delivery in 2012.

The independent evaluation of the National Citizen Service will provide further detail on providers' effectiveness at addressing any barriers to participation, and the Department will ensure that any lessons from this are learnt and implemented. The evaluation is due for publication in February 2012.

Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many deaf young people have participated in National Citizen Service programmes to date. [84926]

Mr Hurd: An independent evaluation of the National Citizen Service pilot programme is currently collecting and analysing data on the characteristics of the young people who took part across the 12 pilot schemes in 2011. That work will conclude shortly and I will then be able to provide the House with a full update.

Departmental Written Questions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he plans to answer question 12456 from the hon. Member for Perth and North Perthshire on Public Opinion Research, tabled on 6 September 2010. [83836]

Mr Maude: I replied to the hon. Member today.

TRANSPORT

Special Advisers

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether draft answers to parliamentary questions prepared by officials in her Department are cleared by special advisers (a) before and (b) after the relevant Minister. [79558]

Norman Baker: Special advisers may on occasion contribute to the answers to parliamentary questions at appropriate points in the drafting process. Ministers clear questions for publication. Special advisers do not.

Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what her policy is on the future of the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee; and if she will make a statement. [84742]

Norman Baker: The Government are minded to abolish the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee (DPTAC) as a statutory body but will explore options for continuing to gain the disability advice they need through a more flexible, accountable structure. I made a written ministerial statement on 7 June 2011, Official Report, columns 21-2WS, seeking views and evidence with regard to potential successor arrangements. I also held a workshop with stakeholders on 11 July.

These views have informed the possible successor arrangements and I intend to consult formally on these early in the new year.

I will consider the responses to this consultation, including whether those responses affect the decision to abolish DPTAC.

Driving Instruction

Mr Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions she has had with (a) the police and (b) other public bodies on the potential benefits of providing preparatory training to young people before they learn to drive; and if she will make a statement. [84303]

Mike Penning [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The Secretary of State for Transport, my right hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Justine Greening), has not had any discussions on this issue. I have discussed the benefits of improving the learning to drive process with a number of stakeholders.

While understanding road safety issues from a young age is important, research suggests that giving pre-learners driving skills before they are 17 years old may not have a road safety benefit.

Mr Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what (a) financial and (b) other support her Department provides for Pathfinder driving schools; and if she will make a statement. [84304]

Mike Penning [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The Driving Standards Agency does not provide financial or other forms of support to Pathfinder driving schools.

East Anglia Railway Line: Rolling Stock

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many trains are in service on the National Express East Anglia Great Eastern Line. [83711]

Mrs Villiers: The fleet deployment plan provided by National Express East Anglia for the timetable running from May to December 2011 shows an allocation of 11 locomotive-hauled sets, and 147 electric multiple units to Great Eastern services each day (Monday to Friday).

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate she has made of how many trains will be in service on the Great Eastern Line under the new franchise holders. [83712]

Mrs Villiers: The successful bid for the Greater Anglia franchise by Abellio Greater Anglia Ltd includes a fleet deployment plan that allocates 11 locomotive-hauled sets and 147 electric multiple units to Great Eastern services each day (Monday to Friday).

East Coast Railway Line

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the adequacy of east coast main line services north of York. [85346]

Mrs Villiers: East coast main line services north of York were assessed and revised as part of the development of the new east coast main line timetable that was introduced on 22 May 2011. The adequacy of all train services is under constant review by the train operators.

Felixstowe-Nuneaton Railway Line: Freight

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial support her Department provided to the Felixstowe to Nuneaton Phase 2 rail freight upgrade in the last financial year; and if she will make a statement. [84311]

Mrs Villiers: None. However Network Rail has funding for the development of schemes in Control Period 5 (2014 to 2019) and has identified a number of freight schemes in the Initial Industry Plan. These could be developed under the Strategic Freight Network subject to available funding.

High Speed 2 Railway Line

Mr Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will conduct a strategic appraisal of phase II of the planned Y network before a final decision on phase I is undertaken; and if she will postpone taking a decision on whether to proceed with phase I until an appraisal of phase II has been consulted upon. [84114]

Justine Greening: The documents published to inform the recent consultation on HS2 provided a strategic assessment of the planned Y network. This included an assessment of the overall case for the proposed network in the main consultation document:

http://highspeedrail.dft.gov.uk/library/documents/consultation-document an assessment of the economic costs and benefits in the Economic Case for HS2:

http://highspeedrail.dft.gov.uk/library/documents/economic-case and an assessment by Atkins of the case for enhancements to existing lines as an alternative to HS2:

http://highspeedrail.dft.gov.uk/library/documents/strategic-alternatives

Mr Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when her Department expects to complete work on (a) train diagrams, (b) projected operating costs and (c) rolling stock purchases for services on the Y network. [84115]

Justine Greening: The long-term specification and operation of services on High Speed 2 (HS2), including train diagrams which would inform rolling stock strategies and operating costs, would be a decision for the eventual operator of HS2. It would not be appropriate to decide service specifications so far ahead of the operation of the potential HS2 service due to the uncertainty around how the rail market might develop in the interim. It has been necessary to make informed assumptions about service specifications and about associated rolling stock requirement costs in order to assess the case for new high speed lines, which are set out in chapter two of the Economic Case for HS2, but these are one possible option only and so should be taken as illustrative only. Subject to the outcome of the public consultation, these proposals would be developed as part of the ongoing development of the business case for HS2.

Mr Godsiff: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when her Department expects to produce a comprehensive statement of the likely patterns of services on the classic network after High Speed 2 is operational. [84116]

Justine Greening: It would not be appropriate to take decisions on service specifications more than a decade in advance of even the first phase of HS2 opening.

In order to inform the development of the case for the initial phase of the proposed network, HS2 Ltd developed an illustrative classic network service specification, which was published in the Technical Appendices to its original March 2010 report, available at:

http://webarchive.nationalarchives.gov.uk/+/http://www.dft.gov.uk/pgr/rail/pi/highspeedrail/hs2ltd/technicalappendix/

As part of its current work on route options for the second phase of the proposed network, HS2 Ltd will consider potential classic network service specifications taking into account released capacity from the full Y network on the west coast, east coast and midland main lines.

High Speed 2 Railway Line: Scotland

Jo Swinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the potential benefits to the Scottish economy of the proposed High Speed 2 network. [84647]

Justine Greening: Table 6.5 of HS2 Ltd's Demand and Appraisal Report

http://www.hs2.org.uk/assets/x/78304

provides an assessment of the split of benefits between regions according to where trips originate, which shows approximately 5% of overall benefits from the proposed Y network relating to trips beginning in Scotland.

The Government indicated in the 2010 National Infrastructure Plan their intention over the longer term to continue development of the high-speed rail network and rail connections between the north and south of the country to further reduce journey times to Glasgow and Edinburgh, which would be expected to see the benefits accruing to Scotland increase further.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost to her Department will be of reorganising the Maritime Coastguard Agency in (a) 2011-12 and (b) 2012-13; and what steps she is taking to ensure the level of safety is not affected by the closure of coastguard stations. [84154]

Mike Penning [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The cost of reorganising the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in 2011-12 will comprise, largely, the opportunity cost of staff time, including any associated items such as travel and expenses, and the direct costs incurred in running the public meetings held in conjunction with the first public consultation. A more detailed breakdown could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Following the decision announced on 22 November, reorganisation costs for 2012-13 will be dependent on the outcome of, among other things, negotiations with the trade union, and the terms of any contractual or other agreements entered into during the period. There will also be the opportunity costs associated with staff time and associated travel and expenses.

Throughout this reorganisation the Maritime and Coastguard Agency will continually assess risk; the timetable for Maritime Rescue Co-ordination Centre (MRCC) closures will remain flexible for operational reasons.

HM Coastguard will maintain appropriate levels of service during this period by utilising both existing area pairing arrangements and the incremental closure of MRCCs once the Maritime Operations Centre (MOC) is commissioned, tested and fully operational.

The decision to locate the MOC at Kites Croft, Fareham (a site designed and built originally to be the South East Fire Control Centre) removes the requirement to either construct or refurbish an existing building. This enables the MOC to be fully operational at the earliest opportunity, reducing both the complexity and risk involved with setting up the MOC as well as the risk of MRCCs absorbing the workload from the closing stations.

Maritime and Coastguard Agency: Empty Property

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans she has for the future of the empty premises (a) owned and (b) leased by the Maritime Coastguard Agency following the closure of coastguard stations in (i) Liverpool and (ii) the UK. [84954]

Mike Penning: The maritime rescue co-ordination centres (MRCCs) at Great Yarmouth and Clyde are leased properties and will be vacated at the end of their tenure as agreed with the respective landlords. The MRCCs at Forth, Brixham and Portland are Crown properties and will be sold following vacation.

The MRCC at Lee-on-Solent is provided under an agreement with the Homes and Communities Agency (formerly South East England Development Agency (SEEDA)) and will be vacated following the opening of the maritime operations centre at Kites Croft, Fareham.

Under the Coastguard Modernisation programme, the coastguard co-ordination function currently located in the MRCCs at Liverpool, Thames and Swansea will cease; these buildings will remain on the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's (MCA) estate to support other operational coastguard and marine office survey activity in these areas.

Capacity released at these sites will be utilised to develop and house the coastguard coastal operations hubs outlined in the "Blueprint for Future Coastguard Organisation in the UK" to provide additional management support to the volunteer coastguard rescue service.

Motorways: Garages and Petrol Stations

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent assessment she has made of the cost of fuel on motorways; and if she will ensure that drivers on motorways are made aware of the comparative cost of fuel at motorway filling stations. [84570]

Mike Penning: All motorway service areas are operated on a commercial basis by private companies and the Department for Transport has no powers to control prices charged at the sites.

There is a requirement to display prices in the service areas. Current signing regulations permit the display of fuel prices on the advanced directional signing for motorway service areas, but it is not a requirement to display prices in advance of the service area.

Railways: Accidents

Jim Fitzpatrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recommendations were made following the incident at Tebay on 15 February 2004 involving a runaway trolley; and what progress has been made implementing such recommendations. [82346]

Mrs Villiers: The RSSB (formally the Rail Safety and Standards Board) held an independent inquiry into the Tebay accident of 15 February 2004.

The report of this inquiry, "Track Worker Fatalities at Tebay on 15 February 2004", was published in October 2004. It contained 12 recommendations, 10 of which were directed to Network Rail with the remaining two directed to the RSSB. A summary of this report is available at:

http://www.rssb.co.uk/LEARNING/Documents/FI2884.pdf

The 10 recommendations directed to Network Rail were closed out in accordance with industry standards between 2005 and 2008. The RSSB has confirmed that all 12 recommendations have now been closed out.

Railways: Franchises

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what external consultants have advised the Government on rail franchising policy in the last 18 months; what the cost of such advice was in each instance; what regular checks were made for potential conflicts of interests; and whether any conflicts of interests were declared. [R] [83168]

Mrs Villiers: Advice is being provided by Grant Thornton on stress testing franchise bids, which has an estimated value of £33,000. Advice on a new approach to station leasing is being provided by Faithful and Gould which has an estimated value of £30,000. £129,772 has been spent to date with external lawyers developing contracts for Greater Anglia and Intercity West Coast, and this work is ongoing. Consultants are required to declare potential conflicts of interest during procurement, or that arise afterwards. The Department does not contract if a material conflict of interest exists, and consultants are required to declare any change in circumstances.

Rescue Services: Portland

Richard Drax: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will publish the analyses upon which her decision to close the search and rescue helicopter base at Portland was based. [84628]

Mike Penning: It is the intention of the Department to publish the basing analysis and assurance review which was used to determine the future basing strategy for search and rescue helicopters. I intend to make this available via the Department for Transport website and it will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Severn River Crossing: Tolls

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent estimate she has made of the likely completion date of the Severn Crossings toll concession. [84710]

Mike Penning: The concession on the Severn Crossing will end when either the concessionaire has recovered their costs, or when 30 years have elapsed since the concession began (2022). The concessionaire is currently expected to recover their costs in 2017; but we are negotiating how certain operating costs and historic changes to the tax regime should be handled under the concession agreement.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions (a) she, (b) her immediate predecessor and (c) other Ministers in her Department have had with Severn River Crossings plc and others on the future of the Severn Crossing following the end of the current concession. [84711]

Mike Penning: I have stated that no decisions have been taken on the future of the crossing; and Ministers have had no discussions on arrangements after the end of the concession period.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when she intends to publish plans for the future of the Severn river crossing following the end of the concession period. [84970]

Mike Penning: As I stated to the Welsh Affairs Committee in May, we have made no decisions about the future of the Severn crossings. We have no plans to make any decisions on the crossings while the Welsh Government continue their study of the economic effects of tolling.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions (a) she and (b) her departmental officials have had with Severn River Crossing plc and others on the future of the Severn crossing following the end of the concession agreement. [84971]

Mike Penning: Severn River Crossings plc (SRC) is a special purpose vehicle, which will cease to exist when the concession ends. We have had no substantive discussions with SRC about arrangements beyond the end of the concession period.

My officials are in regular dialogue with the Welsh Government about the Severn crossings, who have made representations about possible options after the concession. No decisions have been taken on the future of the crossings.

Thameslink Railway Line: Rolling Stock

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 1 November 2011, Official Report, column 610W, on Thameslink railway line: rolling stock, what management actions Interfleet took and detailed to her Department on each occasion to avoid a conflict of interest. [R] [81313]

Mrs Villiers [holding answer 22 November 2011]: Interfleet have robust processes which they employ to manage potential conflicts of interest effectively. The specific arrangements are set out as follows:

(a) September 2008, Gauging clearance study work for Siemens: This work involved Interfleet checking that Siemens' "City Train" concept vehicle profile would pass along the UK rail network including the Thameslink routes. Interfleet confirmed to the Department that they did not have any staff providing Thameslink bid development support to Siemens or any other bidder in the competition. Consequently, the Department accepted that no conflict of interest would arise.

(b) January 2009, competition to appoint a Notified Body approvals contract with all the Thameslink bidders (Alstom, Bombardier, Hitachi and Siemens): Interfleet Certification Ltd (ICL) is an independent company with procedures and processes which have been set up in accordance with strict regulatory requirements to ensure their independence and impartiality and are subject to regular audit by the United Kingdom Accreditation Service (UKAS) on behalf of the Department. The Department required ICL to ensure that they do not involve any staff who have previously worked on, or planned to work on the Thameslink project for the Department. This confirmation was provided and the Department was, therefore, content that no conflict of interest would occur.

(c) July 2011, Gauge clearance work for Thameslink preferred bidder (Siemens): Interfleet confirmed that a team completely independent of the Department's Thameslink technical advisor team would support Siemens on this workstream and that they would have no access to or input from the technical advisor or any data obtained as a result of Interfleet's support to the Department. The Department was, therefore, content that no conflict of interest would occur.

WORK AND PENSIONS

AWE: Industrial Health and Safety

Stephen Gilbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when the Health and Safety Executive plans to announce its decision on what steps will be taken concerning the Atomic Weapons Establishment following the fire at the Establishment on 3 August 2010; and what the reasons are for the time taken in making this decision. [84837]

Chris Grayling: The investigation into the unfortunate event referred to, at the Atomic Weapons Establishment, has been thorough and involved detailed and extensive consideration of the incident of 3 August 2010 and the circumstances preceding it. In line with its published procedures and policies for investigation and enforcement, the HSE is currently awaiting independent legal opinion on its report into the incident before a final decision is made. I understand that this opinion is due to be delivered in early January and a decision will be made and announced soon afterwards by the HSE.

Legal Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83898]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions in-house litigation division dealt with 4,059 potential or actual claims brought against the Department since the beginning of 2007. The additional information requested such as which of the organisations bringing claims received funding from the Department and relating to the success and costs of these actions is not held on a central record. In order to be able to provide answers, it would be necessary to retrieve the majority of these files from our central storage facility which is located outside of London. Each individual file would then have to be interrogated to establish what information is held, some of these cases will be of a considerable size. I would estimate that this would take at least several weeks and would therefore be at a disproportionate cost.

Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83914]

Chris Grayling: Where the Department for Work and Pensions is successful in litigation it will normally seek an order that costs are payable. However many litigants are legally aided and the order would not therefore be enforced unless there is a change in financial circumstances. Where funds are potentially available the Department will make an assessment on a case by case basis as to whether securing payment will be cost-effective when the costs of enforcement are taken into account. Costs may be awarded against the Legal Services Commission in limited circumstances and are enforced where they are awarded.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84186]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions organises a number of events, both internal and external. These take place throughout the year and are organised by individual teams across the Department.

There is not a centrally held list of all events that have taken place so it is not possible to provide the details requested as it would be at a disproportionate cost to request and collate the information required.

Departmental Publications

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) leaflets, (b) posters and (c) reports his Department has published since May 2010; how much each cost; and which company (i) published and (ii) designed each. [82998]

Chris Grayling: I can respond to parts of this question, regarding the number and cost of information leaflets and posters that my Department has produced since May 2010.

The Department has reduced the number of its information leaflets from 49 (in May 2010) to 39. Those remaining are leaflets we must make available to ensure individuals are informed of which benefits are available to them, and details of how to plan and claim their pension; particularly for those who are unable to access similar information on the internet. We spent a total of £328,518.08 (print) and £5,085.00 (design) since May 2010, circulating a total of 6.058 million copies to the public.

We maintain a small range of around 20 posters, mostly for use in our 750 Jobcentres. Since May 2010 we have spent £18,563.54 (print) and nothing on design (all done in-house), producing a total of 15,265 individual posters (an average 20 posters per Jobcentre).

I would note that the majority of information leaflets published have been a continuation of materials that are always in print, such as information to the public about benefit and pension entitlement. Indeed, my Department has actually reduced the cost of these with some recent publications on average 34% less expensive than their predecessors published before May 2010.

On the question about reports, my Department publishes a diverse range of reports across all of its activities; the information is not available/held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Since July 2007, the majority of the Department's design and print is covered by a single print management contract with the iON Consortium, of whom Xerox is the lead supplier.

Employment and Support Allowance

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent representations his Department has received on the time-limiting of contributory employment and support allowance. [83390]

Chris Grayling: The proposal to introduce a time limit of one year for those claiming contributory employment and support allowance who are placed in the work-related activity group requires primary legislation and is included in the Welfare Reform Bill which is currently being considered by Parliament.

Since this measure was announced as part of the spending review in October, both Ministers and officials have met with a number of representatives from organisations representing disabled people, such as Citizens Advice, Macmillan Cancer Support and Disability Alliance. We are continuing to receive representations from these organisations on an ongoing basis.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what alternatives to a 12-month time limit on contributory employment and support allowance were considered by his Department; and what the reasons were for not pursuing any such alternatives. [83392]

Chris Grayling: The Department considered a number of different periods, but concluded that a time limit of one year gives the best balance between allowing people in the work-related activity group with longer term conditions to adjust to their health condition and paying contribution-based employment and support allowance for an appropriate length of time.

The time limit does not apply to the most vulnerable in the support group nor the poorest on income-related employment and support allowance. It is double the length of time that people can receive contribution-based jobseeker's allowance. The Department also considered the needs of the taxpayer as well as claimants in making its decision to introduce a time limit.

Andrew George: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make an assessment of the potential effects of time-limiting contributory employment and support allowance (ESA) on benefits advice services and other support organisations; and what discussions his Department has had with organisations, such as Citizens Advice, about the effects such time-limiting of contributory ESA will have on their services. [83393]

Chris Grayling: The impacts of time-limiting contributory employment and support allowance to one year for those in the Work Related Activity Group were set out in the impact assessment, available at the following link:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/esa-time-limit-wr2011-ia-revised-apr2011.pdf

The impacts on benefits advice services and other support organisations have not been quantified due to the uncertainty around take-up of these services by those affected. However, the Department has a programme of regular engagement with stakeholders such as Citizens Advice in order to help ensure that claimants receive the appropriate advice about how the changes may affect them and take any necessary action as a result.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assumptions he made about the rate of reassessment for employment and support allowance of people in receipt of incapacity benefit when calculating indicative volumes for the Work programme. [84567] around 1.5 million existing incapacity benefits customers would go through reassessment by 2014; of these, approximately one-quarter would be expected to be assessed fit for work and move off incapacity benefits; and the remaining three-quarters would be expected to be assessed as having a limited capability for work and move onto employment and support allowance—of these, around three-quarters would be expected to move into the Work Related Activity Group.

Chris Grayling: Our calculation of indicative volumes for the invitation to tender was based on the following assumptions:

The actual volumes of customers referred to the Work programme will be published as Official Statistics, from spring 2012.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many applicants for employment and support allowance his Department has decided should (a) receive the allowance in the (i) support group and (ii) work related activity group and (b) not receive the allowance following work capability assessments by Atos Origins which recommended that applicants (A) should and (B) should not receive the allowance. [84952]

Chris Grayling: The Department regularly publishes official statistics on employment and support allowance (ESA) and the work capability assessment. The latest report was published in October 2011 and can be found on the internet at the following link:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/workingage/index.php?page=esa_wca

Table 2 in the above publication shows statistics on completed initial assessments for ESA claims from October 2008 up to May 2011 (the latest data available). This shows that there were:

101,000 ESA Support Group decisions

253,000 ESA Work Related Activity Group decisions

575,400 Fit for Work decisions.

Of the 575,400 Fit for Work decisions, 564,800 received a Fit for Work recommendation from Atos and 600 received either a Support Group or Work Related Activity Group recommendation. There were also 10,000 clerical assessments where the Atos recommendation cannot be determined but the claimant subsequently received a Fit for Work decision from DWP.

In total there were 597,100 Atos recommendations of Fit for Work, however 32,400 of these recommendations were overturned and placed in either the Work Related Activity Group or the Support Group by DWP.

Note that all figures have been rounded to the nearest hundred and as a result may not sum to totals.

Employment Schemes

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make it his policy to provide targeted support for employment in areas where the (a) rate of long-term unemployment increases above and (b) job density ratio falls below a specific threshold; and if he will make a statement. [84249]

Chris Grayling: The Department remains committed to tackling long-term unemployment wherever it is located, through its ambitious welfare reforms. The Work Programme has replaced much of the complex range of employment support previously on offer and allows private, public and voluntary partners to come together to find innovative and flexible local solutions to help people into work. Universal credit will ensure the welfare system always incentivises work and ensure that work always pays.

The Department is also modernising the way Jobcentre Plus delivers its services. A flexible delivery model enables Jobcentre Plus to deliver labour-market solutions tailored to the needs of the local labour market. The Government are seeking the active engagement of employers, partners and claimants themselves in every community in Britain to help tackle rising unemployment. These measures ensure that targeted support is already being delivered by knowledgeable staff, who understand local issues, at the 740 Jobcentres at the heart of communities.

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to ensure funds from the Youth Contract programme flow proportionally to areas with high incidences of long-term unemployment and economic inactivity. [84348]

Chris Grayling: We are currently working to design the details of the support available through the Youth Contract and will be making further information available over the coming weeks.

However, I can tell the hon. Gentleman that elements of Youth Contract support are targeted at young people who are longer-term unemployed so that more money will flow to areas where longer-term unemployment is higher. Specifically:

increased adviser time will be available from month three of a JSA claim for 18 to 24-year-olds who have not yet entered the Work programme, with weekly signing from month three.

Work experience placements are available to 18 to 24-year-olds claiming JSA from week 13 of their claim,

The wage incentive scheme will be delivered through the Work programme. This will ensure that it is targeted at long-term unemployed young people and those who face the most significant disadvantages.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the right to data in the Open Services White Paper will apply to the Work Programme; and if he will make a statement. [84569]

Chris Grayling: The Department is committed to open government and open data and is exploring the scope for new open data measures.

The Department currently expects to publish official statistics on referrals to the Work Programme from spring 2012 and job outcome figures from autumn 2012. We expect to make these publicly available by various breakdowns including age; gender; ethnicity; disability; provider; local authority; parliamentary constituency; and contract package area. However, this is dependant on the availability and quality of data from the administrative systems.

The exact details of what Work Programme official statistics we will publish will be available once we have developed more detailed requirements and are confident that the data are of sufficient quality to publish.

An information note detailing the Work Programme official statistics release strategy can be found at the following website:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/index.php?page=statistical_summaries

Included in the note is an invitation for feedback on the type of statistics users would like to see made available for the Work Programme.

As soon as we are confident we have reliable data we will pre-announce an exact release date via this website and on the UK Statistics Authority publication hub. Statistics will be published in the DWP quarterly statistical summary and via an internet based tabulation tool offering users bespoke breakdowns of the headline statistics.

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2011, Official Report, column 375W, on employment schemes, whether he has received any representations claiming that Work programme prime contractors are referring clients to volunteer centres without making payments to those centres; and if he will make a statement. [84754]

Chris Grayling: It has been brought to my attention that one or more Work programme prime contractors may have made inappropriate approaches to volunteer centres. We have made it clear to Work programme providers that, while we encourage them to forge productive relationships with local partners, they should not approach volunteer centres to supply unpaid support for their service delivery models.

Employment Schemes: Personal Records

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what personal information is passed from Jobcentre Plus to a provider when a jobseeker is referred to the Work Programme. [84566]

Chris Grayling: Personal information passed from Jobcentre Plus to a provider when a jobseeker is referred to the Work programme will vary depending on individual circumstances but will include some or all of the following:

Full name including title
National insurance number
Full address including post code
Telephone number including std code
Other telephone number (mobile)
Qualifications
Driving licence
Job preferences
Employment history
Preferred hours
Disability status—notification that the participant has informed Jobcentre Plus that they are disabled
Child care needs/arrangements.

Employment: Young People

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether voluntary and community sector organisations will be eligible to receive wage subsidies under the Youth Contract. [84568]

Chris Grayling: Sustainable paid jobs in the voluntary sector will be eligible for the wage incentive scheme. The scheme will be delivered through the Work programme and we will be talking to employers, providers and other key stakeholders, including the voluntary and the community sector, as we develop the detailed design.

Future Jobs Fund

Mr Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were placed in employment through the future jobs fund in each parliamentary constituency since October 2009. [83930]

Chris Grayling: There have been 105,230 job placements under the future jobs fund for the period October 2009 to March 2011.

A table containing the number of job starts for each parliamentary constituency has been placed in the Library.

Housing Benefit

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of income received by households affected by the household benefit cap is accounted for by (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit. [83185]

Chris Grayling: Our modelling estimates that out of the households affected by the household benefit cap, the mean proportion of income accounted for by housing benefit is between 20% and 30%.

The mean proportion of household income accounted for by council tax benefit is very small, the modelling estimates that it is less than 5%.

Analysis of those affected by the benefit cap has been modelled using survey data; as such there is a degree of uncertainty around the results.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what methodology will be used to calculate future discretionary housing payment allocations in relation to the Government's planned increase. [84400]

Steve Webb: The Government's contribution towards discretionary housing payments for 2012-13 will be £60 million.

The methodology for 2012-13 constitutes two parts; £20 million has been allocated based on the midpoint between Government contribution and the actual amount spent by a local authority in 2010-11; the £40 million balance has been allocated to each local authority based on their share of the anticipated losses by housing benefit claimants as a result of the reforms to the local housing allowance.

which we sent to all local authorities to advise them of the 2012-13 discretionary housing payments allocations.

The methodology for allocating the Government's contribution towards discretionary housing payments in 2013-14 will be decided by discussions with local authorities representatives and the Department during the summer/autumn of 2012.

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many 25 to 34 year olds he expects to be affected by the introduction of the single room rate in each local authority area. [84773]

Steve Webb: The requested information has been published in the equality impact assessment of the increase to the shared accommodation rate age threshold.

A copy has been placed in the Library and it is available on the DWP website at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/eia-hb-shared-accommodation-age-threshold.pdf

Housing Benefit: Brent

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people claim the shared accommodation rate of housing benefit in Brent North constituency; and what estimate he has made of the likely change in this number should the age limit increase from 25 to 35 years. [84037]

Steve Webb: The information requested is not available.

Estimates of the number of people claiming the local housing allowance at the shared accommodation rate and the numbers affected by the increase in the age limit have been published at local authority level as part of the equality impact assessment, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

The equality impact assessment is also available on the internet at http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/eia-hb-shared-accommodation-age-threshold.pdf

In the London borough of Brent, it is estimated that at March 2010 1,670 people received local housing allowance at the shared accommodation rate and that 710 would be affected by the age limit increase.

Housing Benefit: Private Rented Housing

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the effect of the proposed abolition of direct payment of local housing allowance to private landlords. [84941]

Steve Webb: At present, housing benefit under the local housing allowance (LHA) arrangements is paid to claimants in the majority of cases. For some claimants who are likely to run into financial difficulties, payment is made to the landlord. The Government do not plan to abolish this provision. Work is ongoing to define the details of support under universal credit, but the approach for private sector renters will build on the existing local housing allowance arrangements.

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with private landlords on the proposed abolition of direct payment of local housing allowance. [84942]

Steve Webb: Departmental officials have a regular dialogue with landlord groups.

At present, housing benefit under the local housing allowance (LHA) arrangements is paid to claimants in the majority of cases. For some claimants who are likely to run into financial difficulties, payment is made to the landlord. The Government do not plan to abolish this provision.

Housing Benefit: Wales

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households claiming (a) housing benefit and (b) local housing allowance in (i) Wales and (ii) each local authority in Wales have non-dependent residents living in the household. [84653]

Steve Webb: The information requested is not currently available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department does collect information on numbers of non-dependents from the housing benefit/council tax benefit data source (single housing benefit extract) but to assess the completeness of recording and quality assure the figures to answer this question would incur disproportionate cost.

Notes:

1. From February 2007, DWP has been collecting more detailed housing benefit/council tax benefit data electronically from local authorities. Over time these will improve the accuracy, timeliness and level of detail available in the published statistics, as the information supplied is quality assured.

2. Housing benefit caseload and average weekly amounts are available at local authority area level and these are published on the Department's website at:

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people aged between 25 and 35 in each local authority area in Wales in receipt of housing benefit and not currently in receipt of the shared room rate will be affected by the change of the eligibility age for shared room rate. [84706]

Steve Webb: The requested information has been published in the equality impact assessment of the increase to the shared accommodation rate age threshold.

A copy has been placed in the library and it is available on the DWP website at:

http://www.dwp.Gov.uk/docs/eia-hb-shared-accommodation-age-threshold.pdf

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in receipt of housing benefit or local housing allowance in Wales contain (a) one, (b) two or (c) three or more non-dependent residents earning more than £200 a week. [84940]

Steve Webb: The information requested is not currently available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The Department does collect information on numbers of non-dependents from the housing benefit/council tax benefit data source (the single housing benefit extract) but to assess the completeness of recording and quality assure the figures to answer this question would incur disproportionate cost.

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people in receipt of housing benefit or local housing allowance also claim out-of-work benefits in (a) Wales and (b) each local authority area in Wales. [84943]

Steve Webb: The Family Resource Survey estimates that there are 100,000 benefit units in Wales, in receipt of both housing benefit and out-of-work benefits.

Estimates are based on survey data, and only allow for breakdowns to Government office region level, so information at local authority level is not available.

Notes:

1. The Family Resources Survey is a nationally representative sample of UK households. Data for 2009-10 were collected between April 2009 and March 2010.

2. The figures from the Family Resources Survey are based on a sample of households which have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the Family Resources Survey to Government office region population by age and sex. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.

3. Results have been rounded to the nearest 100,000 benefit units.

4. The Family Resource Survey captures information on housing benefit and local housing allowance, but does not explicitly differentiate between the two.

5. Out-of-work benefits cases have been defined as benefit units with at least one adult in receipt of one or more of the following benefits: income support, job-seeker's allowance, employment and support allowance or incapacity benefit.

6. The Family Resources Survey is known to under-record benefit receipt and so estimates should be treated with caution.

7. A benefit unit is defined as a single adult or a married or cohabiting couple and any dependent children; from January 2006 same-sex partners (civil partners and cohabitees) are included in the same benefit unit.

8. A dependent child is defined as an individual aged under 16. A person will also be defined as a child if they are 16 to 19 years old and they are:

Not married nor in a civil partnership nor living with a partner; and living with parents; and

In full-time non-advanced education or in unwaged Government training.

Income Support: Mortgages

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many claimants receiving income-related benefit were receiving support for mortgage interest in each month of the last five years in each Jobcentre Plus budget area. [83831]

Chris Grayling: The total numbers of claimants of pension credit (PC), income support (IS) and jobseeker's allowance (JSA) receiving mortgage interest by region, from May 2007 to May 2011, are available in the Library.

Pensioners: Income

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of pensioners had a net annual income of (a) up to £5,200, (b) £5,201 to £10,400, (c) £10,401 to £20,800, (d) £20,801 to £40,000, (e) £40,001 to £80,000 and (f) over £80,000 in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK in the latest year for which figures are available. [84266]

Steve Webb: The following table shows the percentage of pensioner units with net income in each band. Figures for Scotland are estimated by combining three years' data from 2007-08 to 2009-10. Figures for the UK are based on 2009-10 data. Reliable estimates of the percentage of pensioners receiving between £40,000 and £80,000 per year and over £80,000 per year are not possible with the data source, so the two groups have been combined.

Pensioner units with annual net income in each band

Percentage

	Up to £5,200	£5,200 to £10,400	£10,400 to £20,800	£20,800 to £40,000	Over £40,000
Scotland	3	27	48	19	4
UK	3	22	47	22	6

Notes:

1. Net income before housing costs is gross income less income tax payments, national insurance contributions, contributions to occupational and private pension schemes, local taxes, maintenance and child support payments, and parental contributions to children living away from home.
2. Based on survey data and as such subject to a degree of sampling and non sampling error.
3. All figures are rounded to the nearest 1%. Figures may not sum to 100% due to rounding.
4. Due to the small sample sizes involved in estimates below a national level, three years' data have been combined and the income band has been deflated to the appropriate year's prices.
5. A pensioner unit is either a single person over pension age or a couple in which at least one person is over pension age.

Personal Independence Payment: Multiple Sclerosis

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he plans to take to ensure that people with (a) multiple sclerosis and (b) other long-term degenerative conditions are not required to take part in a face-to-face assessment for personal independence payment where sufficient evidence is available to qualify them for the benefit without the need for an assessment that is face-to-face. [82985]

Maria Miller: The assessment for personal independence payment will be carried out by a trained, independent health professional. It will involve consideration of written evidence from the claimant and from relevant people involved in supporting them—such as their GP, hospital consultant or social worker. In most cases, we also expect the claim process to involve a face-to-face consultation between the claimant and the health professional, providing an opportunity to explore in detail the impact of their impairment on their everyday life.

While we believe that face-to-face consultations will be an important part of the process, we have made very clear that we intend to deliver this policy in a sensitive and proportionate way. For example, where we already have enough written evidence on which to make an accurate assessment, it would be inappropriate—and a waste of public money—to require individuals to attend a consultation. Individuals with long-term degenerative conditions are particularly likely to have such evidence available to support their claim.

We do believe that decisions on whether a consultation is appropriate should be made on a case-by-case basis—not based simply on the claimant's impairment type. This reflects the more personalised approach inherent to the new benefit. The only exception to this is for people claiming under the terminal illness provisions, who will not be required to attend a face-to-face consultation as part of their claim.

We are still developing the claims and assessment processes for personal independence payment and we will continue to work with disabled people and their organisations as we do so.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84185]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) uses postcodes in a variety of ways: for work allocation; contacting customers; research; matching records; and providing specific local payments. Specific examples include:

the administration of the Cold Weather Payment Scheme; to draw samples for inclusion in research studies and to contact people regarding involvement in research initiatives;

to allocate work from specific areas to the right Pensions Processing Centre; to automatically route state pension and pension credit telephone enquiries from the national number, to the appropriate pension centre;

Direct mailing initiatives, for example regarding benefit take-up; identifying areas where there are high volumes of vulnerable customers such as customers with disabilities, vulnerable pensioner groups etc.;

to investigate benefit and tax credit claims in a specific high fraud risk area, in order to uncover fraudulent claims.

Social Security Benefits: Durham

Pat Glass: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people who will cease to receive (a) incapacity benefit and (b) all benefits in North West Durham constituency as a consequence of his proposed changes to the benefits system. [84008]

Chris Grayling: No such estimate has been made.

The impacts of the proposed changes to the benefit system as set out in the Welfare Reform Bill are available in the associated impact assessments at the following link.

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/policy/welfare%2Dreform/legislation%2Dand%2Dkey%2Ddocuments/welfare%2Dreform%2Dbill%2D2011/impact%2Dassessments%2Dand%2Dequality/

The impacts of these proposals have been calculated at an aggregate, Great Britain, level and cannot be reliably broken down for smaller geographical areas.

The main forthcoming change to incapacity benefits is the proposal to time limit contributory employment and support allowance (ESA) to one year for those in the Work Related Activity Group. This is expected to affect around 700,000 people by 2015-16, of which around 60% are expected to be fully or partially compensated by income-related ESA, so will retain entitlement to ESA.

The remaining 40% are not expected to qualify for income-related ESA because they have other income, including that from a partner. These people will no longer receive ESA benefit payments, but will be able to retain national insurance credits by becoming an ESA credits-only claimant. They may also see increases in other benefits such as tax credits and housing benefit.

Social Security Benefits: Expenditure

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the total expenditure was on welfare benefits excluding pensions, in each parliamentary constituency in the last 12 months for which figures are available. [84874]

Chris Grayling: The available information for 2010-11 has been placed in the Library.

Benefit expenditure by parliamentary constituency is available only for the following benefits:

attendance allowance;
bereavement benefits;
carer's allowance;
disability living allowance;
incapacity benefit;
severe disablement allowance;
income support;
jobseeker's allowance;
pension credit;
state pension;
winter fuel payments; and employment and support allowance.

Benefit expenditure by parliamentary constituency can be found using the following URL:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/PC_expenditure.xls

Social Security Benefits: Peterborough

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of families in Peterborough constituency who will be affected by the proposed benefit cap from April 2013; and if he will make a statement. [84631]

Chris Grayling: We published an impact assessment for the introduction of the benefit cap on 16 February 2011. It can be found on the Department's website at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/household-benefit-cap-wr2011-ia.pdf

It estimates that, if the benefit cap were applied in full, around 50,000 households in Great Britain would have their benefits reduced by the policy. Sample sizes are too small to yield reliable results for areas smaller than the overall impacts for Great Britain.

Unemployment: Ex-servicemen

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) what estimate he has made of the number of former armed forces personnel who are (a) unemployed and (b) long-term unemployed; [83540]

(2) what estimate he has made of the average length of time it takes an individual to find work after leaving the armed forces. [83541]

Maria Miller: The Department for Work and Pensions does not routinely record whether benefit claimants are former armed forces personnel. We are looking into ways of improving knowledge on the employment and benefit outcomes of ex-service personnel.

Universal Credit

Mark Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on its proposals on the universal credit to date. [83925]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) has spent £41.2 million to date on the proposed delivery of universal credit; (£3.4 million in 2010-11 and £37.8 million in 2011-12 to the end of October).

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with local authorities on delivery of the universal credit; and if he will make a statement. [84565]

Chris Grayling: We are engaged with local authority staff at all levels. Local authorities are a key partner and we need to utilise their expertise, skills and success in order to design a modern welfare system that makes the most of the best of national and local services and delivers them from the most appropriate place.

There is a local authority chief executive represented on the Universal Credit Programme Board; the Local Government Association (LGA), Convention of Scottish Local Authorities (COSLA) and the Welsh Local Government Association (WLGA) are represented on the Universal Credit Senior Stakeholder Board, Universal Credit Transition Working Group, the Finance and Commercial Working Group and the Local Authority Associations Steering Group. We also have seconded staff to key positions from many local authorities.

We have also commenced a programme of visits to give individual local authorities an opportunity to feed directly into the UC programme as well as UC programme staff an opportunity to see the reality on the ground for local authorities.

Additionally, the Minister with responsibility for welfare reform, Lord Freud, has met with representatives from both the Society of Local Authority Chief Executives and Senior Managers, and the Local Government Association at which universal credit was discussed. Ministers will continue to engage with these local authority groups in the lead up to universal credit delivery.

Winter Fuel Payments

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will consider increasing the level of winter fuel payments over the next four years for pensioners over the age of 80. [84955]

Steve Webb: Decisions on the rate of winter fuel payments for future winters are generally made as part of the annual Budget cycle.

Winter Fuel Payments: Newport East

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much was paid in winter fuel payments to residents of Newport East constituency in 2010-11; and how much he expects to be paid to such recipients in 2011-12. [84760]

Steve Webb: The amount of winter fuel payments made to residents of Newport East constituency in 2010-11 was £3.3 million.

The number of people receiving winter fuel payments is expected to reduce slightly each winter due to the rise in the qualifying age linked to women's state pension age. However we expect the numbers to be broadly similar in winter 2011-12.

If the Newport East share of the total Great Britain expenditure in 2010-11 was maintained in 2011-12, the projected expenditure would be approximately £2.6 million.

Work Capability Assessment

James Wharton: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the potential effects of work capability assessment decisions on the level of unemployment since May 2010. [82922]

Chris Grayling: It is not possible to estimate the effects of the work capability assessment decisions on the level of unemployment.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2011, Official Report, columns 569-70W, on work capability assessment, how many reassessments of incapacity benefit claimants have resulted in a recommendation to his Department that the claimant (a) should not receive employment and support allowance (ESA) or (b) should receive ESA in the (i) support group or (ii) work related activity group; and in how many such reassessments his Department's decision was different to the original Atos decision. [84951]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is not available. Information on the number of work capability assessments (WCAs) completed can be provided using the Department's management information system, but to know the outcomes of the WCAs and the variation from the Atos recommendation requires individual level data.

Due to the overall length of the incapacity benefits reassessment process, information on the entire process including the final outcomes and subsequent destinations of claimants being reassessed is not yet available. Individual level data are being collected, but it will take time to complete because of the overall length of the reassessment process. The Department plans to publish data on the outcomes of the reassessment process, but only once they have been quality assured and are considered robust.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85051]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The information is not held in the format requested.

Of the 20 questions tabled to me for answer on a named day between 1 June and 30 November 2011, 19 were answered substantively on the specified date.

Duchy of Cornwall

Dan Rogerson: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether the Duchy of Cornwall is an Office of State. [85022]

Mr Harper: The Duchy of Cornwall is a private estate that funds the public, charitable and private activities of the Prince of Wales, the Duchess of Cornwall, the Duke and Duchess of Cambridge and Prince Harry.

EDUCATION

Academies: Private Finance Initiative

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what reports he has received of planned academy schools not going ahead due to difficulties with private finance initiative arrangements; which schools have been affected; when he expects to resolve this issue; and when he expects the planned academies to go ahead. [75334]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 18 October 2011]: A number of banks which finance PFI contracts have raised concerns as to whether local authorities have the legal power to make payments in relation to PFI academies. They are withholding their consent to PFI schools becoming academies until these concerns are resolved beyond doubt.

At the same time, a number of banks have been happy to proceed and a number of schools with PFI contracts have successfully converted to become academies. 16 schools have been affected while 24 have converted to become academies.

Local authorities do currently have the power to make these contractual payments on academies' behalf. However, we recognised the demand for this to be clarified more explicitly, which is why we have now amended the Academies Act 2010 accordingly. We hope and expect that the affected schools will now be able to proceed with their applications to convert to academy status.

Academies: Redditch

Karen Lumley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent assessment he has made of the effect of academies on educational (a) equalities and (b) attainment in Redditch. [83023]

Mr Gibb: We believe that teachers and head teachers know best how to run schools. Academies give them the freedoms and flexibilities to help drive up standards, narrow the gap in educational attainment and ensure that all pupils are equally able to fulfil their potential.

There are no results available for the one academy in Redditch, Trinity High School, as the school converted to academy status in August 2011.

Bus Services: Concessions

Mr Graham Stuart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the need to provide concessionary bus fares for 16 to 18-year-olds following the raising of the participation age. [82338]

Mr Gibb: Under our proposals to raise the participation age, 16 to 18-year-olds will have a duty to participate, but not necessarily in full-time education. Young people aged 16 to 18 will still be able to leave school and will have a range of options they can take and many young people will also undertake part-time work while they are studying.

Transport represents one of the main costs associated with participation post-16. That is why the £180 million 16-19 Bursary Fund introduced from September 2011, will have the flexibility to help meet transport costs for individual students.

This sits alongside the duty on local authorities to publish a statement each year that sets out the travel arrangements they consider necessary to enable young people of sixth form age to attend post-16 education.

Child Protection

Steve McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made of the publication by the National Deaf Children's Society entitled Social care for deaf children and young people: a guide to assessment and child protection investigations for social care practitioners; and whether his Department has any plans to (a) promote and (b) disseminate the guide and associated audit tool. [82530]

Tim Loughton: The guide was considered by the Munro Review and highlighted as an example of good practice in meeting particular needs. It is for the National Deaf Children's Society and not Government to promote and disseminate the guide and associated audit tool further.

Steve McCabe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he last had contact with the Local Safeguarding Children Board in Birmingham on arrangements for deaf children; and if he will review the existing arrangements. [82531]

Tim Loughton: Ministers have not had contact with the Local Safeguarding Children Board in Birmingham on this issue recently. The Local Safeguarding Children Board, rather than Government, is best placed to decide priorities in that locality.

Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83795]

Tim Loughton: The Department for Education's and its public bodies' caterers must comply with Government Buying Standards for Food and Catering. The Department ensures through its contract management process that updates are received quarterly with regard to the compliance with the standards.

Education: Romford

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much funding his Department has provided to (a) (i) primary and (ii) secondary schools and (b) sixth forms and colleges in Romford constituency in 2010-11. [83144]

Mr Gibb: Figures are not available for the parliamentary constituency of Romford as data are collected at a local authority level. The Department funds local authorities for their pupils and not individual maintained schools. The total funding provided by the Department for Education in the London borough of Havering in 2010-11 is shown in the following table:

	£ million
Dedicated Schools Grant, other schools grant and academy funding	185,066,875
Schools sixth forms and colleges	37,358,053

Employment: Young People

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make an assessment of (a) the teaching of basic skills in schools in improving the employability of school leavers and (b) the findings of the British Chambers of Commerce's Skills Report on the confidence of businesses in recruiting school-leavers with A-levels. [83701]

Mr Gibb: The Government are committed to improving the employability of school leavers. In her report on vocational education, Professor Wolf found that achievement in English and maths is fundamental to future employment. We are currently implementing Professor Wolf's recommendations to improve the vocational offer for 14 to 19-year-olds by ensuring that more young people achieve at least grade C in English and maths GCSE by the age of 19. We have also introduced the English baccalaureate to encourage young people to study English and maths and those GCSE subjects which are most likely to help them progress to further study or employment.

The British Chambers of Commerce report points to a lack of confidence among many businesses in recruiting a school leaver with A levels. The Government are totally committed to ensuring that A levels are robust, rigorous and relevant—to match the best education systems in the world and to keep pace with businesses' and universities' demands. We are working with Ofqual on implementing our commitment, set out in "The Importance of Teaching—The Schools White Paper 2010", to establish a stronger role for higher education (HE) and learned bodies in the design of A levels.

Free Schools

Chris Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many civil servants in his Department are employed to work on free schools policy. [83475]

Mr Gibb: As at 24 November 2011, there are around 100 civil servants in the Department's Free School Group employed on policy and implementation work in connection with free schools, and about a further 20 involved with university technical colleges and studio schools.

Further Education: Finance

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the total funding is for 16 to 18 education (a) in total and (b) per capita in (i) Birmingham, (ii) Newcastle, (iii) Wakefield, (iv) Manchester, (v) Leeds, (vi) Liverpool, (vii) Coventry, (viii) Bristol, (ix) Sheffield, (x) Bradford, (xi) Leicester and (xii) Nottingham in each of the next five years. [82766]

Mr Gibb: The most recent Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA) grant letter for 2011-12 sets out the total budget for the YPLA this financial year[1]. The total budget for 16 to 19 education and training places in the financial year 2011-12 is over £7.5 billion. It is not possible to split out the funding for 2011-12 on a city basis because funding is predominantly allocated directly to 16 to 19 providers rather than via local authorities or regional/city bodies. The 16 to 19 funding allocations to individual providers (excluding 16 to 18 apprenticeships) are available on the YPLA website, however, at the following web address:

http://www.ypla.gov.uk/aboutus/ourwork/funding/allocations/

Details on the indicative funding for 16 to 19 participation in education and training beyond 2011-12 are not yet agreed.

Higher Education: Admissions

Damian Hinds: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the average UCAS points score of first year undergraduate students was in each of the last 10 years. [81246]

Mr Willetts: I have been asked to reply.

The latest information is given in the following table and has been provided by the Universities and Colleges Admissions Service (UCAS). Final figures for 2011 have not yet been released.

Average UCAS tariff points score of UK domiciled accepted applicants 2002 to 2010[1]

Year of entry[2]	Average score[3]
2002	284.9
2003	296.2
2004	304.8
2005	306.6
2006	312.8
2007	315.1
2008	312.3
2009	314.3
2010	323.6

[1] The UCAS Tariff was first introduced in the 2002 application cycle.

[2] Includes applicants who applied in each of these years for deferred entry in the following year.

[3] The Tariff has only been reported for applicants domiciled in the UK, and excludes those with a tariff score of 0, or where the tariff score is not known. The scores cover only those qualifications notified to UCAS via the Awarding Body Link (ABL). Results available through the ABL arrangements cover a variety, but often limited number, of examination sittings depending upon the qualifications and the awarding body concerned—in many instances results are restricted to the most recent summer sittings (although GCE A levels cover qualifications sat in the last 18 months and SQA for a much longer period). Those qualifications that were not part of ABL arrangements, or those where the data upon which the qualification sat fell outside of the ABL arrangements, or where qualifications for which qualifications could not be analysed e.g. BTEC, have not been reported.

School Meals: Standards

Mrs Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he has plans to bring forward proposals to repeal or amend the provisions of the Education (Nutritional Standards for School Lunches) (England) Regulations 2006. [81134]

Sarah Teather: The School Food Regulations 2006 came into force in September 2006. The Department has no plans to repeal the regulations, as our policy is to increase the take-up of healthy school lunches. We are currently considering whether the regulations need updating, for example to keep in line with the guidelines of the Statutory Advisory Committee on Nutrition.

Schools: Admissions

Mr Umunna: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many representations he has received on shortages of (a) primary school places and (b) secondary school places in Lambeth in the last 12 months. [83852]

Mr Gibb: On 10 November 2011, the Secretary of State for Education, my right hon. Friend the Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove), received a delegation led by local Members of Parliament and senior officers from Lambeth and Southwark borough councils to discuss primary school place issues. The Department has also received written representations from Lambeth council about the methodology used to allocate the additional £500 million basic need funding. Discussions with Lambeth council officers continue, but the allocation of funding announced on 3 November 2011 was made in an equitable manner, based on 2011 schools capacity data and 2013/14 pupil forecast numbers provided by the local authority.

Schools: Colchester

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many demountable classrooms there were in Colchester constituency in (a) May 1997 and (b) May 2010. [84741]

Mr Gibb: Information is not held centrally on numbers of demountable classrooms in Colchester in 1997 and 2010.

Special Educational Needs

Dr Poulter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether he plans to review the level of special educational needs (SEN) funding allocated to academies within the remit of local authorities that already undertake a SEN audit. [82603]

Mr Gibb: Funding for pupils with high cost special educational needs (SEN) is the responsibility of local authorities. Specific arrangements vary from local authority to local authority.

The Secretary of State for Education, my right hon. Friend the Member for Surrey Heath (Michael Gove) has recently consulted on wide-ranging reforms to school and academy funding, which include proposals relating to high cost pupils. The results of this consultation and further consultation on detailed future proposals will be announced in due course.

University Technical Colleges

Esther McVey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment he has made on the potential effect of university technical colleges on the development of (a) green energy and (b) other emerging markets. [82875]

Mr Gibb: The development of university technical colleges (UTCs) provides the opportunity for universities and employers to establish new schools specialising in technical education to meet economic and skills needs. These may well include green technologies and other emerging priority areas which are important to economic growth both locally and nationally.

There are 17 UTC projects in the pre-opening phase. They have a variety of specialisms including the Bristol and South Gloucestershire UTC specialising in engineering and environment technologies, the Daventry UTC specialising in new technologies which include environmental sustainability and sustainable construction, the Nottingham UTC specialising in advanced manufacturing and low carbon technologies, and the Wigan UTC specialising in manufacturing engineering and green energy and environment technologies.

We are committed to at least 24 UTCs before the end of the Parliament. These will help ensure that more school leavers each year have had a high quality technical education enabling them to go on to higher or further education, employment or an apprenticeship, while addressing the needs of employment and the economy.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Stephen Crouch

Lisa Nandy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what meetings (a) he, (b) his Ministers and (c) senior officials of his Department have had with Stephen Crouch since May 2010. [84702]

Mr Duncan: Details of all Ministers external meetings are available on the DFID website:

http://www.dfid.gov.uk/About-DFID/Our-organisation1/Ministers/and are published every quarter in the normal way.

WOMEN AND EQUALITIES

Civil Partnerships: Ceremonies

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Minister for Women and Equalities pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Chris Bryant) of 15 September 2011, Official Report, column 1180, on civil partnership ceremonies, which organisations have registered their (a) support for and (b) opposition to legal reform to permit homosexual marriage; and if she will make a statement. [84168]

Lynne Featherstone: We announced on 17 September 2011 our intention to publish a formal consultation on equal civil marriage in March 2012. This would allow us to make any legislative changes before the end of this Parliament.

From now until the publication of the consultation we will be meeting with a wide range of people with an interest in this issue, including lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender groups and religious and non-religious organisations to help shape the formal consultation document. These discussions have been held on a confidential basis and we have not asked organisations to register their support or opposition for this policy. When the consultation opens in March 2012, we will welcome comments from a wide range of organisations and individuals.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service: Grimsby

Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate he has made of the redundancy costs resulting from the closure of the Grimsby office of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS); what the financial saving to the CPS will be; and what his estimate is of the travel costs of CPS staff coming from Hull to handle cases in Grimsby as a result of the closure of the CPS Grimsby office. [84251]

The Attorney-General: No staff were made redundant following the closure of the Grimsby office of the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS). However, local managers took the decision to give preference, under the voluntary exit scheme, to those based in Grimsby who did not wish to move to the Hull office. The principal financial saving will be approximately £150,000 in rent and associated building costs. This figure will be offset by travel assistance given to relocated staff for the first three years. There is no extra cost in staff travelling to Grimsby from Hull, as managers have agreed to deploy those staff living near the court who will travel there from home.

Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General how many staff of Grimsby Crown Prosecution Service Unit have (a) transferred to Hull Crown Prosecution Service and (b) taken redundancy under the voluntary exit scheme following the closure of the Grimsby unit. [84339]

The Attorney-General: Of the staff previously based at the Grimsby office, 22 are now based at Hull. One works from the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) office based at Lincoln at his own request. Three are working from offices within the courts at Grimsby and 15 took advantage of the voluntary exit scheme.

Austin Mitchell: To ask the Attorney-General what consultations his Department had with (a) police in South Humberside, (b) North East Lincolnshire Council, (c) hon. Members representing constituencies near Grimsby and (d) Grimsby and District Law Society before the decision was made to close the Grimsby Office of the Crown Prosecution Service. [84340]

The Attorney-General: The decision to close the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) office at Grimsby was taken after it became apparent that the primary lease holders were leaving, and it would not be possible to stay in that building. The CPS consulted with the police and the courts as key partners.

On the basis that the decision to close the Grimsby office was an operational matter for the Service, wider consultation was not considered.

Crown Prosecution Service: ICT

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General what funding the Crown Prosecution Service has allocated to the introduction of tablet devices as part of its Transforming Through Technology programme. [84320]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is conducting commercial discussions with a view to introducing tablet devices as part of its Transforming Through Technology (T3) programme. No funding has yet been allocated while the commercial discussions continue.

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General whether the tablet devices being introduced by the Crown Prosecution Service as part of its Transforming Through Technology programme have been subject to a health and safety assessment. [84321]

The Attorney-General: The tablet devices that are being introduced as part of the Transformation Through Technology (T3) programme are covered by the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992. Those CPS staff who use the new devices will be advised to undertake a display screen equipment self-assessment. These assessments should cover the use of the tablet device in all locations and with all software applications. Following the assessments, should staff require adaptations or additional equipment this will be provided on an individual basis.

In addition to the display screen equipment self-assessments, local health and safety managers will be updating workplace risk assessments which will include the use of tablet devices in CPS offices, court rooms, and other sites as necessary. Local health and safety managers will also be updating manual handling risk assessments which will include the movement of tablet devices and any peripheral equipment by CPS staff.

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General what the weight is of the tablet devices being introduced by the Crown Prosecution Service as part of its Transforming Through Technology programme; and whether lecterns will be required in courtrooms to enable their use. [84322]

The Attorney-General: The tablet-style device weighs 1.8 kg.

As part of the deployment of the tablet-style devices, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) will not routinely be equipping courtrooms with lecterns. The Department has sourced various styles of lectern for use with tablet devices if they should be needed. These will be trialled as part of the tablet deployment programme.

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General what estimate he has made of the proportion of the Crown Prosecution Service's planned budgetary savings from (a) voluntary staff redundancies and (b) the Transforming Through Technology programme. [84323]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) estimates that voluntary staff redundancies will account for 15% of the planned budgetary savings in the current spending review period.

The CPS estimates that the Transforming Through Technology programme will account for 13.5% of the planned budgetary savings in the current spending review period.

Departmental ICT

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General what assessment his Department has made of how long the tablet devices being introduced as part of the Transforming Through Technology programme will be in service. [84319]

The Attorney-General: The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is currently introducing the use of tablet devices as part of its prosecution of cases. The tablet devices currently being used in trials will be used until at least 2015. The length of time that a particular device may stay in service will be examined as part of the trials that are being conducted in December 2011 and January 2012 prior to wider roll-out in February and March 2012.

HEALTH

Alcoholic Drinks: Prices

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations he has received from the retail and drinks industry on the introduction of a minimum unit price for alcohol. [84380]

Anne Milton: The Home Office has lead responsibility within Government for alcohol pricing issues. In the last three months, the Department of Health's alcohol policy team has received two representations from the retail and drinks industry on the introduction of a minimum unit price for alcohol.

A search of the Department's ministerial correspondence database has not identified any correspondence received since 1 September 2011 from the retail and drinks industry about the introduction of a minimum unit price for alcohol.

Antibiotics

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of viable new antibiotics in development or testing; and what recent assessment he has made of the development pipeline for antibiotics. [84281]

Mr Simon Burns: Currently there are two new agents in development with the potential to act against the difficult to treat multi-resistant Gram negative bacteria[1].

We are actively encouraging further drug development and pressing for greater research collaboration at an international level as recommended in the new European strategic action plan[2].

Cancer: Drugs

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients in each primary care trust area have received NHS medication through the Cancer Drugs Fund since its creation. [84344]

Mr Simon Burns: Information at primary care trust level is not collected centrally.

The Cancer Drugs Fund was launched on 1 April 2011 to help thousands of cancer patients access the drugs their clinicians believe will help them. We made an additional £50 million available to strategic health authorities (SHAs) in 2010-11 to support improved access to cancer drugs.

Since 1 October 2010, this funding has helped over 7,500 cancer patients in England to access the cancer drugs their clinicians recommended.

Information on the number of patients who received treatment in each SHA under the interim cancer drugs funding arrangements in 2010-11 (from October 2010 to March 2011) and under the Cancer Drugs Fund in 2011-12 (to September 2011) is shown in the following table.

	Number of patients[1]
SHA	2010-11 (October to March)	2011-12 (April to September)
North East	420	340
North West	266	501
Yorkshire and Humber	178	374
East Midlands	178	448
West Midlands	292	771
East of England	246	360
London	443	553
South East Coast	306	498
South Central	290	360
South West	161	611
Total	2,780	4,816

[1] Some individual patients may be double counted where a patient has received more than one drug treatment.

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) monetary value and (b) net worth was of each such contract. [83924]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department has awarded 194 contracts to Capita and its related organisations since May 2010.

The following table shows the number of contracts and monetary value.

Supplier name	Number of purchase orders	Purchase order value (£)
Capita Business Services Ltd	11	428,578.08
Capita Health Solutions Colchester	13	3,571.96
Capita Resourcing Ltd	122	2,519,192.86
Capita Secure Information Systems Ltd	1	2,500.00
Capita SHG Resourcing	13	790,916.60
Capita Symonds Ltd	34	317,554.37
Grand total	194	4,062,313.87

Note:
A Purchase order represents an individual contract with Capita.

Children: Finance

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding in total (a) was paid in 2010-11 and (b) will be paid in 2011-12 to (i) the Family Planning Association, (ii) After Adoption Yorkshire, (iii) the National Children's Bureau, (iv) UK Youth, (v) Youthnet, (vi) the Children's Society and (vii) the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children; and if he will make a statement. [84755]

Anne Milton: The Department can confirm that funding was allocated to the named organisations as follows:

Recipient organisations	2010-11	2011-12
Family Planning Association	1,685,375	1,721,200
After Adoption Yorkshire	150,000	36,427
National Children's Bureau	459,950	469,611
UK Youth	103,410	71,130
Children's Society	239,995	215,000
Youthnet	364,049	169,965
NSPCC	0	53,918
Total	3,002,779	2,737,251

It should be noted that funding for 2011-12 represents the latest allocations and additional funding could be allocated in the remaining months of the financial year.

Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence

Stephen Barclay: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the most recent meeting took place of the executive of the Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence; and what matters were discussed at that meeting. [84633]

Anne Milton: The most recent meeting of the Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence was on 15 November 2011.

Discussions at that meeting covered performance, financial, legislative and strategic matters.

Minutes of the meeting are not yet published. Minutes of previous meetings are available on the council's website at:

www.chre.org.uk/council/59/

Death Certificates

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what impact assessment his Department has undertaken of the proposed transfer of responsibility for the certification of deaths from primary care trusts to upper tier local authorities; [84692]

(2) if he will make it his policy to evaluate pilots of proposed responsibilities for certification of deaths before proceeding with the transfer of such responsibilities to upper tier local authorities; [84693]

(3) what public consultation he is undertaking on the proposed transfer of responsibility for certifying deaths. [84694]

Anne Milton: The transfer of responsibilities from primary care trusts to local authorities for appointing medical examiners and related activities for death certification was agreed with the Department for Communities and Local Government alongside the transfer of wider responsibilities for public health. Local authorities already manage the coroners and registration services, both of which will require collaborative working with the new medical examiner services.

The Department of Health is working with local government organisations to ensure that the new service is sustainably resourced. There will be full consultation on the new arrangements in spring 2012.

Dementia: Research

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on research on the (a) causes and (b) treatment of dementia since 2010. [84085]

Paul Burstow: Dementia is a research priority for the Government. Through the National Institute for Health Research (NIHR) and the Policy Research Programme, the Department funds a wide range of research on dementia including research on causes, diagnosis, treatment, and organisation and delivery of health and social care services. The Department's expenditure on dementia research increased from £12.7 million in 2009-10 to £18.6 million in 2010-11. Expenditure specifically on causes and treatment cannot be disaggregated from these figures.

The NIHR has issued a themed call on dementia. This call extends across the translational pathway, covering the fields of cause, cure and care, including prevention. In addition, four new NIHR biomedical research units in dementia will receive a total of £18 million over five years from April 2012.

Advisory Services

Jonathan Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution his Department has made to the cross-Government review of advice funding announced in July 2011. [84338]

Paul Burstow: The Government announced on 21 November 2011 that the Cabinet Office would be conducting a review of the free advice service sector to ensure that people continue to have access to good quality free advice services in their communities.

Work has now started on the review which will conclude early next year with recommendations to Ministers.

The review will build on work that has already been done across Government on funding issues facing the not-for-profit advice sector.

The review is considering the funding environment for free advice services, likely levels of demand, and how Government can play a positive role.

The review will be led by Cabinet Office who will be involving other Departments with an interest in free advice services. The Department of Health is keen to ensure that people continue to have access to good quality free advice in their communities and will therefore play an active role in the review.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84190]

Mr Simon Burns: An organogram for the Department's communications staff is available at:

http://data.gov.uk/organogram/department-of-health

Current figures were collated in March 2011. Updated figures from September 2011 will be published imminently.

Staffing figures for the Department's agency and non-departmental public bodies are included in the following table:

Communications	Figures (whole time equivalent) as at:	(a) Press officers	(b) Internal communications officers	(c) External communications officers	(d) Communications strategy officers
Alcohol Education and Research Council	30 September 2011	0	0	0	0
Appointments Commission	30 September 2011	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—	[1]—
Care Quality Commission	30 September 2011	8	3	16.5	0

Communications	Figures (whole time equivalent) as at:	(a) Press officers	(b) Internal communications officers	(c) External communications officers	(d) Communications strategy officers
Monitor	29 November 2011	2	1.5	3.5	1
Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency[5]	29 November 2011	3	1	0	1

[1] Appointments Commission has one post holder who undertakes all Communications activity and it is not possible to determine the split between the roles (a) to (d)
[2] Council for Healthcare Regulatory Excellence has one post holder who undertakes all Communications activity and it is not possible to determine the split between the roles (a) to (d)
[3] Health Protection Agency has a total of 29 staff who work across all these disciplines. (Of these, 19 staff are locally embedded across the country; six are sited at Colindale; two at Chilton; one at Porton; and one at head office).
[4] The HTA has a communications team of four people who are generalists.
[5] Denotes executive agency.

Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases; [83889]

(2) what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83912]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department dealt with 137 potential or actual judicial review claims brought against it in the last five years. The additional information requested such as which of these organisations has received any funding from the Department and the success of these actions is not held on a central record. To provide this information would involve examining open files and recalling closed files from storage. This could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

The Department's policy on recovery of legal costs follows that of the Treasury Solicitor's Department. The Department will always seek an order for costs when successful in litigation, provided that it is both legally possible and appropriate in the circumstances. However, as many litigants are legally aided, an order is not pursued unless there is a change in financial circumstances.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84189]

Mr Simon Burns: Since May 2010, the Department has held 25 receptions and events have been held; 19 in Skipton house and six in Richmond house, including Remembrance Sunday in both 2010 and 2011. Four have been sponsored by third parties.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85077]

Mr Simon Burns: No civil servants in the Department, employed either on permanent or fixed-term contracts are paid by means of payments to limited companies. Similarly, no senior staff of the Department's Executive agency, the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency, or its other non-departmental public bodies are paid in this manner.

It is not the Department's policy to permit payments to civil servants by way of limited companies.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84234]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department's central procurement database does hold information on expenditure with external suppliers. However, it does not have a category for outsourced services. To obtain this information we would need to contact each business area and directorate in the Department requiring them to check their records to obtain information about the services that were previously performed internally, but then have been outsourced. This undertaking would amount to a substantial effort across the Department and could be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

Regulations

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what regulations his Department introduced in each financial year between 1997-98 and 2009-10; and what the estimated cost of implementation was in each case. [84361]

Mr Simon Burns: The analysis of central records required in order to provide the information requested could be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

Health Services: Males

Mr Virendra Sharma: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he is taking to ensure cardiovascular disease in men is diagnosed as early as possible; [84285]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that type 2 diabetes in men is diagnosed as early as possible. [84286]

Mr Simon Burns: The NHS Health Check programme is a national public health programme for people in England aged 40-74. The purpose of the programme is to identify an individual's risk of heart disease, stroke, kidney disease and diabetes, and for that risk to be managed through appropriate follow up.

The programme is aimed at tackling inequalities, including inequalities in gender. Primary care trusts are, therefore, commissioning programmes which aim to reach those who are not in touch with formal healthcare, including programmes to increase the take up of the NHS Health Check among men.

In addition, there are a number of strands of work to ensure cardiovascular disease and diabetes are recognised and treated early in all patients, including:

Raising awareness of the symptoms of stroke through the Act FAST campaign so that people get to hospital quicker and receive life saving treatment.

Use of statins (cholesterol lowering drugs). Around 6-8 million people are receiving statins, saving an estimated 10,000 lives every year. These are now also available over the counter rather than solely by prescription enabling more people to benefit.

Tackling atrial fibrillation (AF). NHS Improvement is working with general practitioners (GPs) to ensure a systematic approach to the identification, diagnosis and optimal management of patients with AF; developing clear guidelines on anticoagulation to ensure that patients who have AF are appropriately anticoagulated, and continuing to promote opportunistic, screening for AF with the Atrial Fibrillation Association and the Stroke Association.

The guidelines and algorithm published by NHS Diabetes and the Royal College of GPs in March 2011 will help GPs diagnose diabetes accurately for every patient. The new audit tools that have also been developed will help GPs to share information and look at similar cases to help to resolve even the most difficult of cases.

GP training includes acquiring competence in recognising and managing appropriate aspects of diabetes.

Health Services: Sexual Offences

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent steps the Government have taken to improve the provision of health services to victims of sexual crime in the West Midlands. [84088]

Anne Milton: In 2010-11, the Home Office and the Department jointly funded the development of a health needs assessment of sexual violence in the West Midlands Police Force area and awarded grants to improve forensic medical services at the Rowan centres in Castle Vale and Walsall. The health needs assessment is complete and local partners are considering how best to develop sexual assault referral services to meet needs.

Health: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of the provisions of the Health and Social Care Bill on (a) patient safety and (b) safeguarding children in London. [84546]

Mr Simon Burns: Clause 20 of the Health and Social Care Bill inserts section 13Q into the National Health Service Act 2006 and is intended to give the NHS Commissioning Board responsibility for the functions currently carried out by the National Patient Safety Agency in respect of reporting and learning from patient safety incidents. The intention is to ensure that patient safety is embedded into the health service through commissioning and the contracts commissioners agree with providers.

The NHS Commissioning Board will be uniquely placed in the system to utilise the information gathered by the reporting and learning function to support, encourage and enable safety improvement in the NHS. It will be able to combine insight from safety reporting with operational knowledge, leadership, authority and system oversight, to ensure appropriate levers, initiatives and support are provided to the NHS to improve safety.

It is essential that current safeguarding responsibilities are sustained and taken over by new organisations such as clinical commissioning groups. NHS bodies have a statutory duty to make arrangements to safeguard and promote the welfare of children, and are statutory members of Local Safeguarding Children Boards. These duties will transfer to the new organisations under the Health and Social Care Bill.

In response to a recommendation in Professor Eileen Munro's review of child protection, the Department of Health and the Department for Education published on 31 October a work programme, co-produced with key partners, to ensure that effective arrangements to safeguard children are central to the health reforms.

As part of that programme, work is in hand to develop an accountability framework for the NHS contribution to safeguarding children, setting out more detail on the proposed new arrangements. This will set the framework for development both within the NHS and in local partnership arrangements.

Health: Screening

Mr Virendra Sharma: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he has any plans to include testosterone tests as part of the assessment of diabetes risk in the men's health check; [84259]

(2) whether he has any plans to update the range of tests conducted under the NHS Health Check programme. [84287]

Mr Simon Burns: The NHS Health Check programme is based on guidance produced by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence—which reviews the clinical and cost-effectiveness of interventions in medicine and advises on how to improve people's health and prevent illness—and on economic modelling undertaken by the Department. We continue to keep the components of the NHS Health Check under review as new evidence emerges.

NHS Trusts: Finance

Dr Poulter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the (a) debt and (b) revenue budget balance has been of each NHS hospital trust in England outside of London in each of the last four years. [84265]

Mr Simon Burns: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

NHS Trusts: Private Finance Initiative

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what payment would have to be made to enable the relevant health care trust to exit each private finance initiative contract signed by his Department between 1997 and 2010. [84347]

Mr Simon Burns: Under a private finance initiative contract, national health service trusts may terminate the contract with notice at any time, without having to prove right and regardless of any prejudice to the private sector. Under these circumstances, compensation would be payable to the contractor on a trust default basis, the financial calculations of which aim to put the contractor in a position that is equivalent to that had the contract run its full length. The size of the agreed payment will thus be specific to individual schemes.

NHS: Negligence

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many clinical negligence claims involving a fatality were made in each year since 1997-8; and what the monetary value was of payments made against such claims in each year. [84345]

Mr Simon Burns: The following table shows the number of clinical negligence fatality claims by the year in which they were notified to the NHS Litigation Authority (NHSLA), the number of claims closed in each year, and the damage paid in each year since 1997-98.

		Claims closed
NHSLA notification year	Number of claims received	Number Closed	Damages paid (£)
1997-98	223	223	14,275,129
1998-99	659	659	24,600,103

NHS: Pensions

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the NHS paid in employer contributions to NHS pensions in each financial year since 1997-98 in respect of (a) senior managers, (b) general practitioners and (c) nurses. [84342]

Mr Simon Burns: It is not possible to segregate pension contributions by job type in respect of senior managers, general practitioners (GPs) and nurses from 1997. Employers pay contributions for all their employees and do not break down the contributions to job type level. Analysis of this data would involve disproportionate costs.

Data relating to GPs and employer contributions are available from 2009. The following table provided by the NHS Pensions Agency illustrates the sum of contributions paid by GPs between 2009-11.

GP contributions to the NHS Pension Scheme	2009-10	2010-11
Employer contributions	463,000	470,754
Employee contributions	365,858	317,225
Total contributions	829,426	787,979

Source:
The NHS Pension Scheme and NHS Compensation for retirement Scheme Resource Accounts.

GP practices are required to pay the 14% employee contribution for all staff who are members of the NHS pension scheme, including GP partners who own the practice itself. As part of the new contractual and payment arrangements agreed with the GPs Committee of the British Medical Association in 2004, GP practices are provided with the necessary funding to fully meet the required employers pension contributions.

Contributions made by and on behalf of GPs are to pay for pension promises being built up and are assessed by the Scheme Actuary using SCAPE methodology (Superannuation Contributions Adjusted for Past Experience).

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of retired members of the NHS pension scheme who are in receipt of £33,000 or more per year as part of their NHS pension. [84343]

Mr Simon Burns: The number of retired members of the NHS Pension Scheme who are in receipt of over £33,000 per year, and excluding any lump sum payments or any pensions arrears is as follows:

	Pensioners
2010-11	25,531
2009-10	23,499
2008-09	20,057

The data were provided by the NHS Pensions Agency.

NHS: Public Bodies

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date each (a) foundation trust, (b) NHS social enterprise, (c) pathfinder clinical commissioning group, (d) practice-based commissioning groups and (e) pathfinder health and wellbeing board in England was established; for each such body which has since ceased to exist, what the date of closure was; and which constituencies each such body serves. [84346]

Mr Simon Burns: Monitor (the statutory name of which is the Independent Regulator of NHS Foundation Trusts) has authorised 141 national health service foundation trusts. A table listing the organisations and their authorisation dates (as at 1 December 2011) has been placed in the Library.

Since its introduction in 2008, 40 social enterprises have been established under the Right to Request policy by NHS staff working in primary and community care. These social enterprises comprise approximately 10% of community staff and 11% of the community services budget. A table listing the organisations and their go-live dates (as of 30 November 2011) has been placed in the Library.

The pathfinder clinical commissioning group (CCGs) programme is about testing the principles of our proposals for clinical commissioning groups. As such pathfinder CCGs will be able to change their composition, as they work to find the most appropriate configuration for improving care for their patients, before they apply to the NHS Commissioning Board for to be established. With the announcement of Cohort 6 of the pathfinder programme 266 pathfinder CCGs were in existence.

A complete list of those CCGs is available on the Department's website at:

http://healthandcare.dh.gov.uk/context/consortia/

The cohorts were announced as follows:

Cohort 1: 8 December 2010

Cohort 2: 17 January 2011

Cohort 3: 2 March 2011

Cohort 4: 1 April 2011

Cohort 5: 7 July 2011

Cohort 6: 10 October 2011

Information on practice based commissioning groups is not held centrally.

It is for partners in local areas to establish their own arrangements and time scales for setting up health and wellbeing boards.

Obesity: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his policy is on tackling childhood obesity; and if he will make a statement. [84378]

Anne Milton: The Government have recently published "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: A call to action on obesity in England". This sets out how obesity among children will be tackled in the new public health and national health service systems, and the role of key partners.

The Government have set a new national ambition for reversing the trend in the level of excess weight in children by 2020. The call to action sets out a number of initiatives to tackle childhood obesity, this includes the Change4Life Programme, the National Child Measurement Programme, the school games and Change4Life sports clubs.

A copy of the call to action has already been placed in the Library.

Patients

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients have been treated by the NHS in each of the last 10 years. [84327]

Out-patient and in-patient hospital activity, England (provider based)

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84188]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department uses postcode information in a wide range of analytical and statistical systems, typically as a means to link datasets together or to relate data to larger geographical areas such as local authority areas and the output areas defined by the Office for National Statistics for use in reporting census data and other statistical products.

For example, in calculating primary care trust target revenue allocations, the Department obtains data from national health service systems on the number of patients registered with general practices by postcode. This information is used to estimate the number of general practice registrations in output areas for which other information is available, such as estimates of levels of deprivation. Departmental outputs are not typically published at postcode level.

A full listing of all uses of postcode data could be provided only at disproportionate cost. We are also unable to identify the very wide use of postcode data within the NHS, except at disproportionate cost.

Pregnant Women: Coventry

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services are provided by his Department to partners of expectant mothers in Coventry. [84087]

Anne Milton: Local national health service organisations develop health services to meet the needs and priorities of their populations. To help this process the Department recently launched three resources: "Preparing for Birth and Beyond", "Reaching out: Involving fathers in maternity care" and "Top tips for involving fathers in maternity care".

These publications have been placed in the Library.

Radiotherapy

Tessa Munt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospitals provide Stereotactic Body Radiotherapy Treatment (SBRT) for cancer patients; and how many (a) early stage lung cancer and (b) prostate cancer patients were treated with SBRT in each hospital in the last year for which figures are available; [84003]

(2) on what date the National Clinical Director for Cancer informed him of the need to develop a stereotactic body radiotherapy tariff; who in his Department is responsible for the development of the tariff; what progress his Department has made in developing the tariff; and when he expects to make the national tariff for stereotactic radiotherapy available to commissioners; [84004]

(3) pursuant to the answers of 27 June 2011, Official Report, column 536W, of 10 October 2011, Official Report, columns 311-12W and of 2 November 2011, Official Report, columns 636-7W, on radiotherapy, whether commissioners are able to spend the extra £150 million allocated for new radiotherapy services on services unrelated to radiotherapy or the treatment of cancer. [84021]

Paul Burstow: The £150 million additional funding is included in overall primary care trust (PCT) baseline allocations. These allocations are not broken down by service or policy area. It is for PCTs to commission services using these funds to meet the health care needs of their local populations, taking account of local and national priorities.

The National Cancer Director has made no recommendation to the Secretary of State for Health, the right hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr Lansley), concerning the need to develop a tariff for stereotactic body radiotherapy (SBRT). We have said work is under way nationally to develop radiotherapy tariffs and this will include consideration of a tariff for SBRT in due course. The development of tariffs is the responsibility of the Department's Payment by Results team.

Hospital episode statistics are unable to provide data concerning the total number of patients receiving SBRT or those receiving SBRT for either early stage lung cancer or prostate cancer. There is only one clinical coding available for identifying SBRT and this is for stereotactic radiosurgery on tissue of the brain. However, we understand that SBRT is already available to patients on the national health service in over a quarter of all radiotherapy centres in England.

Social Services: Fees and Charges

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what recent discussions he has had with Ministers in the Department for Communities and Local Government on the possible extra costs for the NHS of local authorities introducing changes to the criteria governing eligibility for social care; [84704]

(2) what estimate he has made of the possible extra costs which will be incurred by the NHS in each region as a result of local authorities introducing changes to the criteria for eligibility for social care. [84705]

Paul Burstow: In the spending review, Government recognised the pressures on the adult social care system within a challenging settlement for local government, and took the decision to prioritise adult social care by allocating an additional £7.2 billion to the system over the four years to 2014-15 to support local authorities in delivering social care.

When combined with a rigorous local authority focus on efficiency, this additional £7.2 billion means that there is funding available to protect people's access to care and deliver new approaches to improve quality and outcomes.

Social Services: Standards

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure consistent levels of provision of social care support across the country. [84086]

Paul Burstow: Local authorities are responsible for providing or arranging care services for their populations. Their funds are derived from local taxation and funding from central Government. The great majority of this funding is provided without condition. It is for local authorities to decide how best to manage their resources, according to local priorities.

In the spending review, the Government recognised the pressures on the adult social care system within a challenging settlement for local government. They took the decision to prioritise adult social care by allocating an additional £7.2 billion to local authorities over the four years to 2014-15 to support them in meeting their social care commitments.

When combined with a rigorous local focus on efficiency, this additional money will mean that there is funding available to protect people's access to care and deliver new approaches to improve quality and outcomes.

Tuberculosis

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress he has made in preventing the spread of tuberculosis. [84472]

Anne Milton: Provisional data for 2010 show there were 7,862 cases of tuberculosis (TB) in England, a decrease of 7% on the corresponding number of cases in 2009, which is encouraging. However, it is too early to say whether this is the beginning of a downward trend. Sustained action by national health service organisations and their partners is needed to improve detection, diagnosis, treatment and prevention of TB. Final data for 2010 will be published by the Health Protection Agency later this month.

The Department and the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence have published guidance to help the NHS in commissioning and providing effective TB services. We are also funding the TB national charity, TB Alert, to raise public and professional awareness of TB.

DEFENCE

Stephen Crouch

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether (a) he, (b) officials of his Department and (c) special advisers in his Department have met Mr Stephen Crouch on official business since May 2010; and how many such meetings took place (i) on his Department's premises and (ii) elsewhere. [78848]

Mr Philip Hammond: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 21 November 2011, Official Report, columns 25-26W, to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Ian Lucas).

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to provide additional minutes of free talk time above normal allocations over the Christmas and new year period for armed forces personnel serving in Afghanistan. [84466]

Mr Robathan: Armed forces personnel serving abroad on operations routinely receive an extra 30 minutes free talk time during Christmas week from the MOD. This is in addition to their regular weekly allocation, which is a minimum of 30 minutes, dependent on tour length. These allowances are provided under the WelComE (Welfare Communications Everywhere) project, which forms part of the deployment welfare package. This year personnel will also receive an additional 45 minutes from Paradigm, the communications company responsible for providing the WelComE service.

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the proportion of Christmas cards and gifts sent to British service personnel in Afghanistan which arrived in time for Christmas in 2010. [84616]

Mr Robathan: This information is not held. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Moray (Angus Robertson) on 13 December 2010, Official Report, columns 452-53W.

All mail received at the British Forces Post Office sorting depot by 3 December 2010 was delivered to Afghanistan in time for Christmas.

Air Force: Military Bases

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 19 October 2011, Official Report, column 993W, on Air Force: military bases, what the (a) names and (b) positions held are of those attending the meetings on 11 January and 26 May 2011. [77318]

Mr Philip Hammond [holding answer 31 October 2011]: At both meetings, the previous Secretary of State for Defence, my right hon. Friend the Member for North Somerset (Dr Fox), was supported by a private secretary, and by a special adviser.

Armed Forces: Crime

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many arrests have been made by the Ministry of Defence Police since May 2010; and how many of those arrests resulted in prosecutions. [84002]

Mr Robathan: The Police national computer records that the Ministry of Defence Police has held 528 arrest summons reports within England and Wales, since 1 May 2010. The prosecution result of these arrests could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Health Services

Jack Lopresti: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the use of depth therapy for the physical and psychological rehabilitation of wounded service personnel. [84611]

Mr Robathan: The policy of the Defence Mental Health Services is to provide psychotherapies that have a proven evidence base for their use in the UK. "Depth therapy" is a name given to one of many varieties of psychoanalytic therapy, but it is not one which has been specifically approved by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) for use in the UK. NICE only approve treatments which have been rigorously scientifically investigated and represent an acceptable risk-benefit intervention.

NICE guidance on treatment for Post Traumatic Stress Disorder indicates that two psychotherapeutic interventions are known to be effective; these are Trauma Focused Cognitive Behavioural Therapy (TF-CBT) and Eye Movement Desensitisation and Reprocessing (EMDR). Both of these are available through the Ministry of Defence's military Departments of Community Mental Health (DCMH), and are delivered by appropriately trained and supervised practitioners.

Armed Forces: Injuries

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to make information about injured service personnel more accessible to the public. [84687]

Mr Robathan: The Ministry of Defence is committed to making public a range of information on the numbers of service personnel injured on operations. We publish the numbers of personnel categorised as very seriously injured and seriously injured as a result of Operation Herrick on our website at:

http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/FactSheets/OperationsFactsheets/OperationsInAfghanistanBritishCasualties.htm

The figures are updated fortnightly.

In addition, we publish on a quarterly basis the numbers of service personnel who have suffered limb amputations as a result of injuries sustained while on operational deployment, and Defence Analytical Services and Advice (DASA) published figures up to 30 September 2011 in November 2011. However, in order both to protect the identities of small numbers of patients and to maintain operational security for the effectiveness of our protective countermeasures, we do not routinely publish very serious injury and serious injury sub-classified by other types of physical injury.

DASA also publishes the UK Armed Forces Mental Health Report four times a year (plus an annual digest), which summarises all episodes of care of service personnel to the MOD's Departments of Community Mental Health for out-patient care, and new admissions to the MOD's in-patient care contractor.

All DASA health and medical reports can be found on the DASA website www.dasa.mod.uk under "Other Publications" and "Health/Medical Statistics". This website includes the annual Defence Statistics publication that provides health related information in chapter three. This publication includes operational fatalities and injuries tables.

Armed Forces: Members

Dr Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations his Department has received from (a) civilian and (b) military sources concerning the (i) operations and (ii) sponsorship of the Armed Forces Parliamentary Scheme in the last five years. [80925]

Nick Harvey [holding answer 15 November 2011]: In the last five years, the Ministry of Defence has received eight parliamentary questions, five letters from hon. Members and one letter from a member of the public. The MOD has also received 20 freedom of information requests. Other representations may have been received, but are not held centrally or are not identifiable.

There have also been various discussions between military officers and Ministers.

Armed Forces: Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of (a) current and (b) former members of the armed forces who have been diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder. [84962]

Mr Robathan: The following table shows the number of patients attending a Ministry of Defence (MOD) Department of Community Mental Health (DCMH) who were initially assessed with post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) during the period 1 April 2007 to 30 June 2011, the latest date for which verified data is available.

	PTSD cases
2007-08	174
2008-09	142
2009-10	195
2010-11	253
1 April-30 June 2011	59

Figures up to June 2009 are for each first referral of an individual to a DCMH. Since July 2009, each new episode of care has been recorded, meaning that individuals who have been previously treated and discharged from care, but subsequently re-referred, will be counted again. Equivalent verified data prior to 2007 are not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

This answer incorporates data from the latest UK Armed Forces Mental Health Report (issued on 30 September 2011) which includes statistics on PTSD. This information can be found on the Defence Analytical Services and Advice (DASA) website www.DASA.mod.uk under "Other Publications" and "Health/Medical Statistics". A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

Ex-service personnel who require treatment for PTSD will receive it through their local NHS provider, and no central record is maintained of the numbers diagnosed with the condition. However, we continue to work closely with the Department of Health to improve the whole range of mental health care available to former servicemen and women.

Armoured Fighting Vehicles: Repairs and Maintenance

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many UK armoured vehicles have undergone major repair and overhaul in the last five years; what proportion of the fleet this represents; and where the repairs were undertaken. [82724]

Vehicle	Geographical location of repair	Base overhaulleconomic base repair (last five years)	Percentage of fleet as at 22 November 2011
Challenger Armoured Repair and Recovery Vehicle	Bovington	40	50
Challenger 2	Bovington	37	11
Warrior	Donnington	458	58
Combat Vehicle Reconnaissance (Tracked)	Donnington	432	37
FV430/Bulldog	Bovington	795	89

Base overhaul involves the complete disassembly/reassembly of the vehicle, including qualification of the hull, to design specification. Economic base repair involves selective disassembly/reassembly of the vehicles including qualification of the hull, to design specification.

The figure does not include repairs such as assembly changes, modification programmes, ad hoc repairs, overseas repairs and urgent operational requirement programmes. This information is not held centrally, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

AWE Aldermaston: Committees

Stephen Gilbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the remit of the Atomic Weapons Establishment's Local Liaison Committee includes consideration of classified information relating to matters which fall within the Committee's remit. [84836]

Peter Luff: The remit of the Atomic Weapons Establishment's Local Liaison Committee (LLC) relates principally to safety and the environment.

Written material provided to LLC members is not classified, and classified material is not routinely discussed at LLC meetings. However, LLC members are required to hold Government security clearances to allow discussions of a lower level classified nature, should that be necessary.

Charities

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what grants his Department made to charitable organisations in each of the last five years. [79081]

Mr Robathan: Funding provided through grants in aid to the voluntary, community and social enterprise sector in each of the last five years is shown in the following table. A grant in aid is typically used to fund part or all of the administration costs of the recipient body.

Body	2006-07	2007-08	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11 (final outturn)

[1] The National Museum of the Royal Navy has provided funding to the Fleet Air Arm Museum, the Royal Marines Museum, the Royal Navy Museum and the Royal Navy Submarine Museum since 2009-10.
[2] The Royal British Legion did not arrange any pilgrimages in 2010-11.
[3] Skills Force is now funded by the Department for Education and Skills.

A breakdown of expenditure including grants as well as grants in aid could be provided only at disproportionate cost as the grant funding mechanism is delegated locally and we do not currently identify discretely those grants which relate to the voluntary, community and social enterprise sector. We also provide funding to the sector through commercial contractual arrangements for specific services.

In my answer to the hon. Member for Vale of Clwyd (Chris Ruane) on 7 June 2011, Official Report, columns 26-28W, I gave the provisional outturn figures for 2010-11. This answer updates those figures to final outturn, corrects the 2007-08 and 2009-10 balance of funding between the Armed Forces Memorial and the National Memorial Arboretum and shows the RAF Sports/Sports Control Board as a single line entry. I apologise for the errors and for the delay in answering this question.

Cyprus: Armed Forces

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) to which local authorities service personnel currently stationed in Cyprus will return; and how many such personnel will return to each such local authority; [83359]

(2) how many service personnel currently stationed in Cyprus will return to the UK; and when any such return will take place. [83360]

Nick Harvey: As part of the Army's routine unit rotations: the 2nd Battalion, The Royal Anglian Regiment (2 R ANGLIAN) and The 2nd Battalion, The Yorkshire Regiment (2 YORKS) are the two infantry units currently stationed in Cyprus.

2 R ANGLIAN are due to return to the former Royal Air Force station at Cottesmore, in Rutland county council, in July 2012. This will see the move of approximately 620 service personnel and their families.

2 YORKS are due to move from Cyprus to Elizabeth Barracks, in Surrey county council, in July 2013. This will also see the move of some 620 service personnel and their families.

These moves are routine and troop numbers in Cyprus will therefore remain unchanged; both 2 R ANGLIAN and 2 YORKS will be replaced by other infantry battalions. The Royal Air Force will continue to rotate individuals out of Cyprus as part of routine postings.

Defence Acquisition Independent Review

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which recommendations from the Gray Review of Defence Acquisition the Government (a) has implemented and (b) plans to implement. [83351]

Peter Luff: The Ministry of Defence accepted the majority of the Gray Review's recommendations, as set out in "The Defence Strategy for Acquisition Reform (CM 7796)" published in February 2010. The resulting actions have either been progressed, taken into defence reform more broadly or are being reconsidered as part of the forthcoming Materiel Strategy.

Defence: Finance

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much of the £4.3 billion new front-line savings identified in the Strategic Defence and Security Review have been made to date. [83358]

Mr Philip Hammond: Non front-line savings have been built into the budgets delegated to the Ministry of Defence's top level budget (TLB) holders. The Department monitors TLBs' performance against their budget on a monthly basis, and their implementation of non front-line savings and efficiencies quarterly.

Detailed analysis of our performance against these measures will be reported annually, after the departmental accounts have been audited.

Defence: Procurement

Craig Whittaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent estimate he has made of the (a) cost and (b) delivery timescale of the Falcon Increment A Project; what the budget was for the project; and if he will make a statement. [80927]

Peter Luff [holding answer 15 November 2011]: The anticipated costs of Increment A of Project Falcon are projected to be £272 million; the budget for Increment A is £324 million as stated in the 2010 Major Projects Review. The delivery timescale of the project is currently under review.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps he is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible; [83775]

(2) what proportion of food sourced by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available; [83776]

(3) what steps (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83777]

Peter Luff: Catering for Ministry of Defence (MOD) civilian personnel employed at UK Defence establishments is provided through regional prime contracts or under multi-activity contracts. Armed forces personnel 'in barracks' are primarily catered for through a number of catering, retail and leisure (CRL) and other multi-activity contracts.

Information on the procurement of liquefied eggs obtained from outside of the UK and on the proportion of food procured under these contracts from UK suppliers, is not held.

Contractors appointed under these arrangements are obliged to source on the open market consistent with meeting EU competition rules and quality standards.

For armed forces personnel not covered by these contractual arrangements and those serving on operations and overseas exercises, there is a single food supply contract with Purple Foodservice Solutions Ltd (PFS). PFS lists approximately 1,150 different food-related items for the armed forces in the core range price list. Currently, they estimate that approximately 60% of lines listed (excluding fresh produce) are sourced from suppliers within the UK. The percentage figures for previous years, for which figures are readily available, are shown in the following table.

	Percentage
2006-07	43
2007-08	59
2008-09	62
2009-10	60

The percentage of UK produced goods changes regularly as a result of seasonality; value for money incentives; and changes of supplier. Some products are manufactured using a number of ingredients from various countries including the UK while others, such as fresh fruit and vegetables, are sourced seasonally from a variety of countries.

All food procured through the PFS contract, including whole eggs, is produced to UK and EU production and farm assurance standards or equivalent. We do not procure liquefied eggs under this contract.

The MOD is fully committed to supporting the Government Buying Standards (GBS) except where operational requirements make this impractical. MOD food provision in terms of the operational arena and in circumstances of extreme training conditions is exempt from those GBS which may adversely affect the nutritional status and well-being of personnel. In these circumstances, it is recognised that the personnel are operating under very different circumstances to those which the GBS criteria were developed to meet.

Ministerial Policy Advisers

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department spent on special advisers in 2010-11; how much has been allocated for 2011-12; and if he will make a statement. [79200]

Mr Philip Hammond: In financial year 2010-11, the Ministry of Defence spent around £160,000 on salaries for special advisers. The cost of special advisers is treated as one part of the cost of the private office, as such there is no separate allocation for special advisers.

Procurement

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has audited the framework agreement technical support process in the last 12 months; and if he will make any such audit public. [82029]

Peter Luff: In January 2011, Defence Internal Audit was commissioned to produce a report on the Framework Agreement for Technical Support. This was issued on 4 November 2011 and I will place a copy in the Library of the House.

EU Defence Policy

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what officials from his Department will attend the European Defence Agency's conference on European Defence Co-operation on 31 January 2012. [84365]

Peter Luff: On current plans, the European Defence Agency's conference on European Defence Co-operation will be attended by the MOD's Head of Defence International Acquisition Policy.

European Defence Agency

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the Chief Executive of the European Defence Agency; and what was discussed at that time. [84363]

Peter Luff: The Secretary of State for Defence, my right hon. Friend the Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr Hammond), has not yet had the opportunity to meet the chief executive of the European Defence Agency (EDA). The Under-Secretary of State for Defence, my hon. Friend the Member for Aldershot (Mr Howarth), met with the chief executive at the EDA Steering Board in Defence Ministers formation in Brussels on 30 November 2011, at which a range of issues were discussed including pooling and sharing, operations and partnerships.

Ex-servicemen: Employment

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what tailored training and advice is made available by his Department to help veterans of the armed forces find work; [83822]

(2) what support his Department makes available to help those leaving the armed forces to find work; and at what cost such help is made available. [83824]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 29 November 2011]: All service leavers are entitled to some form of resettlement advice, whatever their rank and length of service. Further support is available to eligible personnel through the Career Transition Partnership (a partnership between the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and Right Management) through training courses, which are free from tuition fees; career transition workshops; employment and future career advice; assistance with CV writing and job preparation; vocational training; and a job-search/recruitment facility. In addition, lifetime job finding support is available from the Officers' Association or the Regular Forces Employment Association.

Each jobcentre district has an armed forces champion who has up-to-date knowledge of armed forces issues in the local area and will also provide support to veterans. Welfare benefits are a matter for the Department for Work and Pensions but advice and assistance in accessing benefits is available from the MOD's Veterans Welfare Service.

The contract with the Career Transition Partnership is currently valued at some £9 million each year.

Germany: Armed Forces

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) to which local authorities armed forces personnel returning from Germany by 2015 will return; and how many such personnel will return to each such local authority; [83356]

(2) how many armed forces personnel will return from Germany by 2015. [83357]

Peter Luff: As stated in the Strategic Defence and Security Review, the Ministry of Defence aims to return half of its personnel based in Germany to the UK by 2015. On 10 November, the Army announced the return of some 1,800 personnel and their families to Cottesmore, Pirbright and Abingdon as part of a preliminary moves package. The local authorities concerned in these cases are Rutland county council, Surrey county council and Oxfordshire county council respectively.

Further work is currently ongoing into the future size and structure of the Army and this is expected to provide the detail of the estate requirements for the remaining units returning from Germany. Until work is complete, it is too early to identify precisely which local authorities will be affected.

Guided Weapons

David Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many air sorties were flown in the Afghanistan campaign in each month of the two years to the end of October 2011. [82725]

Mr Philip Hammond: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Harrier Aircraft: Costs

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the per unit purchase cost of GR9 Harriers was when the aircraft first entered service. [84366]

Peter Luff: The Harrier GR9 was not purchased from new but was an upgrade of the previous Harrier GR7 aircraft. This aircraft was itself an upgrade of the Harrier GR5 which was introduced into service in 1989. The upgrade to GR9 standard was achieved through a series of incremental steps implemented during normal maintenance periods under the £500 million joint upgrade and maintenance programme.

Including the historical cost of the Harrier GR5, as recorded in the Ministry of Defence's fixed asset register, and subsequent upgrade costs, the average cost of a Harrier GR9 was some £21.5 million.

Overall the sale of the Harrier fleet and associated running and maintenance costs will save around £1 billion.

Lockheed Martin

Fabian Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the (a) total monetary value and (b) type was of each contract between his Department and (i) Lockheed Martin and (ii) Northrop Grumman in the financial year 2009-10. [77186]

Peter Luff: There were 159 extant contracts in place with Lockheed Martin and Northrop Grumman during financial year 2009-10 against which payments were made by the Ministry of Defence. This number includes contracts with companies that are subsidiaries of the respective holding companies and some which are part of joint ventures with other companies.

The values are provided in the following table:

Contract value banding	Number of Lockheed Martin contracts	Number of Northrop Grumman contracts

Pitcairn Islands

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's officials have visited the overseas territory of the Pitcairn Islands in each of the last 10 years. [83208]

Nick Harvey: There are no records of any Defence officials visiting the Pitcairn Islands in the last 10 years.

RAF Leuchars

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether an assessment has been made of the effect of the proposed transfer of the Typhoon force from RAF Leuchars to RAF Lossiemouth on flying hours per squadron per year as currently maintained at RAF Leuchars. [83904]

Nick Harvey: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given by the Under-Secretary of State for Defence, the hon. Member for Mid Worcestershire (Peter Luff), on 3 November 2011, Official Report, columns 694-95W.

Territorial Army

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Territorial Army personnel are on active service; and how many are expected to be on active service during the Christmas period. [85023]

Mr Robathan: As at 23 November 2011, there were 630 Territorial Army (TA) personnel who have been mobilised on active service, most of whom are supporting the UK's Regular Forces in Afghanistan. We expect the figure for those who will be on active service over the Christmas period to be similar.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Business Rates

21. Craig Whittaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans he has to introduce a scheme for businesses experiencing financial difficulties to defer payment of business rates from April 2012. [84515]

Robert Neill: The Chancellor of the Exchequer, my right hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr Osborne), announced in his autumn statement that the Government will give businesses the opportunity to defer 60% of the increase in their 2012-13 business rate bills as a result of the annual Retail Prices Index uprating, to be repaid equally across the following two years.

I also refer my hon. Friend to my written ministerial statement made today on local government finance, which further highlights this Government's support for business.

Tottenham Regeneration

22. Mr Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what plans he has to support regeneration in Tottenham; and if he will make a statement. [84516]

Mr Pickles: We are providing £20 million for the Mayor to support the regeneration of Tottenham and Croydon through the London Enterprise Fund. The Mayor will be making an announcement about the use of this funding, together with additional funding from the Greater London Authority, in the new year. Funding from the Riot Recovery Scheme and High Street Support funding have also been made available.

Government Procurement Card

23. Mr Marcus Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he has taken to increase transparency in the use of the Government Procurement Card by his Department. [84517]

Mr Pickles: We have opened up these taxpayer-funded corporate credit cards to the sunlight of transparency.

My Department has published details of every single transaction from the beginning of 2011 back to 2006.

That openness has helped us identify waste and inefficiency, saving taxpayers' money.

Home Ownership

Karl McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps his Department is taking to support home ownership. [84501]

Grant Shapps: On 21 November we published our Housing Strategy which sets out an ambitious programme to support home ownership, including support for up to 100,000 prospective buyers with small deposits to buy a new home and increasing Right to Buy discounts to up to 50%, benefiting up to 100,000 current tenants.

Third Sector

Ian Murray: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the effect on the third sector of reductions in funding for local authorities. [84511]

Andrew Stunell: Local spending decisions are a matter for local councils but there is no excuse to target the voluntary sector disproportionately.

We are working closely with the third sector to assess capacity and provide support, for example through the Transition Fund and Big Society Capital and we are looking together at opportunities for the voluntary and community sector from increased local authority commissioning.

Council Tax Benefits

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions he has held with local authorities on the timescale of the introduction of his planned local authority-based schemes for council tax benefit support. [84054]

Robert Neill: Officials from the Department regularly meet with local government representatives to discuss a range of issues. During the consultation on proposals for the localisation of support for council tax the Department held 16 engagement events with local authorities and other interested groups.

Policy Announcements

Mr Bone: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government on how many occasions during the present session of Parliament new policy announcements have been briefed to the media by (a) him and (b) other Ministers in his Department before they were made to Parliament; and if he will make a statement. [84761]

Robert Neill: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to him on 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 911-12W. I would add that during parliamentary recess, on those occasions where policy announcements need to be made, we ensure that hon. and right hon. Members are updated when the House returns in the form of a post-recess written ministerial statement; details of such announcements are documented in the Official Report.

Empty Property

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he is taking to return empty homes to use. [84500]

Andrew Stunell: We have put in place powerful tools and incentives to support local communities to tackle empty homes. The Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister published "Laying the Foundations"—A Housing Strategy for England on 21 November which sets out our plans for dealing with empty homes.

Green Belt

Mr Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures his Department has put in place to protect the Green Belt from housing developments. [84372]

Robert Neill: We have clearly stated our commitment to maintaining strong protections for the Green Belt. National policy on Green Belt protection—in Planning Policy Guidance Note 2: "Green Belts"—is being updated as part of the National Planning Policy Framework. The draft Framework includes rigorous policies for the continued protection of Green Belt from inappropriate development. We are now considering all responses received to our consultation on the draft Framework. Our proposed abolition of the unpopular Regional Strategies would remove top-down pressure on councils to review the extent of their Green Belt in 30 areas across England.

Housing: Carbon Emissions

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what the basis was for his decision to introduce a zero carbon requirement for all new homes from 2016 instead of a nearly zero carbon requirement from 2021. [84040]

Grant Shapps: The previous Administration set the target for all new homes to be zero carbon from 2016 following a consultation launched in December 2006. The consensus following that consultation was that the 2016 date provided a realistic timetable. This Government endorsed that objective and timetable after we came in to office. The Government recognises that the 2016 target is challenging and we have redefined the zero carbon homes standard in a way which is much more practical and cost effective and is supported by the sector, in particular through the invaluable work carried out by the Zero Carbon Hub. The requirement for new homes to be nearly zero energy by 31 December 2020 comes from the Energy Performance of Buildings Directive recast, which was adopted in May 2010.

Housing: Fire Extinguishers

Peter Aldous: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment was made in developing the Building Regulations 2000 of the merits of requiring installation of automatic fire suppression systems in new residential premises with respect to (a) comparative evidence from other countries, (b) the effect on the environment of a reduction in the size of fires, (c) the effect on the economy of a reduction in the size of fires, (d) the effect on firefighter safety and (e) the risk of fire for an ageing population. [84552]

Robert Neill: The last review of the fire safety aspects of the Building Regulations was completed in 2006. The Final Regulatory Impact Assessment was published on 13 December 2006. This sets out the details of the assessments made at that time and refers to the cost benefit analysis that formed part of a 2005 study into the effectiveness of residential sprinklers. This study relied extensively on US data where UK data were not available. The Impact Assessment and the 2005 report can be found on the Department website at:

www.communities.gov.uk/publications/planningandbuilding/regulatoryimpactassessment10

Housing: Older People

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he is taking to ensure house building schemes take into account the needs of older people. [84649]

Robert Neill: Part M (access to and use of buildings) of the building regulations already includes a number of provisions including level thresholds, downstairs toilets and accessible switches and sockets that help to make all new homes more accessible and age friendly. In addition, the Housing Strategy published on 21 November sets out the Government's view that new housing developments need to make further suitable provision for the ageing population by ensuring a mix of property types, including lifetime homes, which help to provide the diversity and choice needed to support longer term independent living. Future needs will vary considerably at a local level and we believe that decisions on the number of lifetime homes within each development should be made at a local level, in proportion to local need and aligned with other local housing support and information services. We are exploring how research undertaken by DCLG can be used to support local authorities in developing proportionate and effective policy at a local level.

The draft national planning policy framework asks local councils to plan for a mix of housing based on current and future demographic trends and the needs of different groups in the community, including older and disabled people. The draft framework makes clear that councils should have a robust understanding of housing requirements in their area, and that they should produce local plans, in consultation with people in the local area.

Local Government: Pensions

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether his Department has undertaken an economic impact assessment in respect of the proposed changes to the Local Government Pension Scheme on members in (a) the West Midlands, (b) Coventry and (c) Coventry North East constituency. [84489]

Robert Neill: I refer the right hon. Member to the answers given on 7 November 2011, Official Report, column 23W, to the hon. Members for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) and Stoke-on-Trent Central (Tristam Hunt).

Planning Permission: Biodiversity

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what guidance his Department plans to provide to local planning authorities on suitable indicators for monitoring the protection and restoration of biodiversity through the planning system. [84025]

Robert Neill: In our consultation on the draft National Planning Policy Framework we asked for views about supporting guidance and who could provide it. We are carefully considering all of the submissions that have been made to the consultation before announcing our intentions.

The Natural Environment White Paper in setting out the Government's proposals for monitoring, including for biodiversity, explained that existing national indicators will be reviewed and streamlined. A new set of key indicators will be developed for spring 2012 including a new set of biodiversity indicators for the Biodiversity Strategy for England.

Rural Areas: Finance

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what weighting he gives to the additional cost of delivering services in rural areas when calculating formula grant. [84695]

Robert Neill: The following table shows the judgmental sparsity top-ups, which reflect the additional cost of delivering services in rural areas, included in the relative needs formulae in the 2011-12 settlement.

Relative needs formula	Percentage allocated using judgmental sparsity top-up
Local authority education functions	12.5
Older people's personal social services	0.43
Police	0.5
District-level environmental, protective and cultural services	3.7

Social Rented Housing

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the proportion of tenants of social landlords who are of working age and whose homes will be deemed to be underoccupied on 1 April 2013 in (a) England and (b) Stockport constituency. [83570]

Andrew Stunell: The latest available estimate is that 8% of social rented sector households with a working age tenant were under-occupying their accommodation in 2009-10. This estimate is a three-year average based on data from the 2007-08 Survey of English Housing and the 2008-09 and 2009-10 English Housing Surveys. Under-occupation is measured according to the Bedroom Standard. Households are said to be under-occupying their accommodation if they have two or more bedrooms more than they need according to the Bedroom Standard. An estimate for April 2013 is not available.

Data are not available at the constituency level.

Social Rented Housing: Offenders

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if he will issue guidance to local housing authorities to facilitate the exclusion from publicly-funded social housing provision of persistent and prolific offenders; and if he will make a statement. [84630]

Grant Shapps: Currently, with certain limited exceptions, anyone is eligible to be allocated social housing. The Localism Act 2011 will give local authorities the power to determine who qualifies or does not qualify to go on their housing waiting list. Local authorities will be able to use this power to exclude persistent and prolific offenders from social housing, if they so choose.

We will shortly be issuing for consultation new statutory social housing allocations guidance to local authorities which will encourage them to make full use of the new and existing flexibilities within the allocation legislation.

We have also recently finished consulting on proposals to speed up the process for evicting persistent 'neighbours from hell' and to allow social tenants to be evicted where they have been convicted for offences related to violent disorder beyond their local neighbourhood.

Social Rented Housing: West Midlands

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what discussions his Department has had with the third sector on provision of social housing in (a) the West Midlands and (b) Coventry. [84651]

Andrew Stunell: As part of the affordable homes programme, the Homes and Communities Agency has undertaken a number of meetings and seminars for registered providers (mainly housing associations) in the West Midlands area. The Homes and Communities Agency also attends the quarterly regional committee meetings held by the National Housing Federation—the trade association of housing associations.

The Homes and Communities Agency has held regular meetings with partners to ensure optimum delivery in Coventry. In the Coventry and Warwickshire area, the Homes and Communities Agency is now working with 13 registered provider partners to sign contracts under the affordable homes programme. To date, contracts have been signed with eight registered provider partners to deliver homes in the Coventry and Warwickshire area. Of these contracted offers, registered providers have confirmed the level of firm and indicative units they will provide in the Coventry and Warwickshire area. In Coventry specifically, the current level of planned affordable homes delivery stands at 525 units. The Homes and Communities Agency is still in the process of signing contracts with registered providers and figures may change.

The Homes and Communities Agency is also discussing with partners in Coventry the opportunities through the empty homes and community-led development funding, with them being encouraged to work with local authorities and the Homes and Communities Agency to bring forward further delivery in this area.

Third Sector: Finance

Julie Elliott: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the effect on the third sector of reductions in funding for local authorities. [84495]

Andrew Stunell: Local spending decisions are a matter for local councils but there is no excuse to target the voluntary sector disproportionately.

We are working closely with the third sector to assess capacity and provide support, for example through the Transition Fund and Big Society Capital and we are looking together at opportunities for the voluntary and community sector to benefit from local authority commissioning.

Travellers: Caravan Sites

Duncan Hames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when he plans to publish a new planning policy statement on Traveller sites to replace circulars 01/2006 and 04/2007. [84841]

Robert Neill: The Government published their draft new planning policy for Traveller sites for consultation in April. The consultation closed in August. We are currently considering the consultation responses and intend to publish the new policy as soon as possible.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Mr Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when he intends to respond to the question tabled by the right hon. Member for Greenwich and Woolwich on 21 November 2011 regarding home starts. [R] [84371]

Grant Shapps: The question tabled by the right hon. Member for Greenwich and Woolwich was answered on 1 December 2011, Official Report, column 1025W.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Apprentices

Stephen Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills when he plans to introduce a bonus for each new apprenticeship in a small business. [84014]

Mr Hayes: Government are committed to helping small employers take on an apprentice. That is why we recently announced that small employers will be eligible for an incentive payment of £1,500 to take on a new apprentice aged 16-24. Funding will be available for up to 40,000 apprentices.

The National Apprenticeships Service are finalising the detailed implementation of this new scheme, and we expect to announce final eligibility criteria, and details of how to access the programme soon. We expect the scheme to commence by April 2012.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of the potential effect of (a) staff reductions and (b) organisational changes in his Department occasioned by savings requirements on the delivery of programmes for the National Apprenticeship Service in each Government office region. [84762]

Mr Hayes: This Government have funded record levels of growth in apprenticeships. We are committed to further growth in the number of apprenticeships across the country.

The restructuring of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) has had no effect on the delivery of the apprenticeship programme by the National Apprenticeship Service (NAS). However, the National Apprenticeship Service is housed within the Skills Funding Agency and is contributing to the overall 33% administration savings target which has been set for the agency by the end of the spending review period. The chief executive of the NAS and the chief executive of Skills Funding are working closely together to continue to secure effective delivery of apprenticeships. These administrative savings will enable them to operate more efficiently while safeguarding the delivery of the apprenticeships programme.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he proposes that the new apprenticeship proposals outlined under the Government's youth contract scheme should be delivered through the National Apprenticeship Service's existing regional structures. [84763]

Mr Hayes: On 25 November the Government announced as part of the Youth Contract that they would increase the number of incentive payments available to small employers for taking on apprentices aged 16-24 to 40,000. The National Apprenticeships Service has been asked to work up a detailed implementation plan for the incentives scheme—which will commence by April next year.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (1) whether his Department plans to provide additional (a) staff and (b) other resources to the National Apprenticeship Service to assist the delivery of apprenticeships for young people aged between 16 and 24 years; [84764]

(2) whether his Department plans to provide additional (a) staff and (b) other resources to the National Apprenticeship Service to assist in the delivery of apprenticeship places from the Government's Youth Contract scheme. [84765]

Mr Hayes: The Department expects the National Apprenticeship Service to deliver the new initiatives within existing staff resources in line with the Government's objective to prioritise support for young people.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many staff the National Apprenticeship Service (a) had in 2010-11 and (b) has in 2011-12; and how many staff he expects it to have in (i) 2012-13 and (ii) 2013-14. [84766]

Mr Hayes: The Department can report that the National Apprenticeship Service (NAS) had 370 full-time equivalent (FTE) staff in the 2010-11 financial year.

In respect of the 2011-12 financial year, the NAS currently has 280 FTE staff.

The Department expects the NAS to have a maximum of 308 FTE staff by 2012-13 and maintain this number during 2013-14.

Data as at 31 March 2011: NAS staffing peaked at over 400 staff during the year, following the transfer of National Employer Service staff from the Skills Funding Agency.

Data as at 31 October 2011 include 29 staff who transferred in from UK Skills.

Business: Pilot Schemes

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions his Department had with learning providers on the employer choice pilot prior to the Prime Minister's announcement of the initiative. [85012]

Mr Hayes: The UK Commission for Employment and Skills developed the initial vision for employer ownership, which directly helped shape the announcement of the pilot. The UK Commission is a non-departmental public body (NDPB) and commissioners comprise a social partnership that includes leaders from business, unions, third sector organisations and the further education (FE) and higher education (HE) sector. In developing the thinking of employer ownership, the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) and the UK Commission engaged with a range of stakeholders that included representatives from the FE sector as well as business, unions and academics.

BIS will continue to engage with a range of stakeholders to help shape the pilot going forward.

Business: Voluntary Organisations

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what consideration he has given to opportunities for voluntary mentoring schemes to operate alongside his Department's planned business mentoring scheme. [84571]

Mr Prisk: Voluntary mentoring schemes are an integral part of this Department's work on mentoring. Just last month I announced new grant funding of £1.2 million to recruit and train 10,000 volunteer business mentors through the "Get Mentoring" project via the Small Firms Enterprise Development Initiative (SFEDI). This is on top of the 5,000 volunteer business mentors already announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, on 4 November 2011. Boosting the number of mentors by another 15,000 will help more businesses get this valuable help and broaden the range of experienced people available through the mentoring network.

The "Get Mentoring" project will build on the work we began with the British Bankers Association (BBA) in July when we launched Mentorsme, by helping to raise awareness of mentoring and increase the supply of experienced business people, who will then be accessible via mentoring organisations on Mentorsme.co.uk. With almost 11,000 business mentors already available through the "Get Mentoring" project will bring the total number of business mentors available through the mentoring portal to at least 26,000 by September 2012.

www.mentorsme.co.uk

Credit

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many firms have been removed from the Consumer Credit Public Register because the Office of Fair Trading has (a) withdrawn and (b) suspended their licence in each of the last five years. [83043]

Mr Davey: The following table shows, for the last five complete financial years, the counts of all consumer credit licences which have been surrendered ("withdrawn") or revoked. (Section 32 of the Act allows for the suspension of a licence as well as revocation but this specific power has not been used in the five years reported on). For the revocations, if no appeal was received, the determination-to-revoke date itself was used to decide which year to count them under. If an appeal was made, then the appeal decision date is used. Any cases with ongoing appeals are not included.

In addition under section 37 on the Consumer Credit Act 1974 (the Act), a licence held by one individual (as a sole trader) terminates if he (a) dies, or (b) is adjudged bankrupt, or (c) becomes a person who lacks capacity (within the meaning of the Mental Capacity Act 2005) to carry on the activities covered by the licence. I have not been able to collate the data in time. However, in the last two years, a link to the Insolvency Service data have been used which has seen a significant increase in terminations of type (b), to 200+ per year.

Number

	Licences revoked	Licences surrendered
2006-07	14	932
2007-08	12	338
2008-09	16	357
2009-10	27	476
2010-11	39	515

Food Procurement

Laura Sandys: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much his Department spent on food procurement in each year from 1997 to 2011. [80315]

Mr Davey: The Department's catering services are contracted to BaxterStorey and the purchasing of food supplies is BaxterStorey's cost as it is a commercial contract.

Departmental Pay

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many civil servants in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available. [76594]

Mr Davey: The total number of staff that earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year is 267. This reply covers core BIS only and the figures have been based on basic salary and permanent allowances. Our agencies are replying separately, to obtain a reply from all our other partner organisations would incur disproportionate costs.

224 earned between £65,000 and £95,000

34 earned between £95,001 and £140,000

Seven earned between £140,001 and £175,000

Two earned over £175,001.

Letter from Stephen Speed, dated 3 November 2011:

The Secretary of State for Business Innovation and Skills has asked me to reply to your question how many civil servants in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available.

The Insolvency Service has 20 staff who earned more than £65,000 per annum in the last year, 18 of which fall into category (a) and two staff within category (b). No staff earn salaries within category (c) or (d).

Letter from Gareth Jones, dated 2 November 2011:

I am replying on behalf of Companies House to your Parliamentary Question tabled 19 October 2011, UIN 76594 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

Companies House employed three civil servants who earned more than £65,000 and one who earned more than £95,000 in the last year for which figures are available. We do not employ anyone earning more than £140,000.

Letter from John Alty, dated 14 November 2011:

I am responding in respect of the Intellectual Property Office to your Parliamentary Question tabled 19 October 2011, to the Minister of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills.

The Intellectual Property Office is an Executive Agency of BIS. These figures are based on base pay and permanent allowances received for the tax year 2010/2011.

The figures are:-

(a) 39 people earned above £65,000.

(b) 2 people earned above £95,000.

(c) 0

(d) 0

Letter from Peter Mason, dated 3 November 2011:

I am responding in respect of the National Measurement Office (formerly National Weights and Measures Laboratory) to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 19 October 2011 (reference 2010/7227) to the Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, asking how many civil servants in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available.

In the National Measurement Office there were two civil servants whose earnings were more than £65,000 in the financial year 2010/11. There were none with earnings more than £95,000.

Letter from Emma Lord:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform asking how many unpaid and expenses-only internships (a) his Department and (b) each arm's length body for which he is responsible employed in the last 12 months for which figures are available. 78368

I am responding on behalf of the Chief Executive of the UK Space Agency (an executive agency of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills). The UK Space Agency has not employed any unpaid and expenses-only interns in the last 12 months.

Letter from Dr Vanessa V. Lawrence, dated 3 November 2011:

As Director General and Chief Executive of Ordnance Survey, I have been asked to reply to your question on the number of civil servants at the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills and its associated bodies earning more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 with the information for Ordnance Survey.

The information below is for the financial year 2010/11 and shows earnings determined as base pay plus permanent allowances:

a) 7 (excluding those falling under groups b, c and d)

b) 4 (excluding those falling under groups c and d)

c) 0 (excluding group d)

d) 2

Letter from John Hirst, dated 9 November 2011:

I am replying on behalf of the Met Office to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 19 October 2011, UIN76594 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

The information you asked for is contained in the following table.

2010-11

Earnings[1]	Number of staff
More than £65,000	46
More than £95,000	3
More than £140,000	2
More than £175,000	1

[1] Includes basic pay plus any permanent allowances, overtime and performance related-pay

Letter from Geoff Russell, dated 2 December 2011:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills asking the Skills Funding Agency (the Agency) how many civil servants in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available.

Please be advised that the figures provided are for the year 1/4/2010 - 31/3/2011. In total, 167 civil servants were employed by Agency within the period who received (or where they terminated prior to 31/3/2011 had an annual earnings equivalent) within the pay bands quoted.

	Number of employees
(1) £65,000 to £94,999	151

Letter from David Evans, dated 15 November 2011:

You tabled the following Parliamentary Question in the House on 21 October.

"To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many civil servants in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000 (b) £95,000 (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available".

Land Registry, who are an Arms Length Body within the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills, had (a) 41 staff (b) 3 staff (c) 1 member of staff and (d) none. These figures are for the period of 12 months to 30 September 2011.

A number of these staff have now left Land Registry.

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85086]

Mr Davey: The Department's policy is that staff salaries are paid into employees' bank accounts.

An investigation as to whether each bank account relates to an individual or a limited company would be at disproportionate cost. Without such an investigation there is no evidence that any senior civil servants in the Department for Business Innovation and Skills and its non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Letter from Geoff Russell, dated 5 December 2011:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills asking the Skills Funding Agency (the Agency) whether any senior staff in (a) his department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments.

Please be advised that the Agency does not pay via any limited company in lieu of salary.

Letter from John Hirst, dated 5 December 2011:

I am replying on behalf of the Met Office to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 30 November 2011, UIN85086 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

The Met Office has no staff paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

I hope this helps.

Letter from John Alty, dated 5 December 2011:

I am responding in respect of the Intellectual Property Office (IPO) to your Parliamentary Question tabled for 30 November 2011, asking the Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation & Skills, whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments.

No senior staff at the Intellectual Property Office (IPO) are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Letter from Stephen Speed, dated 2 December 2011:

The Minister of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has asked me to reply to your question whether any senior staff in a) his Department and b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments.

The Insolvency Service Executive Agency of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills does not pay any staff by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of salary. The Insolvency Service does not have a policy on such payments.

Letter from Tim Moss, dated 1 December 2011:

I am replying on behalf of Companies House to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 30 November 2011, UIN 85086 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

No senior staff in Companies House are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Letter from Peter Mason, dated 5 December 2011:

I am responding in respect of the National Measurement Office (NMO) to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 25 November 2011, asking the Secretary of State, Department for Business. Innovation and Skills whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments.

NMO does not have any senior staff paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Letter from David Williams:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills asking whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. 85086

Please be advised that no senior staff within the UK Space Agency are paid by means of payments to a limited company.

Letter from David Evans, dated 2 December 2011:

You tabled the following Parliamentary Question on 30 November 2011:

"To ask the Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments".

I can advise on behalf of Land Registry, who are an executive agency within the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, that we do not pay any of our senior staff by means of payment to a limited company in lieu of salary.

Letter from Vanessa V Lawrence, dated 2 December 2011:

As Director General and Chief Executive of Ordnance Survey, I have been asked to reply to your question with the information on whether any senior staff at Ordnance Survey are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of salary.

I can confirm that there are not and that all senior staff are paid salary or fees through payroll.

Departmental Recruitment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 324-5W, on Departmental recruitment, at what cost (a) Gatenby Sanderson and (b) Odgers Berndtson were employed on each occasion since May 2010. [84753]

Mr Davey: Since May 2010 Human Resources in the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills has employed the executive search companies of both Gatenby Sanderson and Odgers Berndtson once to undertake recruitment services.

Gatenby Sanderson were paid £13,143.63 plus VAT and Odgers Berndtson were paid £16,355 plus VAT.

Directors: Equal Opportunities

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of recent progress on the targets set by Lord Davies of Abersoch relating to boardroom diversity. [84533]

Mr Davey: The monitoring report published by Cranfield university in October, six months after Lord Davies of Abersoch's Review, shows that steady progress is being made towards achieving gender diverse boardrooms. It is encouraging to see that women now make up 14.6% of FTSE 100 and 8.8% of FTSE 250 directors, up from 12.5% and 7.8% respectively in February. In addition there are now just 12 all-male FTSE 100 boards, down from 21 in February.

Government are continuing to work with businesses, regulators, investors and others to ensure the recommendations are implemented effectively.

Employment Agencies: EU Law

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills with reference to the letter from the Minister for Employment Relations, Consumer and Postal Affairs, what the legal basis is for the effect on the Government's policy on the agency worker regulations of the agreement between the Confederation of British Industry and the Trades Union Congress of May 2008; and if he will make a statement. [83995]

Mr Davey: Article 5.4 of the agency workers directive allows member states to establish alternative arrangements derogating from the principle of equal treatment on the basis of an agreement concluded between social partners (representatives of employees and employers) at national level. The directive text specifically states that such alternative arrangements may include the provision of a qualifying period for equal treatment.

Foreign Students

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what his assessment is of potential changes to the level of education exports as a result of (a) student visa changes and (b) a rise in international student tuition fees. [80872]

Mr Willetts: Research published by BIS[1] estimates the total value of education exports to the UK at £14.1 billion (in 2008/09) and forecasts that total UK education exports could rise to £17.6 billion in 2015 and £26.6 billion by 2025. The research also attempted to forecast the impact of change in immigration policy and the rise in student fees and suggested that:

The change in immigration policy might result in a decrease of £203 million in 2014/15, £232 million by 2019/20 and £268 million by 2024/25.

The change in fee policy for EU and UK domiciled students studying for undergraduate degrees in England might result in a decrease of £339 million in 2014/15, £672 million by 2019/20 and £844 million by 2024/25. The estimate incorporates the fact that a large proportion of EU students coming to the UK to study would be contributing higher fees than is currently the case.

The combined effect of immigration and tuition fee policy changes might result in a decrease of £542 million in 2014/15, £904 million in 2019/20 and £1,112 million in 2024/25.

Separately, the UK Border Agency (UKBA) published its own impact assessment of the reform of the points-based immigration system in June this year, looking at impact over a shorter time scale. The assessment suggested that:

The level of tuition fee income from international students might reduce by £22.5 million in 2011/12; £30.8 million in 2012/13; £59.4 million in 2013/14 and £57.9 million in 2014/15.

The level of international student expenditure might reduce by £47.7 million in 2011/12; £95.1 million in 2012/13; £166.9 million in 2013/14 and £199.6 million in 2014/15. These figures did not include expenditure by students' dependents, nor do they include the amount generated by students and their dependents through part-time work while in study, which is not the same as the post-study work route.

The aggregate of these changes might result in a decrease of £70.2 million in 2011/12, £125.9 million in 2012/13, £229.3 million in 2013/14 and £257.5 million in 2014/15

The UKBA report also included impact assessment for a number of other items that are not included in the calculation of education exports, such as loss of output from post-study work by students. We have not included detail of these items in this response.

In presenting such estimates, it is important to note that they only represent a snapshot in time and can change. For example, UK work with Brazil on its "Science without Borders" programme could now see an additional 10,000 higher education students coming to study in the UK, under conditions which meet the new immigration policy.

The Government are very clear that we should not be discouraging genuine international students from coming to the UK to study at genuine institutions. We fully appreciate the economic benefits and wider enrichment students bring to the UK. What we are attempting to do is tackle abuse of the system. The aim is to ensure that we get the balance right between providing a user-friendly route for bona fide students and education providers and keeping out those who would seek to abuse the system.

In respect of non-EU students, higher education establishments are free to decide the level at which to set student fees. The Government have never regulated the fees charged by higher education institutions (HEIs) to international students. The market for international students is very competitive. Institutions watch closely what other institutions, in the UK and abroad, are charging when deciding on the level at which to set their own international student fees. It is not in any HEI's interest to price itself out of the market.

Further Education: Admissions

Lisa Nandy: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time students were enrolled in each further education college in England in the academic year (i) 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10. [84362]

Mr Hayes: I have made data available in the Libraries of the House showing the total number of Government-funded learners participating in further education (Learner Responsive provision) in general further education colleges by provider name and mode of attendance in 2008/09 and 2009/10.

Information on further education and skills participation and achievement by mode of attendance is published in a supplementary table of a quarterly Statistical First Release (SFR). The latest SFR was published on 27 October 2011:

http://www.thedataservice.org.uk/statistics/statisticalfirst release/sfr_supplementary_tables/

Higher Education

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he plans to take to encourage more flexible patterns of study in higher education. [80888]

Mr Willetts: We have consulted on how to encourage more flexible provision through the BIS Technical Consultation 'A new fit for purpose regulatory framework for the higher education sector'. The consultation closed on 27 October. We will give careful consideration to the range of responses and representations that we have received on this particular issue. A formal response to the consultation and to the Higher Education White Paper will both be made in early in 2012.

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills if he will take steps to implement an assessment framework to measure the number of potential students reached through additional outreach activities undertaken by institutions as part of their access agreements. [81880]

Mr Willetts: This is a matter for the director of fair access. The Office for Fair Access has confirmed that the director makes no assessment of the number of potential students reached through the additional outreach activities undertaken by institutions through their access agreements.

The director of fair access publishes annual monitoring reports setting out the outcomes of the Office for Fair Access' annual monitoring of access agreements. The latest report is for 2009/10 and is available at http://www.offa.org.uk/wp-content/uploads/2011/09/2011-04+2011-29-OFFA+HEFCE-Access-Agreement-standard-report-web.pdf

In February, the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills and I wrote to the director of fair access setting out our expectation that institutions should agree a programme of defined progress each year—set within a five-year time frame—in relation to appropriate benchmarks. We asked the director to move away from an assessment of inputs and processes to focus more sharply on the outcomes of outreach and other access activities. Universities will be able to focus their outreach and other activities where they will have the most impact.

Higher Education: Admissions

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many UCAS applications have been submitted by residents of each parliamentary constituency in 2011-12 to date; and how many such applications had been submitted by the same time in 2010-11. [83387]

Mr Willetts: The latest information provided by the Universities and Colleges Admission Service (UCAS) will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

UCAS has stated that year-on-year changes for all courses at this early stage in the cycle are often different from the position later in the cycle, and that it is too early in the cycle to extrapolate applicant volumes forward. The second table includes only those applicants who applied to courses with a deadline of 15 October. The main deadline for the majority of UCAS courses is 15 January 2012.

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many students outside the Higher Education Funding Council for England allocation of student numbers have enrolled on a higher education course with a (a) private company and (b) for-profit higher education provider in each of the last five years. [84090]

Mr Willetts: The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills does not hold the data requested. However in 2010, the Higher Education Statistics Agency completed a survey of private providers of higher education based on the 2009/10 academic year. Within the sample of providers there were 38,000 students on higher education courses. The full set of findings is available on the HESA website as follows:

http://www.hesa.ac.uk/content/view/2090/161/

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many students enrolled in designated higher education courses with (a) all private higher education providers and (b) for-profit higher education providers in each of the last five years; and how many studied (i) at each institution and (ii) in each subject area. [84091]

Mr Willetts: The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills does not hold the data requested. However in 2010, the Higher Education Statistics Agency completed a survey of private providers of higher education based on the 2009/10 academic year. Within the sample of providers there were 38,000 students on higher education courses—these will not all have been studying on designated courses. The full set of findings is available on the HESA website as follows:

http://www.hesa.ac.uk/content/view/2090/1G1/

The following table shows the numbers of English and EU-domiciled higher education students studying with private providers, who received some financial support via the Student Loans Company.

Academic year	Number receiving financial support
2006/07	3,300
2007/08	2,800
2008/09	3,300
2009/10	4,200
2010/11	5,900

Notes:
1. The effective date at which the data are taken is at 31 August at the end of each academic year.
2. Numbers are rounded to the nearest 100.

Source:
Student Loans Company

These figures do not provide total numbers of students enrolled in designated higher education courses at private providers, as not all students obtain student support (for personal eligibility reasons or because they have pursued alternative funding means). As numbers are small, it is not possible to provide a breakdown by institution and course as this could identify individuals.

Higher Education: Fees and Charges

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of the performance of the Office for Fair Access in ensuring that any higher education institution charging above £6,000 in tuition fees is linked to local schools and is part of a wider regional access network. [80873]

Mr Willetts: Institutions intending to charge more than the £6,000 basic amount for tuition must first demonstrate to the independent director of fair access what more they will do to attract students from disadvantaged backgrounds. These plans are finalised in approved access agreements.

Ministers at the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills wrote to the director of fair access on 10 February 2011 setting out the Government's expectations about how he should approach the approval and monitoring of new access agreements. The guidance set out significantly increased expectations for the priority that institutions should give to fair access and widening participation. In particular, we identified the effectiveness of collaborative working on widening participation, recognising that many institutions were already doing this and that access agreements should build on that work. We also highlighted that such collaboration also encourages the sharing of good practice. Additionally, we suggested that the director would want to take into account the scale and nature of outreach work with schools, colleges and other organisations. The director mirrored Governments' advice in his own guidance to the sector in March on how to develop access agreements.

The director has done an excellent job in very demanding circumstances. I am pleased to see that institutions are pledging to put significantly more resource into access activities (more than £600 million by 2015/16 compared to just over £400 million in 2011/12). Over £100 million of that investment has been earmarked by institutions for outreach activities.

Institutions now have to deliver what they have agreed and make the progress they have indicated.

Higher Education: North-east England

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many UCAS applications had been submitted by residents of (a) Stockton North constituency, (b) the borough of Stockton-on-Tees, (c) the Tees Valley and (d) the North-East in the 2011-12 admissions cycle by 21 November 2011; and how many such applications had been submitted on the same date in the 2010-11 admissions cycle. [84356]

Mr Willetts: The latest information is in the tables and has been provided by the Universities and Colleges Admission Service (UCAS).

UCAS has stated that year-on-year changes for all courses at this early stage in the cycle are often different from the position later in the cycle, and that it is too early in the cycle to extrapolate applicant volumes forward. The second table includes only those applicants who applied to courses with a deadline of 15 October. The main deadline for the majority of UCAS courses is 15 January.

Mrs Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many UCAS applications had been submitted by residents in (a) Darlington constituency, (b) the Tees Valley and (c) the North-East in the 2011-12 admissions cycle by 21 November 2011; and how many such applications had been submitted on the same date in the 2010-11 admissions cycle. Higher Education: Regulation

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills when he plans to publish the (a) consultation responses and (b) Government response to his Department's consultation on a new regulatory framework for the higher education sector. [83455]

Mr Willetts: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 24 November 2011, Official Report, columns 517-18W.

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had with representatives of (a) universities, (b) private and for-profit providers and (c) students on his proposed changes to the Higher Education Regulatory Framework. [84590]

Mr Willetts: The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills and I meet regularly with a wide range of current and prospective higher education providers and with representative bodies in the higher education sector. Discussions over proposed changes to the higher education regulatory framework have featured in many of these meetings. A quarterly-updated list of all BIS ministerial meetings with external organisations is available at:

http://www.bis.gov.uk/transparency/staff

In addition, BIS officials held two stakeholder meetings as part of the technical consultation on the proposed regulatory framework, which ran until 27 October. 60 delegates were invited from a wide range of bodies in the higher education sector, including representatives of higher education institutions, further education colleges, alternative providers, mission groups, unions, including the National Union for Students, partner bodies and other representative bodies.

Higher Education: Scholarships

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of university applicants who will apply to the National Scholarship Programme for the academic year 2012-13; and how many applicants he expects to be awarded funding under the programme. [81143]

Mr Willetts: The National Scholarship Programme is designed to help people of all ages whose family income is no greater than £25,000 per annum. Higher education institutions set their own criteria for determining entitlement to an award from among this broad group of people. Institutions will offer a range of support from a menu which includes tuition fee waivers or discounts, subsidised accommodation and other institutional support, and a cash bursary—capped at £1,000.

All institutions that intend to charge more than the basic rate for tuition from 2012 are required to participate in the programme and contribute match funding. Universities are responsible for advertising their criteria and making the awards. The Government have made no estimate of the number of students who are likely to apply to universities.

In the first year, the Government will contribute £50 million towards the NSP with the minimum level for an award set at £3,000 for each eligible full-time student. That would mean around 17,000 students would benefit. Of course the actual number is likely to be larger than this when institutions' match funding is taken into account as well as awards made to students studying part-time. By 2014/15 when the programme is fully operational, the Government's contribution to the National Scholarship Programme will be three times higher and, with match funding, up to 100,000 students a year could be being supported.

Higher Education: Statistics

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills with reference to the Higher Education White Paper, what progress he has made in achieving his aim of reducing the burden of data collection on higher education institutions. [82975]

Mr Willetts: In the White Paper, we made a commitment to work with the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) through its periodical data review process. Reviews have recently been completed for the Destinations of Leavers from Higher Education survey, and the Staff data stream. These reviews will result in changes for 2011/12 and 2012/13 respectively. The Student and Estates data streams are currently under review.

For the longer term, in the HE White Paper BIS asked the Higher Education Better Regulation Group (HEBRG) to progress an exploratory project to transform the information landscape of the HE sector, which will apply a "collect once, use many times" approach to data collection. This expects to report in summer 2012 on the feasibility of redesigning the information landscape to reduce the burden of reporting on higher education providers.

ICT: Training

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what funding his Department provides to colleges and training providers to train people as computer numerical control operators. [83998]

Mr Hayes: As set out in my Department's Skills Investment Statement 2011-14 (1 December 2011), overall investment in adult further education (FE) and skills will be £3.8 billion in the 2012-13 financial year.

The Skills Funding Agency has responsibility for the funding of post-19 further education and skills training and allocates budgets to individual FE colleges and training organisations, it does not allocate funding at the qualification level.

From the 2011/12 academic year we introduced a single adult skills budget. This will provide FE colleges and training organisations with the flexibility to offer the range and balance of programmes, from basic skills to higher-level skills, in the mode of delivery that will best meet the needs of learners, employers and communities in line with demand.

Industrial Disputes

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many responses from small businesses his Department received to its Resolving Workplace Disputes consultation. [84543]

Mr Davey: This information is available in "Resolving Workplace Disputes: Government response to the consultation" which was published on 23 November 2011, a copy of which has been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Manufacturing Fellowships

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many manufacturing fellowships have been taken up (a) nationally, (b) in the East Midlands and (c) in Leicester. [82797]

Mr Willetts: The Department provides funding to the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council (EPSRC) which then provide a range of fellowship support.

Between 1997 and 2010, of the 285 fellowship proposals received by EPSRC classified as manufacturing, the following were awarded:

(a) 58 nationally;

(b) two in the east midlands; and

(c) one in Leicester.

In 2011 EPSRC developed a new approach to fellowships. The first call for EPSRC fellowships in manufacturing was announced in March 2011 and EPSRC expects to award the first fellowships in March 2012. EPSRC has received no applications from institutions in the east midlands to date.

Maternity Pay

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on simplifying maternity pay and benefits. [84534]

Mr Davey: BIS officials have been working closely with the Department for Work and Pensions, and other Government Departments, on the development of proposals following on from the closure of the Modern Workplaces consultation on 8 August 2011. The proposals will deliver the Government's commitment to a new system of flexible parental leave to be implemented in April 2015. This will include looking at the current system of maternity, paternity and adoption leave and pay.

Office of the Independent Adjudicator for Higher Education

Charlotte Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many complaints his Department has received on decisions of the Office of the Adjudicator for Higher Education (a) since May 2010 and (b) in each year since its creation. [83937]

Mr Willetts: There are no centrally held statistics on the number of complaints to the Department on decisions made by the Office of the Independent Adjudicator (OIA). The OIA provides an independent service and as such the Government do not review its decisions.

Private Sector: Employment

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the extent to which former public sector workers have found employment in the private sector. [83703]

Chris Grayling: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Department for Work and Pensions.

The latest Office for Budget Responsibility forecast is for overall employment to grow by around one million between 2011 and 2017, with a fall of around 700,000 in public sector employment more than offset by a 1.7 million rise in the number employed in the private sector.

No specific assessment has been made of the extent to which workers previously employed in the public sector subsequently move to private sector jobs, although the labour market is highly fluid. In the last year Jobcentre Plus has taken over three million new vacancies and across the labour market as a whole there have been six million moves into work or between jobs.

Most people who lose their job and become unemployed are able to leave quickly, with over half of new JSA claims lasting less than three months and three-quarters lasting less than six months. Help and support is available through Jobcentre Plus for all individuals affected by job losses regardless of the part of the economy in which they were previously employed.

Procurement: EU Action

Esther McVey: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what safeguards (a) he will encourage his EU counterparts to put in place and (b) are already in place to ensure that there is an equitable advertising and procurement policy enforced across all EU member states for Government-backed manufacturing and servicing contracts relating to (i) the emerging off-shore wind industry and (ii) other industries. [83318]

Mr Prisk: EU public procurement is governed by the 2004 European directive which requires all contracts for goods, services and works over certain thresholds to be advertised in the Official Journal of the European Union (OJEU) to allow equitable access to business across the EU. An equivalent directive applies to utilities. The UK Government advertise all central Government tendering opportunities over £10,000 on Contracts Finder. Government will negotiate in the EU for a radical simplification of the relevant directives, to make it easier for businesses to access contracts let by all member states across the EU.

In the UK, my right hon. Friend the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General announced the outcomes of the Government Growth Review on public procurement on 21 November 2011. Government will now publish medium-term rolling demand pipelines on areas of significant Government spend by April 2012; will engage strategically with industry supply chains to identify the key capabilities needed to meet this demand; and undertake better pre-procurement engagement with supply chains around sub-contracting opportunities for specific projects. The Department of Business, Innovation and Skills and the Cabinet Office will be working with the wider public sector and regulated industries to apply these reforms beyond central Government.

Professional Organisations

Charlotte Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills which systems are in place to monitor the work of chartered institute organisations such as the Chartered Institute of Management Accountants. [83932]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I have been asked to reply.

The Privy Council has no monitoring role in respect of Chartered bodies. The effect of a Charter is to free the recipient body from Government control, and the only power retained by the Privy Council is the reactive one of considering and approving amendments proposed by a body to its Charter or by-laws.

The work of the chartered accountancy bodies is monitored by the Professional Oversight Board of the Financial Reporting Council.

Regional Growth Fund

Mr Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2011, Official Report, column 802W, on the Regional Growth Fund, what guidance his Department provides to companies bidding for Regional Growth Funding on the proportion of grant funding that should be spent on due diligence. [82495]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 24 November 2011]: The Regional Growth Fund (RGF) 'Information for Applicants' document available on the BIS website described the due diligence requirement. However, no guidance was provided on the provided on the proportion of grant funding that should be spent on due diligence as it for beneficiaries to discuss the cost of providing due diligence with practitioners.

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had on publishing the precise amounts allocated from the Regional Growth Fund. [84542]

Mr Prisk: I have regular discussions with officials concerning the Regional Growth Fund. In order not to prejudice the commercial interests of bidders conditional allocations are not published. Once due diligence and contracting are complete amounts awarded to individual bidders will be made available.

Research

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what information his Department holds on the proportion of research and development undertaken nationally which is performed by companies with more than (a) 250 and (b) 1,000 employees. [84890]

Mr Willetts: The Office for National Statistics collects data on research and development performed in UK businesses. The most recent data was published in November 2011 and relates to research and development (R&D) conducted in 2010.

In 2010, the proportion of R&D performed within businesses with more than (a) 250 employees was 79% and (b) 1,000 employees was 56%.

Royal Mail: Glasgow

Mr Bain: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had with Royal Mail on the future of customer service operations at the Glasgow Mail Centre. [83999]

Mr Davey: The Department for Business Innovation and Skills has not had any discussions with Royal Mail on the future of customer service operations at the Glasgow Mail Centre.

This is an operational matter for Royal Mail and I have therefore asked the chief executive, Moya Greene, to respond directly to the hon. Gentleman. A copy of her reply will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Scholarships

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment and monitoring he is conducting of the qualifying criteria imposed by individual colleges for eligibility for the national scholarship programme; and if he will make a statement. [80524]

Mr Willetts: The Higher Education Funding Council for England has commissioned CFE Research and Consultancy, an independent research and consultancy body, to undertake an evaluation of the National Scholarship Programme.

The first phase of the project, running until early next year, will look at the set up of the programme, and will include an analysis of the eligibility criteria being adopted by participating universities and colleges.

Skills Funding Agency: Redundancy

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of the operational effects of redundancies at the Skills Funding Agency in the next 12 months. [84998]

Mr Hayes: The Skills Funding Agency (SFA) is responsible for allocating funding to further education (FE) colleges and training providers for post 19-education and skills training. The Government's commitment to give more freedom to the FE sector means that the role of the SFA has changed significantly, and it no longer has a planning function. As a result it is now a much smaller organisation than it was 12 months ago.

A new structure has been put in place which will enable the agency to operate more efficiently in its role of ensuring that public funding is allocated efficiently and effectively to meet the priorities set out in "New Challenges, New Chances", which was published by the Government on 1 December.

Space Technology

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what space projects his Department supports; how much has been spent on each project to date; how much he plans to spend on each project in each of the next two years; what further projects are planned in each of the next two years; what discussions (a) Ministers and (b) officials in his Department have had with HM Treasury on space issues; what the outcome was of such discussions; and if he will make a statement. [84553]

Mr Willetts: The UK Space Agency has published a brochure describing the national space programme and projects 2011/12. It is available on the agency web site and explains more about each of the projects listed in the following table. Many are national instrument contributions to European Space Agency or international projects:

http://www.bis.gov.uk/ukspaceagency/publications

The UK also invests directly through the European Space Agency in a broad range of space projects in science, Earth observation, telecommunications and technology. These are listed on the UK Space Agency website:

http://www.bis.gov.uk/ukspaceagency/missions

The outcomes have been positive and are reflected in a number of ways. One is the creation of the agency and its spending review settlement for 2011 to 2015. Another has been the additional capital funding allocated in the spring budget and autumn statement of some £35.7 million. This will support the start of a new national space technology programme, national e-infrastructure for space, and a new and novel low cost radar satellite constellation. If successful these programmes could attract over £160 million of private finance. Discussions continue on the space aspects of the next EU multi-year financial perspective, and this will be decided in the timeline of the overall EU budget for 2014 to 2020.

[2] Technology Strategy Board is lead funder with some funding (£0.5 million) from UK Space Agency.
[3] Fresh funding announced as part of autumn statement.
[4] £10M from UK Space Agency plus additional contributions from TSB, SEEDA and research councils.

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what support he plans to provide to space exploration in each of the next two years; what recent reports he has received of assistance given to space exploration by the Government of (a) the US, (b) the Russian Federation and (c) each EU member state; and if he will make a statement. [84554]

Mr Willetts: The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, provides funding to the United Kingdom Space Agency for space activities. The one exploration project currently being funded through the European Space Agency (ESA) is ExoMars/Aurora. This is a mission to explore the atmosphere and surface of Mars and is scheduled to be launched in two phases in 2016 and 2018. It is funded by the UK at an average of €14 million per year. In addition there is a nationally funded UK activity of £5.5 million per year to provide instruments for the ExoMars mission and to exploit the science and technology of this and other Mars exploration missions.

The United States was scheduled to be a major partner in ExoMars, but the latest report indicates that they are reconsidering their support with a view to a decision in February 2012. I have also been advised that the Russian Federation are also considering whether they can offer support and a position may be known by early 2012.

ESA member states have agreed to support the ESA ExoMars programme as shown in the following table. Most countries also have a national programme to support instruments. Through ESA, member states are studying options for a Mars mission to follow ExoMars with the ultimate goal of returning samples of material from Mars for study in terrestrial laboratories. Germany, Spain and Portugal are also funding studies with ESA of a proposed robotic lunar lander mission to be launched around 2018.

Participating states	ExoMars %	ExoMars M€ - 2008 ec
Austria	1.25	12.5
Belgium	2.61	26.1
Denmark	0.55	5.5
France	12.9	129.0
Germany	8.96	89.6
Italy	27.82	278.2
The Netherlands	1.24	12.4
Norway	0.26	2.6
Portugal	0.21	2.1

Switzerland	4.38	43.8
United Kingdom	16.5	165.0
Canada	1.91	19.1
Total subscribed	85.04	850.4

ExoMars is in a critical position, with European support remaining solid, but with the USA reconsidering its role. Once the USA and Russian Federation views are known, ESA will determine the way forward by agreement of its member states.

Space Technology: Russia

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether his Department has offered the Russian Federation assistance with the Phobos-Grunt space mission. [84666]

Mr Willetts: Assistance to the Russian Federation has been provided through the European Space Agency (ESA) using capabilities partially supported by the UK as a member of ESA. The Department for Business Innovation and Skills has not offered help directly.

Students: Debts

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate he has made of the average debt that will be accrued by each person who enrols on an access to higher education course in 2013-14 and proceeds to complete a three-year Bachelor's degree. [84318]

Mr Willetts: We estimate, based on figures for the average cost per enrolment of an Access to Higher Education course in 2010/11, that the average loan for such a course undertaken by someone aged 24 or above in 2013/14 will be around £2,500. For those participants who are under 24 such courses will remain grant funded.

For those who subsequently begin a three-year degree course in 2014/15 and take-up both a fee and maintenance loan every year, the additional amount borrowed could on average be around £38,000.

Students: Loans

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what the thresholds will be for interest rate increments on the repayment of student loans taken out from the 2012-13 academic year; and if he will make a statement. [83018]

Mr Willetts: Under our proposals, interest on student loans will accrue at (retail prices index) RPI + 3% up until the date when the borrower is due to repay. Full-time students will become liable to repay in the April after they leave their course, and part time students will become liable to repay in the April which falls four years after the start date of their course or the April after they leave their course if that is sooner.

After that date, interest will accrue at a rate of RPI for those earning £21,000 or less. Between £21,000 and £41,000 a linear scale will apply, with interest increasing gradually from RPI to RPI +3%. Those earning £41,000 or more will accrue interest at RPI +3%.

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills which designated courses at each higher education provider he has authorised to receive student loan funding in the last year; and how much student loan funding was allocated to each designated course. [84089]

Mr Willetts: Eligible full and part-time higher education courses at publicly-funded educational institutions in the UK are automatically designated for student support. Full-time distance learning courses and eligible higher education courses at private higher education providers may be specifically designated on a course-by-course basis at the discretion of the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

I will place in the Libraries of the House a list showing which courses the Secretary of State specifically designated for student support purposes between 1 September 2010 and 31 August 2011. This includes postgraduate courses which are designated for the purpose of disabled student allowances only.

I will also place in the Libraries of the House a list showing the total amount of tuition fee loan and maintenance loan that was paid to eligible English domiciled students on specifically designated full-time courses at private higher education providers during the 2010/11 academic year.

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what proportion of student loan funding was awarded to students studying at private higher education institutions in each of the last five years. [84092]

Mr Willetts: The proportion of total student loan funding awarded to students studying at private higher education institutions is given in the following table:

Percentage

Academic year:	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11
Maintenance loans	0.5	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.6

Percentage

Academic year	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11
Fee loans	0.5	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.5
All loans	0.5	0.4	0.4	0.4	0.6

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills when the Government will publish its response to his Department's consultation entitled Consultation on potential early repayment mechanisms for students loans; and if he will publish a (a) summary of consultation responses and (b) list of respondents. [84591]

Mr Willetts: The consultation on potential early repayment mechanisms closed on 20 September 2011. The Department will respond in due course. This response will include a summary of all consultation responses and a list of the respondents.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what modelling he plans to undertake to assess the potential effects of his Department's proposals to introduce further education loans for people aged over 24. [85011]

Mr Hayes: The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) will publish both a full impact assessment of further education (FE) loans and an equality impact assessments of FE loans, due March 2012.

The impact assessments will be informed by research and analysis commissioned by BIS. This will include the results of the Online Learner Panel Survey carried out by Opinion Panel, TNS-BMRB work with potential FE students to understand how FE loans might affect their decision to study and further research if deemed necessary.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many submissions he has received in respect of his Department's consultation on plans to introduce further education loans for people aged over 24. [85013]

Mr Hayes: The Department received 132 separate responses to the further education (FE) loans consultation. In addition, we received feedback from 117 individual learners through the online learner panel.

The consultation has therefore given us a wide range of views, including from public and private learning providers, sector representatives, small and large businesses and other Government bodies.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate he plans to make of the number of women likely to be affected by his Department's proposal to introduce loans for further education study for people aged over 24. [85014]

Mr Hayes: In preparing an initial impact assessment for further education (FE) loans the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) has estimated that in 2014/15 (the first full year of further education loans) the number of women learners who would start courses and be eligible for an FE loan would be in the region of 100,000.

The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) has commissioned TNS-BMRB to carry out research with future FE students to understand how FE loans might affect their decision to study. The research will include interviews with people from a range of backgrounds including women, and the results will inform both the full impact assessment of FE loans and an equality impact assessment of FE loans, due to be published in March 2012.

Students: Merseyside

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what the average student loan taken out in St Helens South and Whiston constituency was in each year since 2005. [80956]

Mr Willetts: The information is in the following table.

Average student loan paid to those taking out loans, St Helens South and Whiston constituency[1]

	Average loan paid (£)[2]

Students: Sponsorship

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 632W, on students: sponsorship, what steps he plans to take in the event that an insufficient number of employers and charities offer sponsorship for university places. [82857]

Mr Willetts: Pursuant to my answer of 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 632W, a response to the Higher Education White Paper will be published in due course. We have asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England for advice on increasing the opportunities to attract employer or charity sponsorship for individual places, provided they do not create a cost liability for Government, in the context of their winter consultation on teaching funding and student number controls for 2013/14 and beyond.

Technology Strategy Board

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what the monetary value is of unallocated funding overseen by the Technology Strategy Board in each of the next five years. [82776]

Mr Willetts: The Technology Strategy Board's agreed core budget for 2011/12 is £317 million. I cannot be specific on future year allocations, but it will be in the order of £300 million per annum in the current spending review period.

The Technology Strategy Board's current uncommitted funding over the remainder of the spending review period is as follows:

	£ million
2011/12	0
2012/13	106
2013/14	199
2014/15	215

Trade Promotion: Olympic Games 2012

Damian Collins: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much funding has been allocated to the British Business Embassy to be held at Lancaster House during the London 2012 Olympic Games. [82477]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 24 November 2011]: The estimated budget for the British Business Embassy is £3.28 million, of which UKTI will contribute £2.53 million, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will provide £0.75 million and sponsorship will be sought of £0.6 million.

Training: Finance

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the statement on page 57 of the Autumn Statement (Cm 8231) that the Government will provide £4 million to Skills for Logistics to improve training approaches to increase the competitiveness and productivity of the logistics sector; how will these funds be allocated; who can apply for funding; and if he will make a statement. [84938]

Mr Hayes: Skills for Logistics has secured investment funding from the Employer Investment Fund administered by the UK Commission, of up to £4 million to undertake four strands of work over a two-year period. The investment funding is to work with employers to enhance the attractiveness of the sector to young people and individuals currently not employed in the sector. The investment will build skills solutions that ultimately inform and lay the foundations for a Modern Logistics Guild. This investment works with co investment from larger employers who are looking to establish an employer bond which will underwrite loans to small and medium enterprises (SMEs) for apprenticeship training.

Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations

Mr David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to his autumn statement of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 808, what representations he received about changes to Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations before making his autumn statement. [84944]

Mr Davey: As part of my ongoing dialogue with business some have raised concerns that the current Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations gold-plate the acquired rights directive and are overly bureaucratic. I have also had formal representations from business concerning the implementation of the directive in other member states. Recognising that this is a complex area of legislation I have launched a call for evidence to gather views from a wide range of stakeholders in considering the case for change.

Mr David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to his autumn statement of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 808, whether he plans to launch a public consultation on reform on the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations. [84945]

Mr Davey: There will be a formal consultation on any possible changes to the current Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations should responses from the call for evidence launched on 23 November 2011 indicate that there is a case for change.

Internships

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (1) what estimate he has made of the proportion of employees who are employed as interns in the (a) political, (b) legal, (c) media, (d) fashion and (e) financial services sector; [84097]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people undertaking (a) paid and (b) unpaid internships; [84098]

(3) what estimate he has made of the average length of an internship; [84099]

(4) what proportion of people who undertook an unpaid internship went on to paid employment at the place of their internship in the latest period for which figures are available. [84100]

Mr Willetts: The Department does not hold this information. The graduate internship market is diverse and we welcome the numerous quality opportunities which both public and private employers provide. We will continue to encourage employers to ensure fair access to internship opportunities by advertising their vacancies openly and transparently, and by providing some form of financial support. The Government are clear that those who are entitled to the minimum wage should receive it.

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he has any plans to bring forward proposals for a legal definition of an internship. [84101]

Mr Willetts: We have no such plans. Internships are not defined in law: under employment and national minimum wage law, individuals can be employees, self-employed, workers, volunteers or voluntary workers.

An intern's legal status is determined by the nature of the activities they undertake and the relationship with their employer. We have updated our guidance on Business Link and Directgov to provide more clarity on internships for employers and individuals.

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what advice he has received on the legality of unpaid internships. [84594]

Mr Willetts: As part of the Government's work on examining options on the treatment of interns in relation to the national minimum wage, the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has considered the legal issues associated with unpaid internships. However, advice from Government lawyers is subject to legal professional privilege. The legal advice relating to unpaid internships is no different to any other legal advice in that regard.

The Department has recently updated guidance on Business Link and Directgov to provide more clarity on internships for employers and individuals.

Internships: Redditch

Karen Lumley: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills if he will estimate the number of people undertaking (a) paid and (b) unpaid internships in Redditch. [84824]

Mr Willetts: This Department does not hold this information. The graduate internship market is diverse and we welcome the numerous quality opportunities which both public and private employers provide. We will continue to encourage employers to ensure fair access to internship opportunities by advertising their vacancies openly and transparently, and by providing some form of financial support. The Government are clear that those who are entitled to the minimum wage should receive it.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

British Overseas Territories: Elections

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the (a) Governor and (b) government of each Overseas Territory will be inviting election observers to observe forthcoming general elections; and what criteria will be used to select the observers to be invited. [84481]

Mr Bellingham: Election observers have not consistently been invited to observe elections in the Overseas Territories. The responsibility for inviting election observers varies from territory to territory and will depend on the constitution, laws and practice of individual territories. The British Government believe that, in general, it is good practice for open democracies, including the Overseas Territories, to invite election observers. There are a number of organisations that organise election observers including the Organisation for Security and Co-operation in Europe, Commonwealth, and EU. A number of factors might be expected to inform the identification of suitable election observers including geography, history, financing issues and the capacity of observer organisations to respond. I was pleased that observers from the Caribbean Community and the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, including members of this house, observed the elections in British Virgin Islands and that they were impressed with the conduct of the elections.

Foreign Relations: Education

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many education officers his Department employs. [84586]

Mr Bellingham: We do not recognise the term education officer.

Syria: Diplomatic Relations

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what options he is considering in respect of future diplomatic relations with Syria. [84909]

Alistair Burt: We maintain diplomatic relations with Syria and use these to raise our concerns about the current situation in Syria.

Syria: Human Rights

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking with his international counterparts to prevent human rights abuses in Syria. [84911]

Alistair Burt: The UK Government reiterate their condemnation of the widespread violations of human rights which President Assad and his regime have been committing for months.

The UK has been at the forefront of international action to bring a halt to the violence in Syria. The UK co-sponsored the Human Rights Council resolution mandating the Commission of Inquiry and supported a third Special Session of the Human Rights Council on 2 December, which passed a strong resolution establishing further monitoring mechanisms to ensure that the flow of independent, factual information about the human rights situation in Syria continues. We have tabled a resolution in the UN General Assembly Third Committee supporting the Arab League's efforts and condemning the violence, which passed by an overwhelming majority. We have pushed hard, though so far unsuccessfully, for action in the Security Council. We have worked with EU partners to impose sanctions on the Syrian regime.

We continue to believe that President Assad should step aside and allow the Syrian people to realise their aspirations for greater freedom, dignity and a more open political system. We will continue to take every opportunity to intensify the pressure on the Syrian regime to stop the violence.

Syria: Politics and Government

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent estimate he has made of the number of protestors killed and wounded in Syria. [84910]

Alistair Burt: The UN estimates that more than 4,000 people have been killed in Syria since March, including 307 children. It has reported widespread and systematic human rights violations, including murder, torture, illegal detention and rape. Although exact figures are unknown, many reports put the number of the missing and unaccounted for in the thousands.

We have made clear repeatedly our condemnation of the widespread violations of human rights which President Assad and his regime have been committing for months. We continue to believe that President Assad should step aside and allow the Syrian people to realise their aspirations for greater freedom, dignity and a more open political system.

We welcome the publication of the UN Commission of Inquiry's report on human rights violations in Syria. We condemn the Syrian Government's unwillingness to co-operate with the Commission. The UK co-sponsored the Human Rights Council resolution mandating the Commission of Inquiry and supported a third Special Session of the Human Rights Council on 2 December, which passed a strong resolution establishing further monitoring mechanisms to ensure that the flow of independent, factual information about the human rights situation in Syria continues.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85073]

Mr Paterson: No senior staff in my Department, or in its non-departmental public bodies, are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

SCOTLAND

Aircraft Carriers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with Ministerial colleagues on the construction of Queen Elizabeth-class aircraft carriers. [84680]

David Mundell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, has regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a range of defence-related matters affecting Scotland, including the construction of the Queen Elizabeth-class aircraft carriers. Good progress continues to be made on the carrier project and last month the Secretary of State visited the Babcock site at Rosyth to inspect work which is under way.

Departmental Equality

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent steps his Department has taken to increase equality among its staff; and at what cost. [84673]

David Mundell: All staff in the Scotland Office are on loan or secondment, mainly from the Scottish Government or the Ministry of Justice; both bodies provide a full range of initiatives specific to equality including running equality events, supporting internal staff networks and providing support on corporate equality programmes. Separate figures on costs are not available.

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many unique hits his Department's website has received in each of the last 12 months. [84676]

	Unique hits
October 2011	3,773
September 2011	3,302
August 2011	2,602
July 2011	2,647
June 2011	3,833
May 2011	3,802
April 2011	2,857
March 2011	3,444
February 2011	2,887
January 2011	2,849
December 2010	4,218
November 2010	4,132

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what social media his Department operates. [84681]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office operates a Twitter account.

Departmental Older Workers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people aged over (a) 55 and (b) 65 his Department employs. [84682]

David Mundell: All staff in the Scotland Office are on loan or secondment, mainly from the Scottish Government or the Ministry of Justice who hold individual staff personnel records, including details such as dates of birth. The Scotland Office does not hold a record of dates of birth of staff.

Departmental Written Questions

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what proportion of questions for written answer on a named day his Department has answered on the due date in the present session of Parliament. [84677]

David Mundell: In the present session of Parliament, the Scotland Office answered 182 (94%) of named-day parliamentary questions on the due date.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85065]

David Mundell: The following table shows the number of named day PQs that received a substantive answer within five working days of the date specified:

2011	Named day PQs
June	8
July	14
August	—
September	6
October	6
November	7
Total number	41
Total percentage	100

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the committee at the end of the session. Statistics relating to Government Department's performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Drugs

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what his policy is on mandatory drug tests for the staff of his Department. [84675]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office does not employ staff directly. All staff working in the office are on loan or secondment from other Government bodies, mainly the Scottish Government or the Ministry of Justice, who remain the principal employers. As such, staff remain on the terms and conditions of their parent bodies. This includes policies relating to substance misuse, conduct and discipline.

Drugs: Misuse

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many staff of his Department have been disciplined due to drug offences in the last 12 months. [84834]

David Mundell: No staff have been disciplined due to drug offences in the last 12 months.

Economic Growth

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent steps he has taken to support the economy of Scotland. [84678]

David Mundell: On 17 November, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced the membership of the new Scottish Business Board to raise issues and help provide solutions on the Scottish economy. This new Board has the expertise and knowledge to make a real difference to the way we tackle the issues facing the Scottish economy and get the most both from and for our companies across Scotland. The Secretary of State also led the largest ever trade mission to Brazil at the end of November. This trade mission allowed companies from a wide range of Scottish sectors to showcase their services and establish links in a high-growth market which has become increasingly important to the global economy.

Jobcentre Plus

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many jobcentres in Scotland he has visited on departmental business in the last 12 months. [84679]

David Mundell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has visited the job centre in Edinburgh on departmental business in the last 12 months. He has visited the job centre in Galashiels, Scotland as a constituency MP in the last 12 months. In addition, he met with members of the senior management team of JobCentre Plus on departmental business on eight separate occasions in the last 12 months.

Lockerbie: Bombings

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Libya on the status of Abdelbaset al-Megrahi. [84668]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office has had no such discussions with the Government of Libya.

Natural Gas: Exploration

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) letters and (b) emails he has received in respect of shale gas extraction in Scotland in the last 12 months. [84674]

David Mundell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has not received any letters or e-mails in respect of shale gas extraction in Scotland in the last 12 months.

Olympic Games 2012

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport on the effect on Scotland of the London 2012 Olympics. [84663]

David Mundell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has regular discussions with the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport, my right hon. Friend the Member for South West Surrey (Mr Hunt), on a range of issues including making the most of the opportunities that the London 2012 Olympics will bring to Scotland.

Renewable Energy

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has had on renewable energy development in Scotland. [84684]

David Mundell: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I meet regularly with ministerial colleagues, the Scottish Government and the business community to discuss growth of all sectors of the economy. Last month the Secretary of State and I convened the Scottish Business Board which brought together business leaders from across a range of sectors, including those with an interest in development of renewable energy, to discuss measures to break down barriers to growth.

WOMEN AND EQUALITIES

Crimes of Violence: Victim Support Schemes

Kate Green: To ask the Minister for Women and Equalities what the total value was of grants awarded by the Government Equalities Office through the Special Fund for local assault services in financial year (a) 2010-11 and (b) 2011-12. [81248]

Lynne Featherstone: The Government are committed to tackling sexual violence and all forms of violence against women and girls.

Victims of rape and sexual assault need support within and beyond the criminal justice system.

Support is provided through three main pillars:

specialist sexual violence support services provided by civil society organisations; sexual assault referral centres; and independent sexual violence advisers.

The Home Office has allocated £28 million of funding until 2015 for related specialist services in addition to the specialist sexual violence support services, including funding to nearly double the number of specialist independent advisers.

The Government Equalities Office, as a stand alone Department in the financial year 2010-11, contributed an additional £1 million into a combined fund for sexual violence voluntary sector, managed by the Ministry of Justice.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister for Women and Equalities what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85047]

Lynne Featherstone: From 1 April 2011, the Government Equalities Office became part of the Home Office. Information relating to the Government Equalities Office will be included in the reply of the Minister for Immigration.

Social Justice Committee: Ministers

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for Women and Equalities how many meetings of the Social Justice Committee Ministers in her Department have attended since its establishment. [85341]

Lynne Featherstone: From 1 April 2011, the Government Equalities Office became part of the Home Office. Information relating to the Government Equalities Office will be included in the reply of the Minister for Immigration.

TRANSPORT

Air Transport Auxiliary

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures her Department is taking to encourage former members of the Air Transport Auxiliary to apply for the Air Transport Auxiliary Veterans Badge. [85320]

Mrs Villiers: Air Transport Auxiliary veterans who have not been awarded a Veterans Badge can find details of how to apply on the Directgov website. Badges were awarded to all surviving veterans known to the ATA Association when the scheme was launched in 2008; it was widely publicised at that time.

Bypasses: Kegworth

Andrew Bridgen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent progress has been made on the Kegworth bypass project; and if she will make a statement. [85171]

Mike Penning: In October 2010, the Department for Transport set out the outcomes of the Government's 2010 comprehensive spending review, publishing details of its investment decisions for major road projects on the strategic road network.

Plans to provide a bypass of Kegworth were not included among the schemes identified, and the Highways Agency is therefore not developing such a proposal at this time.

Dartford-Thurrock Crossing: Automatic Number Plate Recognition

Mr Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations she has received on the use of automatic number plate recognition at the Dartford crossing. [84815]

Mike Penning: The Department received a number of representations on the use of automatic number place recognition (ANPR) during the recently held consultation to raise the charges at the Dartford-Thurrock river crossing. These primarily focused on using ANPR for the delivery of the free-flow project and the ability of ANPR to capture foreign vehicles that use the crossing. The proposals for an ANPR system are currently being considered as part of the design stage for a free-flow charging scheme at the crossing.

Procurement

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts her Department has awarded directly to (a) small, (b) medium-sized and (c) large businesses in each month since May 2010; what the value was of such contracts; and if she will make a statement. [75167]

Norman Baker: The Department for Transport has directly awarded the following number of contracts to small, medium and large businesses in each month since May 2010:

	Small businesses	Medium businesses	Large businesses	Value (£)
2010
May	9	13	69	33,842,021
June	2	16	77	35,937,683
July	6	13	62	18,967,821
August	2	7	64	20,756,405
September	3	9	66	14,236,977
October	7	8	61	14,370,826
November	4	13	81	18,312,478
December	3	14	72	20,854,239
2011
January	4	9	46	93,978,185
February	3	3	25	11,876,693
March	5	6	37	12,332,948

May	2	11	67	86,986,108
June	2	38	193	165,457,099
July	3	42	190	157,940,426
August	2	69	157	35,240,150
September	2	58	157	81,021,994
October	2	20	64	2,630,139

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency: Preston

Mark Hendrick: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions she has had on the future of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency office in Preston; and whether the potential closure of the office or redundancies were raised. [83936]

Mike Penning: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is reviewing all aspects of its business, including the delivery of services through its local offices. The aim of this is to look at ways in which the customer experience can be improved while delivering increased efficiency. The results of this exercise will be announced in due course.

M4: Repairs and Maintenance

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what improvements are planned for the M4 in each of the next five years; and if she will estimate the (a) cost of the improvements and (b) number of jobs that will be created. [84722]

Mike Penning: In April 2011 I published the timetable for the 14 Highways Agency major road schemes due to start construction by 2015; this included the M4 Junctions 19-20 and M5 Junctions 15-17 managed motorway scheme, on which work is scheduled to begin between January and March 2012.

The cost of this scheme is estimated to be £88.6 million, and it is expected to provide hundreds of jobs during its construction.

There are no current plans to develop other major improvement schemes for the M4 at this time. However, the Department is working with the Welsh Assembly Government on their proposal to improve the M4 around Newport.

Railways Stations: Standards

Mr Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when she expects to announce the successful bids for the Access for All Mid-Tier programme for railway stations; and if she will make a statement; [81198]

(2) what the reasons are for the time taken to announce the successful bids to the Access for All Mid-Tier programme for railway stations; and if she will make a statement. [81199]

Norman Baker: The successful bids for the Access for All mid-tier programme for railway stations were announced today.

Roads: Rural Areas

Geoffrey Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will amend the rules governing the deployment of brown signs on major trunk roads in rural areas in order to assist small businesses. [84854]

Mike Penning: A working group is currently reviewing the existing criteria for the provision of brown tourist signs on the strategic and local network, to ensure that it meets the needs of road users and gives the tourist industry a helping hand at the same time. It is anticipated that revised guidelines will be available by mid 2012.

Guide Dogs: Passports

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will discuss with the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs the issue of travel restrictions for guide dogs with pet passports on cruise ships travelling within the EU. [84012]

Mike Penning: The UK is working toward the implementation of EU regulation 1177/2010 concerning the rights of passengers when travelling by sea and inland waterway which will apply in the UK from 18 December 2012. Provided the ship operator has been notified in advance, the EU regulation requires a ship operator to accommodate an assistance dog with the passenger on a cruise ship where the port of departure is in the EU.

Department for Transport officials are in discussion with officials in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs to ensure the UK's implementation of the EU regulation and national rules relating to the pet travel scheme are compatible.

Wheels to Work Schemes

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people received support through the wheels to work scheme in each of the last five financial years. [84839]

Norman Baker [holding answer 5 December 2011]: As Wheels to Work schemes are local in nature, information on how many people are supported through the schemes is not held centrally. Funding is also provided from a variety of sources, including the Local Sustainable Transport Fund administered by my Department, and the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Rural Development Programme for England.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Alcoholic Drinks: Sales

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Home Department on the extension of licences for the sale of alcohol for the tourism and hospitality industry during the London 2012 Olympic games. [85163]

John Penrose: The Department has been in discussion with the Home Office about extended licensing hours during the Olympic and Paralympic games. In deciding whether to exercise her powers under section 172 of the Licensing Act 2003, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department, has to consider matters of security, policing, public order and public safety for these events.

BBC: Redundancy Pay

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport if he will discuss with the BBC Trust the issue of clawback of severance pay or compensation for BBC staff made redundant who are re-employed as (a) BBC staff and (b) consultants within two years. [84013]

Mr Vaizey: The employment of staff and consultants is a matter for the BBC and there is no provision for Government to intervene. I do not intend to raise this with the BBC Trust.

Broadband

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what assessment his Department has made of the willingness of commercial companies to roll out broadband services of speeds of 80 to 100 MBits in the 10 proposed super-connected cities. [84726]

Mr Vaizey: In support of this initiative, BT and Virgin Media have committed to strengthening their networks in the winning cities and will be offering their broadband services with 80-100 Mbps potential.

It is also possible that other suppliers may make similar proposals.

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of demand for broadband services of 80 to 100 MBits in the 10 proposed super-connected cities. [84727]

Mr Vaizey: It is expected that local authorities will assess demand for unmet broadband services as part of their bid.

Broadband Delivery UK: Manpower

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many full-time equivalent staff Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK) (a) has and (b) will have in each year of the spending review period; and what the budget of BDUK (i) is for 2011-12 and (ii) will be for each year of that period. [84724]

Mr Vaizey: Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK) has 9.6 full-time equivalent staff for the year 2011-12. The staff resource needed for future years has not yet been determined.

BDUK's budget for each of the four years from 2011-12 to 2014-15 is shown in the following table:

	Budget (£ million)
2011-12	92
2012-13	106
2013-14	165
2014-15	165

The budget profile is currently under review and will take account of the Broadband Delivery Programme Delivery Model (published in May 2011 and available at:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/publications/8482.aspx

the progress that BDUK has made in developing a Broadband Framework for suppliers; and the procurements undertaken by the initial broadband pilot projects and other local areas.

Festivals and Special Occasions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what steps his Department took to (a) celebrate and (b) promote (i) St George's Day, (ii) St Andrew's Day and (iii) St Patrick's Day in the last 12 months. [85158]

John Penrose: To celebrate St George's Day, St Andrew's Day and St Patrick's Day, the Department flew the St George's Cross, the Saltire and the Union flag respectively. English Heritage, one of the Department's arm's length bodies, marked St George's day in 2011 with four separate events that were attended by around 16,000 visitors. This included the annual St George's Festival at Wrest park, which welcomed 8,500 visitors over three days.

Film

Penny Mordaunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what representations he has received as part of his Department's film policy review; when his Department will respond; and if he will make a statement. [85313]

Mr Vaizey: Lord Smith, who is leading the independent film policy review panel, will report to Ministers before the end of this year or early next year and the Government response will follow later. As part of the consultation process, Lord Smith's panel received over 300 submissions of evidence from the public and industry, and have conducted more than 70 meetings with a range of stakeholders.

Penny Mordaunt: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what representations he has received on support for the UK animation industry; and if he will make a statement. [85314]

Mr Vaizey: The Department has received representations on support for the British animation industry from:

The Deputy Prime Minister;
Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills;
Mark Field MP;
Animation UK;
Aardman Animations Ltd;
Hands Up Productions Ltd;
Q Pootle 5 Ltd; and two members of the public.

We are giving careful and early consideration to the issues raised. In addition, the animation sector is represented on the Creative Industries Council. Creative Industry Council members instigate industry-led approaches to boosting the growth and competitiveness of the creative industries with Government facilitating and removing barriers where appropriate.

Paralympic Games 2012

Joan Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what representations he has received on a legacy following the London 2012 Olympics for Paralympic sports. [84876]

Hugh Robertson: The Department regularly receives letters relating to the legacy of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games.

The Government are committed to leaving a strong and lasting legacy for disabled people all over the UK. Plans to harness the inspirational power of the games in order to accelerate progress towards achieving disability equality were set out in "London 2012: A Legacy for Disabled People", published by the Office for Disability Issues in April 2011

http://odi.dwp.gov.uk/odi-projects/2012-legacy.php

As part of Places People Play, the Government's £136 million lottery-funded sports legacy programme for the London Olympics and Paralympics, £8 million has been allocated by Sport England for a programme specifically targeted at inspiring more disabled people to take part in sport and providing more opportunities for participation.

There is a whole new approach through the School Games to significantly increase opportunities for disabled pupils to compete on a local, regional and national level. The School Games will include sports such as Wheelchair Basketball, Table Cricket and Polybat. Also, for the first time, through the Taking Part Survey, we will specifically measure participation rates of disabled children in competitive sport.

JUSTICE

Birmingham Prison

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department of monitoring the HM Prison Birmingham contract over the next 15 years. [84329]

Mr Blunt: The authority has budgeted for costs totalling £3,631,000 over the 15-year period of the contract to provide a controller and team for HMP Birmingham. This is the nominal cost for providing this resource and includes including an annual allowance for inflation based on average weekly earnings (AWE) in accordance with Treasury Green Book.

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) what the monetary value was of G4S's bid to operate HM Prison Birmingham; [84330]

(2) what notional costs were added in respect of (a) the in-house bid and (b) the G4S bid to operate HM Prison Birmingham; [84331]

(3) what the monetary value was of the in-house bid to operate HM Prison Birmingham (a) including and (b) excluding notional costs. [84333]

Mr Blunt: The net present cost (NPC) value of the G4S contract to operate and maintain HMP Birmingham is £316,500,000 over 15 years.

We do not recognise what is meant by the term 'notional' in this context and therefore can only advise that no 'notional' costs were asked for.

Children: Abduction

Mark Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he plans to review the law on the abduction of children by their parents. [84111]

Mr Djanogly: There are no plans at present for the UK to review the current law on international parental child abduction.

County Courts

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when he expects to publish the Government's response to his Department's consultation on solving disputes in the county courts; on what date it was initially scheduled for publication; and what the reason is for the time taken to publish the response. [84688]

Mr Djanogly: The Government expect the consultation response to be published in the new year. The response was initially scheduled for publication in October but this was postponed due to ongoing discussions within Government.

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with which organisations his Department had discussions on or about the subject matter of its consultation on solving disputes in the county courts (a) before and (b) after the consultation closed. [84689]

Mr Djanogly: The Department has engaged in discussions with the following organisations during the course of this year, on subjects covered by the Solving Disputes consultation:

Association of British Insurers
Civil Mediation Council
Forum of Insurance Lawyers
Association of Personal Injury Lawyers
Motor Accident Solicitors Society
The Law Society
The British Bankers Association
Citizens Advice
Her Majesties' Association of District Judges
R3 (Association of Business Recovery Professionals)
Civil Courts Users Association
Office of Fair Trade
Shergroup
The Land Registry
Centre for Peaceful Solutions and Brent Mediation Centre
Centre for Effective Dispute Resolution
Law Works Mediation
National Health Service Litigation Authority
Medical Protection Society
Weightmans Solicitors.

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many submissions his Department received to its consultation on solving disputes in the county courts. [84690]

Mr Djanogly: The Department received 319 responses to the consultation.

Defamation

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he plans to bring forward legislative proposals on defamation. [84459]

Mr Djanogly: We are currently giving careful consideration to the recommendations of the parliamentary Joint Committee on the draft Defamation Bill and to the views expressed by respondents to our public consultation, and will seek to introduce a substantive Defamation Bill as soon as parliamentary time allows.

Departmental Advisory Services

Jonathan Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what contribution his Department has made to the cross-government review of advice funding announced in July 2011. [84324]

Mr Djanogly: The Parliamentary Secretary, Cabinet Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Ruislip, Northwood and Pinner, who has responsibility for civil society, formally announced the cross-government review of free advice services on 21 November 2011. I can confirm that my Department is working closely with the Cabinet Office to support this work.

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83892]

Mr Djanogly: None to the Department's knowledge.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84240]

Mr Djanogly: The Ministry of Justice has outsourced the following services in the last five years.

Crown Dependencies: Elections

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether the Governor of each of the Crown Dependencies will be inviting election observers to observe forthcoming general elections. [84480]

Mr Djanogly: General elections were held in the Isle of Man in September of this year, and in Jersey in October. Alderney and Sark held general elections in 2010 and Guernsey's general election will take place in April 2012.

As self-governing Dependencies of the Crown, it is for the Government authorities in each jurisdiction to determine whether they wish to invite election observers to observe their general elections.

Miscarriages of Justice

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he has considered bringing forward legislative proposals to change the procedures of the Criminal Cases Review Commission to enable the correction of more miscarriages of justice. [84852]

Mr Djanogly: I am not considering bringing forward legislative proposals to change the procedures of the CCRC at this time.

Offenders: Crimes of Violence

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many defendants charged with (a) violent and (b) sexual offences who are (i) on remand awaiting trial, (ii) in the community awaiting trial without conditions and (iii) in the community awaiting trial with conditions. [85203]

Mr Blunt: As at 30 September 2011 there were 2,446 prisoners on remand awaiting trial for violence against the person offences, and 779 on remand awaiting trial for sexual offences. Equivalent figures for the numbers in the community awaiting trial on conditional or unconditional bail are not held centrally, and could be derived only by checking individual level court records. This would incur disproportionate cost.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Personal Injury

Mr Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice for what reason his Department's round-table consultation meeting on personal injury matters scheduled for 1 November 2011 was postponed; and on what date it is to be rescheduled. [84691]

Mr Djanogly: The round-table discussion was postponed as the publication of the Government's response to 'Solving Disputes in the County Courts' has been delayed. The meeting will be rescheduled for the new year, once the consultation response has been published.

Prisoners: Post-traumatic Stress Disorder

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate his Department has made of the number of offenders in prisons in England and Wales diagnosed with post-traumatic stress disorder. [84738]

Paul Burstow: I have been asked to reply, on behalf of the Department of Health.

The information requested is not collected centrally.

Offenders are all screened on arrival in prison by a trained nurse or trained officer to find out what their health needs are and get them the right treatment. People at risk of having a mental health problem, or vulnerable to suicide, are referred for a mental health assessment.

Prisons: Crimes of Violence

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many offenders have been prosecuted for assault on a member of prison staff in each of the last five years. [84736]

The Solicitor-General: I have been asked to reply.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) maintains no central record of victims' professions and they are unable to identify, from their central database, those assault cases involving prison staff. This data could be obtained only by examining all of the CPS's files, which would incur disproportionate cost.

Metal Theft

Graham Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 580W, on prosecutions: metals, what the amount of each of the fines imposed following conviction under the Scrap Metals Dealers Act 1964 was in 2010. [84604]

Mr Blunt: Pursuant to the answer of 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 580W, the amount of each fine imposed under the Scrap Metals Dealers Act 1964 in England and Wales, in 2010 (latest available) can be viewed in the following table.

Total amount of fines issued under the Scrap Metal Dealers Act 1964[1] England and Wales, 2010[2,3]

Number of offenders fined	Fine amount (£)	Total amount imposed (£)
1	50	50
1	100	100
1	190	190
2	200	400
2	400	800
1	500	500
1	750	750
1	1,000	1,000
10	—	3,790

[1] Includes: Offences by dealers in scrap metal and similar goods and in marine stores.

[2] The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.

[3] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Social Security Benefits: Appeals

Mr Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how long on average it took the Tribunals Service to administer a First-Tier Tribunal social security and child support appeal in (a) 2009, (b) 2010 and (c) 2011; [84562]

(2) how long on average the Tribunals Service took to administer a First-Tier Tribunal social security and child support appeal in respect of (a) disability living allowance, (b) employment and support allowance, (c) income support, (d) jobseeker's allowance and (e) tax credits in 2010; and what estimate he has made of the equivalent figures for 2011; [84644]

(3) how many disability living allowance appeals were heard by the Tribunals Service from appellants in (a) England, (b) the west midlands and (c) Coventry in (i) 2009, (ii) 2010 and (iii) 2011; [84645]

(4) what proportion of appeals to the Tribunals Service regarding (a) disability living allowance, (b) employment and support allowance, (c) income support, (d) jobseeker's allowance and (e) tax credit were successful in (i) 2009, (ii) 2010 and (iii) 2011. [84646]

Mr Djanogly: Appeals against decisions made by the Department for Work and Pensions on an individual's entitlement to social security and child support are heard by the First-Tier Tribunal (Social Security and Child Support). The data are provided broken down by financial year, which is more readily available for the SSCS tribunal.

(1) The average time from receipt of an appeal to disposal by the tribunal was (a) 14.3 weeks in 2009-10, (b) 19.5 weeks in 2010-11, and (c) 24 weeks between 1 April 2011 and 31 October (the latest date for which information is available). These figures include cases that were decided by a tribunal hearing and those that were disposed of by other means (such as being withdrawn, superseded or struck out).

(2) The following table gives the average time taken from receipt of an appeal to disposal by the tribunal in the financial year of 2010-11 and from 1 April 2011 to 31 October (the latest date for which information is available).

Appeal time from receipt to disposal

Weeks

	2010-11	1 April to 31 October 2011
Disability living allowance	22.5	28.3
Employment and support allowance	19.4	24
Income support	19.8	25.7
Jobseeker's allowance	12.6	14.1
Tax credits	15.4	17.9

(3) Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals Service does not hold data specific to the west midlands or Coventry. However, the majority of disability living allowance (DLA) appeals made by people in the west midlands are heard in the hearing venues in Birmingham, Coventry, Hereford, Stoke, Wolverhampton, Worcester and Kidderminster although these venues also hear appeals from other nearby locations. The majority of DLA appeals made by people in Coventry are heard in the hearing venue in Coventry although this venue also hears appeals from other nearby locations.

The following table shows the number of DLA appeals disposed of at all hearing venues in England; hearing venues in the west midlands; and the hearing venue in Coventry in the financial years of 2009-10, 2010-11 and from 1 April 2011 to 31 October (the latest date for which information is available). The table also shows the number of DLA appeals disposed of at tribunal hearing in these venues during these time periods.

DLA appeal disposals

	2009-10	2010-11	1 April to 31 October 2011
Total DLA appeals disposed of
England	50,900	50,500	38,900
West midlands	4,800	4,800	3,800
Coventry	690	510	450
DLA appeals disposed of at hearing
England	40,900	39,400	31,600
West midlands	4,000	3,700	3,000
Coventry	550	380	340

(4) The following table shows the proportion of appeals regarding (a) disability living allowance, (b) employment and support allowance, (c) income support, (d) jobseeker's allowance and (e) tax credit which were successful in the financial years of 2009-10, 2010-11 and from 1 April 2011 to 31 October (the latest date for which information is available).

Successful appeals

Percentage

	2009-10	2010-11	1 April to 31 October 2011
Disability living allowance	41	38	39
Employment and support allowance	37	37	38

Successful appeals

	2009-10	2010-11	Percentage 1 April to 31 October 2011
Income support	29	28	27
Jobseeker's allowance	18	13	15
Tax credits	15	10	10

In response to significant and unforecast increases in appeals to the SSCS Tribunal, Her Majesty's Courts and Tribunals Service has increased its hearing capacity. Total disposals by the SSCS Tribunal in the period between April and October 2011 were 21% up on the same period in 2010, and 66% higher than in the same seven months in 2009. Disposals have exceeded appeals received in each of the last 10 months.

Treasure Trove: Coroners

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what information his Department holds on the cost to local authorities of local coroners holding inquests on cases of treasure in (a) 2009 and (b) 2010; and if he will make a statement. [84061]

Mr Djanogly: The information requested is not held centrally. To obtain this information would be at disproportionate cost as it would require every coroner in England and Wales to interrogate the accounts sent to local authorities for inquests into treasure finds for 2009 and 2010.

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the contribution of Lord McNally of 23 November 2011, Official Report, House of Lords, column 11605, on the Public Bodies Bill [Lords], if he will establish the post of Coroner for Treasure; and if he will make a statement. [84155]

Mr Djanogly: Implementation of the Coroner for Treasure is dependent on funding being available for that post. On 17 November 2011, the Under-Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport my hon. Friend the Member for Wantage (Mr Vaizey), who has responsibility for communications and creative industries, informed interested parties that funding is not currently available for the post. However, the matter will be reviewed as part of the implementation of the Coroners and Justice Act 2009.

Trials: Disclosure of Information

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what steps his Department takes to identify occasions when court hearings take place that are not formally listed; what guidance his Department has issued to courts on listing cases that will not be held in public; and if he will make a statement. [84572]

Mr Djanogly: Listing is a judicial responsibility and function. HMCTS provides guidance to the administration on listing, but it is a matter for the judiciary how cases are assigned and listed in court, which includes those that are held in chambers and not accessible by the public.

All criminal cases are formally listed and all hearings are recorded at the courthouse through internal systems and databases, which collect this information centrally for HMCTS. Daily court lists are published but hearings such as breaches and execution of bench warrants are occasionally at short notice. Therefore it is not always possible to republish the list.

In civil and family cases, the only cases are not published on the court lists are those cases that are emergency applications, which come in at short notice. Such hearings are recorded on the cause list by the court clerk.

All cases are listed depending on their priority, regardless of whether they are to be in public or in private. Published court lists include information relating to both public and private hearings, although where there are sensitive cases to be heard in private, the full names of the parties may be withheld in order to protect the vulnerable. This includes adoption and care proceedings involving children.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Crown Prosecution Service: Training

Emily Thornberry: To ask the Attorney-General how many prosecutors in the Crown Prosecution Service have received domestic violence training in each year since 2008. [84460]

The Attorney-General: Due to the volume of domestic violence prosecutions, all prosecutors and associate prosecutors were trained between 2005 and 2008—approximately 4,500 members of staff.

From April 2008 to end of November 2011, 676 new staff have completed domestic violence training. A breakdown of yearly uptake is provided in the following table:

Prosecutor or associate prosecutors trained in DV

	Number
2011 (January to November)	115
2010	187
2009	144
2008	230

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General whether any senior staff in (a) the Law Officers' Departments and (b) their Executive agencies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85087]

The Solicitor-General: No senior staff in the Law Officers' Departments or Executive agency are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary. The Law Officers' Departments do not have any policies governing payment by such a method.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Attorney-General what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85052]

The Attorney-General: Information on the number of named-day written questions received by the Attorney-General's Office over the last six months is contained in the following table:

2011	Number of written questions received for answer on a named day	Number answered on the named day	Proportion on time (%)
July	4	3	75
June	9	9	100
August	0	—	—
September	2	2	100
October	5	4	80
November	2	2	100
Total	22	20	91

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

DEFENCE

Redundancy

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many civilian staff will lose their jobs following the announcement on 10 November 2011 regarding the restructuring of regional divisions; [83352]

(2) how many civilian jobs will be lost as a result of the closure of Headquarters 2nd Division at (a) Edinburgh, (b) Aldershot and (c) Shrewsbury. [83361]

Nick Harvey: This restructuring will remove 440 civilian posts from our regional force structures at both division and brigade levels, and their supporting units.

The following civilian posts will be cut in each of the divisional headquarters. These losses, which were included in the reduction target announced in the Strategic Defence and Security Review White Paper, will be offset by the creation of a number of posts in the new Support Command headquarters in Aldershot.

Headquarters	Civilian job increases/decreases
HQ 2nd Division Edinburgh—disbands	-103
HQ 4th Division Aldershot—disbands	-82
HQ 5th Division Shrewsbury—disbands	-63
HQ Support Command Aldershot—forms	+104

Civilian staff declared surplus will be placed in the Department's redeployment pool and given assistance to find an alternative post.

EU Defence Policy

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to joining (a) the European Air Transport Fleet Programme Arrangement and (b) the Counter-Improvised Explosive Devices Theatre Exploitation Laboratory Technical Arrangement. [84364]

Peter Luff: We continue to monitor the progress of the European Air Transport Fleet Programme and keep our current position of non-membership under review.

We support the work undertaken through the Counter-Improvised Explosive Devices (C-IED) Theatre Exploitation Laboratory Technical Arrangement, including through sharing information on the UK's established C-IED capability, but we do not intend to join the programme.

Military Bases: Scotland

Mike Crockart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which bases in Scotland are currently undergoing a capacity review; what the scope of the review is; and what the time scale is for completion of the review. [83691]

Nick Harvey: The Ministry of Defence is currently planning to look at the potential capacity, utilisation and condition or disposal opportunities of a number of sites across the UK. It is expected this work will be undertaken in the first half of 2012, so at present, it is too early to say which sites in Scotland will be included.

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) military and (b) civilian personnel are employed at the Eastriggs Storage Depot in Dumfriesshire; [84260]

(2) how much his Department has invested in the Eastriggs Storage Depot in Dumfriesshire in each of the last five years; [84261]

(3) what discussions he has had with the Scotland office on the future of the Eastriggs Storage Depot in Dumfriesshire; [84262]

(4) how many (a) military and (b) civilian personnel were stationed at the Eastriggs Storage Depot in Dumfriesshire in each year since 1997; [84263]

(5) if he will estimate the annual cost of wages for service and civilian personnel based at (a) the Eastriggs Storage Depot in Dumfriesshire and (b) the Longtown Facility in Cumbria. [84277]

Peter Luff: The Eastriggs storage depot is no longer used. In October 2010, all personnel and operations were moved to the nearby Defence Munitions site at Longtown. Since 2004, the number of personnel based at Eastriggs storage depot were:

	Number
	Military personnel	Civilian personnel
2004	[1]—	41
2005	[1]—	44
2006	[1]—	43
2007	0	44
2008	0	34
2009	0	28

[1] Not held.

Records of military and civilian manpower numbers at Eastriggs storage depot prior to 2007, and 2004 respectively are not available. There have been no staff permanently based at Eastriggs since October 2010.

For financial year 2011-12, the cost of wages for Ministry of Defence civilians and military personnel based at Defence Munitions Longtown is approximately £7 million.

Investment over each of the last five years in the Eastriggs storage depot was:

Financial year	Expenditure (£)
2006-07	244,000
2007-08	320,000
2008-09	992,000
2009-10	120,000
2010-11	63,000

No decisions have been made regarding the future of Eastriggs storage depot. No discussions have recently taken place with the Scotland Office specifically in respect of the future of the site.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Asylum

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have (a) applied for asylum and been refused, (b) appealed to the Immigration Appeals Tribunal against such refusal and (c) had their appeal refused by the Immigration Appeals Tribunal; and of those numbers how many her Department estimates have (i) left the jurisdiction voluntarily and (ii) been subject to enforced removal in each of the last five years. [85207]

Damian Green: The following tables show the number of people who applied for asylum in a given year and how many subsequently:

(a) were refused asylum and, of which, how many have had a removal or voluntary departure;

(b) appealed to the Immigration Appeals Tribunal/Tribunals Service Immigration and Asylum against such refusal and, of which, how many have had a removal or voluntary departure; and

(c) had their appeal refused and, of which, how many have had a removal or voluntary departure.

Information on whether the departure was voluntary or an enforced removal is not available; instead the departure type has been split into available categories of 'enforced removals and notified voluntary departures' and 'assisted voluntary return and other voluntary departures'.

Data on asylum and removal outcomes are available in the asylum table as.06 of the quarterly Immigration Statistics. The latest release: "Immigration Statistics July - September 2011" is available in the Library of the House and the Home Office Science website at:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/science-research/research-statistics/migration/migration-statistics1/

Notes:

1. Data relating to applications or decisions made in 2010 and 2011 are provisional figures.
2. Statistics compiled on 9 May 2011. Further initial decisions, appeals and removals and voluntary departures will have occurred since this time.
3. Year relates to the period in which the application was made; the initial decisions and appeals within a 'year of application' may have been made in a later year.
4. Refusals exclude withdrawn applications.
5. Excludes outcomes of cases reconsidered prior to appeal. Excludes cases which were successful after appeal to the Upper Tribunal of the Immigration and Asylum Chamber.
6. 'Enforced removals and notified voluntary departures' figures include asylum removals performed by UK Border Agency officers using in-country powers of removal and a small number of cases dealt with at juxtaposed controls.
7. Since October 2006, 'enforced removals and notified voluntary departures' include people leaving under facilitated return schemes.
8. 'Assisted voluntary returns' may include some on-entry cases and some cases where enforcement action has been initiated.
9. 'Other voluntary departures' are people who it has been established left without informing the immigration authorities.

Asylum: Finance

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what emergency facilities are available for users of the section 4 payment card whose weekly resources have been exceeded. [84276]

Damian Green: There are no such facilities. Supported persons are expected to live within the prescribed weekly credit limit of £35.39 per person.

Civil Disorder: Compensation

Stella Creasy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many claims were received by each police authority in England under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 between August and October 2011; and what the amount of those claims was. [84429]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 1 December 2011]: Applications have been made directly to police authorities and there is no requirement for them to provide this information to the Home Office.

Therefore, the precise figures of claims received and values will be held locally by each police authority.

Mr Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what estimate she has made of the number of claims under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 that have been made by each police authority in relation to the civil disorder of August 2011; [84252]

(2) how many claims have been paid by police authorities under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 in relation to the civil disorder of August 2011 as at 25 November 2011; [84253]

(3) when she expects all final claims for compensation under the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 for the civil disorder of August 2011 to be assessed by police authorities. [84254]

Nick Herbert: Applications have been made directly to police authorities and there is no requirement for them to provide this information to the Home Office.

Therefore, the precise figures of claims received will be held locally by each police authority.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether any senior staff in (a) her Department and (b) its Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if she will publish her policy on such payments. [85076]

Damian Green: Senior staff in the Home Office and its agencies are contracted to work a set number of hours and are paid accordingly via the departmental pay roll. This applies to those on permanent contracts and fixed term appointments. Senior staff outside these arrangements are appointed through frameworks and agreements as determined by the Government Procurement Service. Full details of all such framework agreements can be found via the following link:

http://www.buyingsolutions.gov.uk/frameworks/list.html

This also applies to senior staff in the Department's non-departmental public bodies (NDBPS).

Detention Centres

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much funding the UK Border Agency has allocated to investment in pre-departure accommodation since May 2010; and at which locations. [82048]

Damian Green: Since we ended the detention of children for immigration purposes in removal centres, we have introduced a new approach to enforce the departure of families who have to leave and refuse to do so voluntarily. Cedars pre-departure accommodation at Pease Pottage near Crawley in West Sussex is part of that approach and is only used as a last resort following advice from the independent Family Returns Panel.

The full cost of the refurbishment of the building and grounds at Cedars to provide the accommodation is approximately £5.2 million, which includes all building works, consultancy, furniture and fittings and security and IT.

Entry Clearances: Overseas Students

Anne Soubry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps she is taking to ensure that genuine students from overseas will be able to continue to study theology at private colleges. [85197]

Damian Green: My officials continue to discuss implementation of the student visa rules with theological colleges. The Government have been clear that genuine high-quality educational institutions have nothing to fear from our reforms of student visas, which ensure that we can continue to attract the best students whose main motivation is study. No permanent limit has been placed on student visas.

Harassment: Surveillance

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions where complaints received by each police force in England and Wales about harassment or stalking the suspect was the subject of a police surveillance operation in 2010. [81894]

Lynne Featherstone: The information requested is not recorded centrally.

Stalking behaviour can be prosecuted under The Protection from Harassment Act 1997. My Department, working with the Ministry of Justice, the Crown Prosecution Service and the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO) continues to keep the effectiveness of this legislation under review. The Home Office has recently launched a consultation seeking views on how we can better protect victims of stalking.

Hillsborough Independent Panel

Steve Rotheram: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department pursuant to the statement of 17 October 2011, Official Report, columns 668-70, on Hillsborough disaster, how many documents relating to the Hillsborough disaster have so far been released to the Hillsborough independent panel. [84563]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 5 December 2011]: I am happy to confirm that all documents held by Government Departments have been released to the Hillsborough independent panel. The Government fully support the work of the independent panel and it is for the panel to take forward its work in relation to those documents.

Human Trafficking: Northern Ireland

Lady Hermon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment she has made of the extent of human trafficking in Northern Ireland. [84850]

Damian Green: During the period 1 April 2009 to 31 March 2011 there were 1,481 referrals to the National Referral Mechanism, of these 35 (2%) related to Northern Ireland and comprised 14 nationalities. 24 of these referrals were from three nationalities: China (17), Nigeria (5) and Romania (2).

Illegal Immigrants

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of people in the United Kingdom who have no right to be within the jurisdiction. [85208]

Damian Green: The UK Border Agency is not able to provide the information requested. It is not possible to accurately quantify the number of individuals currently in the UK who have no right to be within the jurisdiction, as some deliberately evade immigration control in order to remain in the country illegally.

The e-Borders system enables checks to be made on individuals arriving or exiting the country but is not yet fully rolled out. The Government are committed to ensuring that the number of UK ports undertaking exit checks is increased to ensure a more complete travel history is recorded on passengers.

The UK Border Agency has established local immigration teams across the UK to gather intelligence, tackle illegal working, and track down and detain immigration offenders. The focus of these teams include the prevention and disruption of illegal activity and the arrest and removal of offenders.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been arrested as illegal workers during searches of business premises in each of the last three years; and how many such people were removed from the UK in each region in each year. [85300]

Damian Green: The UK Border Agency record data relating to offenders arrested on the National Operations Database. From information held we can state that the following numbers of people were arrested for offences related specifically to illegal working visits:

	Number
2008-09	5,804
2009-10	4,288
2010-11	4,186
Total	14,278

All data are sourced from the National Operations Database (NOD) system. The NOD is a management information tool and data from it are not quality-assured under national statistics protocols. Figures provided from the NOD do not constitute part of national statistics and should be treated as provisional.

However, to determine which of these individuals arrested have been removed would only be possible by examination of individual records which would exceed the cost threshold.

Immigration Controls

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps she is taking in respect of her Department's performance in arresting and detaining those who do not comply with immigration controls. [85206]

Damian Green: The UK Border Agency's enforcement operation remains focused on arresting, detaining and removing illegal migrants. Between 1 January and 30 September 2011, 26,962 illegal migrants in the UK were removed or voluntarily departed.

The agency has taken further steps to improve the information we have on the whereabouts of illegal migrants. In particular, to make it easier for members of the public to submit information, a new web form was introduced on the UK Border Agency website on 2 November 2011, which sets out clearly the information needed in order for the agency to act. We are currently developing this form further to enhance the quality of the information we receive from the public, part of our ongoing commitment to improve our capability in this area.

The agency is working to improve its performance in achieving removals of illegal migrants. There is a current focus on refinement of our contact management techniques to improve the voluntary return rate of illegal migrants. Additionally, steps are being taken to enhance absconder tracing and streamline processes to improve the success rate of enforcement operations. The agency will continue to focus on maximising productivity from all its enforcement assets including reporting centres, arrest teams, immigration removal centres and charter flights.

Immigration: Europe

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures her Department has taken to share criminal records data with other EU member states in order to exclude EEA nationals from entry to the UK under the provisions of Regulation 19 (1B) of the Immigration (European Economic Area) Regulations 2006; and if she will make a statement. [84632]

Lynne Featherstone [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Regulation 19(1 B) which came into effect on 1 June 2009 enables the Secretary of State for the Home Department to exclude an EEA national, or member of his/her family, where she considers that exclusion is justified on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health. In reaching a decision the Secretary of State is obliged to take a number of factors into account. These include: the decision must be proportionate, it must be based on the personal conduct of the individual concerned and that conduct must represent a genuine, present and sufficiently serious threat affecting one of the fundamental interests of society. The fact that a person may have a previous criminal conviction does not of itself justify an exclusion decision.

Where the United Kingdom receives information, such as arrest warrants, from foreign law enforcement agencies which indicates that individuals might be present in, or coming to, the United Kingdom and could present a risk to public protection, we will include that information on the watchlists. Where an individual is extradited from the United Kingdom, or is deported as a result of their criminal record, such information may also be recorded on the watchlists.

The United Kingdom also exchanges data with other EU member states under Council Decision 2005/876/JHA on the exchange of information extracted from the criminal record. This means that where an EU national is subject to criminal proceedings here, the United Kingdom may ask their country of nationality for details of their previous criminal record. Such information may then be used in the criminal justice process.

When the United Kingdom connects to the new second generation Schengen Information System (SIS II) in 2015 we will receive more information about individuals wanted on European arrest warrants and we anticipate stopping more EEA nationals at our borders as a result.

Kidnapping: Children

Mark Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate she has made of the number of children abducted from the UK since 2006; and how many such abductions were carried out by the child's parents. [84110]

Mr Djanogly: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Ministry of Justice.

The Home Office has responsibility for prevention of the criminal offence of child abduction. The Home Office statistics for the number of children reported to police as abducted within England and Wales in each financial year for which statistics are available from 2006 are shown in the table; children are those under 16. Home Office statistics do not show whether or not the abduction was by a parent, nor whether the abducted child was removed from the UK, or not. Some of these offences may have an international element involving a parent and may therefore also appear in the international parental child abduction statistics as follows.

Police recorded offences of child abduction 2006-07 to 2010-11, England and Wales. Each offence relates to one child.

	Number
2006-07	696
2007-08	595
2008-09	567
2009-10	559
2010-11	552

The collection of police recorded statistics for Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for the devolved Administrations.

Statistics on international parental child abductions are collected by the number of cases, where a case can involve more than one child; cases under the 1980 Hague convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction relate to children under 16.

The number of outgoing international parental child abduction cases since 2006 from the UK to countries that have ratified or acceded to the 1980 Hague convention are as follows, by calendar year:

International parental child abduction. Each case may involve more than one child

	Outgoing from England and Wales	Outgoing from Scotland	Outgoing from Northern Ireland
			Cases
2006	153	9	6
2007	183	10	5
2008	181	9	12
2009	193	15	7
2010	158	10	8

The Foreign and Commonwealth Office has responsibility for international parental child abduction from all parts of the UK to countries that have not ratified or acceded to the 1980 Hague convention or where the convention is not in force between the UK and the country in question. Children are those under 16. The FCO may also provide consular support in outgoing Hague convention country cases. Cases by financial year dealt with by the FCO to Hague convention and non-convention countries between 1 April 2006 and 31 March 2011 are shown in the table. Where a case was to a Hague convention country, that case will also appear in the statistics for the relevant part of the UK.

International parental child abduction FCO cases (outgoing from the UK) Each case may involve more than one child.

	Cases
2006-07	265
2007-08	249
2008-09	196
2009-10	238
2010-11	264

The Government have not made an overall estimate of the number of child abductions within the UK or from the UK to countries abroad. Statistics can only cover reported cases.

Metropolitan Police: Manpower

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers there were in each basic command unit of the Metropolitan police force on (a) 31 March 2010, (b) 30 September 2010 and (c) 31 March 2011; and if she will make a statement. [84750]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Available data on police officer strength for the Metropolitan police force by basic command unit, as at 31 March 2010 and 31 March 2011, are given in the following table.

Information on police officer strength relating to 30 September 2010 is not available centrally.

The latest published police personnel statistics relate to 31 March 2011 and were published in July 2011. They are available online at:

Police: Bournemouth

Mr Ellwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) special constables and (b) community support officers are operating in Bournemouth. [84574]

Nick Herbert: The latest available information shows that there were 79 community support officers in post on 31 March 2010 in the Bournemouth and Poole basic command unit (BCU). This is a full-time equivalent figure that has been rounded to the nearest whole number; it includes those community support officers on career breaks or maternity/paternity leave. Figures for special constables are not available centrally for this BCU.

Dorset police force was restructured and BCUs were redefined during 2010-11 and, as a result, data for Bournemouth and Poole are not available for 31 March 2011.

Police: Crimes of Violence

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been stabbed during the course of their duties in each of the last five years. [84739]

Nick Herbert: The requested information is not collected centrally by the Home Office.

Police: South Wales

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers were employed by South Wales Police in each of the last five years; [84715]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of police to be employed by South Wales Police in each of the next five years. [84716]

Nick Herbert: It is a matter for the chief constable and the police authority in each force to determine the number of police officers that are deployed within the available resource.

The latest available information shows the number of police officers in South Wales police force between 2007 and 2011 (full-time equivalent) is set out in the following table:

Number of police officers in South Wales police force between 2007 and 2011[1]

As at 31 March each year	Number
2007	3,336
2008	3,244
2009	3,146
2010	3,148
2011	3,100

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number.

Police: Surveillance

Jonathan Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will collect information on the deployment of undercover officers by police forces in England and Wales over the last 10 years. [77037]

Nick Herbert: The decision on whether to deploy covert undercover officers is an operational matter for individual law enforcement agencies. The chief surveillance commissioner has the statutory responsibility for the oversight of whether police use of this technique is in accordance with the law. His key findings and broad statistics are published in annual reports which are laid before Parliament and are available in the House Library.

Stalking: Homicide

Mr Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases which included a stalking-related murder have been referred to the Independent Police Complaints Commission since 2009. [78996]

Nick Herbert: This is a matter for the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC). However, it does not hold the specific data requested.

The IPCC is responsible for the annual publication of statistics relating to deaths during or following police contact. The most recent report is available on the IPCC website at:

www.ipcc.gov.uk

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Carbon Sequestration: Finance

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the decision to reallocate the fund which had been earmarked for the carbon capture and storage competition. [84891]

Charles Hendry: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change and the Chancellor of the Exchequer have discussed financing of carbon capture and storage (CCS) projects and £1 billion remains available. The detailed profile of spend will be determined by the projects selected and when they require funding.

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) when he was informed of the decision by HM Treasury to reallocate the fund earmarked for the carbon capture and storage competition; [84892]

(2) what assessment he has made of the potential effect of the decision to reallocate the fund earmarked for the carbon capture and storage competition on the time taken to develop a demonstrator project. [84894]

Charles Hendry: £1 billion remains available to support CCS projects. I expect CCS projects to come forward in this spending review period and for some expenditure to be committed as part of that process. The detailed profile of spend will be determined by the projects selected and when they require funding.

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with representatives of industry involved in development of carbon capture and storage projects on the availability and timetable for a competition supporting a demonstration project. [84893]

Charles Hendry: My colleagues and I, at ministerial and official level, meet regularly with industry representatives to discuss the CCS demonstration programme.

On 16 December we are holding an industry day to provide further information on the CCS programme, to which this Government have already committed £1 billion of capital funding. Sponsors and developers of proposed CCS projects, power generators, CO_2 transport infrastructure providers, oil and gas field operators and independent operators, and CO_2 capture technology providers are invited to contact the Office of Carbon Capture and Storage if they wish to attend.

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether any of the resources reallocated from the carbon capture and storage competition fund will be directed to low-carbon projects. [84895]

Charles Hendry: The £1 billion allocated for CCS projects remains available to support CCS projects.

Climate Change: Africa

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what proportion of his recently announced funding to tackle climate change in Africa he proposes will come from (a) the Department for International Development and (b) existing funding allocated as official development assistance. [85323]

Gregory Barker: I will be announcing a package of support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in Durban on 6 December. The package is funded out of the UK's £2.9 billion International Climate Fund, which was announced in the 2010 spending review and is all classified as official development assistance. The fund consists of £1.8 billion from the Department for International Development, £1 billion from the Department of Energy and Climate Change and £0.1 billion from the Department for Environment Food and Rural Affairs.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what proportion of his recently announced funding for climate change finance in Africa (a) has already been committed and (b) is new funding commitments. [85324]

Gregory Barker: I will be announcing a package of support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in Durban on 6 December. The package is all funded out of an existing funding commitment—the UK's £2.9 billion International Climate Fund, which was announced in the 2010 spending review.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change through which (a) Departments, (b) funds and (c) programmes he proposes that his recently announced funding to tackle climate change in Africa will be delivered. [85325]

Gregory Barker: I will announce the full details of the package of support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in Durban on 6 December. The package is funded out of the UK's £2.9 billion International Climate Fund and will be drawn from the budgets of the Department for International Development and the Department of Energy and Climate Change through the UK's International Climate Fund.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether the recently announced aid funding to tackle climate change in Africa is additional to the funding already (a) committed as fast-start funding and (b) announced for climate change by the Department of Energy and Climate Change and the Department for International Development. [85326]

Gregory Barker: I will announce the full details of the package of support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in Durban on 6 December. The package is funded out of the UK's £2.9 billion International Climate Fund, which was announced in the 2010 spending review.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to his recent announcement of climate change funding for Africa, from which Departments' budgets he proposes such funding will be drawn. [85327]

Gregory Barker: I will be announcing a package of support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in Durban on 6 December. The funding will be drawn from the budgets of the Department for International Development and the Department of Energy and Climate Change through the UK's International Climate Fund.

Diesel Fuel: Prices

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what recent representations he has received on (a) diesel pump prices in England and (b) how such prices compare with those in other European countries; and if he will make a statement. [85303]

Charles Hendry: The Department has received a number of representations on diesel prices and how pump prices compared with those in other European countries.

UK pre-tax petrol and diesel prices are among the lowest in Europe.

The Government are aware of the significant impacts high oil prices are having on consumers, which is why the autumn statement document announced that the fuel duty increase of 3.02p/l that was expected to take place in January 2012 has been deferred to August 2012. In addition, the 2011-12 inflation only increase in fuel duty that was planned for August 2012 has been cancelled.

Energy: Meters

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) how his Department proposes to take account of consumers' experience of the installation of smart meters when developing the smart metering installation code of practice; [83622]

(2) if he proposes that the smart metering installation code of practice will include measures to prevent doorstep selling of utilities during the installation of smart meters. [83623]

Charles Hendry: Electricity and gas suppliers have developed a draft smart metering installation code of practice, which they published for consultation in August 2011. They are now considering responses. The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) has consulted on the draft licence conditions that will formally underpin an industry code. These draft conditions include rules on sales of goods and services during the smart meter installation visit and arrangements for updating a code in the light of, among other things, consumer experience during the roll-out. We will publish our response in the new year.

Guto Bebb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether he plans to expand the energy grid network to ensure people in rural areas who do not receive gas from the grid are able to participate in the smart meter roll out. [84999]

Charles Hendry: Customers who receive only electricity from the energy grid network will be offered an electricity smart meter and in-home display by their energy supplier, and so will be able to participate in, and benefit from, the smart meter roll-out.

Ofgem is responsible for regulating the extension of the gas grid and has encouraged the larger gas distribution networks to extend the grid to fuel poor households and homes within the priority group for the Carbon Emissions Reduction Target. In total up to 20,000 households could be connected under this scheme over the current price control period (2008-13).

Fuel Poverty

Julie Hilling: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the likely level of support for energy efficiency programmes for households in fuel poverty from 2013 onwards. [84169]

Gregory Barker: Government are currently consulting on the Green Deal framework which will be in place from late 2012 and will enable households to access energy efficiency improvements at no upfront cost. This includes a new Energy Company Obligation (ECO), worth £1.3 billion per year, providing extra support where it is most needed.

Under the ECO 'Affordable Warmth obligation', we expect energy suppliers to invest around £350 million per year in providing heating and insulation measures for vulnerable households on low incomes at greatest risk of fuel poverty. We anticipate that the rest of ECO will support energy efficiency improvements in more difficult and expensive to treat properties, whatever the income or circumstances of the householder, through a 'Carbon Reduction obligation'. We are consulting specifically on expected models for "roll-out", to ensure all households stand to benefit, including those in the poorest communities.

Fuel Poverty: Winter Deaths

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of (a) men and (b) women over the age of 65 years who have died as a result of being unable to heat their home due to fuel poverty; and if he will make a statement. [R] [84549]

Gregory Barker: The specific data requested are not recorded.

However, the Office for National Statistics (ONS) measures the number of excess winter deaths each year. During the 2010-11 winter, of the 25,700 excess winter deaths recorded by ONS in England and Wales, around 8,800 were recorded among men aged 65 and over, with around 12,900 recorded among women aged 65 and over.

Fuel Poverty: North York Moors

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of households in fuel poverty in the North York Moors National Park. [85383]

Gregory Barker: DECC do not calculate fuel poverty at this geographical level. The estimated number of fuel poor households in 2009 in local authorities which broadly cover the National Park are as follows:

Redcar and Cleveland: 14,800 households (25% of households in Redcar and Cleveland)

Scarborough: 13,200 households (26%)

Ryedale: 6,500 households (28%).

Inverkip Power Station

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the capacity and total output from Inverkip power station was during its lifetime; and what were the costs per MWh of this output. [84424]

Charles Hendry: DECC does not hold data on the capacity, output or costs per MWh of output of Inverkip power station. However, a Scottish Power (the owners of Inverkip) press release on the redevelopment of the site states the capacity was 2,028 MW:

http://www.scottishpower.com/PressReleases_1891.htm

Nuclear Power

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with the European Commission on allowing nuclear power to be recognised as a renewable source of energy; and if he will make a statement. [83612]

Charles Hendry: The Government believe that nuclear power is an important low carbon source of energy and should be a part of the UK's future energy mix, but accept that nuclear power should be considered as a low carbon rather than a renewable source of energy. Therefore, the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, the right hon. Member for Eastleigh (Chris Huhne), has had no discussions with the European Commission on allowing nuclear power to be recognised as a renewable source of energy. The UK's vision for a low carbon future sees a diverse mix of low carbon energy sources contributing to our power supply including both renewables and nuclear power.

Oil: Canada

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the quantity of oil used in the UK which is derived from Canadian tar sands. [84713]

Charles Hendry [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Trade data on the amount of oil that is derived from tar sands are not collected in National or International Statistics.

In 2010, the UK imported 272,000 tonnes of crude oil from Canada, and one tonne of petroleum products. In total, these imports account for 0.4% of the oil imported into the UK.

Solar Power

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether his Department has made an assessment of any change in household energy consumption following the installation of solar photovoltaic systems. [83905]

Gregory Barker: We have no robust quantitative evidence from the FITs scheme to date about behavioural change in households that install solar photovoltaic (PV) systems.

Solar Power: Feed-in Tariffs

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether (a) individual solar photovoltaic installations and (b) community-owned solar photovoltaic schemes will be eligible to receive support through the proposed feed-in tariff with contract for difference. [85187]

Gregory Barker: Eligible individual and community-owned renewable electricity generating schemes below 50 kW can currently receive the small scale feed-in tariff, while those between 50 kW and 5 MW are able to choose support under either the small scale feed-in tariff or the renewables obligation. Work is currently under way to determine the appropriate eligibility criteria for the feed-in tariff with Contract for Difference scheme and how it should interact with other support mechanisms. Further details will be published in quarter 1 next year.

Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what assessment he has made of the operation of (a) section 1 and (b) section 2 of the Warm Homes and Energy Conservation Act 2000 since July 2010; what representations he has received since that month on the operation of the Act; and what responses he gave to such representations. [R] [84484]

Gregory Barker [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Government announced a review of the definition of fuel poverty at the spending review in October 2010. The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change appointed Professor Hills to carry out a review of the current definition of fuel poverty (as set out in section 1 of the Act and under the strategy required in section 2) in March 2011.

Professor Hills ran a call for evidence on the definition that received views from a variety of stakeholders including Fuel Poverty Advisory Group and the All Party Parliamentary Fuel Poverty and Energy Efficiency Group.

Professor Hills published his interim report in October 2011. The final report is due to be presented to Government in early 2012, when we will respond formally.

World War II: Medals

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps he is taking to encourage former Bevin Boys to apply for the Bevin Boys Veterans Badge. [85321]

Charles Hendry: To date, the Service Personnel and Veterans Agency (SPVA), acting on behalf of DECC, have issued just under 5,000 Bevin Boys Veterans Badges to former Bevin Boys and their widows, where their husbands passed away after the Badge was announced on 20 June 2007.

At the time the Badge was announced and when the first Badges were issued in March 2008 there was significant publicity both nationally and regionally by DECC and the Bevin Boys Association. Subsequently many local councils have carried out regional advertising campaigns to encourage all former veterans, including the Bevin Boys, to apply for Badges as part of their Veterans Day celebrations.

Full details of the Badge, the eligibility criteria and the application process appear on both the DECC and SPVA website.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Business: Government Assistance

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the adequacy of support available from Jobcentre Plus for people wishing to start their own business who are in receipt of employment and support allowance in (a) Merseyside and (b) the UK. [85218]

Chris Grayling: While people on employment and support allowance (ESA) are not eligible for the new enterprise allowance, Jobcentre Plus advisers can signpost claimants who are interested in self-employment to other sources of support such as Enterprise Clubs, where available, and on-line support for new businesses, including mentoring. ESA claimants can also access the Work Programme at a time that is right for them, where providers are free to deliver the right support for the individual.

People on ESA with more complex support needs that cannot be met through other employment support provision have access, via their disability employment adviser, to Work Choice which can provide the right support to help them find work or self-employment.

Child Support Agency: Prosecutions

Jack Lopresti: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what consideration he has given to widening the powers of the Child Support Agency to allow it to prosecute for non-payment of regular maintenance. [82912]

Maria Miller: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have asked the child maintenance commissioner to write to my hon. Friend with the information requested and I have seen the response.

Letter from Noel Shanahan:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the Child Support Agency, the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner as the Child Support Agency is now the responsibility of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission.

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, what consideration he has given to widening the powers of the Child Support Agency to allow it to prosecute for non-payment of regular maintenance. [82912]

The Child Support Agency already has a wide range of enforcement powers for the purposes of securing child maintenance from non-resident parents, who would otherwise fail to pay. Money can be taken directly from a non-resident parent's earnings if the non-resident parent is employed, money can be taken directly from a non-resident parent's bank or building society account, or action can be taken through the courts.

The most serious forms of enforcement are commitment to prison or disqualification from driving. The decision whether to implement, and the length of the order, is at the discretion of a Magistrates' Court (or Sheriff in Scotland) where they are satisfied that a non-resident parent has "wilfully refused or culpably neglected" to pay child maintenance—but this is not a criminal sanction.

There are no plans at present to widen the enforcement powers of the Child Support Agency.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Construction: Employment

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of jobs lost in the construction industry from sub-contracting businesses in each of the last three years. [84457]

Mr Prisk: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not collected in the form requested. However, the change in construction employment in each of the last three years for which information is available is shown in the following table. The table covers all constructing firms, both main contractors and subcontractors.

	2008	2009	2010	2011
Jobs (thousand)
Workforce jobs	2,304	2,240	2,158	2,093
Employee jobs	1,361	1,363	1,281	1,231
Self-employed jobs	933	874	872	858
Change (thousand)
Workforce jobs	—	-64	-82	-65
Employee jobs	—	2	-82	-50
Self-employed jobs	—	-59	-2	-14

Advisory Services

Jonathan Edwards: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what contribution his Department has made to the cross-Government review of advice funding announced in July 2011. [84337]

Chris Grayling: DWP officials met with Cabinet Office officials to discuss the review of advice funding, in order to outline the range and scope of advisory and referral services that the Department provides.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible. [83781]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Since 1998 the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) occupies the majority of its accommodation under a private finance initiative (PFI) known as the Prime contract. Under the terms of this PFI the Department leases back fully serviced accommodation from its private sector partner, Telereal Trillium. This covers a variety of facilities including, where appropriate, the provision of catering services which is delivered through Telereal Trillium's service partner, Compass Group UK. Compass undertakes all catering activity including food procurement. Compass has confirmed that all the liquid egg supplied on the DWP catering contract is sourced from hens from an enriched cage system.

In line with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs guidance, DWP reports on how the Government Buying Standards criteria are being met. One of the criterion that will feature in future reports is around how eggs are sourced. This report will feature in periodic updates on the DWP public website—the following link gives the latest details:

This link advises on DWP's commitment and that we are working closely with Telereal Trillium/Compass to maximize compliance with this commitment. For example, ensuring this subject features in regular meetings/discussions with Telereal Trillium/Compass and receiving updates/progress on compliance. In addition, Compass regularly meets with Telereal Trillium encouraging initiatives to promote local food producers.

(b) Non-departmental public bodies that share accommodation with the DWP on Prime contract sites are included in the response at (a) above. Of the remaining non-departmental public bodies which have catering facilities and are not covered by the Prime contract, the Independent Living Fund (2006), Remploy and The Pensions Advisory Service have confirmed that they do not procure whole or liquefied eggs. The Health and Safety Executive only use fresh eggs all of which are sourced in the UK.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of food sourced by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available. [83782]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Since 1998 the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) occupies the majority of its accommodation under a private finance initiative (PFI) known as the Prime contract. Under the terms of this PFI the Department leases back fully serviced accommodation from its private sector partner, Telereal Trillium. This covers a variety of facilities including, where appropriate, the provision of catering services which is delivered through Telereal Trillium's service partner, Compass Group UK. Compass undertakes all catering activity including food procurement.

Compass has confirmed that between April and November 2011 the percentage of food procured from UK food producers is 24%. With regard to the sourcing from UK producers, Compass' figures have been determined as follows: they have defined UK as guaranteed UK provenance which can be fully traced back to the source, i.e. food that has been grown and harvested or born, bred and slaughtered in the UK. Therefore, they have not included any products that even though may have been produced or manufactured in the UK, are of mixed origin. In addition Compass has confirmed the following:

100% of fresh beef is UK sourced

100% of fresh pork joints is UK sourced

100% of fresh milk is both UK sourced and Red Tractor

100% of shell eggs are UK sourced and Lion marked

All potatoes and root vegetables are sourced from UK when in season.

(b) Non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) that share accommodation with the DWP on Prime contract sites are included in the response at (a) above. For those NDPBs not covered by the Prime contract, none directly source food, e.g. The Pension Advisory Service and the Independent Living Fund (ILF) only occasionally buy food and snacks on an ad hoc basis in small quantities from local food retailers and as such unable to verify the source of food producers. Given the low expenditure, e.g. ILF spent £1,400 in the last calendar year, it would seem disproportionate for local caterers to provide this information to these NDPBs. Remploy has indicated that for their multiple sites their canteens are operated by local third-party organisations. The Health and Safety Executive's HQ at Bootle has a similar PFI contract to DWP, covering accommodation and all services. HSE has no direct management responsibility for the caterers and the contract does not specify how supplies should be sourced. The supplier, Baxter Storey, sources their catering supplies from Brake Bros whenever possible; however they cannot assess what proportion of supplies is sourced at home or abroad.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83783]

Chris Grayling: The information is as follows:

(a) Since 1998, the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) occupies the majority of its accommodation under a private finance initiative (PFI) known as the PRIME contract. Under the terms of this PFI, the Department leases back fully serviced accommodation from its private sector partner Telereal Trillium. This covers a variety of facilities including, where appropriate, the provision of catering services which is delivered through Telereal Trillium's service partner Compass Group UK. Compass undertakes all catering activity including food procurement.

In line with the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs guidance, DWP reports on how the Government Buying Standards criteria are being met. This will feature in periodic updates on the DWP public website—the following link gives the latest details:

www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/gbs-food-catering.pdf

This link advises on DWP's commitment and that we are working closely with Telereal Trillium/Compass to maximise compliance with this commitment. For example, ensuring this subject features in regular meetings/discussions with Telereal Trillium/Compass and receiving updates/progress on compliance. In addition, Compass regularly meets with Telereal Trillium encouraging initiatives to promote local food producers. Regular promotions are delivered throughout sites such as vegetarian week, British sandwich week, Apple day, all of which support local producers.

Compass/Telereal Trillium actively encourage the sourcing of local produce. Compass maintain over 600 producers throughout the UK, actively encouraging the sale of local breads, eggs, vegetables and meats where possible. 38% of produce sourced for the DWP contract is produced by SME's. Recent promotional activities have included:

Introduction of the Chunky Farmer Sandwich Bloomer August 2011

Best of British Food Month June 2011

Promotions on locally produced yoghurts—ongoing

Eat Well Live Well fruit and vegetable promotion July 2011

Best Bramley Food Service Product award won by Compass in June 2011 for the Apple Crumble Slice which is sold across the DWP estate

Support of British Fruit Orchards—ongoing

British sandwich week—May 2011 focused on locally produced breads.

(b) Non-departmental public bodies that share accommodation with DWP on PRIME contract sites are included in the response at (a) above. For those NDPBs not covered by the PRIME contract, none directly source food, e.g. the Pension Advisory Service and the independent living fund (ILF) only occasionally buy food and snacks on an ad hoc basis in small quantities from local food retailers and as such unable to verify the source of food producers. Remploy no longer has a catering business. Their canteens are operated by local third party organisations and there is no central purchasing by the company of food or food materials. All non-departmental public bodies are aware of the Government Buying Standards.

Departmental Pay

Stephen Hammond: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many officials in his Department and the bodies for which he is responsible earned more than (a) £65,000, (b) £95,000, (c) £140,000 and (d) £175,000 in the last year for which figures are available. [78053]

Chris Grayling: At the end of the last financial year, there were in the region of 122,000 civil servants in DWP and its bodies. Of these, 761 earned more than £65,000, 87 of whom earned more than £95,000, nine of whom earned more than £140,000, six of whom earned more than £175,000. Since the end of the financial year, we have made reductions in the size of the senior civil service and reduced the number in each of the two highest categories by one.

Information about senior salaries can be found on the data.gov.uk website at:

http://data.gov.uk/organogram

Social Exclusion

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department plans to take together with (a) the Minister for Women and Equalities, (b) the Department for Education, (c) the Department for Communities and Local Government and (d) the Department of Health to tackle social exclusion. [85340]

Chris Grayling: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions chairs the Social Justice Cabinet Committee, of which my right hon. Friends the Home Secretary and Minister for Women and Equalities, the Secretaries of State for Education and for Communities and Local Government, and the Under-Secretary for Health, my hon. Friend the Member for Guildford (Anne Milton), are members.

The Committee exists to consider issues relating to poverty, equality and social justice, and facilitates cross-Government working and scrutiny of policies for their effects on some of the most disadvantaged groups on society.

Employment and Support Allowance

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received overpayments of employment and support allowance in (a) St Helens South and Whiston constituency, (b) Merseyside and (c) England in each year since 2008; and what average amount each was asked to repay in each such year. [84660]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is not available as the Department does not record cases in the format that would enable us to report against their location. We can provide volumes for the whole country with an average. The information is in the following table:

	Volume (k)	Average value (£)
2008-09[1]	3,329	57.19
2009-10	120,521	139.18
2010-11	233,481	202.71

[1] ESA commenced 27 October 2008.

Employment Schemes: Compensation

Mark Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how his Department calculates the amount of compensation due to employment agencies that have recorded losses due to the switch from the Flexible New Deal to the Work programme. [85213]

Chris Grayling: Negotiations to agree settlements in closing Flexible New Deal Phase 1 contracts are currently in train and are commercial in confidence. It would therefore be prejudicial to DWP's remaining active negotiations to release this information at this time.

Employment Schemes: Third Sector

Mark Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the effect of the Work programme on the likelihood of third sector employment agencies being able to take part in future contacts. [85214]

Chris Grayling: DWP's delivery partners are expected to be able to demonstrate the capital strength to take on the risks inherent in an exclusively or heavily outcome-based approach. Smaller voluntary and community organisations were unable to demonstrate the capacity, especially the financial capacity, for selection onto the Employment Related Support Services (ERSS) Framework, from which future contracts will be delivered. However, many voluntary and community sector organisations are involved as subcontractors or work on a call-off basis delivering personalised and tailored employment services via a prime contractor.

Jobcentre Plus: Telephone Services

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will make it his policy to discontinue premium rate telephone numbers for people calling jobcentres. [85239]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) does not use any premium rate telephone numbers.

The Department's policy is that all calls should be free to our 0800 numbers to claim:

state pension;
pension credit;
jobseeker's allowance;
employment support allowance; and emergency payments or crisis loans.

It is free to call DWP 0800 numbers from BT landlines. DWP has secured agreements to ensure that it is free to call via nine of the UK's largest mobile phone operators, representing 95% of the mobile market.

For other services, including calling local Jobcentres, 0845 numbers are used. This is because they are for inquiries that typically take less time to resolve. DWP strive to achieve the right balance between meeting customer needs and using taxpayers' money effectively. These calls are charged at variable rates determined by landline and mobile phone providers. DWP has retained geographical telephone numbers for personal advisers in Jobcentres, which means that claimants can contact their adviser directly when necessary. The Department appreciates the financial hardship that this can cause some people and so, if a customer raises a concern over the cost of the call or asks, we will offer to call them back.

The Department is currently reviewing its telephony numbering policy in conjunction with Ofcom. This includes the use of 0845 telephone numbers.

Pensions

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the percentage increase will be in additional pension as a result of SERPS contributions from April 2012. [85101]

Steve Webb: As announced in the Uprating Statement today, SERPS pensions will rise in April 2012 by 5.2%.

Social Justice Committee

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many meetings of the Social Justice Committee he has attended since its establishment. [85291]

Chris Grayling: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, is the Chair of the Social Justice Cabinet Committee. It is however longstanding Government practice not to disclose information relating to ministerial meetings, including the proceedings of Cabinet and Cabinet committees, as to do so would put at risk the public interest in the full and frank discussion of policy by Ministers.

Social Security Benefits

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many incapacity benefit claimants who have participated in work capability assessments since February 2011 resulting in a recommendation by Atos of receipt of employment and support allowance in the support group his Department has subsequently decided should (a) receive employment and support allowance in the support group, (b) receive employment and support allowance in the work-related activity group and (c) not receive employment and support allowance. [85092]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is not available. Information on the number of work capability assessments (WCAs) completed for incapacity benefits claimants can be provided using the Department's management information system, but to know the outcomes of the WCAs and the variation from the Atos recommendation requires individual level data.

Due to the overall length of the incapacity benefits reassessment process, information on the entire process including the final outcomes and subsequent destinations of claimants being reassessed is not yet available. Individual level data are being collected, but it will take time to complete because of the overall length of the reassessment process. The Department plans to publish data on the outcomes of the reassessment process, but only once they have been quality assured and are considered robust.

Social Security Benefits: Gurkhas

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many of the retired Gurkhas and their dependents that have settled in (a) Maidenhead, (b) Aldershot, (c) Reading and (d) Folkestone since 2009 have received (i) housing benefit, (ii) state pensions and tax credits and (iii) council tax benefit. [85220]

Chris Grayling: The information you have requested is not available. The UK's benefit payment systems do not record whether or not individuals in receipt of benefits are retired Gurkhas.

Unemployment: Ex-servicemen

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many armed forces veterans were (a) economically inactive and (b) long-term unemployed in each year since 2005-06; [84986]

(2) whether his Department has estimated the number of armed forces veterans who will be (a) economically inactive and (b) long-term unemployed in each year to 2015-16. [84987]

(3) what information his Department holds on the number of unemployed armed forces veterans in each English region. [84995]

Maria Miller: The Department for Work and Pensions does not routinely record whether benefit claimants are former armed forces personnel. Also, the Labour Force Survey does not record whether respondents are former armed forces personnel.

We are looking into ways of improving knowledge on the employment and benefit outcomes of ex-service personnel.

Universal Credit

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on what date the integrated assurance and approvals plan for universal credit was presented to the programme board; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [83573]

Chris Grayling: The integrated assurance and approvals plan was presented to the Universal Credit Programme Board on 21 March 2011. The Programme Board signed-off the plan.

Government are currently considering how to drive greater transparency in project reporting through their policy on the publication of project and programme data. Key milestones, and other project-related information typically included in an IAAP, will form part of those policy considerations. DWP is party to those considerations and will align its reporting of all projects with the transparency policy once it is agreed.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the funding allocated to universal credit implementation will be spent on staff training. [85094]

Chris Grayling: The 2010 spending review settlement included funding of £2 billion for the period 2011-12 to 2014-15. This is intended to meet all the costs of introducing universal credit including any increases in benefit expenditure, additional benefit administration costs in the transition period, the costs of IT development and implementation, communications, staff training and programme management. Detailed commitments will be developed alongside programme plans.

Welfare to Work

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of the upfront investment from private and voluntary bodies to his welfare to work programme came from private sector businesses; and if he will provide a breakdown of such investment. [84247]

Chris Grayling: During the bidding process for the Work programme, the 18 preferred bidders indicated they planned to invest up to £580 million over the lifetime of the contracts.

A breakdown by sector is not available.

Work Capability Assessment

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people were exempted from a work capability assessment on the grounds that they were receiving intravenous chemotherapy or radiotherapy treatment for cancer in the latest period for which figures are available. [85093]

Chris Grayling: The exact information requested is not available as the Department's administrative data do not record the detail of the treatment being received by the claimant. However, the Department regularly publishes official statistics on employment and support allowance (ESA) and the work capability assessment (WCA). The latest report was published in October 2011 and can be found on the internet at the following link:

Table 7 of the publication shows the results of initial assessment by condition group for claims started between October 2008 and February 2011. This shows that for all new claims to ESA with the primary condition in the 'neoplasms' group (the World Health Organisation classification of disease group for cancer), 13% were assessed to be fit for work, 14% were assessed to be in the work-related activity group, 52% were assessed to be in the support group and remainder were awaiting or closed their claim before completing the assessment.

Table 5 of the publication shows the number of claimants assessed to be in the support group at initial assessment by reason for claims started between October 2008 and February 2011. This shows that there were 16,400 claimants assessed to be in the support group because they were assessed as awaiting, receiving or recovering from intravenous, intraperitoneal or intrathecal chemotherapy. This is 15% of all those assessed to be in the support group at initial assessment.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84208]

Mr Duncan: The most recent figures are 48 (full-time equivalents) communications staff in the Department for International Development. This can be broken down as follows:

(a) 11 press officers

(b) Five internal communications officers

(c) 0 external communications officers

(d) 17 strategic communications officers

(e) Nine digital (web content) and six communications officers overseas.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by third parties. [84207]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The Department for International Development (DFID) has hosted or co-hosted 15 events and receptions since May 2010. Contacting country offices for details of their events and receptions would incur disproportionate cost, so this list includes events and receptions organised by DFID's UK headquarters only. All events and receptions are carried out at minimal cost to the Department by collaborating with partners and making use of free venues where possible.

Date	Event
2010
21 to 22 June	Hosted: Politics of Poverty event. Sunningdale.
8 July	Hosted: Launch of Development Assistance Committee peer review of DFID. Palace St.
22 September	Co-hosted: High level event on Malaria. UN MDGs summit. New York.
6 December	Co-hosted: EU conference on international development.
2011
29 March	Co-hosted: Afghanistan stakeholder event, with Baroness Northover. British Museum.
7 June	Hosted: DFID alumni annual event. Palace St.
8 June	Hosted: Secretary of State one year on speech. Royal College of Pathologists.
12 June	Co-hosted: GAVI reception. Central London.
13 June	Co-hosted: GAVI pledging conference with Gates Foundation and Government of Liberia. Central London.
20 to 22 July	Co-hosted: Annual Tidewater meeting. Wilton Park.
4 to 5 August	Hosted: Gulf donors meeting. Lancaster House.
11 July	Hosted: Secretary of State speech on business in Africa. London Business School.
21 September	Co-hosted: MDG Countdown event. UN General Assembly.
9 November	Hosted: Secretary of State Beyond Aid speech. Wellcome Trust.
24 November	Hosted: 30th Anniversary event for DFID's Scottish HQ. Abercrombie House.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether any senior staff in his Department are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85075]

Mr O'Brien: No senior members of staff working for the Department for International Development (DFID) are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of salary. DFID does not have a policy on such payments.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84227]

Mr Duncan: Information in relation to the outsourcing of goods and equipment is on the external Department for International Development (DFID) website:

www.dfid.gov.uk

as are the details of the competitively let frameworks and the associated contract details of Crown Agents, Charles Kendall and International Procurement Agency. Most recently these were let in 2009 and run until February 2013.

DFID outsource their travel management requirements with Hogg Robinson Group (HRG). All UK generated travel requirements such as air, rail and hotels are booked by HRG. Value for money is achieved through HRG providing "best fare on the day". DFID are also rolling out this contract to overseas offices and migration is expected to be by June 2013. DFID will then transfer onto the new central Government contract which is currently being procured for all central Government Departments. The contract which is a call-down from the Buying Solutions framework commenced in July 2009 and expires in June 2013.

DFID outsource their facilities management requirements to MITIE Technical Facilities Management Ltd for the provision of Total Facilities Management in the UK. We have also outsourced a small number of information technology functions.

DFID humanitarian operations and support services are outsourced to Crown Agents under the Conflict Humanitarian and Security Department (CHASE OT outsourced contract). The contract duration is five years (2005-11).

Developing Countries: Malaria

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect of rapid detection tests on the treatment of malaria. [84463]

Mr O'Brien: More accurate diagnosis can improve outcomes for malaria and other diseases, including major causes of child deaths, such as pneumonia. Therefore, World Health Organisation malaria treatment guidelines now recommend universal diagnostic confirmation of suspected cases of malaria.

Low cost and accurate rapid diagnostic tests (RDTs) are now available for use at the point of care. However, their influence on subsequent clinical practice has been variable in different settings and with different providers, and adherence to test results is still an issue in countries where RDTs have been scaled up. But there is growing evidence to show that RDTs can be used for effective case management when supported by training, supervision and the availability and use of quality assured malaria medicines, and options for treating or referring non-malaria cases.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much funding his Department allocated to malaria diagnosis through rapid detection tests in each of the last five years; and what funding he has allocated for each of the next five years. [84464]

Mr O'Brien: The Department for International Development does not track inputs, allocations and expenditure according to the category requested. The UK's codes are based on the OECD Development Assistance Committee codes which are used for reporting ODA and, as a DAC member, the UK is committed to transparent reporting of development assistance in a way that permits international comparisons.

Addressing malaria is one of the main priorities of the UK Government. We are committed to helping halve malaria deaths in at least 10 of the worst affected countries by 2015. And we will support action to sustain and expand gains into the future. The UK will invest up to £500 million each year by 2014-15 to support this goal where results can be delivered and value for money demonstrated.

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect of malaria diagnosis through rapid detection tests on the tracking and mapping of malaria. [84465]

Mr O'Brien: The increased use of diagnostic testing can support more accurate reporting on malaria. Initially, it is likely to lead to a significant decrease in the number of reported cases in many countries, as rates of misdiagnosis decrease. Data collection and monitoring systems also need to be strengthened.

The combination of increased use of rapid diagnostic tests for malaria and improved data monitoring contributes to more effective and cost-efficient planning and delivery of malaria services. This, in turn, helps address the health needs of people who would otherwise be misdiagnosed.

Developing Countries: Malnutrition

Mark Menzies: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to reduce levels of child malnutrition in fragile states. [84280]

Mr Duncan: The Department for International Development (DFID) recently published the paper 'Scaling Up Nutrition: the UK's position paper on undernutrition', which states that, between 2011 and 2015, its nutrition-related programmes (in addition to humanitarian assistance) will reach 20 million children under the age of five, 10 million of whom are in fragile countries. For example, in five states in northern Nigeria, the UK is developing a six-year programme that will reach 6.2 million children through the expansion of services for the community management of acute under-nutrition, providing essential vitamin and minerals supplementation and helping to promote exclusive breastfeeding.

Tackling acute child under-nutrition remains a strong focus of the UK's humanitarian response. The UK is increasing its support to the United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) to scale up and sustain coverage of its young child feeding, provision of micronutrients and nutrition security in emergencies and protracted crises. In Yemen the UK is delivering humanitarian assistance through a variety of agencies including UNICEF, the International Committee of the Red Cross and a consortium of non-governmental organisations including Oxfam, Save the Children, CARE and Islamic Relief. This is already helping to treat over 80,000 malnourished children under the age of five and screen 1.1 million more. Where possible DFID will use its nutrition programmes to build longer-term capacity to respond to nutrition crises through multi-year funding.

EU Aid: Family Planning

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will discuss with his EU counterparts (a) global interests in stabilising population levels and (b) increasing EU aid for family planning. [84855]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The UK Government are working closely with others, including the EU, to advance a comprehensive understanding of the role of population dynamics (specifically the demographic dividend associated with declining fertility) in helping achieve increased economic productivity and rising per capita income in developing economies. A major cause of poverty and a contributor to rapid population growth is the lack of choice for women and girls over their own fertility. We know that 215 million women in the developing world, who would like to delay or avoid a pregnancy, do not have access to modern family planning methods.

This is why the Government have recently announced additional support for contraceptive supplies to the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) to help prevent two million unintended pregnancies and avert nearly 220,000 unsafe abortions. In November 2010, the EU also pledged €23 million to UNFPA's Global Programme for Reproductive Health Commodity Security.

Overseas Aid: Education

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many education officers his Department employs. [84587]

Mr O'Brien: The Department for International Development currently employs 34 education advisers. During 2012 this is likely to increase to 42 education advisers as the result of recent and ongoing recruitment. Education advisers work alongside programme management staff and advisers from other disciplines in the delivery of DFID's education programmes.

Sri Lanka: Internally Displaced People

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent reports he has received on the situation of internally displaced people in Sri Lanka. [85229]

Mr O'Brien: DFID receives regular reports through the British High Commission in Colombo on the situation of internally displaced peoples in Sri Lanka. About 7,500 displaced people remain in camps in Sri Lanka, out of about 300,000 at the end of the conflict in 2009. They are receiving humanitarian assistance through a number of UN agencies.

World Bank

Martin Horwood: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the (a) World Bank's proposed new lending instrument set out in Operational Policy 9.00: Programme for Results heading and (b) proposal to remove application of World Bank social and environmental safeguard policies from financing under that instrument; and whether under that proposal there will be effective and appropriate use of the UK's contribution to the funding of the World Bank. [85309]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: I consider Program-for-Results (P4R), the World Bank's proposed results-based lending instrument, to be an effective way of modernising the way the World Bank lends to developing countries. The results focus of the new lending instrument will encourage efficiency, sharpen the emphasis on impact and enable the bank to partner with others more effectively. This will help to ensure value for money from the UK's funding to the World Bank.

The World Bank continues to update the proposal. We take social and environmental risks seriously and will consider these issues in detail when we receive the final proposal.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Affordable Housing

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he plans to take to provide (a) low cost housing for sale and (b) affordable rented housing in the next three years. [84652]

Andrew Stunell [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Homes and Communities Agency's Affordable Homes Programme 2011-15 will deliver 80,000 new homes for Affordable Rent and Affordable Home Ownership with Government funding of just under £1.8 billion. Around 21% of these homes will be for Affordable Home Ownership.

Overall, with our total investment of £4.5 billion we expect to provide up to 170,000 new affordable homes by 2015, compared to the 150,000 originally estimated.

Business

Andrew Selous: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if there are any regulations governing local authority subsidy of commercial businesses; and if he will make a statement. [85159]

Robert Neill: Authorities need to act within European Commission regulations on state aid. Other domestic regulations may be relevant such as the ones governing business rate reliefs.

Council Housing

Mr MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether he has made an estimate of the proportion of council houses which have been sold and are available to rent. [84771]

Andrew Stunell: Almost all council homes that have been sold will have been through the Right to Buy or through transfer to housing associations. The vast majority of homes disposed to registered housing associations will still be available for rent. We keep no record of the use made of homes sold to individuals, for example through the Right to Buy, or to other bodies.

Statistics relating to the disposal of council housing can be found on the Department's website:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/housing/housingresearch/housingstatistics/housingstatisticsby/socialhousingsales/livetables/

Council Tax Benefits

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when he plans to announce whether the work associated with council tax discounts will be transferred to local authorities along with the council tax benefit scheme. [84053]

Robert Neill: The Government are proposing a number of technical reforms for council tax, which are currently subject to a public consultation exercise. We would expect any changes to be in force by April 2013.

The separate consultation on localising council tax support, which is to replace council tax benefit, has now closed. Local schemes of support for council tax will be in place from April 2013.

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what consideration he has given to delaying his planned introduction of local authority-based schemes for council tax benefit support to allow a greater period of time between the coming into force of secondary legislation and the date on which local authorities must issue invoices; and whether he has carried out a risk assessment in respect of his current planned timetable. [84055]

Robert Neill: My Department has no intention of delaying the planned introduction in April 2013.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible. [83796]

Robert Neill: All eggs used by the Department for Communities and Local Government and its public bodies are Lion branded and sourced from enriched cages as a minimum standard.

From 1 January 2012, all eggs and egg products will be sourced from enhanced conventional cages.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of food sourced by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available. [83797]

Robert Neill: The Department for Communities and Local Government's caterers procured 56% of food from UK food producers. The Department does not hold this information for its public bodies.

The Department's caterers are contracted to comply with Government buying standards for food with regard to food purchase and provision and we are working to increase the volume of food procured from the UK.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83798]

Robert Neill: The Department for Communities and Local Government's and its public bodies' caterers must comply with Government buying standards for food and catering.

Formula Grants

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Suffolk Coastal, (ii) Teignbridge, (iii) Breckland, (iv) Mid Sussex, (v) South Oxfordshire, (vi) South Cambridgeshire, (vii) East Lindsey, (viii) Isle of Wight and (ix) Wealden in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84756]

(2) what funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Ipswich, (ii) Halton, (iii) Nuneaton and Bedworth, (iv) Slough, (v) Norwich, (vi) Thanet, (vii) Reigate and Banstead, (viii) Torbay, (ix) Windsor and Maidenhead, (x) Oxford, (xi) Canterbury and (xii) Blackburn and Darwen in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84757]

(3) what funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Newcastle-under-Lyme, (ii) Preston, (iii) Middlesbrough, (iv) Poole, (v) Arun and (vi) Elmbridge in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84758]

(4) what per capita funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Suffolk Coastal, (ii) Teignbridge, (iii) Breckland, (iv) Mid Sussex, (v) South Oxfordshire, (vi) South Cambridgeshire, (vii) East Lindsey, (viii) Isle of Wight and (ix) Wealdon in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84964]

(5) what per capita funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Ipswich, (ii) Halton, (iii) Nuneaton and Bedworth, (iv) Slough, (v) Norwich, (vi) Thanet, (vii) Reigate and Banstead, (viii) Torbay, (ix) Windsor and Maidenhead, (x) Oxford, (xi) Canterbury and (xii) Blackburn with Darwen in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84965]

(6) what per capita funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Newcastle-under-Lyme, (ii) Preston, (iii) Middlesbrough, (iv) Poole, (v) Arun and (vi) Elmbridge in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84966]

(7) what per capita funding was allocated by his Department for (a) the formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for (i) Eastleigh, (ii) Amber Valley, (iii) North Hertfordshire, (iv) Broadland, (v) Stafford, (vi) Epping Forest, (vii) Swale, (viii) Warwick, (ix) East Hertfordshire, (x) St Albans, (xi) Guildford, (xii) Cherwell, (xiii) Lancaster, (xiv) Dacorum, (xv) Maidstone and (xvi) Redcar and Cleveland in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [84967]

(8) what per capita funding was allocated by his Department (a) for formula grant and (b) specific grant funding for financial years 2008-09 and 2011-12 for (i) Vale of White Horse, (ii) Waverley, (iii) Horsham, (iv) South Kesteven, (v) East Devon, (vi) Braintree, (vii) King's Lynn and West Norfolk and (viii) Tendring in each financial year between 2008-09 and 2011-12. [84968]

http://www.local.communities.gov.uk/finance/ssas.htm

Comparisons between years may not be valid due to varying functions and responsibilities of different tiers of local government.

Disabled Facilities Grants

Mark Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether he has any plans to change the assessment for the Disability Facilities Grant. [84997]

Andrew Stunell: There are currently no plans to make changes to the way in which Disabled Facilities Grants are assessed. However, the recently published report by the Commission on the Funding of Care and Support recommends reviewing the operation and administration of the grant. The Government welcome this report and are reviewing the recommendations with the care sector. Following this engagement, we will publish a White Paper on social care reform in the spring next year, as well as a progress report on funding reform. By the end of the spending review period the national Disabled Facilities Grant budget will increase from £169 million in 2010-11 to £185 million in 2014-15.

Empty Property

Mr Buckland: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the number of empty properties in (a) the borough of Swindon and (b) England in each year since 2001. [84451]

Robert Neill: Details of the total number of empty dwellings in the borough of Swindon and England in each year since 2004 are shown in the following table. The figures include both long-term and short-term empty dwellings. Data prior to 2004 are not available.

	Swindon	England
2004	1,768	710,935
2005	2,374	723,509
2006	1,877	744,931
2007	1,723	763,319
2008	1,714	783,119
2009	1,928	770,661
2010	1,897	737,491
2011	1,832	720,328

The data are taken from the council tax base form completed annually in the autumn by all billing authorities in England and returned to the Department for Communities and Local Government.

This information is available on the Department for Communities and Local Government website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/documents/housing/xls/1815793.xls

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government which bodies are eligible to apply for funding from (a) his Department and (b) the Homes and Communities Agency to address the problem of empty homes. [85304]

Grant Shapps: £100 million has been made available within the Affordable Homes Programme to tackle long term empty homes. The Homes and Communities Agency issued bidding guidance on 21 November 2011 at www.homesandcommunities.co.uk/ourwork/empty-homes which sets out how the funding available will be allocated either through the Homes and Communities Agency (or, from 1 April 2012, for London, the Greater London Authority) or through a national intermediary appointed via the Cabinet Office's Office for Civil Society Framework Agreement. The two funding routes ensure that both Registered Providers of Social Housing and smaller not-for-profit community and voluntary groups are able to apply.

We have announced £50 million of additional funding to tackle some of the worst concentrations of empty homes. Tackling empty homes in these areas will require an intensive approach—refurbishing and reconfiguring homes, as well as improving the public realm and tackling wider issues in the local area. Further details will be announced shortly.

Empty Property: Worcestershire

Mr Robin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information his Department holds on the number of empty homes in (a) Worcester constituency and (b) Worcestershire. [85036]

Robert Neill: Details of the number of empty dwellings in the six local authority areas that comprise Worcestershire, as at the beginning of October 2011, are shown in the following table. Data are not available at constituency level.

	Empty dwellings
	Long-term	Short-term	Total
Bromsgrove	329	671	1,000
Malvern Hills	456	663	1,119
Redditch	268	590	858
Worcester	428	833	1,261
Wychavon	490	832	1,322
Wyre Forest	504	919	1,423
Total	2,475	4,508	6,983

This information was published on 16 November 2011 and is available on the Department for Communities and Local Government website at:

The data are taken from the Council Tax Base form completed annually in the autumn by all billing authorities in England and returned to the Department for Communities and Local Government.

EU Grants and Loans: Yorkshire and the Humber

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he is taking to ensure take-up of the European Regional Development Fund available to Yorkshire and the Humber. [84537]

Grant Shapps: The Yorkshire and the Humber European Regional Development Fund Competitiveness programme is worth around £500 million which aims to be fully invested by December 2013 and spent by mid 2015. Over £270 million has already been contracted to over 70 projects supporting innovation, research and development, enterprise, business support and community led regeneration. £100 million more is committed to projects that have not yet been contracted.

Local partners in the Yorkshire and the Humber area are working hard to make sure this Development Fund investment is taken up. Local authorities, Local Enterprise

Partnerships and Universities are being brought together by the local DCLG European Regional Development Fund Team to develop firm proposals to take up the remaining funding and are being encouraged to take advantage of the Fund Technical Assistance funding to help build local capacity to develop and deliver eligible projects.

Local Enterprise Partnerships have an important role in making sure that the European Regional Development Fund is aligned with local investment priorities. To this end we have revised the governance arrangements of the programme to ensure that these partnerships are represented on the Yorkshire and the Humber European Regional Development Fund Local Management Committee—the body responsible for the strategic management of the programme—and that Local Enterprise Partnerships are directly involved in the selection of projects for these funds.

We are also working closely with other government departments to align the European Regional Development Fund with national investment such as that of the Department of Business Innovation and Skills on the UKTI and Business Coaching For Growth programme that will deliver support to businesses in Yorkshire and the Humber.

We are also exploring how the Growing Places Fund can be used to get local Development Fund projects moving.

I also refer the hon. Member to my Department's press notice of 1 August 2011, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House, which outlines how the European Regional Development Fund has previously been plagued by a legacy of poor administration, and how this Government have overhauled the management of these schemes. As a result of these measures, the European Commission lifted an interruption on the programme which it had ordered. These steps will also protect taxpayers from the prospect of "financial corrections" being levied due to poor administration, as happened under the 2000-06 programme.

Green Belt

Mr Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what measures his Department has put in place to require local authorities to identify brownfield sites for development in preference to Green Belt development. [84373]

Robert Neill: In July 2011, we published a draft new National Planning Policy Framework for consultation. The draft Framework maintains strong protections for the Green Belt, and states that Green Belt boundaries should only be altered in exceptional circumstances. Our proposed abolition of the unpopular Regional Strategies through the Localism Act will also stop the top-down pressure to remove the Green Belt in 30 areas across England.

The draft Framework asks local authorities to prioritise land of least environmental or amenity value for development. The term "of least environmental or amenity value" rather than "brownfield" was used because in some cases, previously developed land can be rich in wildlife and much valued by local communities.

The consultation has closed and we are carefully considering all of the submissions that have been made and will then publish the revised text.

I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 25 October 2011, Official Report, columns 123-24W, where we have also announced a range of measures which will facilitate the use of previously developed sites.

Green Belt: Gravesham

Mr Holloway: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether he expects the abolition of regional house building targets to result in a reduction in the number of houses likely to be built on land in Gravesham constituency currently designated as green belt. [84374]

Robert Neill: The abolition of regional strategies and top down housing targets will mean that decisions on housing and planning will be for local authorities. As democratically elected representatives, working closely with local communities, they are best placed to decide how much and where housing should be located in their areas. The Localism Act prevents any further regional strategies being created. The existing regional strategies outside London will be abolished as soon as possible subject to the outcome of the current environmental assessment process. The proposed abolition will also remove top-down pressures to remove the green belt in 30 areas across England.

The draft National Planning Policy Framework reiterates long-established policy to protect the green belt. It states that when considering planning applications local planning authorities should ensure that substantial weight is given to any harm to the green belt.

Housing

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the planning implications of potential housing need arising from the upper and lower limits of the Office for National Statistics' projected population range for 2050. [84821]

Andrew Stunell: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given on 21 November 2011, Official Report, columns 59-60W.

Housing: Capital Investment

Mr Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the total capital provision for housing made by (a) local authorities and (b) the Homes and Communities Agency since 2007-08. [R] [84573]

Andrew Stunell: The following table sets out the total capital provision made available to local authorities for spending on housing for the years since 2007-08. Allocations have been made in consultation with the Homes and Communities Agency, and other agencies of the Department for Communities and Local Government.

	2007-08	2008-09	2009-10	£ million 2010-11[1]
Arms length management organisations[3]	926	896	930	622
Decent homes supported borrowing[4]	312	272	266	259
Decent homes capital grant[4]	437	347	426	308
Gap funding[3]	79	123	149	131
Major repairs allowance[2]	1248	1240	1250	1273
Local authority new build scheme[3]	0	0	198	126
National affordable homes programme	2029	2612	3641	2594

[1] Most recent whole year for which figures are available. Figures are unaudited.
[2] Allocations made as a component of housing revenue account subsidy administered by the Department for Communities and Local Government
[3] Allocations made by former Regional Offices, the Regional Housing Boards, and the Greater London Authority, in agreement with the Department for Communities and Local Government.
[4] Allocations made by the Homes and Communities Agency in agreement with the Department for Communities and Local Government

I would note that the last Administration left an unsustainable budget deficit, with the state forecast to borrow £146 billion a year in 2010-11, or £400 million being borrowed every single day. Left unchecked, that public deficit would have forced up interest rates, meaning more expensive mortgages, more repossessions and even fewer first-time buyers.

This Government are tackling that deficit, whilst putting a series of measures in place to build more affordable homes, to get empty homes back into use, to support the construction and house building industries, and to give a helping hand to first-time buyers.

Housing: Carbon Emissions

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what representations he has received on the effect on the cost of house construction of the (a) implementation of changes to building regulations in 2013, (b) abolition of the fuel factor and (c) implementation of the zero carbon commitment for all new homes from 2016. [84039]

Andrew Stunell: Industry working groups including, among others, representatives of the housebuilding and construction products sector were convened in spring 2011 to help inform development of proposals and costings for changes to building regulations in 2013. In addition, my Department has received specific representations from Calor Gas Limited on the cost implications of potential adjustments of the fuel factor. Estimates of costs will be included in the impact assessments which will be published with the consultation proposals shortly and we will invite views and further evidence as part of the consultation.

My Department has received representations from house builders and others about the costs of zero carbon homes and has published impact assessments setting out the costs, most recently in May 2011. That assessment has drawn on work undertaken by the independent Zero Carbon Hub, the body established by industry to programme manage the delivery of zero carbon homes.

Housing: Energy

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many domestic properties have an energy efficiency rating of C or above. [84396]

Andrew Stunell: Energy efficiency ratings are only available from Energy Performance Certificates that have been lodged on the Certificates Register covering England, Wales and Northern Ireland for dwellings that have been sold, rented out or constructed since August 2007. Based on information from the total number of certificates that had been lodged on these registers up to and including 29 November 2011, there were 2,501,556 dwellings with a certificate rating of C or above. Separate arrangements apply to energy efficiency ratings for buildings in Scotland.

Housing: Standards

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many domestic properties have a standard assessment procedure rating of 69 or above. [84394]

Andrew Stunell: Energy efficiency ratings are only available from energy performance certificates that have been lodged on the registers of energy performance certificates covering England, Wales and Northern Ireland for dwellings that have been sold, rented out or constructed since August 2007. Based on information from the total number of certificates that had been lodged on these registers up to and including 29 November 2011, there were 2,501,556 dwellings with a certificate rating of C or above—a standard assessment procedure rating of 69 or above is the equivalent to a certificate rating of C or above. Separate arrangements apply to energy efficiency ratings for buildings in Scotland.

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps his Department is taking to co-ordinate policy on poor housing conditions and fuel poverty. [84648]

Andrew Stunell [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Green Deal is an ambitious programme to deliver energy efficiency upgrades at no upfront cost, with repayments made over time from energy savings. This includes a new Energy Company Obligation, worth £1.3 billion per year, providing extra support where it is most needed. Under the Obligation 'Affordable Warmth obligation', we expect energy suppliers to invest around £350 million per year in providing heating and insulation measures for vulnerable households on low incomes at greatest risk of fuel poverty. The Government anticipate that the rest of the Energy Company Obligation will support energy efficiency improvements in more difficult and expensive to treat properties through a 'Carbon Reduction obligation'. The Department of Energy and Climate Change are consulting specifically on expected models for "roll-out", to ensure all households stand to benefit, including those in the poorest communities.

Where a property is dangerously cold, local authorities already have powers, under the Housing Act 2004, to require owners to make improvements. If a property is found to contain serious (category 1) hazards, the local authority has a duty to take the most appropriate action. This could range from trying to deal with the problems informally at first to prohibiting the use of the whole or part of the dwelling and ultimately to prosecution.

The Government are also investing £2.1 billion to improve the quality of housing through the decent homes programme and large-scale voluntary transfer gap funding. This will be used to help bring over 200,000 homes up to at least the decent homes standard.

Local Government: Pensions

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what economic impact assessment has been carried out on the effect of proposed changes to the Local Government Pension scheme on residents of Oldham East and Saddleworth constituency; and if he will make a statement. [85201]

Robert Neill: I refer the hon. Member to the answers given to the hon. Members for Gedling (Vernon Coaker) and for Stoke-on-Trent Central (Tristram Hunt), on 7 November 2011, Official Report, column 23W.

Local Government: Trade Union Officials

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if he will issue a standard facility time agreement to local authorities which sets out (a) duties which can be undertaken, (b) procedures for approval of such facilities time and (c) provision for the publication of (i) each instance of such facilities time and (ii) the cost of such time. [84622]

Robert Neill: At a time when all councils need to make sensible savings to protect front line services, I would urge councillors to review facility time being granted and the merits of using publicly-funded full-time union officials.

The Cabinet Office is currently consulting on a policy paper about how facility time can be reformed and reduced in the civil service. When published, my Department will provide specific guidance for local councils to help inform their own reviews.

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if he will require local authorities to include the (a) cost of facility time and (b) monetary value of resources provided to trades unions in the list published of items of expenditure over £500. [84624]

Robert Neill: The Code of Recommended Practice for Local Authorities on Data Transparency, published in September 2011, will give the public greater insight on how local councils, as employers, organise and structure their work forces. As a minimum, the code requires authorities to publish organisational charts of their staff structures including salary bands. In addition, we have asked for all expenditure of £500 and over to be published on a regular and timely basis. This should help reveal the inner workings of local councils and shed light on monies being spent, including on trade union expenditure. Subject to consultation, we are minded to make compliance with the code a legal requirement.

The Cabinet Office is currently consulting on a policy paper about how facility time can be reformed and reduced in the civil service. When published, my Department will provide guidance for local councils to help inform their own reviews.

Ministers are open to representations on ways to increase transparency and accountability in this area.

Rented Housing: Energy

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the effect of increases in energy prices on provision of communal heating to Housing Revenue Account tenanted properties; and if he will make a statement. [84024]

Andrew Stunell: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 907W.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many Housing Revenue Account tenanted properties have an energy efficiency rating of C or above. [84395]

Andrew Stunell: Information contained in the Register of Energy Performance Certificates does not differentiate between properties that are housing revenue account tenanted and those that are not. However, certificates that have been lodged on the Energy Performance Certificate Registers for dwellings that have been sold, rented out or constructed in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, since 21 September 2008 have been categorised by transaction type. Between then and 29 November 2011, there have been 564,956 certificates for dwellings rated C or above categorised as "Rented (social)". Separate arrangements apply to energy efficiency ratings for buildings in Scotland.

Rented Housing: Standards

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many Housing Revenue Account tenanted properties have a standard assessment procedure rating of 69 or above. [84391]

Andrew Stunell: Information contained in the register of energy performance certificates does not differentiate between properties that are housing revenue account tenanted and those that are not. However, energy performance certificates that have been lodged on the registers for dwellings that have been sold, rented out or constructed in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, since 21 September 2008 have been categorised by transaction type. Between then and 29 November 2011, there have been 564,956 certificates for dwellings rated C or above categorised as "Rented (social)". On the Scottish register of energy performance certificates, of the 130,741 certificates lodged under transaction type "Rented (social)" there were 67,488 dwellings certificates rated C or above.

A standard assessment procedure rating of 69 or above is the equivalent to an energy performance certificate rating of C or above.

Right to Buy Scheme: Worcester

Mr Robin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes in Worcester constituency have been sold under the right-to-buy scheme in each of the last 20 years. [85038]

Andrew Stunell: Data are not available by constituency but are collected for local authority districts. The number of sales of local authority stock under the Right to Buy scheme are given in Live Table 648 on the Department's website at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/housing/housingresearch/housingstatistics/housingstatisticsby/socialhousingsales/livetables/

There have been no sales by Worcester city council since they transferred their stock to Worcester Community Housing in March 2004. From 2004-05 there have been around 200 Preserved Right to Buy sales by housing associations in the Worcester city council area, the vast majority by Worcester Community Housing.

Rural Areas: Finance

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what grants are available exclusively to local authorities classified as (a) rural-80, (c) rural-50, (c) significant rural, (d) other urban, (e) major urban and (f) large urban. [84696]

Robert Neill [holding answer 5 December 2011]: There are no specific grants issued by my Department exclusively available to authorities based on their rural classification.

Social Justice Committee

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many meetings of the Social Justice Committee he has attended since its establishment. [85288]

Robert Neill: Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees, including when and how often they meet and which Ministers have attended, is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Social Rented Housing

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what his policy is on housing associations (a) letting and (b) selling their properties to people living outside the UK in the last year for which figures are available; [79278]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of housing association properties that have been (a) let and (b) sold to people living outside of the UK in the last year for which figures are available. [79279]

Grant Shapps [holding answer 7 November 2011]: Given the discussion of these issues at October's oral questions, 31 October 2011, Official Report, column 601, I have investigated this matter and would like to use this opportunity to provide a comprehensive reply both to the right hon. Member and to the right hon. Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr Raynsford).

Numbers of lets and sales

The following tables provide estimates of the number of social properties that were let or sold by private registered providers, the majority of which are housing associations, to people resident outside the United Kingdom immediately prior to taking up this letting or purchase. I have included some historical information to provide context.

Social housing lettings to households from outside the UK

	Outside UK	Outside UK as percentage of total
2002-03	583	0.26
2003-04	586	0.26
2004-05	412	0.19
2005-06	427	0.19

Sales to households from outside the UK

	Outside UK
2005-06	4
2006-07	0
2007-08	4
2008-09	8
2009-10	6
2010-11	5

These estimates are from the continuous recording (CORE) logs reported by private registered providers to the Tenant Services Authority.

Many of the recorded lettings were to UK nationals. Whilst only a small number of sales to those outside the UK were recorded in 2010-11, all of these were to UK nationals and some were to returning armed forces personnel.

Foreign nationals are only eligible to be allocated social housing by a local authority (including nominations to private registered provider accommodation) if they are covered by the housing eligibility regulations.

Housing eligibility

Housing eligibility is as follows:

European economic area nationals

Since 2006, European economic area nationals are, broadly speaking, eligible for local authority housing if they are working lawfully, are self-sufficient or have a permanent right of residence (following five years lawful residence). In some circumstances, European economic area nationals may continue to be eligible when unemployed, following a qualifying period of work (e.g. if made involuntarily redundant or unable to work because of accident or illness).

Nationals of Bulgaria and Romania must be authorised to work by the Home Office (until they have worked in the UK continuously for 12 months). They are eligible for social housing if working as authorised.

European economic area nationals who do not have an EU right to reside because they are not economically active and not self-sufficient are not eligible for social housing. Additionally, those whose only EU right to reside is as a work seeker or the initial three month right to reside derived from the EU Directive on Freedom of Movement of Persons are not eligible.

Non-European economic area nationals

Non-European economic area nationals ("third country nationals") are only eligible for local authority housing if they are a person granted:

(i) a form of protection leave, ie refugee status or humanitarian protection or discretionary leave, because it would not be safe for them to return to their country (likely to be former asylum seekers); or

(ii) Indefinite leave to remain (ie settled status, usually granted after working legally in the UK for a number of years).

Generally third country nationals are not eligible for housing because most are given leave to enter the UK for a limited period on condition that they do not have recourse to public funds. Asylum seekers are not eligible for social housing; if they are destitute they can seek asylum support from the Home Office.

Where foreign nationals are eligible, they will have their housing needs considered on the same basis as other applicants in accordance with the local authority's allocation scheme. Some lettings are made directly by private registered providers and these would not be covered by the eligibility regulations.

Sales and lets of open market housing

The tables above do not include sales of open market properties that were specifically developed by the providers for this purpose and have never been social housing. Housing associations are private, independent bodies, and some develop properties through non-charitable subsidiaries for market sale or rent, without any public subsidy. The proceeds from these sales are then used to cross-subsidise the development and maintenance of affordable properties. As with any commercial transaction, the market housing may be purchased by domestic or overseas buyers. I suspect that most foreign purchases from abroad are typically in order to rent the property, thereby increasing the amount of stock in the private rented sector available to UK residents.

Further to the discussion at 31 October 2011, Official Report, column 601, the Notting Hill Housing Trust has subsequently written to the right hon. Member for Greenwich and Woolwich (Mr Raynsford), and sent a copy to me. The trust has a small portfolio of market rent and private sale properties, using the profits from these developments to support more affordable housing. It does not presently market these properties abroad, but it does not discriminate against any buyer on the basis of their nationality, and nor does it believe it should do so.

Government policy

As happened under the previous Administration, I believe that there is a public benefit from housing associations undertaking some commercial activities in order to support the provision of more affordable housing.

Under our social housing reforms, councils will now be able to set their own rules about who qualifies to go on the housing waiting list. At the moment anyone can apply to live in social housing, whether they need to or not. The 'reasonable preference' categories for those with the greatest housing needs will be kept, to ensure priority for social housing continues to go to the most vulnerable in society and those who need it most.

We will also be increasing support for our armed forces. Moving from base-to-base, and residing abroad, can often leave our troops without strong local connections—something many councils reasonably look for when allocating social homes. I have pledged to give councils a duty to put our armed forces who want a home in their area at or near the top of the local waiting list where they are in urgent need. In addition to this move to give additional preference (i.e. high priority) to the armed forces, we will also be consulting on regulations which will make sure that service personnel who have to move from base-to-base do not lose their qualification rights to social housing.

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what his policy is on (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations buying properties on the open market; [79643]

(2) how many properties (a) local authorities and (b) housing associations have acquired on the open market in each of the last 10 years. [79644]

Grant Shapps: Local authorities and housing associations are able to buy properties on the open market. This can help to increase the supply of affordable housing to meet local needs. However, the vast majority of new affordable housing supply is new build.

Information on units purchased by private registered providers (most of which are housing associations) is shown in the table.

	Total units purchased[1] (thousand)
2001-02	13.6
2002-03	11.5
2003-04	9.4
2004-05	9.1

2006-07	4.0
2007-08	5.9
2008-09	6.9
2009-10	5.9

[1] Units include both self contained homes or hostel/shared housing units and bed spaces.

[2] Figures for 2005-06 were rebased to reflect the threshold change in 2007.

Notes:

1. Only private registered providers that complete the "long return" were required to complete this information.

Before 2006, long returns were completed by private registered providers who own and/or manage 250 units

From 2006-07 long returns were completed by private registered providers who own and/or manage 1,000 or more units.

2. Not all of the units purchased will necessarily be used as affordable housing.

Tenants Services Authority—Regulatory Statistical Return

The Tenants Services Authority's Regulatory Statistical Return dataset for 2010-11 shows that 16,700 units were purchased by private registered providers. However, 10,259 units appear to have been incorrectly recorded by an individual registered provider as purchased rather than acquired through voluntary transfer from local authorities or housing action trusts. This was identified after submission and confirmation of the individual registered provider's data and the finalisation of the Regulatory Statistical Return dataset, and cannot now be amended.

Information has not been collected on local authority acquisitions.

Voluntary Organisations

David Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps his Department is taking to help maintain the local voluntary sector. [78757]

Andrew Stunell: My Department is undertaking a number of steps to support the local voluntary, community and social enterprise sector, including:

In September 2011, we issued new Best Value guidance: a 'fair deal' which cuts back unnecessary red tape on local authorities, while introducing new requirements for councils to consult with local voluntary organisations on changes to funding and service. It will also give the voluntary sector the opportunity to offer options for reshaping and improving local authority services.

We are investing £6.5 billion for Supporting People over the spending review period, to provide frontline housing support to disadvantaged and vulnerable people; the majority of these services are provided by the voluntary sector.

We are providing £20 million of funding for the voluntary sector to help implement "No Second Night Out" rough sleeping strategy. As part of this, Homeless Link will work with other voluntary sector partners to identify and disseminate good practice in helping people off the streets. We are providing £10 million to Crisis in order to support single homeless people, including priority client groups such as recovering drug-users and ex-offenders, to access stable accommodation in the private rented sector.

On 14 November 2011, we launched the Near Neighbours programme. This is a £5 million scheme to bring together people from diverse communities and different faiths to get to know each other better and help them improve their local neighbourhoods. Faith groups play a vital role in our neighbourhoods. Near Neighbours is an investment in the future, supporting grass roots groups and projects to allow communities to get on transforming their neighbourhoods for the better.

The Community Right to Buy, being introduced through the Localism Act, will offer new rights for voluntary groups to protect community resources like leisure centres, village halls and libraries. Groups will have the time they need to develop business plans and raise funds. This crucial breathing space will ensure that they are not squeezed out of open market sales of valuable local assets. We have extended funding for the Asset Transfer Unit by £1 million into 2011-12 enabling the unit to continue to offer practical support to communities who want to take on public assets such as youth centres, museums and former town halls for the benefit of local people.

From September 2011, the new "Code of Recommended Practice for Local Authorities on Data Transparency" requires councils to shine the light on local spending, including details of grants to the voluntary sector, as well as all contracts and tenders over £500. This open data initiative will allow greater public scrutiny of local authority support, and make it easier for the voluntary sector to bid to run contracts and services.

As part of our Housing Strategy announced on 21 November 2011, we outlined how we will be providing funding for voluntary groups to bid for funds to renovate and improve empty homes and other types of empty property and get them back into productive use.

The Localism Act also introduces a Community Right to Challenge. Voluntary groups that have a track record of working with their community and delivering results will have the chance to show what they can do to run and improve local services. The new right will put them on the front foot when it comes to taking over a local service and has the potential to open up new funding streams.

We have cut Whitehall and local red tape to make it easier to organise street parties and similar community events. This was particularly aimed at supporting local events for the Royal Wedding; we hope to continue with this initiative to support the forthcoming Diamond Jubilee.

My Department's Voluntary and Community Sector Partnership Board is also acting as a forum where the voluntary sector can contribute to the Department's work.

These reforms are in addition to a whole series of other supportive measures to the local voluntary sector being undertaken by other Government Departments, which include:

a £100 million Transition Fund offering financing for the most vulnerable charities.

a £30 million Transforming Local Infrastructure fund to help modernise organisations that supply critical support to frontline charities, voluntary groups and social enterprises.

a £10 million Investment and Contract Readiness Fund being made available to charities and social enterprises to help them develop the skills and infrastructure to win more capital investment and public service.

£600 million capital funding through Big Society Capital, which will offer financing to charities and the voluntary sector.

Simplifying Gift Aid, and encouraging legacy-giving by reducing the rate of inheritance tax for those estates leaving 10% or more to charity.

Metal Theft

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what his policy is on local authority powers to prevent the disposal of stolen goods, including scrap metal and jewellery; and if he will make a statement. [84778]

Robert Neill [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Local authorities are expected to work with police forces and other law enforcement organisations where possible to tackle the disposal of stolen goods, utilising their existing powers, including trading standards, as appropriate. In relation to scrap metal, local authorities have a duty under the Scrap Metal Dealers Act 1964 to register scrap metal dealers in their area and certain powers of entry which may assist in identifying illegal behaviour. The Government are currently reviewing what further steps can be taken to help tackle metal theft.

LEADER OF THE HOUSE

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Leader of the House what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85067]

Sir George Young: I have answered all 13 named day questions on the named day during the last six months.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

EDUCATION

Children in Care

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will enhance the specification of the SSDA903 return to identify when a child who has been adopted from care returns to care in a different local authority area. [82416]

Tim Loughton: The Department does not collect data on the number of adoptions that break down and where the child returns to care. The Department is funding Bristol university to conduct research on the rate of and reasons for breakdowns in adoption. Findings from the research will inform decisions on whether we ask for additional data from local authorities.

Children: Day Care

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made of the average cost of childcare in (a) England and (b) each region of England in each of the last five years. [84708]

Sarah Teather [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Department's annual Childcare and Early Years Providers Survey collects information on the mean average hourly fees charged by some registered child care providers in England, nationally and by region. The 2009 survey did not collect this data, and the latest available survey is for 2010. The available figures for the five years from 2006 to 2010 are as follows:

Children: Missing Persons

Ann Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education with reference to the children in care and adoption performance tables, November 2011, whether he is satisfied that no children went missing in (a) Knowsley, (b) St Helens, (c) Rochdale, (d) Kirklees, (e) South Gloucestershire, (f) Hartlepool, (g) Redcar and Cleveland, (h) Stockton-on-Tees, (i) city of Kingston upon Hull, (j) Bedford borough, (k) central Bedfordshire, (l) Bournemouth, (m) Durham, (n) East Sussex, (o) Rutland, (p) Reading, (q) Blackpool, (r) Hackney, (s) Manchester, (t) Derby, (u) Leicester, (v) Cambridgeshire, (w) Kent, (x) Lancashire, (y) Nottingham, (z) Lincolnshire and (aa) Oxfordshire between 2008 and 2010; and if he will make a statement. [83346]

Tim Loughton: The adoption and performance tables show a three year average of children absent from their agreed placement for more than 24 hours as a percentage of looked after children. The figures for (a) Knowsley, (b) St Helens, (c) Rochdale, (d) Kirklees, (e) South Gloucestershire, (f) Hartlepool, (g) Redcar and Cleveland, (h) Stockton-on-Tees, (i) city of Kingston upon Hull, (j) Bedford borough, (k) central Bedfordshire, (l) Bournemouth, (m) Durham, (n) East Sussex, (o) Rutland, (p) Reading, and (q) Blackpool are zero. For these local authorities no looked after child is recorded as being absent from their agreed placement in each of the years 2008 to 2010.

For the local authorities, (r) Hackney, (s) Manchester, (t) Derby, (u) Leicester, (v) Cambridgeshire, (w) Kent, (x) Lancashire, (y) Nottingham, (z) Lincolnshire and (aa) Oxfordshire the three year average is shown as "-". This symbol in the tables indicates that the percentage of looked after children recorded as being absent from their agreed placement for more than 24 hours for the years 2008 to 2010 is lower than 0.5%. Therefore for these local authorities, there are some children recorded as being absent from their agreed placement for more than 24 hours at some point during the period 2008 to 2010.

The information published in the Children in Care and Adoption Performance Tables was sourced from the Department's SSDA903 collection. This collection is returned annually by local authorities. Local authorities are responsible for checking their data and, once they are confident that they are accurate, must sign them off. All local authorities signed off the data for the years in question.

The data go through extensive validation to support local authorities in ensuring that their final data is correct. Once these data have been finalised, statisticians perform extensive quality assurance of the data. I can therefore be satisfied that the data shown in these tables are an accurate reflection of the situation regarding children absent from their agreed placement for each local authority named in the question.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible. [83793]

Tim Loughton: The Department for Education's and its public bodies' caterers use eggs that are Lion Branded and sourced from enriched cages as a minimum standard. From 1 January 2012 all eggs and egg products will be sourced from enhanced conventional cages.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84195]

Tim Loughton: The information requested is not held centrally and to gather this information would represent disproportionate costs.

Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of food sourced by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available. [83794]

Tim Loughton: The information is as follows.

1. The Department for Education's and its public bodies' caterers are British Farm Assured Accredited for fresh meat and poultry and Marine Stewardship Council accredited for fish. The award of Red Tractor accreditation ensures that all fresh meat and poultry is British produced. The majority of fish used within the contracts area are also sourced from British waters.

2. Wherever practical, and subject to the cost of the supply, bacon used within the catering provision is British sourced.

3. Subject to seasonal availability, fruit and vegetable products conform to Linking Environment and Farming environmental standards and are sourced from British suppliers.

4. Specific data are not held. The Department has contractual catering arrangements in place to ensure that food procurement complies with the Government Buying Standards for Food and catering in relation to food purchase and provision.

Free Schools

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent assessment he has made of the potential effects of (a) free schools and (b) academies on educational attainment. [82910]

Mr Gibb: The first free schools opened in September 2011. The high quality of the proposals for these schools, coupled with the fact that they are being run by dedicated individuals, suggests that they will be shown to perform well when performance data are available. Parents clearly agree; over half of these schools are over-subscribed, many with waiting lists to cope with the demand.

On academies, the latest provisional 2011 GCSE results show that results in academies open for two years have improved twice as fast as those in maintained schools. As the number of academies continues to grow, we expect that they will continue to have a positive effect on educational attainment.

Pupils: Disadvantaged

Kerry McCarthy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment has been made of the effect of the pupil premium on the number of children living in poverty up to 2015. [77227]

Sarah Teather [holding answer 31 October 2011]: The pupil premium provides additional funding for the most disadvantaged pupils, including those known to be eligible for free school meals, those whose parents are in the armed forces and children who have been in care for more than six months.

The pupil premium is aimed at narrowing the gap in educational attainment between children from deprived backgrounds and other pupils in a school. It is not intended to impact directly on the number of children living in poverty by 2015 but it is intended to allow schools to provide disadvantaged children with additional support where they need it to help them reach their potential by improving their attainment, aspiration and progression into adulthood. This is a key strand of our approach to improving the life chances of children and preventing them from becoming the next generation of disadvantaged parents.

Schools will be accountable for narrowing the attainment gap for disadvantaged children. We will reform performance tables to include new measures that show the attainment of pupils who receive the pupil premium compared with their peers. We will also ask schools to report to parents on an annual basis how they have used the pupil premium.

HEALTH

Alcoholic Drinks: Young People

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people under the age of 18 years have been treated for alcohol-induced illness by NHS hospitals since January 2011. [84865]

Anne Milton: Provisional figures show that there were an estimated 7,074 admissions of people under the age of 18 years that have been treated for alcohol-induced illness[1] by national health service hospitals since January 2011.

[1] In 2007, the Department commissioned the North West Public Health Observatory (NWPHO) to undertake a review of the epidemiological literature to identify those conditions where there is significant evidence of a causal relationship between alcohol consumption and the disease or injury, NWPHO's findings were published in "Alcohol-attributable fractions for England, Alcohol-attributable mortality and hospital admissions", June 2008.

This is shown in a table that has been placed in the Library. The data in the table should not be described as a count of people as the same person may have been admitted on more than one occasion.

Some conditions (such as alcoholic liver disease or ethanol poisoning) are wholly attributed to alcohol consumption (that is, alcohol consumption is the sole cause).

Other conditions (cancer of the oesophagus and assaults) are only partially attributed to alcohol consumption (that is, alcohol consumption causes the illness in some cases). For these conditions, estimates of the fraction of cases that can be attributed to alcohol, were produced by combining information from epidemiological studies about the increased risks associated with different levels of alcohol consumption with information from population surveys about self-reported consumption.

These "alcohol-attributable fractions" are applied to data on hospital admissions to estimate the number of admissions where the patient has been diagnosed with a condition caused by alcohol consumption. For example, it is estimated that 32% of cancers of the oesophagus among men aged 16 to 24 in England can be attributed to alcohol consumption. The estimate of the number of admissions where men aged 16 to 24 have been diagnosed with cancer of the oesophagus that can be attributed to alcohol consumption is obtained by multiplying the total number of admissions where men aged 16 to 24 have been diagnosed with cancer of the oesophagus by 32%.

Cannabis: Children

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) people and (b) people under the age of 18 years were treated for cannabis-induced psychosis in each of the last two years. [84740]

Anne Milton: Data on the number of people treated for cannabis-induced psychosis are not collected centrally. However, data on the number of finished admissions episodes with a primary diagnosis of mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids are collected and presented in the following table:

Count of finished admission episodes (FAE) with a primary diagnosis of mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids (ICD10 code F12)

	Number of people treated	Number of people aged under 18	Number of people aged 18 and over	Age not known
2009-10	713	93	617	3
2010-11	799	87	710	2

Notes:
1. A FAE is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. FAEs are counted against the year in which the admission episode finishes. Admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 20 (14 from 2002-03 to 2006-07 and seven prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was admitted to hospital. ICD10 Code used = F12 Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids (including cannabis).
3. Data quality—HES are compiled from data sent by more than 300 NHS trusts and primary care trusts (PCTs) in England and from some independent sector organisations for activity commissioned by the English national health service. The NHS Information Centre for health and social care liaises closely with these organisations to encourage submission of complete and valid data and seeks to minimise inaccuracies. While this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.
4. HES figures are available from 1989-90 onwards. Changes to the figures over time need to be interpreted in the context of improvements in data quality and coverage (particularly in earlier years), improvements in coverage of independent sector activity (particularly from 2006-07) and changes in NHS practice. For example, apparent reductions in activity may be due to a number of procedures, which may now be undertaken in out-patient settings and so no longer include in admitted patient HES data.
5. Activity included—activity in English NHS Hospitals and English NHS commissioned activity in the independent sector.

Contraception

Mr Virendra Sharma: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his proposed timetable is for development of a Quality Standard for contraceptive services, including emergency contraception; and if he will make a statement. [84601]

Mr Simon Burns: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) jointly with the National Quality Board recently ran an engagement exercise on the development of a library of NICE Quality Standard topics for the national health service. The list of proposed Quality Standard topics published as part of this exercise included contraceptive services (including emergency contraception). The engagement exercise closed on 14 October 2011.

Further information on the engagement exercise can be found at:

www.nice.org.uk/getinvolved/currentniceconsultations/NQBEngagement.jsp

An announcement on next steps will be made once the responses have been analysed.

Departmental Advertising

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advertising campaigns his Department has run in each of the last five years; and what the cost was of each such campaign. [84555]

Mr Simon Burns: The following tables show the Department's advertising expenditure carried out through the Communications Directorate over each of the last five financial years for which full information is available, by campaign.

Advertising spend is defined as covering only media spend (inclusive of agency commissions but excluding production costs, Central Office of Information (COI) commission and VAT). All figures exclude advertising rebates and audit adjustments and therefore may differ from COI official turnover figures. All figures are rounded to the nearest £10,000. These figures do not include Departmental recruitment/classified advertising costs and ad hoc spend under £10,000. These figures may include occasional minor spend through COI by national health service organisations, to supplement national campaigns in their area. While this expenditure has been excluded as far as possible so that this chart reflects central departmental spend, it would incur disproportionate cost to validate that every item of NHS expenditure has been removed.

A total budget figure for the current financial year cannot be provided at this stage as detailed planning for some campaigns is under way and advertising media allocations have not yet been finalised.

Departmental Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85048]

Mr Simon Burns: Between 1 June and 30 November 2011, 635 written questions for answer on a named day were received. 100% received a substantive answer on the date for answer.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Social Care Funding

John Hemming: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish the Government's response to the Dilnot Commission's report Fairer Funding for All. [84853]

Paul Burstow: On 4 July this year, the Secretary of State for Health, the right hon. Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr Lansley), set out the Government's initial response to the report of the Commission on Funding of Care and Support.

The Government welcomed this report, which is an immensely valuable contribution to meeting the long-term challenge of an ageing population.

Government have spent the last few months engaging with stakeholders from across the care and support community to ensure that we get funding reform—and social care reform more broadly—right.

As the Secretary of State set out in his July statement, the Government plan to publish a social care White Paper and a progress report on funding reform in the spring. We remain committed to this timetable.

Drugs: Young People

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) people, (b) under 18 year olds, (c) under 16 year olds and (d) under 12 year olds were given drug rehabilitation treatment for each type of drug since January 2011. [84864]

Anne Milton: The National Drug Treatment Monitoring System records information about substance misuse interventions in England. Data on adults (18 and over) in contact with drug treatment agencies and general practitioners in England in 2010-11 were published as "Statistics from the National Drug Treatment Monitoring System (NDTMS) 1 April 2010 to 31 March 2011". A copy has been placed in the Library. The young people's annual statistics for 2010-11 will be published by the National Treatment Agency for Substance Misuse on 8 December and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Food: Labelling

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what the differences are between the targets put in place by the Food Standards Agency prior to May 2010 and the targets in the responsibility deal in respect of (a) salt reduction, (b) saturated fat reduction and reformulation, (c) front of pack nutrition labelling and traffic light colour coding and (d) information on healthy choices when eating out; and if he will make a statement. [84475]

Anne Milton: The Responsibility Deal has the same salt reduction targets as those developed by the Food Standards Agency (FSA), with a modification to the average and maximum targets for breakfast cereals. As a result, the Responsibility Deal targets have the potential to remove more salt from our foods than those set by the FSA.

The FSA published recommendations for saturated fat for a number of food categories in March 2010. There are currently no Responsibility Deal targets for saturated fat and reformulation. Work on saturated fat will be part of the next phase of the Responsibility Deal.

The FSA had no targets associated with front of pack labelling or the use of traffic light labelling and there are currently no Responsibility Deal pledges in this area.

The FSA had no targets associated with information on healthy eating when eating out. The Responsibility Deal has a pledge for businesses to provide calorie information for food and non-alcoholic drinks in out of home settings from 1 September 2011.

Health Professions: Training

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many training posts have been funded for (a) nurses, (b) doctors and (c) other clinical staff in each of the last 10 years. [83182]

Anne Milton: The following table shows the total population of doctors across all grades of training from 2001 to 2010:

Total number of doctors in training in England—at 30 September 2001 to 2010

1. Figures are shown as full-time equivalents
2. The Modernising Medical Careers programme saw the introduction of new training grades, changes in categorisation and reorganisation of training staff. Evidence of these changes were first reflected in 2007, within the component staff of the doctors in training and equivalents group (particularly registrar group and senior house officers).
3.Doctors in training and equivalents refers to the registrar group, senior house officer, foundation year 2, house officer and foundation programme year 1, other doctors in training and other staff at these grades that do not hold an educationally approved training post.

The Department does not collect population data for the number of nurses and other clinical staff in training each year. However, the latest figures available show that, in 2010-11, the population of nurses in training was 53,101 and other non-medical trainees was 36,258, giving a total non-medical trainee population of 89,359. The following table shows the number of new nursing and other non medical staff courses that were commissioned in each financial year since 2001-02.

Health Services: Finance

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to ensure that the Health Premium does not divert resources from the areas with the highest level of continuing health problems. [84477]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department is developing a health premium that will incentivise local authorities to make improvements in health and reduce health inequalities. Those areas with the worst health problems will see the greatest incentive because they face the greatest challenges.

Detailed work on the health premium can only begin once the baseline spend is known and after the publication of the Public Health Outcomes Framework. More information will be published as soon as possible after that so that local authorities know what is expected of them to receive an incentive payment.

Health: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will prepare and publish a strategy for improving children's health. [84476]

Anne Milton: In the Government's new vision for the national health service and public health we have made explicit our determination to provide high quality services for children and young people as an essential and integral part of delivering better health outcomes.

Since the publication in September 2010 of "Achieving Equity and Excellence for children", Ministers and officials have worked with the children's sector to develop a focus on improving children's health in the reformed health and public health system. Subject to parliamentary approval, the new framework will enable a more robust, focused and comprehensive approach to child health.

A copy of the publication has been placed in the Library.

Health: Greater London

Mr Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions he has had with London boroughs on the Government's public health reforms. [84817]

Anne Milton: A pan-London Delivery board exists to support and co-ordinate public health reforms in London. This board is co-chaired by the regional director of public health and the chief executive of Bromley council on behalf of London boroughs.

Last year, the Secretary of State for Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr Lansley), wrote to the Mayor of London inviting further proposals for the optimal public health improvement system for London. Early this year, the Mayor and London councils responded positively with their proposal to set up a London Health Improvement Board. The Department is working with the Greater London authority and London boroughs in considering how best to take the proposals forward.

Hospital Beds

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) acute and (b) critical care beds were reported in situation reports to his Department as being in use in hospitals in each week since 1 April 2011. [84884]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department does not collect data on bed numbers in weekly situation reports. The information collected by the Department on a monthly and quarterly basis since April 2011 is provided in the following tables.

England level

		Average number of available general and acute beds under care of a consultant
Year	Period	Overnight beds	Day only beds

Influenza

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to provide information on the steps that the public should take to minimise the risk of transmission and infection in the event of an influenza pandemic. [84473]

Anne Milton: On 10 November 2011, the Government launched the UK Influenza Pandemic Preparedness Strategy 2011. The Strategy has already been placed in the Library and is available on the Department's website at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_130903

This United Kingdom wide Strategy aims to ensure that the UK continues to be one of the best-prepared countries in the world.

In the event of a pandemic, the Government will use a wide range of media to communicate information effectively to the public. Until the characteristics of any emerging virus are known, plans remain flexible, but are likely to include regular press briefings, via the Chief Medical Officer and other trusted health professionals, key websites and social media as well as paid-for advertising where appropriate.

Information may also be made available directly to the public through telephone help lines and other interactive channels. The Department will also work closely with potential partners from the commercial and voluntary sectors to develop ways for them to disseminate urgent public health messages to their customers and members.

Influenza: Vaccination

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate his Department has made of likely take-up rates of the influenza vaccine in each (a) age group, (b) category of at-risk group and (c) geographical area. [84617]

Anne Milton: The chief medical officer (CMO) wrote to the national health service on 14 March 2011 setting out the planning assumptions for vaccine uptake for the current flu season. The CMO stated that the NHS in England should plan to achieve a vaccine uptake rate of at least 75% among people aged 65 and over, and to vaccinate at least 60% of those aged under 60 in clinical risk groups.

The CMO letter can be viewed at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Lettersandcirculars/Dearcolleagueletters/DH_125091

A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library.

Liver Diseases: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children aged (a) under 10 years and (b) 10 years and over were admitted to hospital with a diagnosis of (i) non-alcoholic fatty liver and (ii) diabetes since January 2011. [84862]

Anne Milton: Information is not available on the number of patients admitted. The table shows the number of finished admission episodes.

Count of finished admission episodes[1] where primary diagnosis is fatty (change of) liver, not elsewhere classified or diabetes for children aged under 10 years and aged 10-18 since January 2011.

[1] A finished admission episode (FAE) is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. FAEs are counted against the year in which the admission episode finishes. Admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission in the year.

Maternity Services

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to implement the Maternity Matters policy. [84937]

Anne Milton: "Maternity Matters" (April 2007) was the previous administration's policy for maternity choice. In the White Paper, "Equity and excellence: Liberating the NHS" (July 2010) we set out our commitment to extend maternity choice through provider networks.

By focusing on health outcomes and delivering maternity services through provider networks, we will help to make safe, informed choice throughout pregnancy and in childbirth a reality and to facilitate movement between the different services to meet women's needs and choices.

The Department funded the "Birthplace in England" research study, published by the National Perinatal Epidemiology Unit in November 2011, to compare the outcomes of births planned at home, in different types of midwifery unit and in hospital units with obstetric services. This study will help the national health service in their maternity services, based on what women want and need. It will also help midwives advise women so that they can make the most informed choice about their birth setting.

Maternity Services: Finance

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding he is providing to support (a) all neonatal care services and (b) neonatal intensive care services during the comprehensive spending review period. [84474]

Anne Milton: The Government have committed to increasing funding in real terms funding for the national health service in every year of the Parliament.

Primary care trust (PCT) recurrent revenue allocations are not broken down by service or policy area. It is for PCTs to commission services to meet the health care needs of their local populations, taking account of local and national priorities.

Mental Health Services

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for (a) Education, (b) Justice, (c) Work and Pensions and (d) Communities and Local Government about the implementation of the Government's mental health strategy, No Health Without Mental Health; [84866]

Mental Health Services

(2) what steps his Department has taken to implement the Government's mental health strategy, No Health Without Mental Health. [84867]

Paul Burstow: "No Health Without Mental Health" highlights that mental health is a priority across Government, and that its ambitions are shared by a number of Government Departments. Most Government Departments have plans of action that will improve mental health outcomes.

The Cabinet sub-Committee on Public Health is where these plans are brought together, and where the Government will oversee progress on this strategy. The Cabinet Committee on Social Justice will also help to ensure that there is effective cross-Government action to address many of the social causes of mental health problems.

Since publication, the Department has worked to further the aims of the strategy through a number of routes. These include the recently-published national health service (NHS) operating framework which highlights mental health services and specifically "No Health without Mental Health" and makes it clear that this should be a priority for primary care trust commissioning.

Mental health is reflected in the outcomes frameworks for the NHS and adult social care, and in the draft outcomes framework for public health.

Implementation will also be supported through the introduction of payment by results and improved outcome measures for mental health within the NHS.

We have established a Ministerial Advisory Group for the mental health strategy to work in partnership to realise this strategy. The group brings together Government, relevant national bodies, commissioners, mental health provider organisations, voluntary and community sector organisations, and people with mental health problems and carers.

Proposals to develop a full implementation framework for the strategy were agreed by the Ministerial Advisory Group in October 2011.

The framework will be co-produced and jointly owned by national mental health organisations, with involvement and engagement from organisations across the sector, in partnership with Government Departments.

Mental Illness

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people with (a) mild to moderate and (b) severe mental illness (i) in January 2011 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available. [84606]

Paul Burstow: The Department does not collect this information.

The most recent data on the proportion of adults with mental disorders are from the 2007 Adult Psychiatric Morbidity Census (APMS). Data from this report are as follows:

Prevalence based on 2007 APMS

	All adults (Percentage)
Any common mental disorder (includes anxiety and depression)	16.2
Psychotic disorder	0.4

Source:
Adult Psychiatric Morbidity in England, 2007: results of a household survey: www.ic.nhs.uk/pubs/psychiatricmorbidity07

Mental Illness: Children

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people aged under 18 years diagnosed with a mental disorder for each type of disorder (i) in January 2011 and (ii) on the latest date for which figures are available. [84605]

Paul Burstow: No estimate has been made but information on the prevalence of mental disorders in children and young people has been published by other organisations.

For example, in the Mental Health of Children and Adolescents in Great Britain, 2004 the Office for National Statistics reported that 9.6% of five to 16 year-olds had a clinically recognisable mental disorder. Of these, 5.8% had a conduct disorder, 3.7% had emotional disorders (anxiety and depression), 1.5% had hyperkinetic (hyperactive) disorders and 0.3% had eating disorders. Some children had more than one disorder. The same survey showed that among five-ten year-olds 10.2% of boys and 5.1% of girls had a clinically recognisable mental disorder. In the older age group, 11 to 16 year-olds, 12.6% of boys and 10.3% of girls had a clinically recognisable mental disorder.

Mental Illness: Young People

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) people and (b) people under 18 years of age were treated for cannabis-induced psychosis (i) since January 2011 and (ii) in the previous 12 months. [84861]

Anne Milton: Data on the number of people treated for cannabis-induced psychosis are not collected centrally. However, data on the number of finished admissions episodes with a primary diagnosis of mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids are collected and presented in the following tables.

Count of finished admission episodes with a primary diagnosis of mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids (ICD10 code F12), since January 2011

Notes:

1. A finished admission episode (FAE) is the first period of inpatient care under one consultant within one healthcare provider. FAEs are counted against the year in which the admission episode finishes. Admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.
2. The primary diagnosis is the first of up to 20 (14 from 2002-03 to 2006-07 and seven prior to 2002-03) diagnosis fields in the Hospital Episode Statistics (HES) data set and provides the main reason why the patient was admitted to hospital. ICD10 Code used = F12 Mental and behavioural disorders due to use of cannabinoids (including cannabis).
3. Data quality—HES are compiled from data sent by more than 300 NHS trusts and primary care trusts in England and from some independent sector organisations for activity commissioned by the English NHS. The NHS Information Centre for health and social care liaises closely with these organisations to encourage submission of complete and valid data and seeks to minimise inaccuracies. While this brings about improvement over time, some shortcomings remain.
4. HES figures are available from 1989-90 onwards. Changes to the figures over time need to be interpreted in the context of improvements in data quality and coverage (particularly in earlier years), improvements in coverage of independent sector activity (particularly from 2006-07) and changes in NHS practice. For example, apparent reductions in activity may be due to a number of procedures which may now be undertaken in out-patient settings and so no longer include in admitted patient HES data.
5. Activity included—activity in English NHS Hospitals and English NHS commissioned activity in the independent sector.

Morecambe Bay Hospitals NHS Trust: Information and Communications Technology

Mr Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when development commenced on the Lorenzo IT system at University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay NHS Foundation Trust; and when he expects the system to be deployed; [84313]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) Connecting for Health staff and (b) contractors in support of the development and deployment of the Lorenzo IT system at University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay NHS Foundation Trust since the start of the project. [84315]

Mr Simon Burns: Development of the Lorenzo computer system started at University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay National Health Service Foundation Trust in August 2008. The trust has implemented the following elements of the system: Requests and Results/Clinical Documentation; Care Management and To Take Out (out-patient department) Prescribing and plans to implement the Emergency Care element in 2012. The support costs provided to date by NHS Connecting for Health staff are estimated to be £460,000 and an estimated £3,734,000 spent on contractors.

Mr Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the amount of funding from (a) Connecting for Health and (b) the NHS which has been spent to date to support the development of the Lorenzo IT system at the University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay NHS Foundation Trust; [85097]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to date to the University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay NHS Trust of the development and deployment of the Lorenzo IT system. [85100]

Mr Simon Burns: A total of £2.16 million has been provided to University Hospitals of Morecambe Bay National Health Service Foundation Trust in their role as an early adopter for release 1 and 1.9 of the Lorenzo information technology system—£1,158,660 from NHS Connecting for Health and £1,007,000 from the NHS.

These costs do not include payments for the system to the local service provider, which are only made when the deployment has been proved successful. To date, a payment of £0.3 million has been made by NHS Connecting for Health for the deployment of the first release of the Lorenzo IT system at the trust. No payments have been made for subsequent releases. Total costs payable to the supplier are dependent on which functionality is deployed at the trust.

The trust estimate their total costs to be £6.2 million from their involvement with the programme. These relate to user training, project management, additional computer equipment and additional corporate reporting tools. In addition to the £2.16 million funding from Connecting for Health and the NHS, £3.2 million funding has been provided by the local service provider, with a further £0.8 million expected before 31 March 2012.

NHS: Manpower

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of future levels of staffing in the NHS; and what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for the Home Department on the number of Tier 2 visas that may have to be issued to meet future NHS staffing needs. [84729]

Mr Simon Burns: Local national health service organisations are best placed to decide on the work force needs for their community, according to local circumstances and priorities, with assurance and challenge regionally and nationally.

The Migration Advisory Committee is consulting on policies towards skilled economic migrants from April 2012, including the level of the limits on Tier 2 visas.

The Department of Health will be responding to the consultation and will continue to work closely with the Home Office and stakeholders to ensure that the NHS is not adversely affected by the review of the Tier 2 limits.

North Bristol NHS Trust: Information and Communications Technology

Mr Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when development commenced on the Cerner Millennium IT system at North Bristol NHS Trust; and when he expects the system to be deployed; [84312]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost of (a) Connecting for Health staff and (b) contractors in support of the development and deployment of the Cerner Millennium IT system at North Bristol NHS Trust since the start of the project; [84314]

(3) how much (a) Connecting for Health and (b) the NHS has spent to support the development of the Cerner Millennium IT system at North Bristol NHS Trust since the start of the project. [84316]

Mr Simon Burns: The project to deliver the Cerner Millennium IT system at North Bristol National Health Service Trust under the BT Local Service Provider contract commenced on 26 April 2010. The trust is planning to start using the system on the 8 December 2011.

The support costs for the deployment of the Cerner Millennium IT system at North Bristol NHS Trust are estimated to be £60,887 for NHS Connecting for Health staff and £585,106 for contractors supplied via the Southern Programme for IT. These costs cover support provided to the trust for test assurance, additional testers and trainers, and extra project management. North Bristol NHS Trust has spent £3.9 million since the start of the project.

NHS Connecting for Health has not directly incurred costs for development of the Cerner Millennium IT system as the configuration of the system has taken place between the supplier, BT and their subcontractor Cerner and the trust.

Mr Bacon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how much has been (a) paid to date and (b) he expects to be paid in the future to the local service provider for the Cerner Millennium IT system at the North Bristol NHS Trust; [85098]

(2) what estimate he has made of the cost to date to the North Bristol NHS Trust of the development and deployment of the Cerner Millennium IT system. [85099]

Mr Simon Burns: No payments have been made to date to the local service provider for the Cerner Millennium information technology system at the North Bristol NHS Trust. Payment will be made 45 days after delivery of a working system, which is planned for 8 December 2011. Once the deployment has been proved successful by the trust, a one-off deployment charge of £15.2 million will be made followed by an annual service charge of £2 million, only payable while the trust continues to use the system. These figures are in 2009-10 prices.

North Bristol NHS Trust has spent £3.9 million since the start of the project for the development and deployment of the Cerner Millennium IT system.

Obesity: Females

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to reduce obesity among women. [84547]

Anne Milton: The Government are concerned about the prevalence of obesity in women. As set out in "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: A call to action on obesity in England", we are taking a life course approach with the aim of reducing levels of overweight and obesity in adults and children.

The "Call to action" sets out the key role for central Government, for local areas in developing approaches which work best for local communities and for specific population groups facing the greatest challenges, and for other partners.

A copy of the "Call to action" has already been placed in the Library.

Radiotherapy

Tessa Munt: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 27 June 2011, Official Report, column 537W, on radiotherapy, and the answer of 31 October 2011, Official Report, column 458W, on radiotherapy, how stereotactic body radiotherapy treatment will be commissioned under his proposals for the NHS. [84996]

Paul Burstow: Stereotactic body radiotherapy (SBRT) is currently commissioned as a specialised service by regional specialised commissioning groups and as informed by the specialised services national definitions set. The intention, subject to parliamentary approval, is that in the future services such as SBRT for people with rare and complex cancers should be directly commissioned by the National Health Service Commissioning Board (NHSCB).

However, no official decisions have yet been taken on what services will be directly commissioned by the NHSCB from April 2013.

Sex: Health Services

Mr Virendra Sharma: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the indicators for sexual health in the forthcoming Public Health Outcomes Framework meet the needs of women of all ages; and if he will make a statement. [84600]

Anne Milton: We are considering the consultation responses to the Public Health Outcomes Framework, which includes three indicators relevant to sexual health and we will publish that framework very soon. We will also be publishing a new sexual health policy document in spring 2012. This will consider the needs of women of all ages.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish his Department's sexual health policy document. [84607]

Anne Milton: The Department plans to publish a sexual health policy document in spring 2012. The document will set sexual health in the context of the proposed new commissioning arrangements and will promote the evidence base for improving sexual health; including behaviour change and links to wider public health issues.

Smoking

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to provide information for the public on the effects of inhaling second hand tobacco smoke. [84471]

Anne Milton: Second hand smoke is a serious health hazard, and there is no safe level of exposure. While smokefree legislation has removed second hand smoke from enclosed work and public places, people can still be exposed to it at home or in family cars.

In March, the Department published "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: A Tobacco Control Plan for England", which sets out the Government's plans to tackle tobacco use over the next five years. This plan includes our commitment to launch a national marketing campaign, planned for spring 2012, to remind smokers of the risks of exposing children and adults to second hand smoke. We want people to recognise the risks of second hand smoke and decide voluntarily to make their homes and family cars smokefree.

In addition, the NHS Smokefree website:

www.nhs.uk/smokefree contains information on the harms of second hand smoke. Materials, including leaflets, are also made available by the Department on the harms of second hand smoke for use by local areas.

A copy of "Healthy Lives, Healthy People: A Tobacco Control Plan for England" has already been in the Library.

Smoking: Motor Vehicles

Jason McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the evidence presented to the inquiry on smoking in private vehicles by the All Party Parliamentary Group on Smoking and Health. [85002]

Anne Milton: The Department has received a copy of the All Party Parliamentary Group on Smoking and Health's report on smoking in private vehicles. This report is currently under consideration.

Gordon Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the practicalities of enforcing a smoking ban in privately owned vehicles. [85164]

Anne Milton: The Department has not commissioned any specific research on the practicalities of enforcing a smoking ban in privately owned vehicles. However, the All Party Parliamentary Group on Smoking and Health recently conducted an inquiry into smoking in private vehicles. The report of that inquiry, published in November 2011, addresses regulation and enforcement issues with respect to smoking in cars. The All Party Parliamentary Group on Smoking and Health's report is currently under consideration by the Department.

CABINET OFFICE

Government Procurement

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proposals he has made to the European Commission on the simplification of EU rules on government procurement; and if he will make a statement. [83620]

Mr Maude: On 21 November 2011, I put the case to the European Commission in Brussels for a radical simplification of the public procurement directives to reduce costs for business and for procurers.

The details of our proposals are set out in the Government's response to the Commission's Green Paper on the modernisation of EU public procurement policy, which we published in July 2011. This can be found at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/sites/default/files/resources/0707UKGPpbResponsefinal%20(2).pdf

Business

Kate Green: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps he is taking to ensure that public sector spending stimulates growth in the small business sector. [84102]

Mr Maude: On 21 November 2011, I unveiled a radical package of measures that will change how Government buys from the private sector in a way that supports business and promotes growth:

Government will provide an open door for current and future suppliers to discuss forthcoming procurement opportunities, cutting the time taken in the procurement process, and working with industry to identify and address any key capabilities needed to meet future demand.

We will publish a pipeline of potential business opportunities across Government, giving an unprecedented view into the Government's expected future requirements and helping business to build the confidence to invest in plants, machinery and people.

We will work with Departments to ensure that SMEs can access the value of procurement, including where relevant encouraging or challenging prime contractors to do more, or breaking up large contracts.

We will make it 40% faster to do business with Government so that, from January, all but the most complex procurement processes will be completed within 120 working days compared to the average of 200 days now.

And we will require all civil servants responsible for running major procurements to be trained in the Government's new approach.

These measures build on the earlier initiatives to support SMEs that we announced in February.

Communities First Programme

Michael Dugher: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment he has made of the potential role of the (a) Community Organisers programme and (b) Community First scheme in tackling social exclusion. [85283]

Mr Hurd: The Government recognise that supporting the most disadvantaged is a key part of the big society approach which focuses on enabling all groups in society to be able to play their part.

The Community Organisers programme aims to stimulate and support greater social action, particularly in areas of high deprivation. Both the National Partner, Locality, and their training partner, RE:generate, have a strong history of supporting and working with people from disadvantaged backgrounds. RE:generate's method, Listening Matters, focuses on having conversations with as many people as possible to find out their issues and their opinions, thereby ensuring that everyone's voice is heard, and not just those that speak the loudest.

The Community First programme is designed to encourage people to come together to make their neighbourhood a better place to live. The focus is on building social capital, encouraging 'bonding and bridging' within and between different parts of a neighbourhood. The design of the programme is underpinned with principles from Community Organising, ensuring that improvements are community-led and that people take responsibility for those things that they can do themselves.

Federation of Small Businesses

Roger Williams: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office on how many occasions he has met the Federation of Small Businesses to discuss the role of public sector spending in stimulating small business growth. [84057]

Mr Maude [holding answer 1 December 2011]: There have been no meetings with the Federation of Small Businesses. Details of ministerial meetings with external organisations are published on the Cabinet Office website at:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/resource-library/ministerial-gifts-hospitality-travel-and-meetings-external-organisations

Government Procurement

Malcolm Wicks: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what effect the Growth Review and Procurement Review will have on ensuring that Government tenders include an assessment of the (a) jobs, (b) tax revenues, (c) potential benefits to the domestic manufacturing supply chain and (d) welfare costs associated with jobs moving overseas in assessing the value for money of bids; and whether these factors will be assessed when assessing tenders for new nuclear power stations. [81370]

Mr Maude: On 21 November 2011, I announced a new approach to ensure the huge purchasing power of Government supports the task of boosting growth, and enables the Government to actively shape the UK market for the long term.

This approach is reflected in the autumn statement and associated documentation of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, my right hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr Osborne), published on 29 November 2011. This can be found at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/as2011_index.htm

Industrial Disputes: Voluntary Organisations

Jack Lopresti: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what his policy is on encouraging voluntary groups to maintain key services during periods of industrial action. [84479]

Mr Maude: All public services are expected to have robust contingency plans in place to minimise any disruption to essential services from a wide range of challenges including industrial action. Such plans will look to reprioritise activities and resources as appropriate, manage demand, and draw in additional staffing and expertise where necessary, including from the voluntary sector.

Public Sector: Trade Union Officials

Priti Patel: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will issue a standard facility time agreement to public sector employers which sets out (a) duties which can be undertaken, (b) procedures for approval of such facilities time and (c) provision for the publication of (i) each instance of such facilities time and (ii) the cost of such time. [84623]

Mr Maude: The Government intend to commence consultation shortly with the nationally recognised civil service trade unions on facility time. The aim of the consultation is to introduce a new framework for the provision of facility time and time off for trade union activities in the civil service.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Bureaucracy

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what progress her Department has made on reducing administrative burdens for farmers; [80770]

(2) what steps her Department has taken since its announcement that farmers with the best track records on environmental protection and animal welfare could have fewer inspections. [80784]

Mr Paice: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my written statement of 3 November 2011, Official Report, columns 40-41WS and the interim response to the independent Farm Regulation Task Force, which set out the work that is being done to apply and implement the recommendations made by the task force. I was also pleased to announce changes to the animal welfare inspection regime in Great Britain at the same time, in response to the recent public consultation. In particular, that from January 2012, we will concentrate most cross compliance inspections on those farms that have the highest risk of non compliance, recognising that members of livestock assurance or organic certification schemes have been shown to be lower risk.

Biofuels: Imports

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what information her Department holds on the likely effects of importation of woody material to the UK for biomass consumption on the price of (a) wood for use in furniture and building and (b) food in exporting countries. [83031]

Mr Paice: International wood prices are determined by a number of complex variables such as the demand for wood across different sectors (e.g. paper and pulp and energy), the supply of raw material from both domestic and international sources, and exchange rate fluctuations. The international nature of the markets also makes the establishment of direct links between use patterns and prices extremely difficult. Industries that tend to use imported material will mainly be affected by fluctuations in the international prices, while those that do not have such close links with the international markets are less likely to see such strong effects.

Currently there is not enough historical data to provide firm information about the link between imported biomass for use in the energy sector and the impact on prices for other sectors. DEFRA has been working with the Department for Energy and Climate Change, the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills and other Departments, as well as representatives from industry, including the agriculture, energy, and wood panelling sectors, to understand the evidence base in this complex area.

On the domestic biomass supply side (as set out in the Woodfuel Implementation Plan of June 2011), Forestry Commission England is working to bring more existing private woodlands into active management to help supply both fuel and non-fuel markets. In addition, increased demand for bioenergy may lead to upward pressure on the price of sawdust and other coproducts from furniture makers and other wood processors.

In the short term, woody biomass imports are likely to continue to come from existing forests. If these are sustainably managed, it is unlikely that the demand from the bioenergy sector will result in significant land use change or influence food prices.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Nadhim Zahawi: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to monitor the presence of tuberculosis in camelids and the extent of any infection. [75358]

Mr Paice: There is no mandatory TB surveillance programme for camelids because they are not regarded as significant reservoirs of TB infection for other species.

There are no validated, sufficiently accurate and practical diagnostic techniques to routinely screen live camelids for TB. Surveillance for TB infection in camelids in Great Britain relies primarily on notifications of suspected cases detected during post mortem examination by private veterinarians and Animal Health and Veterinary Laboratories Agency (AHVLA) regional laboratories. Owners and their private veterinarians are under legal obligation to notify such cases to AHVLA.

The July 2011 TB Eradication programme for England includes measures to tackle TB in non-bovine farmed species, including pigs, goats, deer, sheep, alpacas and llamas.

Simon Hart: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what representations her Department has received from welfare organisations on the impact of bovine TB on the welfare and well-being of farmers and their families. [75408]

Mr Paice: In 2009 the Farm Crisis Network published a report entitled 'Stress and Loss: A report on the impact of bovine TB on farming families':

http://www.farmcrisisnetwork.org.uk/tb_support

DEFRA has since worked with this charity to set up a free business support service for TB-affected farmers.

Dangerous Dogs

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Association of Chief Police Officers on dangerous dogs. [81043]

Mr Paice: Over the last months, my noble Friend Lord Henley, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary (Lords), has met with the Assistant Chief Constable of the North Wales police force to discuss the issue of dangerous dogs. Additionally, the Association of Chief Police Officers have been engaged in stakeholder meetings, including one held most recently, on the subject of irresponsible dog ownership which was chaired by my noble Friend, Lord Taylor of Holbeach.

Devolution

Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what the outcomes were of the meeting between her Department and the devolved Ministers on 28 October 2011; whether any specific outcomes related to Northern Ireland; and if she will make a statement; [78577]

(2) what recent discussions she has had with her ministerial counterparts in the devolved administrations on Common Agricultural Policy reform. [78624]

Mr Paice: No meeting with the devolved Administration Ministers took place on 28 October. However I and my DEFRA ministerial colleagues meet with our devolved counterparts to discuss Common Agricultural Policy (CAP) and other EU matters on a regular basis. Most recently we met to discuss the Commission's package of draft CAP regulations for the next multi annual financial framework period (2014-20) in advance of the UK's response at Agricultural Council on 20 October.

The DEFRA ministerial team also met devolved Ministers with responsibility for policy areas on which DEFRA represents the UK in EU negotiations on 25 October. The meeting discussed the practicalities of working relationships on EU issues, including how to build a spirit of trust and respect, how to maximise the UK's impact on EU policy; and the specific concerns of devolved Administrations regarding the application of EU policies in their regions.

Food Supply

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what long-term assessment she has made of the prospects for UK food security in 2050 arising from the upper and lower limits of the Office for National Statistics' projected population range for 2050. [84820]

Mr Paice: The Office for National Statistics produce population projections for the UK based on a set of demographic assumptions. Their principal projection for the UK in 2050 is 78.4 million. Population projections become increasingly uncertain the further they are carried forward and the long-term figures should be treated with great caution.

Our food security depends on access to the world market; and our domestic food industry needs to be able to compete on the world stage. In a world where climate instability can disrupt patterns of production, food security cannot be delivered from a narrow, self-interested, national protectionist stance, or by recommending self-sufficiency.

Earlier this year the Government's chief scientist, Sir John Beddington, published a Foresight report into the Future of Food and Farming which looked at the challenges today and in the future. It explored how we can feed a global population of 9 billion by 2050 healthily and sustainably and identified hunger and environmental degradation as the key problems we face. The Foresight world population figures are derived from United Nations projections.

As an immediate response to the report, DEFRA have signed up to a Foresight Action Plan which will include:

- championing an integrated approach to food security;
- pressing for integration of agricultural GHGs into UNFCCC process;
- taking forward Nagoya work on international biodiversity;
- promoting the importance of sustainable intensification;
- pressing for trade liberalisation and CAP/CFP reform;
- showcasing what can be achieved on food waste reduction within the UK and share best practice; and
- increasing the productivity and competitiveness of UK food and farming and ensure that agriculture and the food sector can contribute fully to the green economy.

Forestry Commission: Termination of Employment

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much her Department has spent on exit costs for staff leaving the Forestry Commission in the last year. [84638]

Mr Paice: Following the reductions agreed at the spending review and in line with the Government's determination to tackle the national deficit, the Forestry Commission has been provided with £4.9 million this financial year from the DEFRA Modernisation Fund to support a programme of voluntary early exits, to be spent by 31 March 2012. In addition, the Forestry Commission, a non-ministerial department responsible for operating within its budget allocation, has committed £0.1 million from its own budget for voluntary early exits over this same period.

Forests

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department plans to consult on the interim findings of the independent panel on forestry. [84657]

Mr Paice: The Independent Panel on Forestry's final report is due in spring 2012, although we understand that it will publish a progress report very soon. It is for the Panel to decide on what consultation it will do as part of its work.

Gangmasters Licensing Authority

Mrs Glindon: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the possible effect of the relocation of the Gangmasters Licensing Authority from her Department to the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills on the activities of unlicensed gangmasters in the agricultural sector. [78036]

Mr Paice: There are currently no plans to relocate the Gangmasters Licensing Authority (GLA) from DEFRA to the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS). Therefore, no assessment has been made of the effect this might have.

Livestock: Waste Disposal

Roger Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department has received any evidence of harm to public health or the environment as a result of the burial of fallen stock on a farm. [R] [83931]

Mr Paice: The Department has not received any specific evidence of on-farm burial causing harm to public health or the environment since it was banned in 2003 under the EU Animal By-Products (ABP) Regulation 1774/2002 (and continued in its successor regulation 1069/2009). The ban was made on a precautionary basis influenced by the evidence provided in a number of scientific opinions from the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) and its predecessor the Scientific Steering Committee. The evidence relating to those opinions identified the following uncertainties:

- location of burial sites;
- potential for transmission of Transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies (TSEs) from specified risk material buried near the surface was poorly characterised;
- extent to which infectivity would be reduced by burial;
- penetration of prions into leachates and groundwater;
- dangers arising from "re-engineering" in areas where previous burial of TSE contaminated material had occurred.

Palm Oil

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent steps she has taken to encourage food companies to source palm oil from sustainable sources. [84747]

Mr Paice: In May 2011 DEFRA published a study which mapped UK palm oil supply chains. The project looked at how much palm oil we use, in what products, where it comes from and how much could be considered sustainable. It also looked at the potential actions that could be undertaken to move towards the UK sourcing only sustainably produced palm oil. The project involved businesses from across the industry and its report is available on the research section of DEFRA's website.

Following publication of this study, we have been investigating possible further action in two main areas:

- Work with business groups to explore options for a collaborative voluntary commitment on sustainability of UK palm oil consumption; and
- Developing the business case for including sustainable palm oil requirements in Government Buying Standards.

Reed

Brandon Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the proportion of thatching reed used in England which was sourced from the UK in each year since 2006. [82719]

Mr Paice: The Government have made no assessment of the proportion of thatching reed used or sourced in the UK.

Sky Lanterns

Mr Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress has been made on regulating the use of Chinese lanterns in order to protect livestock on farms; and if she will make a statement. [82204]

Mr Paice: We share farmers' concern about the potential risks of sky lanterns (also known as Chinese lanterns). We are continuing to work with other Departments and the agricultural industry to address them.

Our current approach is to raise public awareness of the potential dangers posed by sky lanterns (and to focus on voluntary action with the aim of influencing consumer behaviour). I wrote to the British Hospitality Association in the summer to advise its membership of hotels, restaurants and other venues of the problems they cause, principally the harm to livestock and litter and to ask that they discourage customers from using these lanterns. DEFRA also issued a press release earlier this month for bonfire night to warn people of the harm sky lanterns can cause.

We are also pursuing other voluntary options and working closely with the National Farmers Union and the Women's Farming Union as they gather the evidence necessary to justify any potential future ban. These two organisations are doing a sterling job in raising awareness of the risks posed by sky lanterns and urging support for local farmers.

In parallel, the Department for Business Innovation and Skills is raising the issue with the Commission and exploring the views of other member states.

Sustainable Development

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to tackle the challenges of population growth for sustainable development ahead of the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development; and if she will make a statement. [78804]

Mr Paice: The birth of the 'seven billionth baby' on 31 October served to emphasise the challenges that we face in providing a prosperous, sustainable future for a rapidly growing global population. Natural resources are neither inexhaustible nor free. At Rio+20 (the United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development), we must make the case for a greener global economy—showing that growth need not occur at a cost to the environment, that this growth can be inclusive, and that sustainability is the foundation for long-term prosperity. We must also make clear that the major global challenges facing us—for example, food security, environmental degradation, climate change and poverty eradication—are inextricably linked, and that we will not succeed in tackling them piecemeal.

The UK is pushing for an ambitious outcome at Rio+20—we should agree tangible actions that make a difference. Engagement and preparations are under way; we have submitted initial ideas to the UN ahead of the Conference, and are developing the UK's position and engaging with EU and international partners.

World War II: Medals

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to encourage former members of the Women's Land Army and Timber Corps to apply for the Women's Land Army and Timber Corps badge. [85319]

Mr Paice: Since the launch of the award in 2008 more than 35,000 badges have been issued to former members of the Women's Land Army (WLA) and Women's Timber Corps (WTC). DEFRA continues to receive a number of requests for badges and where the application meets the criteria, a badge will be awarded. The application form for the WLA badge is available on the DEFRA website at:

http://archive.defra.gov.uk/foodfarm/farmmanage/working/wla/

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Arts

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the current Standard Industrial Classification codes in quantifying the economic contribution of the creative industries. [84950]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Creative industries are a collection of specialised business activities reaching across the whole range of industrial sectors including:

printing and fashion in the manufacturing sector;

retail of art and antiques;

architectural and design services; and publishing and advertising.

As this group of industries is so wide and detailed the standard industrial classification system (SIC) is never going to be ideal for capturing it entirely.

The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) have policy responsibility for creative industries and, in close consultation with a number of other Government Departments including BIS, have formed a SIC-based definition. DCMS will be publishing a statistical bulletin on the creative industries on 8 December.

Debt Recovery

Caroline Nokes: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many claims have been made under the Late Payment of Commercial Debt (Interest) Act 1998 in each year since the Act was passed. [84870]

Mr Prisk: The Late Payment of Commercial Debt (Interest) Act 1998 provides suppliers with the right to claim interest for late payment and reasonable debt recovery costs.

Government do not hold a record of the number of claims as they are made by the supplier direct to the purchaser: the supplier informs the purchaser that payment is overdue and seeks both prompt payment and the claim for interest and recovery costs. It is only where the purchaser does not pay the interest and/or debt recovery costs that the supplier can then pursue their claim through the courts. Claims of this type are not centrally recorded. Guidance on late payment legislation can be found at:

www.bis.gov.uk/files/file37581.pdf

It is important to note that late payment legislation is intended to be a deterrent against late payment, not a routine way of dealing with an overdue invoice. Suppliers should therefore reference the Act and the costs of overdue payment in all invoicing to make clear to the purchaser when payment is due and the additional costs of failing to pay on time.

In that context, it is estimated that over half of UK transactions are not covered by pre-agreed terms, and Barclays estimate that only one in 10 suppliers regularly credit checks their customers. This suggests that there is much suppliers can do to improve their management of supplier relationships and that is why we have joined forces with the Institute of Credit Management and the UK's leading business representative and financial bodies to produce and promote the highly regarded Managing Cashflow guides:

www.creditmanagement.org.uk/bisguides.htm

Business: Government Assistance

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assessment he has made of the adequacy of support available for those (a) wishing to start a business and (b) running a business. [85217]

Mr Prisk: The information is as follows.

(a) The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills consulted on the effectiveness of business support delivery and what improvements could be made to the Business Link service with representatives from the Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, the Federation of Small Businesses, the Engineering Employers Federation, the Confederation of British Industry, the Federation of Private Business, the British Chambers of Commerce and the Institute of Directors, with a group of independent entrepreneurs including members of the Secretary of State's Entrepreneurs Forum, and through the business representative bodies, via workshops in every English region involving business support practitioners, providers (including enterprise agencies), local authorities and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs).

(b) Improvements identified included: a preference for advice to business provided by peer networks, professionals and intermediaries such as, accountants and banks; Government funding for targeted face to face advice to be aimed at SMEs with high growth potential; easier access to business information, advice on regulation and Government transactions on the Business Link website and the ability to personalise content; Government not to duplicate private sector provision.

On 14 November 2011 we launched a new approach to the way people receive the information, advice and guidance they need to start and grow their business. This was developed with experts in the relevant subject matter and tested with prospective SME users. The mentoring web portal was developed in conjunction with the British Banking Association.

Our new approach is based on: digital services which provide high quality information and advice, accessible when businesses need them; and face to face advice provided by business people for business people, not by the public sector. We have:

Revamped the Business Link website

www.businesslink.gov.uk

introduced two new online services; a dedicated "My New Business" area developed by experts to provide training, tools and checklists for those looking to start a business; and the new Growth and Improvement Service which will provide new tools to help businesses understand the issues they face, plus a business support and an events finder tool so businesses can find out what is available to them locally. To ensure services are readily accessible and meet a variety of needs, our services include online tools, tutorials and case studies, and will be accessible using mobile technology.

Established a national helpline to help people find what they need on the web and for those who cannot access the web.

Encouraged businesses to seek a business mentor to help them develop their business and encouraging mentoring organisations to offer access to their mentors through a mentoring portal,

Almost concluded the procurement of a new Business Coaching for Growth (BCG) Programme to enable small businesses with high growth potential to realise their potential.

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each such contract. [84743]

Mr Davey: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 17 October 2011, Official Report, column 748W, to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent Central (Tristram Hunt).

Construction: Billing

Derek Twigg: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the effect on sub-contractors of late or non-payment of bills by larger contractors in the construction industry. [84456]

Mr Prisk: The impact assessment for the Revision of the Scheme for Construction Contracts (England and Wales) Regulations 1998 Construction Contract (England) Exclusion Order 2011 estimated that commercial disputes between contractors and sub-contractors had an estimated financial cost of £40 million in 2010. The exact proportion of these disputes relating directly to late or non-payment is unknown, as is the proportion of the disputes costs that fall on sub-contractors as opposed to contractors. Amendments to the above legislation were commenced in October aimed at mitigating the cost of such disputes.

There is also evidence that payments within the construction sector are improving relative to other sectors in the UK. The pH Group, a subsidiary of Experian, provide data by industry sector in respect of days beyond term (DBT) payments, i.e. the number of days later than contract terms by which invoices were paid. The latest data show that construction was the only sector where DBT fell over the last quarter (Q3 2011) which is the second consecutive quarterly fall in DBT for the construction sector. The number of days beyond term for the construction sector is now 13.15 days, which is the second lowest (behind only the agricultural sector) out of the 11 sectors reviewed, and well below the UK average of 16.62 days.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible. [83778]

Mr Davey: The Department's contracted catering and conference supplier Baxter Storey only use pasteurised liquid egg that is bought in the UK and is Lion Brand standard. Baxter Storey do not buy non UK whole egg or liquid egg.

Information for non departmental bodies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what proportion of food sourced by (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available. [83779]

Mr Davey: The Department's catering and conference services are contracted to Baxter Storey who source the food used.

Currently 85% of all produce and 92% of indigenous produce is procured from UK food producers.

Information for non departmental public bodies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83780]

Mr Davey: The central Department's conference and catering is contracted out to Baxter Storey. Since the inception of the Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative (PSFPI) in 2003 and now the Government Buying Standard, Baxter Storey has operated a policy of full compliance in all its Government contracts.

Information for non departmental public bodies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Procurement

David Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what procedures his Department has put in place to ensure value for money on purchases; and what savings have been identified using those procedures in the last year. [82316]

Mr Davey: In August 2011, the Minister for the Cabinet Office and Paymaster General, the right hon. Member for Horsham (Mr Maude), announced that the Efficiency and Reform Group's new measures had saved £3.75 billion over 2010/11.

This impact was assessed using methodologies in the following table. The assessment has been independently verified by Government auditors who found the benefits assertions to be fairly calculated and presented.

These savings are borne out in Department accounts. The table on page 79 of the annual report and accounts 2010-11 (HC1001) reports that non-pay gross administration costs for BIS reduced from £187 million in 2009-10 to £140 million in 2010-11. Figures in this report are prepared in accordance with HM Treasury's Financial Reporting Manual for central Government Departments and associated Treasury resource accounting and budgeting guidance.

Activity and calculation method

Area	Activity description	Evidence base/calculation
Consulting	Government put in place a moratorium on new consulting spend, and extensions to existing contracts. Where spend was considered operationally critical (for example, where it might put at risk critical services) an exception process existed for Department Ministers to sign off expenditure over £20,000.	Savings are calculated by subtracting total departmental reported spend on consultancy for 2010/11 from total departmental reported spend on consultancy for 2009/10. To reduce the risk of costs shifting between categories, we also monitored expenditure on other professional services categories, including contingent labour.
Crown Commercial	Government have renegotiated deals with some of the largest suppliers to Government.	The method of calculation varies according to the initiative that yields the saving, but was based on cash releasing savings against a baseline of what would have otherwise been spent. This was often price savings against the previous price paid. Savings agreed with suppliers are recorded in memoranda of understanding as guaranteed-in-year or conditional-in-year savings. Realised savings were subsequently tracked back to departmental verification of supplier progress reports.
Contingent Labour	Government have significantly cut the number of temporary staff.	Savings are calculated by subtracting total departmental reported spend on contingent labour for 2010/11 from total departmental reported spend on contingent labour for 2009/10.
Communications	Government froze all new marketing spend unless it is an operational necessity. Where spend was proposed, ministerial sign-off was required for £20,000 or above.	Calculations compare departmental spend on marketing and advertising through COI for 2010/11 with that for 2009/10.
Centralising Procurement	Government has started to centralise spend on common goods and services to drive down prices. These savings derive from the 10 categories of expenditure targeted for centralisation, and relate to price savings through increased aggregation.	For each initiative, calculations are performed using individual benefit methodologies that set out how savings will be calculated against a 2009/10 price baseline. Evidence is management information provided by suppliers.

Activity and calculation method

Area	Activity description	Evidence base/calculation
ICT	We implemented: (a) a moratorium on all new ICT spend above £1 million; and (b) a review of all ongoing ICT commitments. Departments also reported those projects that were closed before undergoing the review.	Calculations are based on departmental reports of spend that has not proceeded. Spend that has not gone ahead in 2010/11 is recorded, as a result of stopping or reducing spend. Further, sustainable savings are targeted through the Government ICT strategy.
Major Projects	We reviewed the Government's biggest projects to see where 2010/11 costs could practically be reduced within contractual constraints, or wasteful projects stopped altogether. We have halted or curtailed spend on four projects: 14-19 Reform—£60 million, Identity Cards—£50, million Highways Agency Projects—£54 million, and Whole Farm—£5 million. We have redacted £22 million of potential double counting from these figures, that arises between this work and our supplier renegotiation work stream. £14.9 million arises from the Home Office National Identity Cards and £6.7 million from DEFRA Whole Farm.	HMT have provided assurance that the relevant amounts were removed from departmental budgets following the Major Projects-related negotiations.
Property	We put in place national property controls such that signature of new property leases or lease extensions were approved centrally. It has not always been possible to net off all costs associated with vacating buildings. However, we have also not claimed savings in respect of revenue from property disposals.	Calculations are property by property based on the amount Departments have reported saved through the Government's property database by non-renewal of property leases at lease breaks or upon lease expiry.

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84237]

Mr Davey: In 2007, the Department outsourced the assessment of what reasonable adjustments were recommended for staff with disabilities or long-term health conditions.

The Department has outsourced no other services in each of the last five years.

Derby Economic Task Force

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 3 November 2011, Official Report, column 762W, on rolling stock: procurement, if he will publish the minutes, actions and attendees of the Derby Economic Task Force meeting held on 31 October 2011. [84597]

Mr Prisk: There was not a Derby Economic Task Force meeting on 31 October. There was a sub group meeting about supply chains on that day. The Derbyshire/ Nottinghamshire Chamber of Commerce are the lead organisation.

Export Credits Guarantees

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much outstanding debt is owed to the UK through the Export Credits Guarantee, broken down by country. [84857]

Mr Davey: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Carmarthen East and Dinefwr (Jonathan Edwards), on 9 November 2011, Official Report, column 375W.

Export Credits Guarantees: Arab States

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills which sovereign states have owed money to the Export Credits Guarantee Department due to defaults by the Arab Organization for Industrialization since 1981. [84120]

Mr Davey: None.

Export Credits Guarantees: Libya

Lorely Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what projects backed by the Export Credits Guarantee Department involved exports to or investments in Libya since 2000-01. [84109]

Mr Davey: The Export Credits Guarantee Department has not supported any export contracts to or investments in Libya since 2000-01 to date.

Marine Stewardship

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources [83910]

Mr Davey: The central Department's conference and catering is contracted out to Baxter Storey who are currently sourcing 35% of fish from Marine Stewardship Council-approved sustainable sources.

I have approached the chief executives of the Department's executive agencies and they will respond to the hon. Member directly. Information for non-departmental public bodies is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Letter from David Williams, dated 5 December 2011:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills regarding what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources. (83910)

The UK Space Agency of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has procured no fish from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

The UK Space Agency are tenants in Polaris House, Swindon, in which catering services are supplied by the Research Councils UK, who have a catering contract with Baxter Storey. All food procurement is made by the catering contractor.

Letter from John Alty, dated 5 December 2011:

I am responding in respect of the Intellectual Property Office (IPO) to your Parliamentary Question tabled for 25 November 2011, asking the Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation & Skills, what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

The Intellectual Property Office (IPO) does not conduct any food related procurement activities. The IPO has access to a catering contract owned by the Office for National Statistics (ONS), for the provision of hospitality and restaurant facilities for IPO staff. ONS confirm that currently the proportion of fish procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources is zero. Therefore the proportion offish procured from marine Stewardship council approved sustainable sources is zero for the IPO.

Letter from Geoff Russell, dated 5 December 2011:

Thank you for your question addressed to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills asking the Skills Funding Agency (the Agency) what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources (83910)

Please be advised that the Agency does not directly purchase fish. Its caterers are committed to responsible sourcing and all fish products are sourced within UK and international regulatory guidelines.

Letter from Dr Vanessa Laurence CB, dated 30 November 2011:

As Director General and Chief Executive of Ordnance Survey, I have been asked to reply to your question with the information on what proportion of fish sourced by Ordnance Survey is procured from Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) approved sustainable sources.

Ordnance Survey's procurement of food is managed by a third party. Their seafood supplier is recognised as a Key Foodservice Supplier by the Marine Stewardship Council offering MSC certified products within their chain of custody framework.

It is estimated that Ordnance Survey's catering provider is currently sourcing 35% of its fish from MSC approved sustainable sources. This percentage is, I understand, likely to increase soon, as the company responsible for managing Ordnance Survey's catering facilities are currently in the process of achieving 'company wide' MSC chain of custody accreditation. In addition, I have been informed that no fish that sit in the red category of the online MSC fish database are served by our supplier.

Letter from Stephen Speed, dated November 2011:

The Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has asked me to reply to your question, what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

The Insolvency Service Executive Agency of the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills has procured no fish from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

The Insolvency Service no longer has canteen facilities.

Letter from John Hirst, dated 29 November 2011:

I am replying on behalf of the Met Office to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 25 November 2011, UIN83910 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

The Met Office itself does not procure any fish. However, catering is provided by Eurest Services at the Met Office Headquarters in Exeter. Eurest Services does not source any fish products from the Marine Stewardship Council (MSC) "Fish to Avoid" list. Moreover, I understand the majority of Eurest's fish supply has MSC accreditation and that it is currently reviewing the MSC "Fish to Eat" list against the remainder of its supply.

I hope this helps.

Letter from David Evans, dated 29 November 2011:

You tabled the following Parliamentary Question on 25 November 2011:

"To ask the Secretary of State, Department of Business, Innovation and Skills, what proportion of fish sourced by (a) his Department and (b) those agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources".

Land Registry, who are an Executive Agency within the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills, do not directly source fish however we do have one staff canteen, for which the contract for catering has been outsourced. Our catering provider sources 100 percent of the fresh fish served from Marine Stewardship Council certified suppliers.

Letter from Peter Mason, dated 30 November 2011:

I am responding in respect of the National Measurement Office (NMO) to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 25 November 2011, asking the Secretary of State, Department for Business, Innovation and Skills what proportion of fish sourced for his Department and the Agencies and non-departmental public bodies for which he is responsible are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

NMO has responsibility for its site in Teddington that also houses the National Physical Laboratory (NPL), a Government Owned Contractor Operated body. We provide restaurant and hospitality facilities for NPL and NMO through a total facilities management contract. We have received verbal assurance from the catering sub-contractor, Baxter-Storey, that 100% of the fish used in delivering the catering and hospitality service are procured from Marine Stewardship Council approved sustainable sources.

Letter from Gareth Jones, dated 28 November 2011:

I am replying on behalf of Companies House to your Parliamentary Question tabled on 25 November 2011, UIN 83910 to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills.

Companies House does not procure seafood directly but our contracted catering provider only procures fish from sustainable sources approved by the Marine Stewardship Council.

Fossil Fuels: Export Credits Guarantees

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 10 October 2011, Official Report, column 271W, on fossil fuels: export credits guarantees, whether he plans to announce his decision before the Christmas recess. [84020]

Mr Davey: No firm date has been fixed.

Government Procurement

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what contribution his Department has made towards meeting the Government's target of procuring 25 per cent. of central Government supplies from small and medium-sized enterprises. [84879]

Mr Davey: The Department in financial year 2010-11 spent £48.2 million directly with small and medium-sized enterprises, equating to 19% of total procurement spend for that period.

In September 2011, the latest period for which figures are available, the Department spent £3,789,000 directly with small and medium-sized enterprises, equating to 18.35% of total procurement spend.

Groceries Code Adjudicator Bill

Nic Dakin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he plans to increase the power of suppliers in relation to large retailers under the Groceries Code Adjudicator Bill. [83119]

Mr Davey: By enforcing and overseeing the Groceries Code, the Groceries Code Adjudicator will strengthen the position of suppliers in relation to large retailers.

Nic Dakin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (1) whether the Groceries Code Adjudicator Bill will have provision to protect the anonymity of suppliers when requesting an investigation be launched; [83120]

(2) what steps he is taking to ensure that the criteria for launching an investigation under the provisions of the Groceries Code Adjudicator Bill do not adversely affect the ability of a supplier to request an investigation anonymously. [83121]

Mr Davey: Protecting the confidentiality of suppliers who raise a complaint will be both a power and a duty of the Adjudicator.

Nic Dakin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether the Groceries Code Adjudicator will be given the ability to launch an investigation if he has reasonable grounds to suspect a breach of the Groceries Code regardless of where the evidence has originated. [83122]

Mr Davey: The Groceries Code Adjudicator will be able to launch an investigation based on information that is publicly available, or information provided by a supplier. The Government have agreed to consider the Business, Innovation and Skills Select Committee's proposals that information provided by trade bodies and industry whistleblowers should also be considered.

Manufacturing Advisory Service: Redditch

Karen Lumley: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what plans the Manufacturing Advisory Service has to provide assistance to manufacturers in Redditch; and if he will make a statement. [84823]

Mr Prisk: A new Manufacturing Advisory Service (MAS) national service will launch on 1 January 2012. The national service will be delivered locally by people who understand the dynamics of their local economies while leveraging leading edge national resources. MAS will work with the Worcester and Greater Birmingham and Solihull Local Enterprise Partnerships and regional sector bodies to ensure provision is driving local impacts, both in terms of priorities and local tailoring of services.

Manufacturing Advisory Service: Peterborough

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what plans the Manufacturing Advisory Service has to provide assistance to manufacturers in Peterborough; and if he will make a statement. [84096]

Mr Prisk: A new Manufacturing Advisory Service (MAS) national service will launch on 1 January 2012. The national service will be delivered locally by people who understand the dynamics of their local economies while leveraging leading edge national resources. MAS will work with the Cambridge and Peterborough Local Enterprise partnership (LEP) and regional sector bodies to ensure provision is driving local impacts, both in terms of priorities and local tailoring of services.

New Businesses: Capital Investment

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to encourage private sector investment in high-risk start-up businesses; and if he will make a statement. [84889]

Mr Prisk: The Government recognise that high risk, innovative start-ups have the potential for high growth and job creation.

The Government support tax incentives including the Enterprise Investment Scheme (EIS) and Venture Capital Trusts (VCTs) to encourage private investment in start-up firms. The March 2011 Budget announced changes to the rules and capacity relating to EIS and VCTs to simplify and increase the incentive for investors to use these schemes.

The Autumn Statement went even further in the targeting of relief toward start-up firms. The Seed Enterprise Investment Scheme (SEIS) which will be introduced from April 2012 aims to encourage investment into new early stage companies by providing a higher rate of income tax relief of 50% (compared to the normal EIS rate of 30%) for individuals who invest in qualifying seed companies. To kick start the scheme the Government are offering a capital gains tax exemption on any gains realised in the year 2012-13 that are invested through SEIS in the same year.

The Government continue to support the early stage market by leveraging in private investment through Enterprise Capital Funds (ECFs). ECFs invest £250,000 to £2 million in small, early stage businesses. 10 funds with a total of £250 million to invest have been established and a further £200 million has been committed to leverage an additional £100 million of private sector funding.

The Government are also supporting the development of a new £50 million Business Angel Co-investment Fund as part of a successful bid to the Regional Growth Fund. The fund will be available to invest, alongside Business Angel networks or syndicates, into eligible start-ups and is due to launch by the end of the year.

Overseas Trade: China

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what process UK Trade and Investment has put in place to track the economic plans of Chinese provinces and identify opportunities for trade for UK firms. [84535]

Mr Prisk: Identifying business opportunities for UK firms across China is a key strategic driver of UK Trade and Investment's work. One aspect is a major regional cities initiative which has identified significant opportunities for UK business across 35 Chinese regional cities.

The addition of some 50 FCO frontline staff into the China Network will also increase our reach, engagement and understanding, and allow us to build closer relationships with China's fastest-growing regions and cities in support of UK business.

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many trade shows in China UK Trade and Investment has attended; and in which provinces. [84536]

Mr Prisk: In 2011-12 there are 19 exhibitions in China in UK Trade and Investment's published Tradeshow Access Programme (TAP), comprising: eight in Beijing, eight in Shanghai, two in Guangzhou and one in Shenzhen. In addition, TAP has agreed support for individual UK exhibitors at a further 10 exhibitions: four in Shanghai, four in Shenzhen, three in Guangzhou and one in Zhuhai. UKTI officials also support UK commercial interests at other exhibitions in different parts of China according to their duties.

Postal Services: Dangerous Dogs

Michael Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what contribution he has made to the Home Office consultation on anti-social behaviour in respect of the risk posed by dangerous dogs to Royal Mail deliveries to customers. [85299]

Mr Davey: I have not made any contribution to the Home Office consultation on antisocial behaviour in respect of the risk posed by dangerous dogs to Royal Mail deliveries to customers.

I understand that this consultation closed on the 17 May 2011. It would have been an operational matter for Royal Mail to decide to contribute to the consultation, in terms of dangerous dogs, had it felt it appropriate to do so.

Private Sector: Employment

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what assistance is offered to former public sector workers to help them find work in the private sector. [83704]

Chris Grayling: I have been asked to reply on behalf of the Department for Work and Pensions.

The primary responsibility for supporting public sector workers made redundant rests with the public sector employer, supported by Jobcentre Plus as appropriate. Employers have a variety of support in place ranging from internal redeployment managers to externally contracted outplacement services. A cross Government career transitions service is also being piloted in London which provides redeployment assistance both inside and beyond the public sector.

Everybody who loses their job as a result of workforce management measures—including former public sector workers—is able to access support from the Jobcentre Plus led Rapid Response Service both during their redundancy notice period and, for those who require it, up to 13-weeks after their last day of work.

Those individuals who go on to make a claim to benefit will enter a personalised system of support within Jobcentre Plus that allows more flexibility to Jobcentre Plus. This framework allows advisers greater discretion to draw down from a flexible menu of support options that is tailored to the needs of both the individual and the local labour market.

In addition, Jobcentre Plus advisers will signpost claimants to appropriate specialised agencies which can help claimants with particular skills or professional capabilities to find relevant suitable work quickly. Jobcentre Plus advisers will also, as appropriate, signpost people to opportunities for starting up their own business through measures like enterprise clubs and/or the new enterprise allowance.

Regional Assistance: Northern Ireland

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what funding Northern Ireland has received as a result of its automatic assisted area status in each of the last three years. [84452]

Mr Prisk: This is a devolved matter which is the responsibility of the Northern Ireland Executive.

Vernon Coaker: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (1) what assessment he has made of progress with the review of automatic assisted area status for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement; [84453]

(2) what assessment he has made of the consequences to Northern Ireland of the removal of automatic assisted area status; [84454]

(3) if he will undertake an equality impact assessment of the potential effect of the removal of automatic assisted area status for Northern Ireland. [84455]

Mr Prisk: The removal of the automatic assisted area status for Northern Ireland is one of four proposed changes to the Industrial Development Act 1982. The Government's consultation covering these proposed changes closed on 2 November 2011 and we are on target to publish a response within three months of the consultation close.

An impact assessment for all four proposed changes was included at annex 3 of the Industrial Development Act Revisions consultation document. The post 2013 allocation implications for Northern Ireland of removing the automatic 100% assisted area coverage will not be known until the new Regional Aid Guidelines are implemented by the European Commission and we start to draw up the 2014-2020 assisted areas map. An economic and equality impact assessment will be undertaken at this time.

Regional Growth Fund

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to his answer of 7 November 2011, Official Report, column 112W, on Regional Growth Fund, (1) how many meetings the Ministerial Group held to consider the panel's recommendations; [81051]

(2) how many meetings took place; on which days; and which Ministers attended each meeting. [81052]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 14 November 2011]: In line with the constitutional convention of collective decision-making, and section 2 of the Ministerial Code, the Government do not disclose details of the internal process through which decisions are taken.

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2011, Official Report, columns 111-12W, on Regional Growth Fund, what the monetary value is of the provisional allocations for the successful bids to the second round of the Regional Growth Fund in each region. [81053]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 14 November 2011]: Given as follows is the regional breakdown of provisional (subject to the outcome of due diligence) allocations for winning bids to the second round of the Regional Growth Fund.

	£ million
North-west	227
North-east	93
Yorkshire and Humber	143
West midlands	100
East midlands	67
London, south-east and east of England	[1]113
South-west	88
Other bids—national	119

[1] This includes value of bids from round 1 where the number of bids is less than 2.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much successful bidders to the Regional Growth Fund have paid for the due diligence process to date; and what estimate his Department has made of the total amount that will be paid by successful bidders to complete the due diligence process. [84905]

Mr Prisk: 19 projects totalling £112 million, following the completion of due diligence, have signed final contracts and are set to deliver 924 new or safeguarding jobs and nearly 29,000 jobs in the supply chain. We expect that all projects allocated conditional allocations will complete due diligence and will start to receive their share of the £1.4 billion in the spring. The guidance has always been clear that the cost of due diligence should be met by the applicant and that due diligence costs will vary due to commercial circumstances.

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate his Department has made of the number of successful bids to the Regional Growth Fund that will receive funding in (a) 2012-13 and (b) 2013-14. [84906]

Mr Prisk: It is normal for regional growth fund funding to be paid in arrears of private sector investment and phased over several years. The majority of successful bids will receive some funding each year.

Regional Planning and Development: North-east England

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much Government funding for regional development has been provided in the North East in each year since 1996. [83401]

Mr Prisk: The following table gives total figures for Regional Selective Assistance, Selective Finance for Investment in England (SFIE) and Grant for Business Investment (GBI) provided in north-east England, combined with the funding for the One North East (ONE) regional development agency established in April 1999.

	£ million
1996/97	22.7
1997/98	36.0
1998/99	22.8
1999/2000	110.6
2000/01	121.2
2001/02	190.9
2002/03	231.5
2003/04	247.5
2004/05	251.2
2005/06	250.9
2006/07	294.5
2007/08	293.9
2008/09	267.0
2009/10	261.0
2010/11	201.1

In 2011/12 the current funding allocation to ONE, SFIE and GBI is £100.4 million. In addition, following the completion of rounds 1 and 2 of the bids under the Regional Growth Fund programme, £156.9 million has been allocated to the north-east (for spending between 2011/12 to 2013/14).

Regulation

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what best practice timescales his Department advocates for the introduction, removal or change of Government regulations. [84919]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Better Regulation Executive has issued guidance on a number of relevant components of the processes for introducing, amending or removing Government regulations. These include:

12 weeks for public consultation exercises guidance being issued twelve weeks before regulations come into effect domestic regulations affecting business coming into effect on a Common Commencement Date post-implementation review being carried out between three and five years after regulations come into effect sunset clauses having effect seven years after regulations come into effect

In practice, the total time taken for introduction, removal or change will depend on a variety of factors including the scope and complexity of the regulations, whether they are domestic or EU in origin, whether a formal public consultation is required, and the type of parliamentary procedure.

Renewable Energy: Export Credits Guarantees

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to ensure that new trade finance products offered by the Export Credits Guarantee Department are marketed and accessible to small and medium-sized renewable energy enterprises. [84010]

Mr Davey: I refer my hon. Friend for Richmond Park to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne Central (Chi Onwurah), on 9 November 2011, Official Report, column 377W.

The awareness campaign has included companies and trade associations in the renewable energy industry.

Technology and Innovation Centre

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what recent discussions he has had on the establishment of a Technology and Innovation Centre in the East Midlands. [82798]

Mr Willetts: I have had a range of discussions on the establishment of technology and innovation centres including in the east midlands.

The network of technology and innovation centres will be established and overseen by the Technology Strategy Board and, while I will follow progress on this very closely, the decision on the final technology areas, together with the location of the centres, will be made by the Technology Strategy Board following a process of detailed discussions with the business and academic communities on the basis of where there is most potential for a centre to have a catalytic effect in stimulating long-term economic growth.

Paliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85057]

Mr Davey: Figures indicate that a total of 588 named day parliamentary questions were due for answer by BIS Ministers during the period June to November 2011. 480 (82%) received a substantive reply within five sitting days from the date the parliamentary question was tabled. A total of 549 (93%) received a substantive reply either on the date stipulated by the Member, or within five sitting days from the date stipulated.

The figures have been drawn from the Department's database which, as with any large scale recording system, is subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

TREASURY

Unemployment

18. Pat Glass: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for his policies of the Office for Budget Responsibility's forecast for unemployment in 2012. [84798]

Danny Alexander: In line with a weaker outlook for GDP growth, the OBR has revised up the projected level of unemployment over the near term.

The Government are taking steps to support private sector job creation and reduce unemployment:

Reducing red tape and facilitating SME's access to finance through credit easing, helping businesses to grow and take on new workers;

Implementing reforms to help people find work including specific support for young people through the Youth Contract.

Regional Investment

20. Sarah Newton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of fiscal policy on the level of investment in the regions. [84802]

Danny Alexander: Returning the UK economy to sustainable economic growth that is more balanced across the UK and sectors is a key priority. In the autumn statement, this Government took steps to encourage investment and exports as a route to a more balanced economy.

In addition, we have continued to support investment in all places, increasing the Regional Growth Fund for England by £1 billion, plus Barnett consequentials for the devolved administrations, approving two new Enterprise Zones in Lancashire and the Humber, making 100% capital allowances available in six Enterprise Zones, and funding up to six rural growth networks.

Economic Growth

21. Karl Turner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of levels of economic growth in (a) the UK and (b) other G7 countries in the last 12 months. [84803]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Government's latest assessment of the UK economy is set out in the autumn statement. The independent Office for Budget Responsibility's Economic and Fiscal Outlook was published alongside the autumn statement.

The Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development collates GDP data for all member countries. These data show the UK economy growing in the most recent three quarters. The OECD's latest forecast shows UK GDP growing faster than that of France, Italy, and the euro area both next year and in 2013.

UK Current Account Balance

Mr Bone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the UK's current account balance with (a) the EU and (b) non-EU countries in the last year. [84788]

Miss Chloe Smith: In 2010 the UK had a current account deficit of £37 billion. This deficit results from a deficit of £52 billion with the EU and a surplus of £16 billion with non EU countries.

Bank Levy

Chris Leslie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effects of the Finance Act 2011 (Bank Levy: Amendment of Netting Agreements Provisions) Order 2011 on the revenue raised by the bank levy. [85322]

Mr Hoban: It is estimated that there is a negligible impact as the amendments simply make it clearer how the netting agreements work in respect of these transactions.

Future Jobs Fund

Julie Elliott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the effects of cancellation of the Future Jobs Fund on levels of employment. [84804]

Danny Alexander: The Chancellor of the Exchequer and I have regular discussions with the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions on the economy and levels of employment.

As announced at the autumn statement, the Government are introducing the Youth Contract which provides almost £1 billion in new funding to support up to 500,000 young people into employment and training. The Youth Contract builds on work the Government are already doing to tackle youth unemployment, including apprenticeships, work experience places and the Work programme, one of the largest payment-by-results employment programmes in the world.

The Government were right to abolish the Future Jobs Fund. It was too expensive and created too many jobs in the public and voluntary sector that were fully funded by the subsidy and therefore ceased when the subsidy ran out. The Youth Contract will create sustainable jobs in the private sector, with an estimated 160,000 wage incentive places to make it easier for private sector employers to take on young people.

Universal Credit

Stephen Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reason he has decided to extend the working tax credit hours rule but not to impose an hours rule in respect of receipt of universal credit. [85096]

Mr Gauke: Under the current tax credits system, couples with children can claim the working tax credit, if one partner works 16 hours. Lone parents must work at least 16 hours to qualify for the working tax credit. This change makes the system fairer by reducing the disparity in the number of hours which lone parents and couples are obliged to work.

In 2013, universal credit will provide a new single system of means-tested support for working-age people who are in or out of work. The key aim of universal credit is to move claimants into work, more work or better paid work (and so towards self-sufficiency). To achieve that aim, a single taper rate and a simple system of earnings disregards will allow people in work to see clearly how much support they can get while making sure that people considering a job will understand the advantages of work, thereby smoothing the transition into work, and encouraging progression in work.

While there will be no hours rules under universal credit, the clear financial incentive provided by universal credit will be backed up by a strong system of conditionality; unemployed people who can work will be required to take all reasonable steps to find and move into employment. The Government intends to apply conditionality at a higher level of income under universal credit than it does under the current benefits system. This will enable the Government to apply work-related requirements to claimants who are in some work but who we expect to earn more than they currently do, in order to reduce their dependency on benefits. This will help people along a journey toward financial independence from the state.

Building Societies

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to ensure the interests of all building societies are taken into account in his Department's financial strategy. [84931]

Mr Hoban: Ministers and officials meet regularly with the Building Societies Association and individual building societies to discuss a range of policy issues.

The Government have been working with building societies to ensure a positive outcome in European discussions on the Capital Requirements Regulation.

Building societies have been consulted on the draft Financial Services Bill, which requires the new regulatory authorities to publish an analysis of how draft rules may affect mutual and non-mutual firms differently, and makes minor amendments to the Building Societies Act.

Building societies will be consulted on any legislation introduced to implement the findings of the Independent Banking Commission report. The Government will announce their response to the report by the end of this year.

Business: Loans

Stuart Andrew: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to reduce the cost of bank lending and credit for businesses. [84801]

Mr Hoban: At the autumn statement the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the launching of a package of credit easing measures to help improve the flow of credit to businesses. The National Loan Guarantee Scheme will lead to reductions in the cost of bank loans for smaller businesses while the Business Finance Partnership will deliver additional finance for mid-sized businesses through non-bank lending channels.

Child Care Tax Credit

Stephen Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households in receipt of tax credits whose total weekly working hours are under 24 are in receipt of childcare tax credit; and how much they receive on average. [85095]

Mr Gauke: The working hours requirements for the child care element of working tax credit are 16 hours for a lone parent or 16 hours for each member of a couple (unless one member of the couple is incapacitated, in hospital or in prison). Therefore, apart from a negligible number of couples, all households working fewer than 24 hours and benefiting from the child care element of WTC would be lone parents.

The number of lone parents benefiting from the childcare element of working tax credit and working fewer than 24 hours as of April 2011 was 127,000. The average amount they received was £66 a week. These households would not be affected by the policy announced by the Government in the spending review of 2010 to restrict working tax credit for couples with children to those who work a combined minimum of 24 hours (with one member working at least 16 hours).

Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate

John McDonnell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 5 September 2011, Official Report, column 352W, on minimum wage, what recent discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues in the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills on relocation of the Employment Agency Standards Inspectorate to the national minimum wage enforcement team in HM Revenue and Customs; and whether any (a) voluntary or (b) compulsory redundancies would result from such a relocation. [77702]

Mr Gauke [holding answer 2 December 2011]: Treasury Ministers and officials have discussions with a wide variety of organisations in the public and private sectors as part of the process of policy development and delivery.

The Treasury publishes a list of ministerial discussions with external organisations, available at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/minister_hospitality.htm

Mortgage Express

George Eustice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many buy-to-let properties have been repossessed by Mortgage Express in the last 12 months. [84620]

Mr Hoban: The Government do not publish data on arrears and repossessions. The Council of Mortgage Lenders collects data on buy-to-let repossessions across the UK. Specific repossessions data for Mortgage Express is not publically available.

George Eustice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many cases concerning Mortgage Express have been referred to the Financial Ombudsman Service in the last 12 months. [84621]

Mr Hoban: The matter raised is for the Financial Ombudsman Service (FOS), whose day-to-day operations are independent from Government. The FOS publishes complaints data on their website at:

http://www.ombudsman-complaints-data.org.uk

Social Justice Committee

Michael Dugher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many meetings of the Social Justice Committee Ministers in his Department have attended since its establishment. [85281]

Miss Chloe Smith: Information relating to the proceedings of Cabinet Committees, including when and how often they meet and which Ministers have attended, is generally not disclosed as to do so could harm the frankness and candour of internal discussion.

Taxation

Nick de Bois: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent assessment he has made of the likely effect on the economy of an increase in interest rates. [84789]

Miss Chloe Smith: An increase in interest rates would be particularly damaging to an economy with the UK's level of indebtedness. A one percentage point rise in the cost of government borrowing would add around £7.5 billion to debt interest payments by 2016-17. A one percentage point rise in effective mortgage rates would add £10 billion a year to households' mortgage interest payments.

Taxation: North-west England

Hazel Blears: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of people in (a) Salford and Eccles constituency and (b) the North West who are subject to the (i) higher and (ii) additional rate of income tax. [84902]

Mr Gauke: An estimated 3.74 million taxpayers are liable to income tax at the 40% higher rate and 308,000 taxpayers are liable to income tax at the 50% additional rate in the United Kingdom in 2011-12.

In the north west, 318,000 taxpayers are liable to income tax at the 40 per cent higher rate and 18,000 taxpayers are liable to income tax at the 50% additional rate in the 2011-12

These and estimates for other UK Government Office Regions are published on the HMRC website in tables 2.1 and 2.2 which are available at the following addresses:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/table2-1.pdf

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_tax/table2-2.pdf

Reliable estimates for taxpayer marginal rates are not available at the parliamentary constituency level, due to greater uncertainties in projections for small geographical areas and small sample sizes.

These estimates are based on the 2007-08 Survey of Personal Incomes, projected using economic assumptions consistent with the Office for Budget Responsibility's March 2011 economic and fiscal outlook.

Estimates of income and tax by parliamentary constituency for 2007-08 and preceding years are available in table 3.1 5:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/income_distribution/menu-by-year.htm

VAT: Business

Robert Halfon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider extending VAT exemptions for VAT-registered businesses in the construction industry building new properties to small firms in other sectors; and if he will make a statement. [84799]

Mr Gauke: It is not possible to extend existing VAT zero rating to the construction of commercial properties under EU law.

However, it should be remembered that a VAT registered business that is charged VAT on the construction of a new property will be able to recover the tax, subject to the normal VAT rules.

Gordon Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made by the Office of Tax Simplification in reviewing the VAT threshold for business registrations. [85318]

Mr Gauke: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the Office of Tax Simplification (OTS), and I have asked the OTS to reply.

Letter from John Whiting, dated 2 December 2011:

Gordon Banks MP has submitted a written parliamentary question about the VAT threshold for business registrations. The question was:

"To ask Mr Chancellor of the Exchequer, what progress has been made by the Office of Tax Simplification in reviewing the VAT threshold for business registrations."

The OTS's interim report on small business taxation was published on 10 March 2011. The report included a short section (paragraphs 4.61-4.66) on VAT, which did address the question of the registration threshold. Our conclusion was: "On balance we think the registration threshold should stay as it is, though it is an area that is worth further study."

The Chancellor responded to this report in Budget 2011, and commissioned the OTS to look into tax administration in their final report on small business taxation. On 9 May 2011, the Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury wrote to the OTS Chairman, Rt Hon Michael Jack, outlining the Government's response and setting out priorities for the next stage of the Office's work in more detail[1].

[1] This letter has been published on the OTS website:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/ots_xstletter_small_business_tax_review_090511.pdf

As set out in the Exchequer Secretary's letter, the remit of the work on tax administration will require the OTS to "examine closely small businesses1 experience of tax administration and their contact with HMRC at key stages of their annual cycle" and to "give specific consideration of the issues involved in starting and growing a new business." The terms of reference for this work are attached in the annex of this document.

Since the interim report on small business taxation, the OTS has been gathering evidence and conducting research to determine the areas of tax administration that ought to be prioritised. As highlighted in the interim report, the OTS is interested in the administrative difficulties, including those related to VAT and international trade, which pose particular problems for small businesses. The operation of VAT registration is, therefore, very much within the remit, although we understand that HMRC is already working hard to improve the registration process. The OTS has not, however, been asked to review the VAT registration threshold limit.

The OTS has been asked to deliver recommendations on tax administration for small business ahead of Budget 2012. We would be happy to inform the questioner when the report is published.

I hope this is helpful, and would like to thank Mr Banks for his interest in our work.

VAT: Charities

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what his policy is on reviewing the charging of irrecoverable value added tax for charities providing healthcare services; and if he will make a statement. [84685]

Mr Gauke: HM Treasury officials are currently reviewing the VAT position of charities providing health care services and discussions between the sector and the Department are ongoing.

Welfare Tax Credits: Uprating

Rachel Reeves: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the public purse of uprating tax credits using a consumer prices index level of (a) 2.5, (b) 3, (c) 3.1, (d) 3.5, (e) 4, (f) 4.3, (g) 4.5, (h) 4.6, (i) 4.9, (j) 5.1 and (k) 5.2 per cent. in 2012-13. [82750]

Mr Gauke: As of the June Budget 2010, most tax credit elements are uprated by CPI each year. By convention, the CPI for September 2011 would be used to uprate these elements in 2012-13. The official ONS estimate for CPI for September 2011 is 5.2%.

The following table gives the estimated savings against this baseline for 2012-13 if CPI were to be at the specified levels.

Savings in 2012-13 of different uprating percentages in 2012-13 for the elements that are currently uprated by CPI

Uprating	£ million
5.2%	0
5.1%	neg
4.9%	40
4.6%	130
4.5%	170
4.3%	200
4%	270
3.5%	400
3.1%	490
3%	500
2.5%	630

In this comparison, we have assumed the following tax credit elements are uprated by CPI in 2012-13:

Working tax credit

Disability element

Severe disability element

Child tax credit

Child element

Disabled child element

Severely disabled child element

This answer assumes the couple and lone parent elements of working tax credit are frozen in 2012-13, as announced in the autumn statement 2011. In addition, the basic and 30 hour elements of working tax credit are frozen for three years from 2011-12, as announced at spending review 2010.

Working Tax Credit

John Mann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people receive working families tax credit in each constituency; and what the total amount paid was. [84846]

Mr Gauke: The latest information on the number of households in receipt of child tax credit and working tax credit and average award sizes in each constituency can be found in table 3 of the HMRC statistical publication "Child and Working Tax Credits Statistics: finalised annual awards 2009-10-geographical analysis", available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/personal-tax-credits/cwtc-geog-final-awards-may11.pdf

SCOTLAND

Departmental Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time employees his Department and its predecessor had in each year since 1997. [84683]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office was established on 1 July 1999. Information on staff numbers is routinely published in the Office's annual report, copies of which are in the House Library. A breakdown of part-time staff is not provided as identification of individuals may be possible in view of the numbers involved.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether any senior staff in his Department are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85072]

David Mundell: No senior staff in the Scotland Office are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary.

Festivals and Special Occasions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether his Department provided support to any organisations celebrating St Andrew's Day in 2011. [84875]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office supported the Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland's annual St Andrew's tide visit to London. The Advocate-General and I attended a St Andrew's Day service in the Chapel of St Mary Undercroft at Westminster before the Advocate-General hosted a lunch in Dover House to mark the occasion.

Details of a St Andrew's Day concert by Ian McFarlane held in the Banqueting House, Whitehall were circulated to Scotland Office staff in Dover House should they wish to attend.

A number of Whitehall Departments flew the Saltire flag on St Andrew's Day.

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department took to (a) mark and (b) promote St Andrew's Day in 2011. [84897]

David Mundell: The Secretary of State for Scotland, the right hon. Member for Berwickshire, Roxburgh and Selkirk (Michael Moore), was in Brazil on St Andrew's Day promoting Scotland's business and exports. He was guest of honour at a St Andrew's Day reception at the United Kingdom consul's residence in Sao Paulo, and he issued a celebratory St Andrew's Day message via the media.

The Advocate-General and I attended the St Andrew's Day service in the Chapel of St Mary Undercroft at Westminster. Following this, the Advocate-General hosted the annual Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland's lunch in Dover House to mark the Moderator's annual St Andrew's tide visit to London. I also attended the lunch.

Sovereignty

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) letters and (b) emails his Department has received on holding a referendum on independence for Scotland in the last 12 months. [84672]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office has received (a) 29 letters and (b) 11 e-mails on holding a referendum on independence for Scotland in the last 12 months.

TRANSPORT

A14: Cambridgeshire

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate she has made of the likely effects of the proposed expenditure on the A14 in Cambridgeshire on (a) levels of congestion, (b) average travel times and (c) the number of accidents. [84712]

Mike Penning [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The £20 million package was developed from a list of Highways Agency and local authority proposed scheme ideas which are considered most likely to reduce congestion and travel times and improve safety and resilience on the A14 in the short term. Proportionate and quantified assessment of the benefits of the measures will be carried out as part of the pre-implementation preparations to ensure the schemes are optimally designed and offer value for money.

A31: Dorset

Annette Brooke: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if she will take steps to reduce the length of time that all side roads from the Canford Bottom roundabout will be closed during the current construction works; [85627]

(2) what estimate she has made of the length of time during which all side roads from the Canford Bottom roundabout will be closed during the current construction works. [85628]

Mike Penning: Revisions to the programme of the current construction works at the Canford Bottom roundabout have reduced the total length of time the side roads will be affected from 12 to eight weeks.

Due to the phasing of this work, Ham Lane/Wimborne Road West (Ferndown side) will be closed for two weeks. All side roads are then closed for four weeks, followed by closure of Canford Bottom/Wimborne Road West (Wimborne side) for two weeks.

Further to our meeting on 5 December 2011, the Highways Agency is looking at ways to further reduce the time the side roads will be closed. They are investigating extended hours or 24/7 working, although this will have to be considered with the likely disruption to local residents.

Aviation: Training

Nadine Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether she has any plans to increase the levels of regulatory protection for students on flight training courses who have paid large sums in advance for their courses; [85166]

(2) whether she has any plans to increase the regulatory powers of the Civil Aviation Authority in respect of the financial situation of flight training schools. [85167]

Mrs Villiers: There are currently no plans to change the level of regulatory protection for students of Flight Training Organisations (FTO) in the UK, or the Civil Aviation Authority's powers in respect of the financial oversight of approved FTOs.

Cardiff Airport

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions she has had with the Welsh Government on the future of Cardiff airport. [84723]

Mrs Villiers: DFT Ministers have not had any recent discussions with the Welsh Government regarding the future of Cardiff airport.

The Government are currently developing a sustainable framework for UK aviation. In March we published a scoping document to initiate a dialogue with a wide range of stakeholders on the future direction of aviation policy, in response to which the Welsh Government have submitted their views.

Departmental Disciplinary Proceedings

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff of her Department have been disciplined due to drug offences in the last 12 months. [83316]

Norman Baker: The central Department and six of its executive agencies can confirm that there have been no cases where a member of staff has been disciplined due to drug-related offences. The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency is not able to answer as it would incur disproportionate costs.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any senior staff in (a) her Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if she will publish her policy on such payments. [85071]

Norman Baker: No senior staff in the Department for Transport, its executive agencies or non-departmental public bodies are paid in this way. Our policy is to pay all staff through payroll, by automatic bank transfer.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which services her Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84229]

Norman Baker: No contracts have been outsourced by the Department for Transport since April 2006.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85045]

Norman Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 576W, to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Jon Trickett).

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the session. Statistics relating to Government Department's performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Heathrow Airport

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will commission research into the effect on the economy of not constructing a third runway at Heathrow airport. [84118]

Mrs Villiers: The coalition Government have made absolutely clear their opposition to a third runway at Heathrow.

We want to see a successful aviation sector which facilitates economic growth and addresses its environmental impacts. We will issue a Sustainable Framework for UK Aviation for public consultation in spring 2012.

Intercity Express Programme

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many Intercity Express Programme carriages will enter service in each of the next 10 years. [82161]

Mrs Villiers: The Department for Transport is currently conducting commercial discussions with Agility Trains. The precise numbers of carriages and their rate of delivery will remain under negotiation as the contract moves towards financial close.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when she plans to answer the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 20 October 2011 with regard to Mr T Dowden. [85146]

Justine Greening: I replied to the right hon. Member on 15 November 2011.

Motor Vehicles: Lighting

Yasmin Qureshi: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps her Department is taking to prevent the unnecessary use of fog lights in conditions of good visibility. [85674]

Mike Penning: The use of front or rear fog lamps is prohibited other than in conditions of seriously reduced visibility. Enforcement of road traffic law is a matter for the police. However, guidance on the correct use of fog lights is also provided in the Highway Code, which advises that seriously reduced visibility is when the driver cannot see further than 100 metres (328 feet).

To help prevent rear fog lamps inadvertently being left on, they must be designed to automatically switch off when all other lamps are turned off and then to remain off until deliberately switched on again. Alternatively an audible warning must be given if the driver leaves the vehicle with the rear fog lamps on.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether her Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84200]

Norman Baker: The Department for Transport primarily uses postcodes for the postage of mail. Other uses of postcodes can include identification of local driving test centres, creation of property records and for journey planning purposes. However, wider use of postcode data is not centrally recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Railways

Steve Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the potential of magnetic levitation technology for use in the next generation of high-speed trains. [84886]

Justine Greening: Work by the Department for the 2007 White Paper, "Delivering a Sustainable Railway", found that magnetic levitation technology would be significantly more expensive than high-speed rail and would not enable trains to run seamlessly onto existing inter-city routes, serving a wider range of destinations. The few instances of magnetic levitation systems in use around the world operate on a relatively short point-to-point basis and scaling the technology up to a national network is unproven. There are no plans to further consider magnetic levitation as an alternative to a high-speed rail network.

Steve Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations she has received on the use of MagLev trains in the UK. [84887]

Justine Greening: The Department for Transport regularly receives correspondence regarding a range of technologies, including the use of MagLev trains in the UK. Since my appointment I have not met with any promoters of such technology.

Shipping: Rescue Services

Dr Wollaston: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether her Department has conducted a cost-benefit analysis of the withdrawal of emergency towing vehicle funding comparing the south-west of England and the north-west of Scotland. [82407]

Mike Penning: The decision to withdraw the emergency towing vessels (ETVs) was part of the comprehensive spending review package announced in October 2010, and reflected the Government's judgment about the balance of risk of pollution around the UK coast in the event of a maritime accident. This decision was based on the then current running costs of the ETV contract, and the determination that the costs of any future pollution incident will be borne by the polluter on a cost recovery basis. There was no specific cost-benefit analysis comparing the south-west of England and north-west of Scotland.

Thameslink: Rolling Stock

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 31 October 2011, Official Report, column 419W, on the Thameslink Railway Line: rolling stock, what assessment her Department made of the effect on employment of the decision to establish Siemens plc and XL Trains as preferred bidder for the Thameslink Rolling Stock contract. [85278]

Mrs Villiers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 11 July 2011, Official Report, columns 205-6W, to the question from the right hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr Denham)

Transport: Infrastructure

Richard Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the additional road and rail infrastructure required to meet demand at existing standards for the (a) upper and (b) lower limits of the population forecast by the Office for National Statistics by 2050. [85463]

Mrs Villiers: I refer my hon. Friend to my answer of 14 November 2011, given to the hon. Member for Kilmarnock and Loudoun (Cathy Jamieson), Official Report, column 580W.

Transport: Snow and Ice

Maria Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when (a) she, (b) other Ministers in her Department and (c) officials in her Department last met representatives of the Independent Review of Winter Resilience. [81216]

Norman Baker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 24 May 2011, Official Report, columns 581-2W. No further meetings have taken place between the Department for Transport and the Independent Review of Winter Resilience panel members, who published their final report on 22 October 2010, and disbanded as a panel following the fulfilment of their terms of reference at the end of 2010.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Departmental Flags

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which flag or flags are routinely displayed outside each of his Department's overseas (a) posts and (b) residences. [84588][1]

Mr Bellingham: The information requested is as follows:

(a) The general rule is that the relevant flag—as follows—should be flown at post on all working days during office hours, depending on which country the posts are located in and the type:

Diplomatic flag—this is the Union flag with the Royal Arms in the centre surrounded by a green garland.

Consular flag—this is the Union flag with the St Edward's Crown in the centre on a white disc . It is only flown at consular posts in foreign countries.

Union flag—this is flown in Commonwealth countries.

European flag—the display of the European flag is a courtesy rather than a requirement. On Europe day (9 May), posts in EU and EU-applicant countries should display the European flag. Other posts may also display the flag on Europe day where this is normal local practice. UKREP Brussels displays the European flag at all times. All posts may display the flag at other times where this is normal local practice.

In all cases, the European flag is displayed alongside, not instead of, the British Diplomatic, Consular or in Commonwealth countries the Union flag, with the British flag having precedence.

Overseas Territories—The personal flag of an Officer Administering the Government (OAG) in an Overseas Territory is the Union flag, superimposed in the centre with the approved arms or badge of the Territory on a white disc surrounded by a green garland. It is flown from sunrise to sunset at Government House when the OAG is in residence. If he/she is not, the flag is flown wherever he/she is in the Territory.

The Union flag is flown from sunrise to sunset at Government House when the OAG is not in residence. It is also flown there if he/she has placed the residence entirely at the disposal of an important visitor, e.g. a member of the royal family.

UK national flags—three of the four constituent countries of the United Kingdom have their own national flags: the St Andrew's, St David's, and St George's flags. (Northern Ireland is currently without a national flag, pending a new design.) These flags may be flown on the appropriate national day. Posts also have discretion to fly them when special circumstances/events dictate, e.g. the visit of a Minister from a devolved Administration.

London 2012—The International Olympic Committee and the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games gave permission for posts overseas to fly the London 2012 host country flag on key dates in 2012 and for the duration of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, which the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond (Yorks) (Mr Hague), has supported. The dates in question are as follows:

9 January 2012: 200 days to go—Olympics

11 February 2012: 200 days to go—Paralympics

18 April 2012: 100 days to go—Olympics

10 May 2012: Lighting of the Olympic flame

17 May 2012: Handover of the Olympic flame

18 May 2012: Arrival in the UK of the Olympic flame

21 May 2012: 100 days to go—Paralympics

27 July to 12 August 2012 inclusive: Olympic Games

29 August to 9 September 2012 inclusive: Paralympic Games.

Posts are only permitted to fly the 2012 flag on those agreed dates above, but can display it in their reception areas at other times. Again the British Diplomatic, Consular or the Union flag, will take precedence.

1. [Official Report, 15 December 2011, Vol. 537, c. 3MC.]

(b) The general rule for flying the relevant flags listed above at Residencies is that they should be flown on the following British anniversaries, during the visit of one of Her Majesty's ships or on days of local celebration or mourning.

British Anniversaries:

20 January: birthday of HRH the Countess of Wessex

6 February: Her Majesty's Accession

19 February: birthday of HRH the Duke of York

1 March: St David's day

10 March: birthday of HRH the Earl of Wessex

17 March: St Patrick's day

March (second Monday): Commonwealth day

21 April: birthday of Her Majesty

23 April: St George's day

9 May: Europe day[1]

2 June: Coronation day

10 June: birthday of HRH the Duke of Edinburgh

June (second Saturday): official celebration of Her Majesty's birthday

17 July: birthday of HRH the Duchess of Cornwall

15 August: birthday of HRH the Princess Royal

November (second Sunday):Remembrance day

14 November: birthday of HRH the Prince of Wales

20 November: Her Majesty's wedding anniversary

30 November: St Andrew's day.

[1] The Union flag should fly alongside the European flag. On Government buildings that only have one flagpole, the Union flag should take precedence.

Iran: Baha'i Faith

Robert Halfon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received of attempts to prevent Bahais in the Iranian city of Sanandaj from attending gatherings; and if he will make a statement. [85177]

Mr Bellingham: We are aware of the deeply concerning reports that Baha'is are being prevented from attending regular planned gatherings and are being threatened. This is a flagrant breach of Iran's commitments under international law to protect freedom of religion, and forms part of a wider pattern of harassment of Baha'is in Iran, including the imprisonment of their leaders. We have regularly raised these issues with the Iranian authorities, for example when the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, my hon. Friend the Member for North East Bedfordshire (Alistair Burt), met the Iranian chargé d'affaires in August this year. Following the storming of the British embassy in Tehran on 29 November, the UK has downgraded diplomatic relations with Iran. However, we will continue to press the Iranian Government to accord all Iranian citizens the right to freedom of religion. With our EU partners, the UK has taken co-ordinated action to address Iran's human rights record, imposing travel bans and asset freezes on over 60 Iranians responsible for human rights violations, including Government Ministers and members of the judiciary.

Palestinians: Overseas Aid

Mrs Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to urge the Israeli government to (a) lift the restrictions on aid to Gaza and (b) allow the free entry of medical equipment and drugs. [85008]

Mr Bellingham: We are aware that from a list of 460 essential drugs, Gaza's Ministry of Health medical store is currently missing 170 items, including drugs used to strengthen the bones of cancer patients and other types of cancer-related drugs.

According to an UN Office for the Co-ordination of Humanitarian Affairs report that was published in August 2011, as of the end of August, approximately one third of the items in the essential drug list and 27% of the medical disposable items were at "zero level" at the Central Drug Store in the Gaza Strip. These shortages directly affect the delivery of health services at facilities run by the Ministry of Health, which provide 40% of primary health care and 80% of hospital care services.

We continue to work closely with the Quartet and EU partners, and to call on Israel to ease restrictions on access including access to humanitarian and medical supplies. Our ambassador in Tel Aviv raises these concerns regularly with Israeli authorities. It was also formally raised by the UK at the Ad Hoc Liaison Committee meeting of donors in New York on 18 September both in the plenary session and in bilateral meetings with the Israeli delegation in the margins of the main event.

Somalia: International Assistance

Mark Lazarowicz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what issues the Government expects to be on the agenda at the international conference on Somalia in 2012; and if he will take steps to ensure that the famine and humanitarian access for international agencies and non-governmental organisations will be included on that agenda. [85150]

Mr Bellingham: The London conference on Somalia on 23 February will seek to deliver a new, action-oriented international approach to Somalia to support and build on the progress being made on the ground.

We want the conference to agree a series of practical measures to support Somalia, including ways to address humanitarian issues.

Somalia: Piracy

Mr Crausby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the cost to the economy of piracy off the coast of Somalia. [85169]

Mr Bellingham: The turnover of the British shipping industry is worth £10.7 billion of our national GDP; nearly $1 trillion of trade to and from Europe travelled through the Gulf of Aden in 2008 and this is the second busiest international trade route in the world. One World Future has estimated that piracy could be costing the global economy up to $12 billion a year in direct costs and indirect costs such as increased insurance premiums.

Britain is playing a leading role in the counter-piracy operations at sea, and we are leading international work with regional countries to build penal, judicial and law enforcement capacities in support, with more than 1,000 pirates now in custody. The first line of defence remains self-defence measures by ships to minimise the risk of a successful highjack. But the long-term solution lies on land, with rule of law and increased stability.

West Bank: Trees

Mrs Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the removal of olive trees in the West Bank; and if he will assess the effects of such removals on the livelihood of Palestinian families. [85007]

Mr Bellingham: The UK Government fully appreciate that attacks on olive groves are particularly painful to Palestinians, as the olive tree is both a national symbol and the sole source of income for many subsistence farmers. We have raised our concerns about these various issues with the Coordinator of Government Activities in the Occupied Palestinian Territories and with the Israeli Defence Force. Our staff at the British Consulate General in Jerusalem and British embassy in Tel Aviv will continue to raise these issues as appropriate.

We view any attempts to change the facts on the ground as a serious provocation likely to raise tensions and cause unnecessary suffering to ordinary Palestinians, as well as being harmful to the peace process and in contravention of international law. We will continue to monitor the situation closely.

JUSTICE

Applied Language Solutions

Mr Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2011, Official Report, columns 544-5W, on Applied Language Solutions, (1) whether the statement in that answer that the assessment of creditors of Applied Language Solutions (ALS) falling due within one year is nil is reconcilable with ALS' 2009-10 accounts, which show creditors with debts falling due within one year as £1.926 million; [84296]

(2) what the criteria were which his Department used in making its choice of provider; and for what reason Applied Language Solutions was chosen as the provider. [84427]

Mr Blunt: The answer provided previously was in response to a question which the Department considered to relate specifically to mezzanine funding, which is a hybrid of debt and equity funding.

In more general terms, a financial assessment of Applied Language Solutions considered the company to be financially viable with a profitable position. At the time these issues were considered, it was known that the solution would be a one-stop shop facility that could be delivered by one or more companies. Small and Medium Enterprises, including Applied Language Solutions, with reasonable financial positions and scalable solutions were therefore considered suitable.

The criteria used to determine the choice of provider were: Service 30%, Innovation 10%, Quality 25%, Assurance of Supply 30% and Sustainability 5%. In financial terms, the Ministry of Justice had determined it would accept the lowest priced, affordable and compliant tender, i.e. there would be a minimum threshold of 80% for the non-price criteria above which the lowest priced tender would be selected. Applied Language Solutions met the criteria and submitted the lowest priced tender.

Civil Disorder

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 17 October 2011, Official Report, columns 63-4W, on civil disorder, if he will commission research to ascertain the number of compensation orders issued in relation to the persons convicted of offences relating to the public disorder in August 2011. [82117]

Mr Blunt: Information on compensation orders is routinely collected from the courts and published annually in Criminal Justice Statistics.

There are currently no plans to commission specific research to ascertain the number of compensation orders issued in relation to the persons convicted of offences relating to the riots in August 2011.

On 24 October 2011 the Ministry of Justice published a statistical bulletin which provided updated information on those brought before the courts for offences relating to the public disorder. Information on numbers brought before the courts, initial outcomes and sentencing was based on data available by midday on 12 October 2011. This report can be found on the Ministry of Justice website at:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/statistics-and-data/criminal-justice/public-disorder-august-11.htm

On the same day the Home Office also released an overview of recorded crimes and arrests resulting from the disorder:

http://www.homeoffice.gov.uk/publications/science-research-statistics/research-statistics/crime-research/overview-disorder-aug2011/

Harassment

Jeremy Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many complaints about harassment under section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 were dealt with by (a) a caution, (b) a fixed penalty notice and (c) an official warning in each year since 2005. [81684]

Mr Blunt: Data are available on the number of offenders cautioned under section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 and section 32 of the Crime Disorder Act 1998 in England and Wales, 2005 to 2010 (latest available). It can be viewed in the following table.

Under section 32 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 a person is guilty of an offence of racially or religiously aggravated harassment if they commit an offence under section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 which is racially or religiously aggravated (as defined in section 28 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998).

Fixed penalty notices (penalty notices for disorder) are not available for offences committed under section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997 or section 32 of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998. A caution is a formal warning for a criminal offence; therefore, we have interpreted the request for information on official warnings to mean cautions.

Court proceedings data for 2011 are planned for publication in the spring 2012.

Offenders cautioned[1,2] for offences under section 2 of the Protection from Harassment Act 1997, England & Wales, 2005-10[3]

Statute	2005	2006	2007	2008[4]	2009	2010
Protection from Harassment Act 1997, section 2[5]	3,055	3,500	3,560	3,668	3,535	3,277
Crime and Disorder Act 1998, s.32[6]	105	117	90	87	89	18

[1] The cautions statistics relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When an offender has been cautioned for two or more offences at the same time the principal offence is the more serious offence.
[2] From 1 June 2000 the Crime and Disorder Act 1998 came into force nationally and removed the use of cautions for persons under 18 and replaced them with reprimands and warnings. These figures have been included in the totals.
[3] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[4] Excludes data for Cardiff magistrates court for April, July and August 2008.
[5] Includes: Offence of harassment.
[6] Offences under Crime and Disorder Act 1998, s.32:
Racially aggravated offence of harassment
Religiously aggravated offence of harassment
Racially or religiously aggravated offence of harassment

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when he plans to answer the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 25 October 2011 with regard to Mr M Aslam. [85147]

Mr Kenneth Clarke: I have now replied. I apologise for the delay.

Parole

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) how many determinate cases were (a) considered and (b) recommended by the Parole Board in each year between 1996-97 and 2010-11; [83430]

(2) how many prisoners were on parole from determinate sentences in each year between 1996-97 and 2010-11. [83431]

Mr Djanogly: Table 1 as follows shows the number of determinate cases considered and recommended for release by the Parole Board each year. These figures are published annually in the Parole Board annual report.

Table 2 below shows the average number of prisoners on parole from determinate sentences each year. These figures are published annually in the Parole Board annual report.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Following changes in sentencing legislation introduced in the Criminal Justice Act 2003, prisoners serving a determinate sentence for an offence committed after 4 April 2005 are now released automatically at the half-way point of their sentence and their cases no longer go before the Parole Board to decide. The number of determinate cases being referred to the Parole Board by the Lord Chancellor and Secretary of State for Justice, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Rushcliffe (Mr Clarke), has therefore fallen significantly in recent years.

The cases which continue to be referred to the Parole Board are of prisoners who were sentenced to very lengthy determinate sentences for offences committed before 4 April 2005 and who are therefore likely to have committed more serious offences. They are also likely to have been seen by the Parole Board on at least one previous occasion and turned down for release. The release rate has therefore also fallen in recent years reflecting the increasing seriousness of the cases being considered.

Table 1: Determinate sentence parole reviews and decisions 1996-97 to 2010-11

	Cases considered	Parole granted	Percentage parole granted
1996-97	4,899	1,761	36

2007-08	3,390
2008-09	2,400
2009-10	1,263
2010-11	652

Note:
Figures for 1996-97 to 2002-03 are rounded to the nearest 100

Prisoners: Compensation

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many claims were made by prisoners for compensation in each of the last five years; what proportion of such claims were unsuccessful; and how many claims were (a) settled out of court and (b) resolved as a consequence of a court judgement. [84420]

Mr Blunt: Prisoners may seek compensation through internal complaints procedures, correspondence, civil litigation and through the parliamentary and prison and probation ombudsman. To provide the information requested would require a trawl through thousands of individual complaint/letters received at each prison site and in MoJ headquarters. This could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Prisoners: Repatriation

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many foreign nationals of each country of origin serving custodial sentences have been repatriated since May 2010. [81392]

Mr Blunt: From May 2010 to 8 November 2011 a total of 57 prisoners have been repatriated from England and Wales to their country of origin to continue serving custodial sentences.

The following table sets out the breakdown of countries where the prisoners transferred.

Country	Number of prisoners transferred
Belgium	3
Bermuda	1
Canada	1
Cyprus	1
Czech Republic	5
Ecuador	1
Ghana	1
India	1
Lithuania	1
Netherlands	25
Pakistan	4
Poland	1
Portugal	3
Slovenia	1
Spain	2
Sri Lanka	1
Turkey	5

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice for what category of crimes each foreign national prisoner serving a custodial sentence was convicted in the most recent period for which information is available. [81393]

Mr Blunt: As at 30 September 2011 there were 7,555 foreign national prisoners serving sentences in prison establishments in England and Wales. The following table shows the breakdown by offence group.

	Number
Violence against the person	1,769
Sexual offences	1,015
Robbery	708
Burglary	315
Theft and handling	538
Fraud and forgery	432
Drug offences	1,748
Motoring offences	105
Other offences	878
Offence not recorded	47
Total	7,555

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Prisons: Manpower

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the staffing level in each prison in England and Wales was in October (a) 2009, (b) 2010 and (c) 2011. [81507]

Mr Blunt: Information on the number of directly employed staff at each Prison Service establishment in England and Wales on 31 October 2009, 2010 and 2011 is contained in the following table:

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Disorder

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether her Department expects to meet all the unplanned spending involved in policing recent incidents of public disorder, including the costs of (a) police overtime, (b) cancelling police leave and (c) drafting in officers from other forces; and if she will make a statement. [70670]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 8 September 2011]: There is an established system of special grants in place to support forces where they face unexpected or exceptional costs.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect public disorder in August 2011 in England and Wales will have on police funding. [71147]

Nick Herbert: There is already an established system of special grants in place to support forces where they face unexpected or exceptional costs. It is up to individual forces if they wish to apply for a special grant and all applications will be considered. Discussions between Home Office officials and police authorities have been ongoing and applications will be reviewed as quickly as possible.

EU Law

Chris Heaton-Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in respect of which EU measures the Government is able to notify the Council that it does not accept the powers of the European Commission and the Court of Justice of the European Union, under Article 10(4) of Protocol (No 36) on Transitional Provisions annexed to the EU Treaties; and what EU proposals or adopted measures would amend or repeal any such measures. [85004]

James Brokenshire: The provisions of Article 10(1) and the notification under Article 10(4) of the Protocol on Transitional Provisions apply to acts of the Union in the field of police co-operation and judicial co-operation in criminal matters which have been adopted before the entry into force of the Lisbon Treaty on 1 December 2009 where those acts have not subsequently been repealed, annulled or amended.

Officials are currently finalising the list of measures which the Government anticipates will fall within the scope of this notification and this will be available to Parliament shortly. At the same time we will also provide Parliament with the latest list of EU proposals and adopted measures which will repeal and replace or amend measures which fall within the scope of the Article 10(4) notification.

Independent Police Complaints Commission

Mr Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many full-time equivalent staff the Independent Police Complaints Commission expects to employ in (a) 2011-12 and (b) 2012-13; [81350]

(2) how many full-time equivalent staff were employed by the Independent Police Complaints Commission as (a) investigators, (b) deputy senior investigators and (c) senior investigators in each financial year since 2004-05; [81351]

(3) how many full-time equivalent staff were employed in the Strategy and Communications Directorate of the Independent Police Complaints Commission in each financial year since 2004-05. [81352]

Nick Herbert: The Home Office does not hold this information. These are matters for the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC). The IPCC has written to the right hon. Member about the information sought. A copy has been placed in the House Library.

Mr Lammy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) independent investigations, (b) managed investigations and (c) supervised investigations involving the Independent Police Complaints Commission there were in each financial year since 2004-05; [81455]

(2) how many full-time equivalent staff are expected to be employed in the Strategy and Communications Directorate of the Independent Police Complaints Commission in the financial year 2012-13; [81483]

(3) how many investigations were carried out by the Independent Police Complaints Commission following a death or serious injury during or following police contact in each of the last seven financial years; [81562]

(4) how many cases of death or serious injury during or after police contact were referred to the Crown Prosecution Service by the Independent Police Complaints Commission in each financial year since 2004-05; [82169]

(5) how many police officers were suspended pending an investigation by the Independent Police Complaints Commission into a death or serious injury during or after police contact in each financial year since 2004-05; [82170]

(6) how many (a) senior investigators, (b) deputy senior investigators and (c) investigators in the Independent Police Complaints Commission are former members of the police; [82171]

(7) what proportion of (a) senior investigators, (b) deputy senior investigators and (c) investigators in the Independent Police Complaints Commission are from (i) Black or Black British and (ii) Asian or Asian British background; [82172]

(8) what steps her Department has taken to increase the number of black and ethnic minority members of the Investigations Directorate of the Independent Police Complaints Commission. [82173]

Nick Herbert: The Home Office does not hold this information. These are matters for the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC). The IPCC has written to the right hon. Member about the information sought. A copy has been placed in the House Library.

Knives: Crime

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department with which organisations the Government is working to reduce the level of knife crime. [78292]

James Brokenshire: The Government works with a range of organisations to reduce knife crime including youth and community sector organisations, the Association of Chief Police Officers, and local statutory community safety partners.

Following the publication of the Brooke Kinsella's report, "Tackling Knife Crime Together—a Review of Local Anti-Knife Crime Projects", the Secretary of State for the Home Department, my right hon. Friend the Member for Maidenhead (Mrs May), announced a package of funding. This includes:

£3.75 million for three police forces—London, West Midlands and Greater Manchester—for the next two years under the Communities Against Guns, Gangs and Knives (CAGGK) Programme;

£4 million for the voluntary and community sector over the next two years under the CAGGK Fund—£2 million will be available during 2011-12 and a further £2 million during 2012-13. Each successful organisation will receive up to £10,000 each per year to prevent the involvement of teenagers in gun, gang and knife crime.

The list of organisations supported by the CAGGK Fund can be found using the following link:

http://grantsadmin.co.uk/funding/

£250,000 for one further year of the Ben Kinsella Fund to help young people run anti-knife crime projects in their local area.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Alan Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister of State for Policing and Crime plans to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed of 5 April 2011 on police pensions. [66456]

Nick Herbert: A reply was sent on 14 July 2011.

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when she plans to reply the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 22 August 2011 regarding Mr J Whelan; [76706]

(2) when she plans to answer the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 22 August 2011 with regard to Mr J. Whelan. [79373]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 8 November 2011]: A reply was sent on 20 November.

Metal Theft

Mr Iain Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will bring forward proposals to make it a criminal offence to sell metals (a) without photographic identification and (b) using cash payments; and if she will make a statement. [80259]

James Brokenshire: Discussions are under way across Government on whether legislative changes are needed to tackle metal theft.

Police: Complaints

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many complaints from a member of the public to the Metropolitan Police Professional Standards Division were upheld in each year since its inception; [82989]

(2) whether any complaints of (a) corruption and (b) misconduct have been received by the Metropolitan Police from (i) members of the public, (ii) serving police officers and (iii) former police officers in each of the last five years. [83037]

Nick Herbert: The Home Office does not hold this information. This is a matter for the Independent Police Complaints Commission (IPCC). The IPCC has written to the hon. Member about the information sought. A copy has been placed in the House Library.

Police: Manpower

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether she has had any discussions with the (a) Association of Chief Police Officers and (b) Police Superintendents' Association on the effects of reductions in the number of senior officers on their capacity to fulfil statutory duties; and if she will make a statement. [67350]

Nick Herbert [holding answer 18 July 2011]: Ministers have regular discussions with the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Police Superintendents' Association on a range of issues about policing.

Police: Misconduct

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers employed by the Metropolitan Police Service have been dismissed for allegations of (a) corruption and (b) misconduct in each of the last five years. [82988]

Nick Herbert: This information is not held centrally. This is a matter for the Metropolitan Police Service and its Police Authority.

Metal Theft

Graham Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) with reference to paragraph A.48, page 57 of the Autumn Statement, where she expects to allocate the funding to tackle metal theft; [84826]

(2) with reference to paragraph A.48, page 57 of the Autumn Statement, how many additional people she expects to be employed to tackle metal theft. [84827]

James Brokenshire: The details of the national metal theft taskforce are currently being developed, in liaison with the British Transport police who will be leading this work, and will be announced shortly.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [84832]

Gregory Barker: One new contract has been awarded by DECC to Capita since 2010:

(a) This was for a facilities management review.

(b) The monetary value of the contract was £15,000.

(c) The net worth of the contract was £22,000.

Carbon Sequestration: Finance

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether the Autumn Statement has any implications in relation to the availability of the £1 billion earmarked by his Department to support the development of a carbon capture and storage project. [85041]

Charles Hendry: No. £1 billion remains available to support CCS projects.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what timetable he has set for the competition to provide support for the development of a carbon capture and storage project. [85042]

Charles Hendry: We will launch a streamlined selection process for future CCS projects as soon as possible in the new year.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions his Department has had with representatives of the carbon capture and storage industry in relation to the Autumn Statement. [85043]

Charles Hendry: DECC Ministers and officials hold frequent discussions on CCS with industry stakeholders covering a wide range of issues, including on the autumn statement.

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change in which financial year funds will be made available to support the development of a carbon capture and storage project. [85044]

Charles Hendry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Angus (Mr Weir), on 6 December 2011, Official Report, column 212W.

Departmental Publications

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many (a) leaflets, (b) posters and (c) reports his Department has published since May 2010; how much each cost; and which company (i) published and (ii) designed each. [82999]

Gregory Barker: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Leaflets

Cost: £1,869.

Designers and printers: Central Office of Information (COI), Charing Cross Print and Foyer Graphics.

(b) Posters

Our posters are produced in-house.

(c) Reports

Total cost (design and print): £231,934.62.

Designers and printers: COI, The Stationary Office (TSO), Foyer Graphics, Domarn, EC Group, Rye Design, Communisis, Wordlink.

In regard to reports, we have included all documents that have been published by DECC using an external agency for print and or design.

The Department has also published a number of other documents that were produced in-house and did not incur publication or design costs. These have not therefore been included in the answer.

Energy Supply: Accidents

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what information his Department holds on the number of serious accidents and fatalities reported by the (a) coal mining, (b) offshore oil and gas exploration and production, (c) oil and gas refining, (d) thermal power generation and (e) onshore and offshore wind electricity generation sector in each of the last three years. [85154]

Chris Grayling: I have been asked to reply.

The number of serious accidents and fatalities reported by the sectors of (a) coal mining, (b) offshore oil and gas exploration and production, and (c) oil and gas refining were:

Industry ('Standard Industrial Classification 2007')	Employment status	Severity	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11[3]
05—Mining of coal and lignite	Worker	Fatal	1	3	1
	Worker	Major	43	44	32
	Member of public	Non-fatal	4	0	0
06—Extraction of crude petroleum and natural gas	Worker	Fatal	0	0	0
	Worker[2]	Major	43	52	42
09—Mining—support service activities[1]	Worker	Fatal	0	1	0
	Worker[2]	Major	18	14	6
19.2—Manufacture of refined petroleum products	Worker	Fatal	1	0	0
	Worker	Major	9	7	13
	Member of public	Non-fatal	0	0	1

[1] SIC 09—Mining support service activities covers petroleum and natural gas (including exploration but not extraction); other mining and quarrying.
[2] Fatal injuries are offshore only. Non-fatal major injuries in the oil and gas extraction and related activities cover onshore and offshore, as the data is stored such that it cannot be easily disaggregated between either type of workplace. At an aggregate level about 90% of reported major injuries occur offshore.
[3] Provisional.

(d) Data are not available in the form requested for accidents in the thermal power generation sector. Accident data are classified using Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) coding for the relevant industry sector, but this does not separately identify thermal power generation. Such incidents are amalgamated with electricity production more generally.

(e) Data are not available in the form requested for accidents in the wind electricity generation sector, where incidents are also amalgamated with electricity production more generally.

Energy: Meters

Guto Bebb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with stakeholders on the roll-out of smart meters in rural areas. [85000]

Charles Hendry: The Government will place regulatory obligations on energy suppliers that will require them to take all reasonable steps to install smart meters for all their domestic and smaller non-domestic customers by the completion date in 2019. This obligation will apply equally to customers in rural areas as to others.

This policy has been informed by extensive consultation with stakeholders, both formal and informal. For example, we received 279 responses to our 2010 Smart Metering Prospectus consultation, including representatives of consumer interests such as Age UK, Consumer Focus, Citizen's Advice, the Federation of Small Businesses, and Which? Consumer groups continue to actively engage in the Smart Meter Programme through membership of a range of working groups, including a dedicated Consumer Advisory Group.

Guto Bebb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans he has for the roll-out of smart meters in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [85001]

Charles Hendry: The Government will place regulatory obligations on energy suppliers that will require them to take all reasonable steps to install smart meters for all their domestic and smaller non-domestic customers by the completion date in 2019. This obligation will apply equally to customers in rural areas as to others.

Renewable Energy: Feed-in Tariffs

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 14 November 2011, Official Report, column 589W, on renewable energy: feed-in tariffs, what estimate he has made of the number of community projects on hold pending the publication of the second consultation on feed-in tariffs. [85497]

Gregory Barker: The Department have made no such assessment.

The second consultation on the comprehensive review of the feed-in tariffs scheme will seek views on a proposed definition of "community-owned" installations. This consultation will be published around the end of the year.

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when (a) he and (b) Ministers in his Department last met representatives of the voluntary and community sector to discuss proposed changes to feed-in tariffs. [85498]

Gregory Barker: Ministers and officials meet on a regular basis and also maintain dialogue with representatives from various voluntary and community sector organisations on the feed-in tariffs scheme.

Details of meetings between DECC Ministers and external organisations are published quarterly on the DECC website.

Scottish Government

Jim McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) how many times he has met Scottish Government Ministers since May 2010; what the (a) date and (b) location was of each such meeting; and what the issues were which were discussed at each such meeting; [84698]

(2) how many times he has met the Scottish Government Cabinet Secretary for Infrastructure and Investment since May 2010; what the (a) date and (b) location was of each such meeting; and what issues were discussed at each such meeting. [84700]

Gregory Barker [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change, my right hon. Friend the Member for Eastleigh (Chris Huhne), maintains close links with Ministers in the devolved Administrations and has regular discussions with them on a range of energy and climate related issues.

Solar Power: Feed-in Tariffs

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change on what basis his Department proposes to introduce new multi-installation tariff rates for aggregated solar PV schemes with an eligibility date on or after 1 April 2012 and new generation tariffs for solar PV for all new solar PV installations with an eligibility date on or after 12 December. [84398]

Gregory Barker: The proposed new tariffs have been set in the light of evidence of the falling costs of PV and are intended to provide a 5% rate of return for well located installations. This was the target return for PV under FITs when the scheme started. The one exception is the tariff for PV installations with a total installed capacity of 4kW or less, the size of installation that is most commonly used for domestic PV installations. The proposed tariff for this band is intended to deliver a 4.5% rather than 5% rate of return for a well located domestic PV installation. Based on analysis undertaken through the comprehensive review, we consider that a lower target return than 5% is more appropriate for domestic PV given how the investment climate has changed since the FITs scheme was first introduced.

The multi-installation tariff rates are based on evidence from the comprehensive review which suggested that the economies of scale associated with aggregated projects mean that a lower tariff is necessary to deliver the target rate of return of 5%. We have considered this evidence along with the possible impact of the proposed new requirements on energy efficiency on aggregated projects. On this basis, we consider that a multi-installation rate which is set at 80% of the proposed standard tariffs for individual installations, is justified (where that would result in a tariff that is no lower than the marginal cost of renewables).

Stephen Crouch

Lisa Nandy: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what meetings (a) he, (b) his Ministers and (c) senior officials of his Department have had with Stephen Crouch since May 2010. [84701]

Gregory Barker [holding answer 5 December 2011]: All ministerial meetings with external organisations are published on a quarterly basis and can be found on the Department's website. There are no records of any such meeting with senior officials.

Wind Power: Costs

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of wind power costs in 10 years time per kilowatt hour. [81855]

Charles Hendry: The updated report by Arup consultants which DECC published alongside the renewables obligation banding review consultation[1] contained levelised costs of electricity. The following table shows the current and projected levelised costs for onshore wind and offshore wind, including in 2020.

[1] Arup (2011), 'Review of the generation costs and deployment potential of renewable electricity technologies in the UK', available at:

World War II: Medals

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many (a) Bevin Boys and (b) Air Transport Auxiliary Veterans Badges were awarded in (i) 2007, (ii) 2008, (iii) 2009, (iv) 2010 and (v) 2011 to date. [85370]

Charles Hendry: In relation to the Bevin Boys Veterans Badge, which is the responsibility of the Department of Energy and Climate Change, the first badge was awarded on 20 March 2008 and the number of badges issued since is broken down as follows:

	Number
2008 (from 20 March 2008)	4,722
2009	70
2010	77
2011 (to 5 December 2011)	50

With regard to the Air Transport Auxiliary Veterans Badge, which is the responsibility of the Department for Transport, this was launched in September 2008 with initial awards to 149 veterans. A further 30 badges have since been awarded. No information is held on the number of badges awarded annually.

CABINET OFFICE

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85085]

Mr Maude: Staff in the Cabinet Office employed by private sector or third sector organisations, for example on secondment, generally remain on the payroll of their organisation, where the Cabinet Office reimburses the organisation in line with civil service rates of pay appropriate to the role.

The Cabinet Office has one senior member of staff employed by McKinsey and Company, Mr Tim Kelsey, who leads on the Transparency agenda, and one senior member of staff employed by Institute for Government (a company limited by guarantee), Mr David Halpern, who leads the Behavioural Insight Team, and the Cabinet Office reimburses those organisations at rates equivalent to that of a Director.

This is part of the Cabinet Office's strategy to bring in expertise and specialist skills on a temporary basis from commercial, third sector and wider public sector organisations in line with Government policy on Senior Civil Service rates of pay.

No senior staff in the Cabinet Office's executive agencies and non-departmental bodies are paid by means of payment to a limited company in lieu of salary.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85056]

Mr Maude: The information is not held in the format requested.

Between 1 June and 30 November 2011, the Cabinet Office was tabled 193 questions for answer on a named day, 144 of which were answered substantively on the date specified.

Government Procurement

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office which sectors will be included in the medium-term review of procurement scheduled for April 2012. [85210]

Mr Maude: The Government have already published procurement plans for construction, wider infrastructure, ICT and facilities management. The Government have announced that they will publish medium-term plans setting out their procurement needs in other sectors by April 2012.

Public Sector: Pensions

Dr Huppert: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what his policy is on the acceptance by the Government of the binding nature of arbitration between public sector workers and the Government. [84488]

Mr Maude [holding answer 5 December 2011]: As I set out to the House on 30 November 2011, Official Report, columns 941-58, sector specific talks are ongoing between individual pensions schemes and the unions, following the proposals set out by the Chief Secretary to the Treasury, the right hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander), on 2 November 2011, Official Report, columns 927-29.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Festivals and Special Occasions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister whether he took part in any events in an official capacity to mark (a) St George's day, (b) St Patrick's day, (c) St David's day and (d) St Andrew's day in 2011. [84899]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The Government and their bodies support a number of events to signify the importance of these dates, including flying their flags on a number of Government buildings.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Business: Training

Mr Marsden: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he plans to prioritise small employers in the proposed dispersal of funds for training under the employer choice pilot. [85010]

Mr Hayes [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Employer Ownership Pilot will be open to employers irrespective of size. We want to encourage small employers to participate by coming forward with proposals for the employer ownership pilot, for example by working in partnership, or through a supply chain. More details will be available in the new year.

Capabilities Programme

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many full-time equivalent staff work on the telecommunications and postal services workstream of the Capabilities programme; and what the staffing level was in each of the last 10 quarters. [79592]

Mr Davey: There are no individual staff who work full-time working on the Capabilities programme. Approximately two full-time equivalent officials in BIS contribute to the telecommunications and postal services elements of the Capabilities programme. Resources have remained broadly stable over the past 10 quarters.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills who the lead Minister in his Department is for the telecommunications and postal services workstream of the Capabilities programme. [79593]

Mr Davey: The hon. Member for Hertford and Stortford (Mr Prisk) is the Minister responsible for the Capabilities programme as this falls within the telecommunications and postal services workstream.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what the budget was for the telecommunications and postal services workstream of the Capabilities programme in each year since 2005; and what the budget will be during the comprehensive spending review period. [79594]

Mr Davey: The Department does not have a budget for the Capabilities programme. Industry is responsible for improvement in its own resilience.

Money Lenders

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many complaints of harassment by money lenders have been received by (a) the Office of Fair Trading and (b) trading standards in each of the last five years. [83044]

Mr Davey: The Office of Fair Trading maintains a database, on behalf of Trading Standards, of contacts made to the Consumer Direct advice service. Although this includes data on complaints about financial services and consumer credit activities, information about whether or not these complaints involve allegations of harassment is recorded in a number of different ways and it is not possible to extract statistics on the category of complaints described.

Students: Loans

Paul Blomfield: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what monitoring system his Department has in place to track the proportion of student loan funding that is awarded to students studying at (a) private and (b) for-profit higher education institutions. [85302]

Mr Willetts [holding answer 6 December 2011]: Information on the amount of student loan funding that is awarded to students studying on specifically designated courses at private providers is held by the Student Loans Company (SLC).

The Department receives quarterly updates from the SLC reporting the amount awarded to students on these courses.

Under the service level agreement between the Department and the SLC, the Department can make further requests for this information.

Third Sector

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what funding over £100,000 his Department's Knowledge and Innovation Directorate allocated to (a) voluntary sector, (b) charities and (c) other third sector organisations in (i) 2010-11 and (ii) 2011-12; and if he will make a statement. [82952]

Mr Willetts [holding answer 25 November 2011]: The Knowledge and Innovation Group was formed at the end of 2010 after allocations for 2010-11 had been made. Most of the group's total budget reaches charities which are higher education institutions or students who attend them. We generally allocate funding to partner organisations which take independent decisions on funding for individual bodies. The following table sets out the available information requested for bodies which are directly funded by the group rather than those whose funding depends on the decisions of independent partner organisations.

HEALTH

Winter Deaths

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources he plans to allocate to the NHS to prevent excess deaths in winter 2011-12. [85247]

Anne Milton: The Department launched the first national Cold Weather Plan for England on 1 November 2011. This provides strategic guidance and a framework which national health service trusts can incorporate into their existing local winter planning arrangements. It emphasises good practice which will limit the impact of cold weather on health.

The Department is centrally funding the Met Office for £40,000 to run a Cold Weather Alert system across England from 1 November 2011 to 31 March 2012 in support of the Cold Weather Plan.

To support the aims of the Cold Weather Plan, the Department has established the 'Warm Homes, Healthy People' fund—up to £20 million for winter 2011-12. This is a major new initiative to support local authorities and their partners (including NHS trusts) in reducing deaths and poor health due to cold housing.

The Department will also be providing financial support to the Department of Energy and Climate Change of up to £10 million. This will be used to support Warm Front to help even more households that are vulnerable to fuel poverty in 2011-12.

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to prevent excess deaths in the winter of 2011-12. [85339]

Anne Milton: The Department launched the first national Cold Weather Plan on 1 November 2011. The plan sets out what needs to happen before and during periods of severe winter weather in England, and builds on established national and local campaigns for winter health with a more co-ordinated approach. The plan will work through a system of Cold Weather Alerts, linked to the existing winter weather warning system developed by the Met Office, in operation from 1 November to 31 March.

To support the aims of the Cold Weather Plan, the Department has established the 'Warm Homes, Healthy People' fund—up to £20 million for winter 2011-12. This is a major new initiative to support local authorities and their partners in reducing deaths and poor health due to cold housing.

The Department will also be providing financial support to the Department of Energy and Climate Change of up to £10 million. This will be used to support Warm Front to help even more households that are vulnerable to fuel poverty in 2011-12.

Dental Services: EU Nationals

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to provide citizens of other EU countries resident in the UK with dental treatment. [84859]

Mr Simon Burns: All residents of the United Kingdom, including those from another European Union country, are entitled to receive national health service dental treatment in the normal manner. Citizens of other EU countries who are not resident are entitled to the same NHS dental services as citizens ordinarily resident in the UK, and subject to the same charge regime and recognised exemptions, but they must demonstrate their entitlement by possession of a valid European Health Insurance Card.

Departmental ICT

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent assessment he has made of progress with his Department's information technology programme; and if he will make a statement. [85243]

Mr Simon Burns: It is presumed that the hon. Member is referring to the National Programme for Information Technology (IT).

In September 2011, we announced, an acceleration of the dismantling of the National Programme for IT. This followed a review by the Cabinet Office's Major Projects Authority that concluded that the programme is not fit to provide the modern information technology services required by the national health service.

Although the National Programme for IT has successfully delivered a number of national applications and services on which the NHS now relies including, choose and book, the Spine, N3 network, NHSmail, Secondary Uses Service and the Picture Archiving and Communications Service, IT support for the NHS needs to change to meet the requirements of a modernised health care system which aims to restore local control over decision making and greater choice for patients and clinicians over the provision of care.

The weaknesses of a top-down, centrally imposed approach to IT that fails to engage sufficiently with the NHS and is not responsive to local needs are well recognized and we are presently undertaking a comprehensive review of the Department's informatics applications and services portfolio for the NHS. In doing so, we will be taking full account of the recommendations of the recent Public Accounts Committee Report on the National Programme for IT and the advice of the Major Projects Authority.

Hospital Wards: Gender

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information NHS trusts are required to collect to monitor (a) use of mixed-sex accommodation and (b) standards of privacy and dignity provided for patients. [85245]

Mr Simon Burns: We are determined to end mixed-sex accommodation (MSA), except where it is clearly in the best interest of the patient. The following information is collected nationally:

(a) National health service trusts submit the number of breaches of MSA sleeping guidance that occur each month. The providers submit these data split by the relevant commissioning primary care trust(s).

We calculate the MSA breach rate as the number of breaches of MSA sleeping guidance per 1,000 finished consultant episodes (FCEs). The source of FCE data is Inpatient Hospital Episode Statistics.

Organisations also collect (but do not report centrally) all mixed-sex sharing of bathroom/toilet facilities and all mixed provision of day space in mental health units at a local level.

(b) Performance on privacy and dignity is measured via the Care Quality Commission's National Inpatient Survey and by Patient Environment Action Team inspections. These collections are not mandatory, but compliance is very high.

More generally, the NHS Operating Framework 2012-13 requires NHS organisations to "actively seek out, respond positively, and improve services in line with patient feedback. This includes acting on complaints, patient comments, local and national surveys and results from 'real time' data techniques".

NHS: Official Visits

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS organisations he has visited in each month since September 2011. [84863]

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which NHS organisations he has visited in the last three months. [84882]

Mr Simon Burns: During the period 1 September to 30 November, the Secretary of State for Health, my right hon. Friend the Member for South Cambridgeshire (Mr Lansley), has undertaken a range of visits. Those to national health service organisations are as follows:

Date	NHS organisation
10 October 2011	North Middlesex Hospital[1]
27 October 2011	Glenfield Hospital[1]
27 October 2011	Leicester Royal Infirmary[1]

[2] General practitioner surgery.

NHS Direct

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls NHS Direct has received in each week since 1 April 2011; and how long on average it took for such calls to be answered in each such week. [84883]

Mr Simon Burns: The following table sets out how many calls NHS Direct has received in each week since 1 April 2011, and the number and percentage of those calls answered within their Key Performance Indicator target of 60 seconds.

Week commencing:	Number of calls offered	Number of calls answered	Number of calls answered in 60 seconds	Percentage of calls answered in 60 seconds

NHS: Drugs

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with reference to the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) Guidance approval of the Velcade Response Scheme in October 2007, how many schemes involving the manufacturers of pharmaceuticals paying back money to the NHS were approved by NICE between January 2008 and May 2010; and how much such schemes have been approved since May 2010. [84934]

Mr Simon Burns: The Velcade (bortezomib) response scheme is an outcome-based patient access scheme involving possible repayments from the manufacturer to national health service organisations linked to patient response which is monitored as part of the scheme. To date, the Velcade response scheme is the only patient access scheme of this type which has been incorporated in technology appraisal guidance from the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE).

Patient access schemes proposed by manufacturers in the context of NICE technology appraisals may take a variety of forms, some of which include options for the NHS to receive a cash rebate, free stock or credit linked to the purchase of a drug. A full list of drugs recommended by NICE in association with patient access schemes is available on the Institute's website at:

www.nice.org.uk/aboutnice/howwework/paslu/ListOfPatientAccessSchemesApprovedAsPartOfANICEAppraisal.jsp

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much the manufacturers of Velcade have paid back to the NHS under the Velcade Response Scheme in each year since the scheme was approved. [84935]

Mr Simon Burns: Implementation and operation of Patient Access schemes, of which the Velcade scheme is one, is a matter for the pharmaceutical manufacturer and the national health service.

The Department does not collect national data on such schemes.

NHS: Finance

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what his most recent estimate is of NHS capital expenditure in each of the next three financial years. [85244]

Mr Simon Burns: The 2010 spending review provided the following planned profile of capital expenditure for the Department (the current year is included for completeness):

Spending review 2010

				£ million
	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14	2014-15
Gross capital expenditure	4,648	4,616	4,630	4,831
Asset sale receipts[1]	-219	-187	-193	-183
Net capital expenditure	4,429	4,429	4,437	4,648

[1] HM Treasury funding is provided net of asset sales receipts; these are included to show total expenditure forecast.

NHS: Negligence

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many unsuccessful clinical negligence claims were brought against the NHS in each year since 1997-98; and how much unsuccessful claimants spent in (a) defence costs and (b) claimant costs in each year. [84885]

Mr Simon Burns: The number of unsuccessful clinical negligence claims brought against the national health service since 1997-98 is set out in the following table. The defence costs and claimant costs for unsuccessful claimants are not known.

	Number
1997-98	812
1998-99	3,108
1999-2000	3,836
2000-01	5,762
2001-02	5,966
2002-03	4,780
2003-04	3,339
2004-05	2,691
2005-06	2,540
2006-07	2,225
2007-08	1,920
2008-09	2,022
2009-10	1,793
2010-11	2,097

Note:
There are a number of claims outstanding in each year, so these data are subject to change as these claims are resolved.

Nurses: Schools

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) qualified and (b) other school nurses are employed in each (i) region and (ii) primary care trust; and how many such nurses were employed in each such area in each year since 1997. [85176]

Anne Milton: The headcount number of qualified and other school nurses employed in each strategic health authority and primary care trust since 2003 is shown in the table which has been placed in the Library.

The School Nursing Occupation Code was not introduced until 2003. Prior to this it was not possible to separately identify school nursing within the data. Because of the timing of its introduction in 2003 the code was not mandatory at the time of the annual work force census. Therefore, the data for 2003 are very likely to be incomplete and should not be considered as a full picture of the size of that work force at the time.

The headcount data for 2010 are based upon new methodology and therefore are not directly comparable with the previous years data based upon the old methodology.

Psychiatry: Waiting Lists

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people in England waiting for access to psychological therapies; and what the average waiting time was for such therapies in the most recent period for which figures are available. [84858]

Paul Burstow: The Quarter 1 performance statistics for Improving Access to Psychological Therapies (IAPT) services released by the NHS Information Centre for health and social care in September this year, showed that there is variation in the numbers of people entering treatment across the country. Nationally, the Department is meeting agreed trajectories. However, there is local variation. The central IAPT team and the departmental performance delivery team have undertaken a number of actions to encourage improvement in access in the areas where the numbers of people entering treatment is below expectations.

The Department is not able to establish the average waiting time from the NHS Information Centre data. From April 2012, we will be implementing the new IAPT Data Standard. Once the data standard is established and the data quality is assured across all IAPT services, it will be possible to establish the average waiting time in IAPT services.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Broadband: Finance

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport if he will publish his criteria for the allocation of funding to the 40 local areas for superfast broadband. [85353]

Mr Vaizey: Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK) published a data model explanatory note setting out the methodology used to make the local authority funding allocations in July 2011. A copy can be found on the Department for Culture, Media and Sport's (DCMS) website, or by using the link:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/images/publications/BDUK-Data-Model-Expalantory-Notes.pdf

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84220]

John Penrose: The following table provides the total number of press officers, internal and external communications officers, communications strategy officers and other positions with a communications remit employed by the Department as at 30 November 2011.

Job title	Total number of employees
Press officers	10
Communication officers (internal and external)	21
Communications strategy officers	6
Other positions	9
Total	46

The Department is committed to reduce its administrative budget by 50% over the period of the comprehensive spending review. That will include a reduction in its communications head count. As part of this, with the conclusion of the London 2012 Project in October 2012, all secondments and fixed term appointments to the Government Olympic Executive Communications team (18 posts) will end.

The Department does not hold this information for our agency and arm's length bodies. I have therefore asked their chief executives to consider the question raised by the hon. Member and to write to him direct. Copies of the replies will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Departmental Flags

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (1) what steps his Department takes to ensure that all flags flown from his Department's buildings are fit for display; [84667]

(2) how many flags his Department has replaced in each of the last 12 months; [84669]

(3) how many (a) letters, (b) emails and (c) telephone calls his Department has received on the state and condition of flags flown from his Department's buildings in the last 12 months; [84670]

(4) how many flags his Department (a) owns and (b) maintains; and at what cost to the public purse. [84671]

John Penrose: The Department flies one Union flag at a hire charge (no purchase or replacement cost) of £95 a month. This hire cost will be reviewed early next year. The flag is changed and cleaned once a month to ensure it is fit for display. To celebrate St George's Day, St Andrew's Day and St David's Day the Department owns a St George's flag, a Saltire flag and Welsh Dragon flag. These are inspected once a year and, if required, new flags are procured. However there has been no expenditure on these flags in the past 12 months. We have no records of any letters, e-mails or telephone calls in the last 12 months on the state and condition of the flags we fly.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85701]

John Penrose: This Department requires its non-departmental public bodies to have in place processes to manage risk and develop a formal risk management strategy (which includes maintaining risk registers) in accordance with Treasury guidance contained in Managing Public Money:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/mpm_ch4.pdf

The risk strategy is reviewed by the bodies' own boards and by their audit committees and auditors.

Mobile Phones

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport if he will publish his plans for the recently announced £150 million investment in mobile telephone coverage in the period up to 2015; and if he will make a statement. [85354]

Mr Vaizey: The mobile phone project is currently in the definition stage and expects to commence procurement early in 2012. The allocation of funds will be dependent upon the delivery model and procurement route to be followed, it is expected that an outline allocation will be clear by the early stages of any procurement approach with final allocations confirmed in later stages. It is envisaged that any contract(s) will be awarded for delivery of services to commence in 2013.

Olympic Games 2012: Folk Dance

Bob Russell: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2011, Official Report, column 753W, on Olympic Games 2012: folk dance, what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games in respect of the opening and closing ceremonies; whether such discussions included reference to the inclusion of English traditional folk dance; and if he will make a statement. [85267]

Hugh Robertson: Ministers at the Department for Culture, Media and Sport meet representatives of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (LOCOG) about various London 2012 matters including ceremonies. There were no specific discussions about the inclusion of traditional folk dance in the opening and closing ceremonies. The details of the opening and closing ceremonies are a matter for LOCOG. LOCOG has appointed a world class group of creative experts to develop Olympic and Paralympic ceremonies that will reflect this country's rich and diverse culture and heritage.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Planning: Change of Use

Mr Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government when he plans to publish the findings of his Department's consultation on the relaxation of planning rules for change of use from commercial to residential. [84107]

Greg Clark: We are considering the responses to the consultation 'Relaxation of planning rules for change of use from commercial to residential' and will publish the findings in due course.

Fire Services: Manpower

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) wholetime, (b) retained, (c) control and (d) non-uniform staff were employed in each fire authority in England on 31 March 2011; and if he will update his Department's Operational Statistics Bulletin of 24 August 2011 to include (i) information and (ii) the strength of each fire authority. [R] [85215]

Robert Neill: Numbers of staff employed by each fire and rescue authority on 31 March 2011 for the stated categories are published on the Department's website in table 6 of the appendix tables which accompany the Fire and Rescue Operational Statistics Bulletin:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/fire/researchandstatistics/firestatistics/firerescue/

The Fire and Rescue Operational Statistics Bulletin also continues to include staffing strength. Numbers by fire and rescue authority can be found in appendix table 2 of the accompanying spreadsheets.

A copy of this information has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Government Procurement Card

Mr Marcus Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 13 October 2011, Official Report, column 483W, on Freedom of Information, if the Office of the Deputy Prime Minister's Government Procurement Card transaction of a cash withdrawal for £154.86 on 28 November 2004, and associated £3.10 cash advance handling fee, was an overseas transaction; and in which country the cash withdrawal took place. [82429]

Robert Neill: Based on the information available, this was likely to be a foreign currency transaction that was made in London. However, detailed records about the nature of the transaction, which would facilitate a more comprehensive answer, are no longer held centrally.

Non-domestic Rates: Worcester

Mr Robin Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) cost to the public purse of appeals of business rates valuations in Worcester constituency in the last two years. [85040]

Robert Neill: The number of formal challenges received for Worcester city council for the financial years 2009-10 and 2010-11 are shown in the following table.

	Formal challenges received by the Valuation Office Agency
	2009-10	2010-11
2005 list	410	90
2010 list	n/a	390

Statistics by parliamentary constituency could be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Information on the cost to the public purse of appeals is not held centrally.

Parking: City of Westminster

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) what discussions officials from his Department have had with Westminster city council on its proposal to generate additional income from parking charges at evenings and weekends; and if he will make a statement; [83600]

(2) what his policy is in respect of the generation of income by local authorities from parking charges. [83578]

Robert Neill [holding answer 28 November 2011]: Officials have not held specific discussions with Westminster city council on this issue.

Every bit of the public sector needs to do its bit to help tackle the budget deficit inherited from the last Administration. But Ministers have been quite clear that we view increasing charges on local residents as an inappropriate way of making sensible savings. Instead, councils should be saving money through better procurement, cutting fraud, more joint working and using transparency to drive out waste. This stance on charging is different from the last Administration, when DCLG Ministers actively encouraged councils to increase parking charges (for example, as alluded to in the speech to the Local Government Association of 2 July 2008).

More broadly, as outlined in the answer to the hon. Member of 28 November 2011, Official Report, column 650W, there are clear legal restrictions preventing councils from using on-street parking charges as a way of raising general revenue. This is explicitly stated in operational guidance and in statutory guidance on civil enforcement of parking contraventions, and is reflected in case law: for example, Regina v. Camden London Borough Council Ex Parte Cran and Others [1995] EWHC 13 (Admin).

Councils have a key role in promoting economic development, supporting local economic growth and local jobs. Making sure that car parking charges are reasonable is an important and practical way in which councils can help support their local high streets. In this context, I am concerned about the effect of higher parking charges on the broader economy of London and the West End, particularly its impact on employees, small firms and sole traders.

This Government have taken steps to support local high streets. Our plans for the local retention of business rates will mean that councils have a direct financial incentive in supporting business and retail growth in town centres. This is in contrast to the local government system we have inherited, where councils have no real incentives to support local high streets and city centres.

My Department has also tackled flawed parking rules inherited from the last Administration. In January 2011, we amended national planning guidance to:

remove Whitehall restrictions which imposed maximum numbers of parking spaces in new residential developments; change a policy which inhibited competition between council areas to one that said parking charges should not undermine the vitality of town centres; introduce a policy that parking enforcement should be proportionate; remove the policy that encouraged councils to set car parking charges to discourage the use of cars; and increase support for electric car power-charging infrastructure in parking areas.

The draft National Planning Policy Framework follows through on these changes by removing restrictions which impose maximum numbers of parking spaces in new non-residential developments. This will relieve pressure on on-street parking and support local high streets.

Parking: Fees and Charges

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what information his Department holds on the (a) net and (b) gross income from parking charges in each London local authority in each of the last 10 years. [83577]

Robert Neill: I have today placed in the Library of the House a table giving details on the gross and net income from parking services in each London local authority for the last 10 years.

Planning Permission: Biodiversity

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether the (a) Home Affairs and (b) Economic Affairs Cabinet Sub-Committee has discussed the implications of the draft National Planning Policy Framework for the natural environment. [84031]

Greg Clark: In line with the constitutional convention of collective decision-making, and section 2 of the Ministerial Code, the Government, in line with their predecessors, do not disclose details of the internal process through which decisions are taken.

Planning Permission: Carbon Emissions

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the effect of the draft National Planning Policy Framework on carbon emissions. [84026]

Greg Clark: The draft National Planning Policy Framework was accompanied by a consultation stage impact assessment which considered the anticipated impact of the framework on carbon emissions and is available at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/documents/planningandbuilding/pdf/1951736.pdf

The draft framework states that the planning system should aim to secure, consistent with the Government's published objectives, radical reductions in green house gas emissions, through the appropriate location and layout of new development, and active support for energy efficiency improvements to existing buildings and the delivery of renewable and low-carbon energy infrastructure. We are now carefully considering all consultation responses, and will then publish the final version of the framework together with a final impact assessment.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84197]

Robert Neill: The Department uses postcodes for a number of operational purposes other than the delivery of mail. They are a valuable means of referencing geographic locations and are widely used and understood by the general public because of their relationship to addresses.

They are principally used by the Department for the compilation, validation, and collation of statistics and to provide accessible information to citizens in support of, for example, the Transparency agenda.

Regional Planning and Development

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he is taking to ensure that planning policy encourages the development of (a) high streets, (b) town centres and (c) empty commercial properties; and if he will make a statement. [84650]

Greg Clark [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Government are fully committed to supporting our high streets and town centres and to maintaining a strong "town centre first" policy which identifies town centres as the preferred location for retail developments. The draft National Planning Policy Framework asks local planning authorities to pursue policies to support the viability and vitality of town centres. We are now considering all responses to the consultation.

We are also considering the responses to the consultation "Relaxation of planning rules for change of use from commercial to residential" and will publish the findings in due course.

With regard to empty commercial properties, the Government supported the work to create industry standard "meanwhile" leases to encourage temporary occupation of empty retail premises in order to improve the vitality of town centres.

Town centres have suffered under restrictions on parking introduced by the previous Administration, reducing their ability to compete with out of town supermarkets.

Consequently, in January, my Department amended planning rules on parking to:

(a) change a policy which inhibited competition between council areas to one that said parking charges should not undermine the vitality of town centres;

(b) introduce a policy that parking enforcement should be proportionate;

(c) remove the policy that encouraged councils to set car parking charges to discourage the use of cars; and

(d) encourage more charging spaces for electric cars.

The draft National Planning Policy Framework also proposes to remove Whitehall restrictions which impose an arbitrary cap on parking spaces in new non-residential developments.

Waste Disposal: Second-hand Goods

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether it is his policy to support by-laws enabling local authorities to selectively license premises dealing in second-hand goods for the purposes of preventing the disposal of stolen goods. [84779]

Grant Shapps [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Our policy is that byelaws are not appropriate where national legislation already exists to address the issue in question. National legislation already prohibits the handling of stolen goods.

PRIME MINISTER

Youth Unemployment

Q14. John Mann: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the level of youth unemployment. [85115]

The Prime Minister: The problem of rising youth unemployment has been ongoing since 2004. Comprehensive action is required to ensure young people have sustained employment opportunities in the private sector.

So the Government have launched the £1 billion Youth Contract, which will provide an extra 250,000 work experience places and 160,000 wage incentive payments.

The Government are also providing over 440,000 apprenticeship places this year, opening up 24 University Technical Colleges and ensuring vulnerable young people have faster access to the specialised support of the Work programme.

This Government are also reforming our schools so that young people leave better equipped to join the work force.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Birds of Prey

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent estimate she has made of the number of birds of prey in the UK; and if she will make a statement. [84578]

Richard Benyon: As set out in the following table are the current estimates of breeding populations of diurnal birds of prey in the UK. The estimates derive from the observations of many hundreds of volunteer observers who contribute to annual monitoring programmes (such as the Breeding Bird Survey) and periodic surveys funded by: the Joint Nature Conservation Committee (JNCC); the country conservation agencies; the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds; the Raptor Study Groups; the British Trust for Ornithology (BTO); and other partner organisations, as well as through the work of the JNCC and BTO co-funded Rare Breeding Birds Panel.

Heating: Hydrofluorocarbons

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what progress her Department has made in phasing out hydrofluorocarbons from domestic heat pumps. [84038]

Mr Paice: A comprehensive EU regulatory framework to contain, prevent and thereby reduce emissions of hydrofluorocarbons (HFCs) from equipment such as heat pumps is already in place, having been fully implemented since 2009 in Great Britain by the Fluorinated Greenhouse Gases Regulations 2009 (SI 2009/261). However, this framework stops short of controls to phase out the production of the gases themselves.

There are existing proposals at an international level to use the Montreal Protocol on Substances that Deplete the Ozone Layer to phase down the production and use of HFCs. This would affect all types of equipment, not just domestic heat pumps. The UK Government remains supportive in principle of an international phase-down of production and consumption of HFCs but there are many technical issues to be discussed before any formal negotiations on a phase-down could take place. The Government will continue to push for the development of a phase-down agreement at future Montreal Protocol and United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change meetings and support this aim. Further detailed analysis of impacts of the proposals will be conducted.

The latest estimate of HFC emissions from Heat Pumps, based on the assessment by consultants AEA, which is available on the DEFRA website at:

http://www.archive.defra.gov.uk/environment/quality/air/fgas/background.htm#publications is that 0.06 kt CO_2 eq. of HFC134a would be emitted from heat pumps in 2009, rising to 0.16 kt CO_2 eq. of HFC134a by 2025. It should be noted that these estimates include all heat pumps, not just domestic ones, are highly uncertain, and also very small in relation to HFC emissions from the other sectors. These estimates are not currently included in either the main F-gas model or the UK national green house gas emission totals, and further work is needed to refine the fundamental parameters before the emissions from this sector can be included.

Marine Conservation Zones

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what assessment she has made of the effect of the European Commission's proposed system of regionalisation in the basic regulations of the reformed EU Common Fisheries Policy on management systems for marine conservation zones; [85015]

(2) whether she plans to reorganise nationally designated marine conservation zones following reform of the EU Common Fisheries Policy; [85016]

(3) what assessment she has made of the effect of delays to reform of the EU Common Fisheries Policy on designation of marine conservation zones. [85017]

Richard Benyon: As UK Fisheries Minister I will carry out an assessment of all elements of the European Commission's proposals on reform of the Common Fisheries Policy (CFP). Marine Conservation Zones (MCZs) will be designated for their contribution to an ecologically coherent network of marine protected areas. Their location will be determined by the distribution of marine species and habitats, along with consideration of the potential socio-economic impacts of the proposed MCZs. As their locations will be determined by the ecology and the impacts on sea users, I do not anticipate that reform of the CFP would have any effect on the designation process or require any reorganisation.

River Nene: Fishing

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps the Environment Agency is taking to tackle illegal fishing on the River Nene in Cambridgeshire; and if she will make a statement. [84167]

Richard Benyon: The Environment Agency is aware of a concern among anglers that illegal fishing may be affecting fish stocks on some rivers, the River Nene being an example. While most anglers return their catch, there is a culture within some communities to retain fish for the table.

The issue was recognised some years ago and fisheries byelaws have recently changed to make it an offence to remove most fish from our rivers. The Environment Agency employs officers to enforce the byelaws and respond to reports of illegal activity. They work with local angling clubs and request police assistance if appropriate.

In addition to enforcement, education is also important, and the Environment Agency is working with the Angling Trust on a 'Building Bridges' project. A project officer has been appointed to explain our culture and fisheries legislation to these communities. An angling event to promote this was held in Cambridgeshire in late November.

Rural Areas: Renewable Energy

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish details of (a) the Rural Community Renewable Energy Fund and (b) the sources of its funding. [84655]

Richard Benyon: Further details about the Rural Community Renewable Energy Fund, including its funding, management and operation, will be published in the new year.

Rural Growth Network

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish the criteria for the competition to identify the Rural Growth Network pilot projects. [84656]

Richard Benyon: Further information about the Rural Growth Network competition and selection process will be announced during this month, with bids from Local Enterprise Partnerships likely to be invited by the end of January 2012. We aim to announce the pilot areas by March 2012.

Waste Disposal: Business

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps she is taking to introduce responsibility deals for business waste. [84528]

Richard Benyon: The Review of Waste Policy in England, which we published in June 2011, committed the Government to exploring the potential for new voluntary responsibility deals to drive waste prevention and recycling. These include deals with the hospitality sector, the waste management industry and for direct mail, textiles, and construction waste. Responsibility deals in other areas may also be considered.

A responsibility deal with the Environmental Services Association was published on 23 June. Among the deal's key commitments are providing better advice about waste prevention, improving recycling collections for small and medium enterprises, raising the industry's environmental profile, adhering to best practice in making contracts more user-friendly, and sharing data about key trends.

A new responsibility deal on direct mail was launched on 1 November. It commits the Government and the direct marketing industry to working together to improve the industry's environmental performance and, in particular, support a move towards a zero-waste, low-carbon economy. The new deal will give people more control over what gets posted through their letterboxes and ensure that the direct mail they find useful is produced to higher standards and is fully recyclable.

DEFRA is working with the industry, devolved Administrations and the Waste and Resources Action Programme (WRAP) to produce a new responsibility deal with businesses in the hospitality and food service sector to reduce food and packaging waste and ensure that unavoidable waste is managed sustainably. On 22 November, a discussion paper outlining the proposed targets and structure of the deal was published on WRAP'S website:

www.wrap.org.uk

Comments about this paper will be used to produce the final deal, which we hope to launch in spring 2012.

Whaling

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessment she has made of the effectiveness of the international bans on (a) whaling and (b) the international trade of whale products. [84636]

Richard Benyon: The UK strongly supports the International Whaling Commission (IWC) moratorium on commercial whaling. This was introduced in 1986 and has seen a dramatic reduction in the number of whales being killed. The UK will continue to oppose ongoing commercial and 'scientific' whaling and press for the greater conservation and protection of whales.

I attended this year's IWC meeting to demonstrate the UK Government's commitment to the work of the IWC, and our support for the moratorium on whaling.

The UK firmly supports the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) restrictions on international trade in whale meat and whale products. The EU prohibits the international trade in all whale meat and products.

Under CITES, a Party with a reservation placed against a species of whale can trade in that species, but only with a non-Party to CITES or a Party who has similarly placed a reservation. Iceland, Japan, Norway and Palau have reservations in place against several whale species listings, and for example, Iceland can, and does, trade in fin whale meat with Japan.

Whaling: Faroe Islands

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent discussions she has had with the Faroese government on the hunting of whales, dolphins and porpoises by Faroese fishermen. [84637]

Richard Benyon: The UK Government recognise the strength of feeling in the UK about the hunting of cetaceans in the Faroe Islands. As pilot whales and other small cetaceans are not covered by the International Whaling Commission (IWC) moratorium on commercial whaling, it is for the Faroese Government to decide whether to continue these hunts.

Nevertheless, the UK has long been concerned about the cruel way in which these hunts are conducted and has pressed for improvements for a number of years, both directly and within the IWC. I will continue to make our strong opposition to these hunts known to the Faroe Islands.

We also made progress at this year's annual meeting of the 'Agreement on the Conservation of Small Cetaceans of the Baltic, North East Atlantic, Irish and North Seas' (ASCOBANS). The UK raised concerns about the increasing numbers, and diversity of species being taken, namely Risso's and white-sided dolphins. In response, the Faroe Islands indicated that the hunting of Risso's dolphins would not continue.

EDUCATION

Carers: Young People

Laura Sandys: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether his Department is taking steps to ensure local authorities (a) identify young carers in families affected by illness, disability or substance misuse and (b) assess the support needs of such carers. [84777]

Tim Loughton: We know that the identification of young carers remains the single biggest challenge to ensuring that they receive the support to which they are entitled. To that end my Department is funding The Children's Society and The Princess Royal Trust for Carers for two years to: identify and share existing best practice in identifying and supporting young carers and their families; and run regional workshops with local authorities and young carers services to support the delivery of 'whole family' support for young carers and their families. We have also funded the development of an e-learning package for staff in schools on identifying and supporting young carers.

Laura Sandys: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many local authorities are using the model memorandum of understanding on working together to support young carers. [84907]

Tim Loughton: We do not yet hold this information. The Department is funding The Children's Society to run regional workshops with local authorities and young carers services to support the delivery of 'whole family' support for young carers and their families. The local authorities that attend the regional workshops will be surveyed to establish the number that have adopted the model memorandum of understanding drafted by the Associations of Directors of Adult and Children's services.

Schools: Sports

Clive Efford: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many school sports co-ordinators there were in each local authority area for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [81692]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 22 November 2011]: The Department does not hold this information for each of the years requested. However, the following table shows the number of school sport co-ordinators that were in each local authority for the 2010-11 financial year.

Youth Services: Per Capita Costs

Ms Buck: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much each English local authority reported in the S251 financial returns as outturn expenditure on (a) youth work, (b) Connexions and (c) all provisions for young people per capita in (i) 2008-09 and (ii) 2009-10. [82655]

Tim Loughton [holding answer 24 November 2011]: A copy of the tables showing outturn expenditure per capita for each local authority in England on (a) youth work, (b) Connexions and (c) all provision of activities for young people in 2008-09 and 2009-10 has been placed in the House of Commons Library.

There is significant variation between local authorities in the amounts shown under each category which may reflect different interpretations of the guidance on completing the returns. The Department has commissioned a full review of how the data are collected, what they are used for, and of quality assurance.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Child Maintenance

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how much money the Child Support Agency has received but not yet passed on to the parent with care; [84267]

(2) how long it takes the Child Support Agency to pass maintenance payments on to the parent with care. [84268]

Maria Miller: The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission is responsible for the child maintenance system. I have asked the Child Maintenance Commissioner to write to the hon. Member with the information requested and I have seen the response.

Letter from Noel Shanahan:

In reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about the Child Support Agency (CSA), the Secretary of State promised a substantive reply from the Child Maintenance Commissioner as the CSA is now the responsibility of the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission (the Commission).

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how much money the Child Support Agency has received but not yet passed on to the parent with care. [84267]; and

You asked the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions, how long it takes the Child Support Agency to pass maintenance payments on to the parent with care. [84268]

The CSA holds money received from non-resident parents in a separate bank account maintained specifically for client funds. The balance of the client fund account is the amount received which has not yet been paid out to parents with care or the Secretary of State, as appropriate.

This amount is disclosed in the Client Funds Account published on the Commission's website here:

http://www.childmaintenance.org/en/pdf/CMEC-Client-Funds-Account-09-10.pdf

The last published accounts state that at 31 March 2010, the balance was £16.3 million. Of this balance, £8.0 million of receipts had not yet cleared into the account, and £8.3 million was in the process of being assigned and allocated before payment. The Client Funds Account for 2010/2011 will be published in the near future.

Payments are not made to the parent with care until such time as the receipt from the non-resident parent has cleared the banking system. Once the funds are cleared the payment is initiated by the method agreed with the parent with care. The CSA's preferred method is by direct credit to a bank account in the name of the parent with care.

In September 2011 96% of payments for cases on the CSCS system and 98% of payments on CS2 system were made within seven days.

The following table also shows in September 2011 the number of days it took to pass on maintenance payments to parents with care, split by CS2 and CSCS.

	Percentage of payments
Number of days	CSCS	CS2
Same day	—	45
1 day	21	9
2 days	20	8
3 days	15	3
4 days	17	6
5 days	1	3
6 days	2	4
7 days	20	20
7+ days	5	3

Notes:

1. There are currently two statutory child maintenance schemes in operation: the 1993 scheme (for cases initiated before 3 March 2003) administered on the CSCS and CS2 computer systems; and the 2003 (for cases commenced on or after 3 March 2003) administered on the CS2 computer system.
2. Figures do not include cases managed off-system.
3. Figures may not sum due to rounding.
4. These figures are calculated from the date in which the Commission received cleared funds from the non-resident parent to when the Commission sends payment to the parent with care.

The majority of payments are made to parents within seven days of receiving cleared funds from the non-resident parent. This can be longer if insufficient information is provided by the payer to enable the CSA to allocate the receipt to the correct case (such as the case reference number or the non-resident parent's national insurance number) and consequently to allow the transaction to be processed. In this case, the money is kept in a holding account allowing for checks to take place to allocate the payment to a non-resident parent. Once the funds have been allocated then funds are typically paid out on the same day for cases on CS2 system or within one day for CSCS system.

I hope you find this answer helpful.

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Child Support Agency in collecting payments from a non-resident parent. [84602]

Maria Miller: The proportion of parents with a statutory maintenance liability paying child maintenance in September 2011 was 77.8%.

The Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission, which is also responsible for the Child Support Agency, has improved its effectiveness in collecting payments from the non-resident parents over the past few years, but we recognise that much more needs to be done. More than three million children live in separated families, but only around 50% of those benefit from an effective maintenance arrangement. In addition the annual running costs of the statutory maintenance scheme is approximately £460 million, on average a cost of around 40p for each £1 of child maintenance collected or arranged, and this does not represent value for money to the taxpayer.

The Green Paper consultation document published in January—'Strengthening families, promoting parental responsibility: the future of child maintenance'—outlines our assessment of some of the issues of the current system and sets out our plans for the radical reshaping of the child maintenance system. The Government's response to the consultation was published on 12 July.

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what recent assessment he has made of the suitability of the assessment criteria used by the Child Support Agency for child maintenance payments. [84603]

Maria Miller: There are currently two child support schemes, each with quite different rules. On the older of the two schemes, the information about our clients is so historic that almost 200,000 cases are assessed as needing to pay nothing. Around half of children living in separated families have no effective financial arrangement in place at all. All this means that many children are missing out.

This is why we want to reform the system and introduced our Green Paper, 'Strengthening families, promoting parental responsibility: the future of child Maintenance' published in January 2011, in which we confirmed plans to introduce a single new child maintenance scheme from 2012. This new scheme will make use of income data from Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs.

On 1 December 2011 the Government launched a public consultation for views on the draft regulations for the future scheme. Further details can be found here:

Housing Benefit: Manpower

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will announce what will happen to staff currently administering housing benefit when it is replaced by universal credit. [85331]

Chris Grayling: Universal credit is a national benefit. It will be delivered largely through an online service, with its core administration most efficiently run by a centralised system. As the DWP start to build the organisation to deliver universal credit, and we have yet to settle on the precise detail, and select the right people with the right capability it is likely some of those skills will exist within local authorities. We will therefore always look to include local authority staff in our thinking.

In relation to the longer-term delivery of universal credit, we will continue to work with colleagues in HM Revenue and Customs and local authorities to test new ways of working and impact ongoing delivery model design at both a national and local level. Our aim is to work collaboratively to enable the decision making process and deliver optimal value. This includes the decision making around any redundancies, for which we have small amount in our business case (whether they are in DWP, HMRC or local authorities). However, we will work to reduce the number of redundancies as far as possible, given the time available to us to plan and complete the transition to universal credit by 2017. I expect survey results to be available from local authorities by the end of the year and hope to be able to provide more details of the transition plan in the new year.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average time taken to assess claims for jobseeker's allowance was in the latest period for which figures are available. [83919]

Chris Grayling: Jobcentre Plus monitors the average time taken to process new claims via internal measurement indicators using an average actual clearance time (AACT) for jobseeker's allowance (JSA).

AACT measures the average number of working days we take to process new claims. It does not mean that all claims for that benefit should be processed within that time, as it is an average. We do expect some claims to take longer, particularly if the customer's circumstances are complex or there is a delay in the customer returning information required to enable us to process their claim.

AACT is calculated from our benefit processing system and is a result of taking all the claim volumes processed within any given month against the total number of days each claim has taken to process. The system conducts a simple division calculation using these data sets to provide us with the average actual clearance time (AACT).

For JSA, the start date is either the date the customer first contacted Jobcentre Plus or the customers first day of unemployment, whichever is the later. The end date is the date a formal decision is made on the claim and a notification is issued to the customer on entitlement.

The AACT performance for the latest available month, along with the year to date position is shown in the following table:

Days

	October 2011	Year to date
JSA	9.1	9.5

Social Justice Directorate

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of staff of his Department who will work in the Social Justice Directorate in (a) 2011-12, (b) 2012-13, (c) 2013-14 and (d) 2014-15. [85295]

Chris Grayling: The Strategy Group, which the Social Justice Directorate is part of, is operating a flexible resourcing approach. This means that the headcount across the Strategy Group will be regularly reviewed to ensure it is deployed against organisational priorities.

Social Security Benefits

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he plans to reduce the number of people who are penalised for mistakes on their benefit applications. [85329]

Chris Grayling: There is no measure to penalise those who make mistakes on their benefit applications.

The Government have made provision in the Welfare Reform Bill, which is currently before Parliament, to introduce a civil penalty to deter individuals from negligent behaviour in future and increase their personal responsibility for keeping claims correct. In the long term we expect the number of penalties imposed to reduce as a result of encouraging a positive change in claimant behaviour.

Social Security Benefits: Fraud

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how he will ensure that the expertise of local authority benefit fraud staff is not lost when the Single Fraud Investigation Service is established. [85328]

Chris Grayling: The new Single Fraud Investigation Service (SFIS) will be formed by consolidating the benefit and tax credit fraud investigation teams across DWP, local authorities and HMRC, which will enable them to undertake a single investigation for the first time. This will be a much better service and a much more efficient way of using investigative resources, and ensure the expertise that currently exists across all these areas is not lost.

We recently ran a consultation exercise with local authorities (LAs) to consider four options for local authority staff to become part of SFIS. Of the 285 responses received 76% of LAs agreed with our assessment that the option for local authority staff to remain employed by LAs, but operate under SFIS powers, policies, processes and priorities, was the most suitable option at this time. This will effectively bring local authority investigation staff into SFIS.

Local authorities were informed of the decision to proceed with this option on 1 December. We will continue to work collaboratively with them to co-design an operational structure for SFIS from 2013.

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether the Director of Public Prosecutions will be funded to carry out fraud work with the new Single Fraud Investigation Service. [85330]

Chris Grayling: The DWP has agreed that resources will be transferred to the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) to undertake fraud prosecutions in the future, including those cases investigated by the Single Fraud Investigation Service.

The transfer of prosecution work from DWP to the CPS is currently in a transition phase, during which details are being worked out. A funding transfer is being discussed as part of that transition.

Universal Credit

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 15 November 2011, Official Report, column 729W, on universal credit, what proportion of the funds allocated to the implementation of universal credit will be spent on (a) IT development, (b) programme management and (c) design of the universal credit system and processes in 2011-12. [82366]

Chris Grayling: The Department is currently forecasting to spend £105 million of the budget allocated to the implementation of universal credit in the financial year 2011-12. The majority will be spent on IT development with the balance on programme management and the design of the universal credit system and processes.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much of the budget allocated to implementation of universal credit will be spent for each purpose in (a) 2012-13, (b) 2013-14, (c) 2014-15 and (d) 2015-16. [82389]

Chris Grayling: The 2010 spending review settlement included funding of £2 billion for the period 2011-12 to 2014-15. This is intended to meet all the costs of introducing universal credit, including any increases in benefit expenditure, additional benefit administration costs in the transition period, the costs of IT development and implementation, communications, staff training and programme management.

Expenditure for years beyond 2011-12 is indicative and subject to adjustments as plans for the programme develops.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Afghanistan

10. Caroline Dinenage: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the priorities for development in Afghanistan. [85126]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The Afghanistan development programme, of which Britain is a strong supporter, continues to make progress. The IMF country programme has been restored. This is a renewed commitment to tackling corruption, improving governance and delivering services to ordinary Afghans.

14. Sarah Newton: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the priorities for development in Afghanistan. [85131]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The Afghanistan development programme, of which Britain is a strong supporter, continues to make progress. The IMF country programme has been restored. This is a renewed commitment to tackling corruption, improving governance and delivering services to ordinary Afghans.

United Nations Relief and Works Agency

11. Stephen Phillips: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps he is taking on funding for the UN Relief and Works Agency in 2012. [85127]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The UK supports the UN Relief and Works Agency (UNRWA) to deliver essential services to nearly 5 million Palestinian refugees. We are currently considering further support for schools in Gaza.

Africa

12. Mr Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of spending by his Department in Africa. [85128]

Mr O'Brien: Our Bilateral Aid Review (BAR), completed in March this year, assessed the effectiveness of our bilateral development spending including in Africa. We have published Operational Plans for our 19 African programmes which set out the results that we will deliver over the spending review period. These plans will be reviewed annually.

DFID's Management Board review on a quarterly basis the extent to which DFID's interventions in Africa are on track; and we have an ongoing programme of evaluation in our country programmes. In addition to these processes I have also visited most of our offices in Africa at least once to help consider and assess their programmes.

Aid Effectiveness

13. Phil Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what his policy is on measuring the effectiveness of overseas aid. [85130]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: DFID is leading the international consensus on improving aid effectiveness. We have introduced rigorous independent evaluation of our efforts. Britain is driving change internationally, including through agreements at the Busan High Level Forum last week.

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [84830]

Mr O'Brien: The Department for International Development (DFID) has not awarded any centrally-let contracts to Capita since May 2010.

To provide information relating to contracts which may have been awarded to Capita by our delegated procurement officers based in overseas locations would incur disproportionate costs.

Conciliation Resources

Mr MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development how much his Department has allocated to Conciliation Resources for their work in Abkhazia, Georgia in each financial year since 2008. [84843]

Mr O'Brien: Conciliation Resources have received funds for peace building work in the South Caucasus through the tri-departmental Conflict Pool (Foreign and Commonwealth Office, Ministry of Defence and Department for International Development) and through the Department for International Development's Governance and Transparency Fund for activities, some of which take place in Abkhazia, Georgia. Funding has been at the following levels since 2008:

2008-09: £363,801;

2009-10: £384,200;

2010-11: £429,172; and

in 2011-12, funding has been approved at £330,315.

The nature of this work, which is active across different regions, does not allow for a precise breakdown for the Abkhazia region only.

Mr MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what funding his Department plans to allocate to Conciliation Resources for work in Abkhazia, Georgia in 2012-13. [84844]

Mr O'Brien: Under the Department for International Development's Governance and Transparency Fund, Conciliation Resources receive funding for a project called 'Increasing Government Accountability in Conflict Zones through Public Participation in Policymaking'. Some elements of this project take place in Abkhazia, Georgia. For 2012-13, £107,896 has been allocated to the Georgian-Abkhaz component of this project.

The nature of the project, which works across different regions, does not allow for a precise breakdown for the Abkhazia region only.

Mr MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what projects have been undertaken by Conciliation Resources with funding from his Department in Abkhazia, Georgia since 2008. [84845]

Mr O'Brien: Conciliation Resources have received funding through the Department for International Development's (DFID) Governance and Transparency fund since April 2008 for a project called 'Increasing Government Accountability in Conflict Zones through Public Participation in Policymaking'. Some elements of this project take place in Abkhazia, Georgia.

Through the Conflict Pool, managed tri-departmentally between the Ministry of Defence, Foreign and Commonwealth Office and DFID, Conciliation Resources have received funds since 2008 for a project called 'Building Confidence in Conflict Transformation: the Georgian-Abkhaz Context'. Some elements of this project take place in Abkhazia, Georgia.

These projects focus on building relations among people affected by conflict, and strengthening the ability of local people to resolve their conflict.

Developing Countries: Climate Change

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether the International Climate Fund will be affected by the decision to adjust the the allocation of Official Development Assistance in line with the Office for Budget Responsibility's revised growth forecast. [85191]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The £2.9 billion allocation to the International Climate Fund will not be affected by the announcement in the autumn statement.

International Assistance

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with international aid organisations about the Multilateral Aid Review. [84872]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: I wrote last month to all 39 multilateral organisations where Department for International Development (DFID) continues to be part of core funding decisions, outlining priority areas for improvement. The letter also confirmed that to continue to inform robust decisions in DFID core aid funding to multilateral, DFID will update the multilateral aid review (MAR) for all 39 organisations in 2013, focusing on those particular areas for improvement.

DFID is in ongoing discussions with multilateral partners on areas for improvement, and to monitor progress.

Libya: Politics and Government

Mr Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to assist the development of democracy in Libya. [85129]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The UK continues to support the Libyan Transitional Government to achieve the Libyan people's ambitions for a peaceful, democratic future. In consultation with the UN and other international partners, we are exploring options to encourage strong political participation in the transition process, in particular by women and youth groups.

Sri Lanka: Internally Displaced People

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what recent discussions he has had with the government of Sri Lanka on land registration in the north and east of Sri Lanka. [85228]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: I have not had any recent discussions with the Government of Sri Lanka, but the High Commission in Colombo regularly urges the Government of Sri Lanka to resolve land disputes through a fair and accountable process. Land rights are challenging in most post-conflict situations involving internally displaced people or refugees. In Sri Lanka, the system of land distribution and multiple displacements of different groups and individuals over many years have resulted in many issues over land, including competing claims on the same land.

TREASURY

Capita: Contracts

Keith Vaz: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [84828]

Miss Chloe Smith: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent Central (Tristram Hunt), on 4 July 2011, Official Report, column 1083W.

Child Benefit

Chris Leslie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of the funding he has allocated to administering new arrangements for higher rate taxpayer families in receipt of child benefit will be allocated to new PAYE disclosure systems; [79735]

(2) by what means higher rate taxpayers with a child benefit recipient in their household will be able to disclose their circumstances if their only existing contact with HM Revenue and Customs is through PAYE; [79736]

(3) if he will estimate the number of higher rate taxpayers who will be required to declare a child benefit recipient in their household who (a) do not and (b) do complete a tax return; [79737]

(4) when he expects HM Revenue and Customs Real Time Information IT system to be capable of administering his proposals for taxation of higher rate taxpayer household child benefit recipients; and if he will make a statement. [79738]

Mr Gauke: The preliminary indicative estimate for delivering the change to child benefit announced by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, my right hon. Friend the Member for Tatton (Mr Osborne), on 4 October 2010 is £130 million over the four-year spending review period. This figure covers the changes required to existing IT systems and other administrative costs, such as staffing and communications. Of the 1.5 million higher rate taxpayers affected, HMRC estimate that approximately 700,000 currently complete a tax return and 800,000 do not currently complete a tax return. The policy will be administered through the tax system using existing systems and processes.

Defence: Procurement

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his announcements on procurement in the Autumn Statement constitute a third phase of the Growth Review; and whether the defence industry will be involved. [85211]

Danny Alexander: The procurement policy measures set out in the autumn statement were a product of phase two of the Growth Review. No decisions have been taken on the next phase of the Growth Review.

Emergencies

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many full-time equivalent staff work on the financial services workstream of the Capabilities programme; and what the staffing level was in each of the last 10 quarters. [79517]

Mr Hoban: Work on the financial services workstream of the National Resilience Capabilities programme is carried out by staff as part of a broader portfolio of work concerning finance sector resilience. It is not possible to provide a specific full-time equivalent figure for the Capabilities programme aspect of that work for this or previous years.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer who the lead Minister in his Department is for the financial services workstream of the Capabilities programme. [79518]

Mr Hoban: I am the lead Minister for the financial services workstream of the National Resilience Capabilities programme.

Jon Trickett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the budget was for the financial services workstream of the Capabilities programme in each year since 2005; and what the budget will be during the comprehensive spending review period. [79519]

Mr Hoban: Work on the financial services workstream of the National Resilience Capabilities programme has been carried out as part of a broader portfolio of work concerning finance sector resilience. A specific budgetary allocation has not been provided for this workstream.

Employment

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate how many new jobs will need to be created to keep pace with population growth in each of the next 10 years. [84818]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Office for Budget Responsibility (OBR) released the official forecast for UK whole economy employment to the first quarter of 2017 as part of the November 2011 "Economic and Fiscal Outlook".

The OBR expects UK population aged 16 and above to rise by 1.8 million, or around 3.5%, between the start of 2011 and the start of 2017.

Over the same period, total employment is forecast to increase at a similar pace (around 3.5%), from 29.2 million to 30.2 million.

As a result, the OBR forecasts that the 16+ employment rate (number of people in employment among those aged 16 and above) will remain broadly unchanged at around 58.5 over the period.

The Government are taking steps to support private sector job creation and reduce unemployment:

Reducing red tape and facilitating access to finance for small and medium sized enterprises through credit easing, helping businesses to grow and take on new workers;

Implementing reforms to help people find work including specific support for young people through the Youth Contract.

Enterprise Investment Scheme: Capital Gains Tax

Mr Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the annual cost of capital gains tax liabilities which are deferred by reinvesting the capital gains in the Enterprise Investment Scheme; and if he will make a statement. [84933]

Miss Chloe Smith: The capital gains tax deferral relief for 2009-10 and 2010-11 cost an average of £45 million a year.

EU Grants and Loans

Julian Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had on the availability of match funding for European Regional Development Fund grants. [84539]

Danny Alexander: The Chancellor of the Exchequer, the right hon. Member for Tatton (Mr Osborne), has not had any formal discussions on the availability of match funding for European Regional Development Fund grants.

The Department for Business Innovation and Skills has lead responsibility for EU Structural Funds policy overall. The Department for Communities and Local Government is the Managing Authority for European Regional Development Funding.

Financial Services: Taxation

Hazel Blears: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the total tax revenue raised from the financial services sector was in each year since 2008-09. [84901]

Mr Hoban: Tax receipts from the financial services sector are available for corporation tax, PAYE income tax and class 1 national insurance contributions (NICs), value added tax (VAT), bank payroll tax (BPT) and insurance premium tax (IPT).

Corporation tax net receipts for the financial services sector can be found in Table 11.1 A on the HMRC National Statistics website available at the following internet address. This table includes figures for the financial services sector for financial years from 2000-01. The sectors are defined by HMRC's summary trade classifications:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/corporate_tax/table11-1a.pdf

Total PAYE income tax and class 1 NICs received by HMRC in respect of employee and employer liabilities combined for the financial sector are shown in the accompanying table for 2008-09 to 2010-11.

For PAYE, the financial intermediation sector, defined by the Office for National Statistics' Standard Industrial Classification 2003, is used.

Total receipts for PAYE income tax and class 1 NICs in respect of employee and employer liabilities combined from financial intermediation sector (2008-09 to 2010-11 years from May to April)

	Receipts (£ billion)
2008-09	22.9
2009-10	24.5
2010-11	26.5

Note:
PAYE IT and NICs class 1 figures are slightly incomplete in that some late payments are omitted. These late payments represent about 1% of the total, and do so fairly consistently from year to year, so comparisons between years are not significantly affected.

The amount of Home VAT declared on traders' returns is published by trade group in table 2.3 of HMRCs latest VAT factsheet. This can be accessed at the following location on the internet:

https://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=factvat

The above figures do not include estimates of irrecoverable input VAT borne by the financial sector, robust estimates of which are not currently available, but which are significantly larger than the VAT collected from the sector itself.

A bank payroll tax was levied on the bonuses awarded by banks and building societies in the financial year 2009-10 after 8 December 2009. The net yield raised by the bank payroll tax is estimated to be £2.3 billion, while gross receipts were £3.4 billion. An explanation of the methodology underlying the estimate of net yield can be found in the previous written answer given on 24 November 2010, Official Report, House of Lords, column WA337. In line with guidance from the Office for National Statistics, the yield from the bank payroll tax was allocated to the 2010-11 tax year, as this is the point at which the tax was passed into legislation.

IPT liabilities and receipts can be accessed at the following location on the internet:

https://www.uktradeinfo.com/index.cfm?task=bullipt

Infrastructure

Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish his criteria for prioritising infrastructure. [85344]

Danny Alexander: Paragraph 2.1 of the "National Infrastructure Plan 2011" sets out the criteria used for selecting the priority infrastructure projects on which the Government will focus efforts to ensure delivery.

The "National Infrastructure Plan 2011" is available on the HM Treasury website at the following link:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/national_infrastructure_plan2011.htm

Infrastructure: Finance

Lady Hermon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of funding for the National Infrastructure Plan has been allocated to infrastructure projects in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Scotland, (c) England and (d) Wales. [84848]

Danny Alexander: The National Infrastructure Plan (NIP) is relevant to investment in reserved areas of infrastructure in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. Table 2.3 on page 49 of the Autumn Statement contains the full list of new infrastructure spending. This includes UK-wide projects such as mobile network coverage and urban broadband. In Scotland this also includes carriages for the Caledonian sleeper train.

The Scottish Government, the Welsh Government and the Northern Ireland Executive are responsible for planning and prioritising infrastructure investment in areas that are devolved. Where policy is devolved, as noted in Table 2.3 of the Autumn statement, the Administrations receive Barnett consequentials on comparable additional infrastructure spending of UK Departments in the normal way.

International Monetary Fund

Jeremy Lefroy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much the UK has received as a return on funds made available to the International Monetary Fund in each of the last 10 years. [84880]

Mr Hoban: The interest paid to the UK on a portion of the quota subscription, known as the reserve tranche position (RTP), is calculated by the special drawing right (SDR) interest rate. SDR 700 million (£695 million) of the RTP is unremunerated, reflecting the element of the UK's quota that was made available to the International Monetary Fund (IMF) before 1 April 1978 in gold. The UK does not receive any interest on this portion.

The SDR interest rate is based on a weighted average of representative interest rates on short-term debt in the money markets of the SDR basket currencies. The rates used by the IMF to pay interest are explained on the IMF's website:

http://www.imf.org/external/np/tre/sdr/burden/2011/022811.htm

The interest received on the UK's RTP in the last 10 years is set out in the following table. This information is published annually in the Exchange Equalisation Accounts.

	Interest received on the UK's RTP (£)
2000-01	98
2001-02	75
2002-03	63
2003-04	57
2004-05	46
2005-06	34
2006-07	13
2007-08	1
2008-09	4
2009-10	4
2010-11	8

Planning: Expenditure

Roberta Blackman-Woods: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate his Department has made of the financial costs of the planning system to the UK economy; and if he will make a statement. [84868]

Miss Chloe Smith: Ministers have considered independent analyses and stakeholder views of costs associated with the planning system. In a report for the Department for Communities and Local Government, Professor Ball of the university of Reading suggested that the transaction costs of development control for major residential development alone may be up to £3 billion a year. The report is available online at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/documents/507390/pdf/1436960.pdf

In very recent evidence to the DCLG Select Committee, Professor Ball advised that the actual costs are likely to be higher than this, which could push total transaction costs for residential development from £3 billion to over £4 billion. This does not include costs for commercial developments.

Public Expenditure: Infrastructure

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of providing additional public infrastructure at present standards for additional UK residents projected for 2033. [84819]

Danny Alexander: The independent Office for Budget Responsibility published its latest 'Fiscal sustainability report' in July 2011. This sets out long-term projections for the effect of demographic pressures on the public finances. The report is available at the following link:

http://budgetresponsibility.independent.gov.uk/category/topics/long-term-sustainability/

Guto Bebb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much Barnett consequential funding will be paid for investment in infrastructure projects. [85029]

Danny Alexander: As part of the autumn statement announcement, the devolved Administrations will receive additional Capital DEL funding to support Infrastructure investment over four years. Please see following table.

	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14	£million 2014-15
Scotland	50	68	142	172
Wales	0	39	81	97
Northern Ireland	0	24	53	58

Public Sector: Expenditure

Mr Hollobone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether public sector spending will be greater than tax receipts in each year to 2015. [84927]

Danny Alexander [holding answer 5 December 2011]: Public sector spending will be greater than current receipts in each year to 2015.

Public Sector: Pensions

Claire Perry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the number of public sector workers of each gender (a) earning less than £15,000 per year who will see no increase in pension contribution rates and (b) earning between £15,000 and £21,000 per year who will see their increase in pension contribution rates capped at 0.6 per cent. [75683]

Danny Alexander: I set out in my written ministerial statement to Parliament on 19 July 2011, Official Report, columns 92-94WS, that there should be no increase in employee pension contributions for those earning less that £15,000 and no more than a 1.5% increase in total by 2014-15 for those earning up to £21,000. This amounts to a 0.6% increase in 2012-13 on a pro-rata basis.

The following table shows the estimated gender distribution of public service workers earning on a full time equivalent basis (a) less than £15,000, and (b) between £15,000 and £21,000. The results are based on the Annual Survey of Hours and Earnings published by the Office for National Statistics.

	Female	Percentage Male
Total public service	67.1	32.9
Earning less than £15,000	86.9	13.1
Earning between £15,000 and £21,000	77.7	22.3

Stamp Duties: Westminster

Mr Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much stamp duty land tax has been paid in respect of properties purchased in One Hyde Park, London, in each quarter from 2009 to 2011. [84932]

Miss Chloe Smith: All information held by Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs is subject through legislation to a strict duty of confidentiality. Disclosure of information in relation to specific transactions as requested would breach this duty.

Tax Collection

Patrick Mercer: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether, in cases where HM Revenue and Customs has issued incorrect tax codes to individuals, it (a) charges those individuals interest and (b) otherwise penalises them financially for not paying their tax bills on time; and if he will make a statement. [79393]

Mr Gauke: Most people pay the right amount of tax through the PAYE system. However, the PAYE tax code represents an estimate of liability, and in a minority of cases therefore, an adjustment is needed after the end of the year to ensure that people pay the right amount. In particular, tax codes will not always reflect changes in an individual's circumstances during the tax year. At the end of the tax year HM Revenue and Customs (HMRC) checks whether each individual has paid the correct amount of tax due.

The reconciliation process for 2010-11 commenced in July 2011. Where possible, HMRC will collect underpayments of less than £3,000 during 2012-13 by making an adjustment in the tax code so that the amount due is recovered from the taxpayer's salary over the course of the tax year. Where this is likely to cause financial difficulty, HMRC may be able to spread the payments over two or three years. No interest or penalties are charged in these cases.

Where the underpayment is £3,000 or over or cannot be collected by an adjustment in a future tax code, for example because the individual may no longer be in receipt of PAYE income, HMRC will ask for a voluntary payment. Interest will not be charged providing taxpayers engage with HMRC and agree to pay their underpayment. Where payment is not made voluntarily it is requested through Self Assessment where interest and penalties may be charged on payments made late.

People who face financial difficulty in paying tax underpaid will be treated sympathetically and should contact HMRC immediately. Further information and advice is available on the HMRC website at:

www.hmrc.gov.uk/p800/paye-tax-calcs.htm

Taxation: Nuclear Power

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change on the possible introduction of a tax on the revenue generated by nuclear power stations. [85388]

Miss Chloe Smith: Treasury Ministers hold regular discussions with ministerial colleagues on a wide range of issues. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of all such discussions.

DEFENCE

Eurofighter Typhoon

Lorraine Fullbrook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of recent export campaigns for the Eurofighter Typhoon; and if he will make a statement. [80072]

Peter Luff: There remains strong interest in Typhoon. It has been selected by India to participate in the final phase of its medium multi-role combat aircraft competition. It is also competing in a number of other important markets, including Japan, Malaysia, Qatar, and Switzerland.

I expect an increase in interest in Typhoon following its highly successful air defence and ground attack roles in Libya, in which it consistently demonstrated exceptional levels of reliability, performance, accuracy, and overall cost-effectiveness.

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mr Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much funding he has allocated to Blue Force Tracking and similar systems; and if he will make a statement. [72965]

Peter Luff: Combat Identification (CID) is not a simple task in the complex environments in which our armed forces operate. It is a holistic effort that involves tactics, training and techniques as well as investment in equipment. A large number of equipment projects contribute indirectly to improvements in our overall CID capability. However, specific capabilities include:

The Bowman Tactical Communication System, with support funding of around £180 million until 2013. Future capability will be provided through the Land Environment Tactical CIS project at an approximate cost of £2.5 billion.

Helicopter and ground asset tracking systems for Afghanistan, at an annual cost of £3.5 million paid for from the Reserve.

Casualty Locating Beacon (CLB), procured under Urgent Operational Requirement timelines at a cost of £60 million.

Identification Friend or Foe (IFF), a system of transponders that are directly integrated into individual platforms enabling them to be identified within the battlefield environment. Funding has been allocated to develop a successor IFF system.

Small boat communications system (XERES), which provides a combat identification capability for which we have allocated around £400,000 of funding. The current capability will be replaced with a Bowman tactical communication system solution from 2014.

Where detailed costs have not been provided this is because the main investment decision has yet to be made and disclosure would prejudice commercial interests.

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the menu is for soldiers serving in Afghanistan on Christmas day; and what the estimated cost is of each meal. [85035]

Mr Robathan: On Christmas day in Afghanistan, troops and support staff in locations where chefs are present and the security situation allows will be served a full English breakfast, traditional turkey lunch with trimmings, and a buffet supper. Other meal options will also be available for those with special dietary requirements.

The estimated cost of the troops' meals for the day is £5.50, however this is the cost of the raw ingredients only, and as such, it is difficult to break this down into the three meals. We estimate that the traditional turkey lunch costs approximately £2.75.

Armed Forces: Drugs

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what his Department's policy is on mandatory drug tests for (a) officials and (b) service personnel; [82970]

(2) how many members of his Department have been disciplined following a drug offence in the last 12 months. [83131]

Mr Robathan: The armed forces do not tolerate the taking of illegal drugs within their ranks, as it is incompatible with military service and reduces operational effectiveness. All service personnel are subject to random compulsory drug testing. Providing a positive result, indicating the presence of illegal substances, will almost certainly result in an administrative discharge. These measures are well known and are a condition of service.

For civil servants, random mandatory testing is carried out in respect of officials employed in safety critical posts, such as armed police officers or the Royal Fleet Auxiliary. In addition, where there is due cause to suspect an officer is under the influence of drugs or alcohol, a test can be conducted. Failure is considered a major disciplinary offence and can result in dismissal.

There were fewer than 15 members of the armed forces convicted by courts-martial in the last 12 months for drugs related offences, such as possession or intent to supply illegal drugs, under service law. In addition there were some 104,600 compulsory drug tests conducted. There were in the region of 500 members of the armed forces whose test showed traces of illegal substances. Almost all have been, or can expect to be, administratively discharged. Retention will only be considered in very exceptional, and isolated, circumstances. Records indicate that no civil servant was disciplined for a drugs-related offence.

Armed Forces: Housing

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel returning from Germany he expects to be based within 40 miles of their families' living quarters. [84976]

Nick Harvey: It is too early to be specific, but I expect that the vast majority of service personnel will be based well within 40 miles of their living accommodation.

Tri-Service regulations state that service personnel are entitled to service family accommodation (SFA) at, or within a 10-mile radius, of their permanent duty station. In areas where there are pressures on SFA, this may be extended up to a 20-mile radius with the permission of their Service Command. In exceptional cases this distance can be further extended. In London, personnel are usually entitled to SFA within 90 minutes travel time using public transport. Exceptional arrangements can be made, for instance, for reasons of personal choice.

Some personnel relocated to Dalton Barracks, Abingdon, are being housed beyond the 20-mile radius. Single soldiers will move into barracks in Bicester and families will move predominantly to Arborfield. This is exceptional.

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel have been asked to vacate their service accommodation in advance of deployment to Afghanistan in the last year for which figures are available; [84979]

(2) how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel have been asked to vacate their service accommodation in advance of deployment overseas in the last year for which figures are available. [84982]

Mr Robathan: No service families are asked to vacate their service family accommodation in advance of, or because of, an operational deployment, and therefore will remain in their homes during the deployment.

Unless posted to a new location after deployment personnel should expect to return to their single living accommodation after their deployment.

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate his Department has made of the (a) closest, (b) furthest and (c) average distance between barracks and service family accommodation at (i) Kinloss and (ii) Cottesmore barracks; [84988]

(2) what estimate his Department has made of the (a) closest, (b) furthest and (c) average distance between service family accommodation and barracks. [84989]

Mr Robathan: No estimate has been made. However, personnel are usually allocated Service Family Accommodation (SFA) at, or within, a ten mile radius of their permanent duty station, and this is the case at Kinloss and Cottesmore. In areas where there are pressures on SFA, this may be extended up to a twenty-mile radius with the permission of the appropriate service command and in exceptional cases, special dispensation may be granted to accommodate personnel beyond this limit.

Personnel may also request temporarily surplus SFA at other locations for reasons of personal choice.

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list each army accommodation site in the UK. [84994]

Mr Robathan: The term 'army accommodation site' is not one used by the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and therefore no such list is held.

However, Annex A of the Defence Estate Development Plan 2009 contains details of Army barracks and other MOD establishments in the UK and overseas. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria his Department uses to determine the maximum rent which is paid for accommodation for (a) civilian and (b) service staff. [85160]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: The majority of single living accommodation and some service family accommodation (SFA) is owned by the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and therefore no rent is paid to any other landlord. The majority of SFA in England and Wales is owned by Annington Homes Ltd and the MOD pays 42% of the agreed market rent. Where SFA and substitute service accommodation is rented from other providers, the MOD may pay up to the current market rent for the property.

Although civilian personnel are responsible for their own private accommodation, where they are temporarily transferred to a location outside of the reasonable daily travel of their main home, they may stay in temporary private accommodation. This accommodation is sourced through a specialist relocation contractor who will find accommodation that meets the Department's criteria. In areas which offer temporary accommodation at a premium levels, the set criteria is supplemented with guidance on maximum rental limits.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the 20 most expensive substitute civilian staff accommodation properties rented out were in the last 12 months for which figures are available; what the postal district was of each such property; and how many occupants there were in each. [85161]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) does not recognise the term 'substitute civilian staff accommodation' and therefore the requested information is not held.

To make best use of temporarily surplus service accommodation, eligible civilian personnel may be allowed to occupy it on a non-entitled basis, but we do not fund substitute service accommodation for civilian use.

However, MOD civilian employees who are relocated to a location that is outside of reasonable travelling distance either as a result of a permanent or temporary posting are entitled to reimbursement of additional and reasonable costs incurred with occupying private temporary accommodation they are responsible for arranging.

Adam Afriyie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the 50 most expensive (a) substitute service family accommodation and (b) substitute service single accommodation properties rented out were in the last 12 months for which figures are available; what the postal district was of each such property; and how many occupants there were in each. [85162]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: Substitute service family accommodation (SSFA) and substitute service single accommodation (SSSA) properties may be rented to accommodate service families and single serving personnel respectively when no suitable Ministry of Defence accommodation is available to entitlement at or close to the duty station. Substitute accommodation is only used as a last resort.

The 50 most expensive SSFA properties rented in the last 12 months are shown in the following table.

Capita

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department has awarded to Capita since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each such contract. [84745]

Peter Luff: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) has awarded six contracts to Capita or its associated companies since May 2010, with a total value of just over £13 million. The six contracts cover provision of technical support, medical services, and communication and information systems. These contracts fall within the following value ranges:

Contract value banding	Number of contracts
£5 million to £10 million	2
£100,000 to £250,000	3
Under £100,000	1
Total contracts	6

This information was taken from the MOD's defence business service finance contracts database as at 1 December 2011.

Christmas: Expenditure

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much (a) his Department and (b) its agencies plan to spend on Christmas (i) cards, (ii) postage, (iii) parties and (iv) decorations in 2011; [84610]

(2) how much his Department (a) has spent and (b) plans to spend on Christmas (i) trees, (ii) decorations and (iii) parties in 2011. [84615]

Mr Robathan: This response covers the Ministry of Defence (MOD) and its agencies, but excludes trading funds which are outside the MOD's departmental boundary for financial reporting purposes.

The Chief of Defence Staff plans to spend this year £75 on Christmas cards, and £54 on postage. The Chief of the Defence Staff has an authorised one-off dispensation to purchase and send Christmas cards on behalf of the armed forces to his international opposite numbers at public expense.

There are no plans to spend any money for Christmas trees, decorations or parties at the MOD main building.

The Department's rules on the use of public money rule out expenditure on Christmas trees, decorations and parties, with the exception of expenditure which is covered by the Family Welfare Grant. This grant supports activities that enhance the morale of families of service personnel who are enduring the stress of being separated from their loved ones serving in a dangerous operational theatre.

The Land Forces Top Level Budget has identified planned expenditure of £80 on Christmas trees, £1,000 on decorations, and £14,920 on parties. These will be funded from the Family Welfare Grant and are for the families of service personnel deployed on operations during the festive period. The majority of this expenditure will be for the families of units from 20 Armoured Brigade, currently serving in Afghanistan.

Procurement

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the Yellow Book costs to his Department following the redundancies announced by BAE Systems. [85019]

Peter Luff [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) has not yet entered into negotiations with BAE Systems about the potential liabilities to the MOD under the Yellow Book rules as a result of their recently announced rationalisation programme. Any figures discussed or agreed, however, would be commercial in confidence.

Consultants

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Upper Bann of 21 October 2011, Official Report, column 1167W, on consultants, how many contracts of more than £20,000 his Department has awarded to external consultants since July 2010; what the details of each such contract were; and how many such proposals required approval from the Efficiency and Reform Group. [76998]

Peter Luff: Between 1 August 2010 and 31 August 2011 the Ministry of Defence (MOD) placed 29 contracts for management consultancy valued at over £20,000, the combined value of which was £15.2 million. In accordance with the Efficiency Reform Group (ERG) approvals process, six of those contracts required ERG approval before being granted. During the financial year 2009-10, the MOD spent a total of £79 million on management consultancy, which fell to £26 million during the financial year 2010-11. These figures are inclusive of expenditure on contracts placed in previous years.

The details of the contracts and the ERG approvals sought in accordance with the agreed process are detailed in the following table:

Please note: The data above do not include any contacts placed before 1 July 2010 or contracts which are awaiting ERG approval nor those contracts which are on hold.

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department has awarded to management consultants (a) since the publication of the Strategic Defence and Security Review and (b) in 2010-11; and what the total value is of those contracts. [82135]

Peter Luff: Between 19 October 2010 and 31 October 2011, 72 contracts with a total value of £9.931 million were awarded to companies providing services to the Ministry of Defence under the Government Procurement Services definition of management consultancy. During the financial year (FY) 2010-11 the total number of contracts awarded was 159, with a total value of £23.308 million. During FY 2009-10, based on the data held centrally, the number of contracts awarded was 288, with a total value of £63.799 million.

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which management consultancies provided services to his Department during the last 12 months. [82136]

Peter Luff: Since 1 October 2010, the following firms have provided services to the Ministry of Defence, under the Government Procurement Services definition of management consultancy. This relates to contracts with a value over £20,000. We do not hold data centrally on contracts below £20,000 in value and this could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hewitt Associates, Hewitt Bacon & Woodrow, LA International, Intercultures Ltd, Atkins Ltd, Harris Interactive Ltd, TMP(UK) Ltd, Cranfield University, Systems Consultants Services Ltd, Explosive Learning Solutions, PWC, Quatrosystem Ltd, Transcend, KPMG, Shepherd and Wedderburn LLP, Kenexa, LEK Consulting Ltd, Deloitte, Davitt Jones, Denton Wilde Sapte, Pinsent Masons, KPMG, Ernst & Young, Burges Salmon LLP, Simmons & Simmons.

Total spend on management consultancy in the financial year 2010-11 was £26 million, compared to £79 million for financial year 2009-10.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85064]

Mr Robathan: The information requested, broken down by each of the last six months, is as follows:

Month (2011)	Number of written questions for answer on a named received	Number answered substantively within five working days	Percentage
June	76	65	86
July	102	94	92
August	0	n/a	n/a
September	75	58	77
October	107	70	65
November	137	94	69
Total	497	381	77

The Government are committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 Session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Ex-servicemen: Employment

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how much his Department has spent on Career Transition Partnership in each year since it was established; [84068]

(2) how much his Department has spent on the Employment Support Programme in each year since its creation; [84071]

(3) how much his Department spent on the full resettlement programme in each year since its creation. [84992]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The following table provides information on the costs attributed to the Career Transition Partnership (CTP) since 1 April 1998. We do not maintain records of the costs for individual resettlement programmes, as this is a matter for the CTP.

Financial year	Costs (£ million)
1998-99	2.166

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) in which sectors of the economy veterans find careers once they have left the armed forces; [84069]

(2) in which main sectors armed forces veterans have found careers through the (a) full resettlement service and (b) Employment Support programme since its creation. [84991]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 1 December 2011]: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 812W, to the hon. Member for West Ham (Lyn Brown).

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many armed forces veterans have been through the Employment Support programme in each year since its creation. [84990]

Mr Robathan: The following table provides information on the number of service leavers who have accessed the services of the Career Transition Partnership Employment Support programme for each financial year since 2005.

Geneva Convention

Katy Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 31 October 2011, Official Report, column 534W, on the Geneva Convention, how many in-service weapons have not had their legality reviewed under Article 36 in Amended Protocol 1 of the Geneva Convention. [79723]

Nick Harvey: There are more than 1,800 weapons and systems currently in the UK armed forces inventory which were brought into service before the obligation to legally review against Article 36 in Amended Protocol 1 came into force for the UK in 1999. The obligation is not retrospective. Since 1999 all weapons and equipment entering service have been subject to a formal legal weapons review in accordance with Article 36.

Gurkha Resettlement Office

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many former Gurkhas registered with the Gurkha Resettlement Office who have settled in the UK since 2009 are between the ages of (a) 30 and 39, (b) 40 and 49, (c) 50 and 59, (d) 60 and 69, (e) 70 and 79 and (f) 80 and 89; and how many widows have registered. [85221]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: The Ministry Of Defence does not monitor the age profile of former Gurkhas who have settled in the UK. The age profile of former Gurkhas registered with the Gurkha Settlement Office in Kathmandu between 5 October 2009 and 25 November 2011 is shown in the following table. The number of widows who have registered in the same period is 499.

Ages	Number
30 to 39	3
40 to 49	291
50 to 59	736
60 to 69	1,134
70 to 79	530
80 to 89	54

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gurkhas have registered with the Gurkha Resettlement Office in Kathmandu since 2009. [85222]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: The number of former Gurkhas registered with the Gurkha Settlement Office in Kathmandu between 5 October 2009 and 25 November 2011 is 2,751.

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in which local authority areas Gurkha veterans and their dependents have settled since 2009; and how many have settled in each local authority area. [85223]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: This information is not recorded by the Ministry of Defence because there is no requirement to do so. However, we have estimates from Gurkha communities that the main concentrations of Gurkha veterans, excluding dependants, as at 14 June 2011 was as follows:

	Number
Hampshire	4,256
Kent	1,500
London	980
Surrey	687
Berkshire	350
Wiltshire	321

It is not known whether these Gurkha veterans settled in the UK under the 2004 or the 2009 immigration changes.

Gurkhas: Pensions

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the Gurkha veterans who have settled in the UK since May 2009 are classified as (a) service pensioners and (b) welfare pensioners. [85224]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 6 December 2011]: No information is held to identify whether Gurkha veterans who have settled in the UK since May 2009 are service or welfare pensioners.

Harrier Aircraft

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether the sale price for the Harrier jump jet includes intellectual property rights for their upgrade; [84983]

(2) what methodology his Department used to calculate the sale price for the Harrier jump jet; [84984]

(3) with how many (a) private contractors and (b) national governments his Department has had discussions on the sale of Harrier jump jets. [84985]

Peter Luff: The UK-owned Harrier aircraft are included in a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with the USA, Italy and Spain. Given the support arrangements that were set out in the MOU, which requires first refusal to be given to these nations, the UK offered the Harrier aircraft and assets to these nations. A declared intent from the US Government to purchase the majority of Harrier assets meant that sale to commercial enterprises was not explored. Interest in the Harrier aircraft was received from two non-MOU countries but detailed discussions did not take place.

The value of the sale was established by negotiation following market analysis taking into consideration the net book value of the assets. Further allowance was made for the UK not providing any forms of warranty, guarantee or indemnity for the state, condition, accuracy, fitness for purpose, quality or standard of any of the Harrier assets or documentation.

The sale price of Harrier assets to the US Government did not include Intellectual Property Rights.

Joint Strike Fighter Aircraft

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long a delay in delivery has been caused by ordering C rather than B variant joint combat aircraft. [83809]

Peter Luff: There has been no delay to the delivery of our operational test and evaluation aircraft and we will receive our first UK aircraft in May 2012.

Due to the incremental procurement strategy we are yet to place orders for production aircraft.

Navy

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what period elapsed between the initial gate decision and full operational capability in respect of each Royal Navy (a) surface vessel and (b) submarine commissioned in the last 10 years. [84577]

Peter Luff: Initial gate approvals and declaration of full operating capability are given on a class basis rather than by individual vessel and the relevant dates are listed in the following table. Initial gate is approval to undertake development and evaluation of options within an assessment phase to determine which best meets the requirement. Full operating capability is when the full planned military capability is delivered, which is usually some time after the last ship in the class has been commissioned. The concept of initial gate was introduced in 1998 following the strategic defence review, so those classes of vessel which had been approved before then did not undergo such a process. The information provided is for each of the classes of Royal Naval surface vessel and submarine for which one or more vessels has been commissioned within the period 1 December 2001 to 30 November 2011.

Vessel class	Date of initial gate	Date of full operating capability for class
Astute Class submarines[1]	n/a	[5]
Type 45 destroyers[2]	n/a	[5]
Type 23 frigates[1]	n/a	2002
River Class[3]	n/a	2004
HMS Clyde[4]	2003	2007
HMS Protector[4]	2010	2011
HMS Albion/ Bulwark[1]	n/a	2004
Sandown Class[1]	n/a	2001
HMS Echo/ Enterprise	1999	2004

[1] The Department did not have an initial gate approval point when these programmes were initiated. For Type 23 the first frigate (HMS Norfolk) was laid down in 1985 and the last frigate (HMS St Albans) was commissioned in 2002. For the Astute programme, the Department considers the equivalent date to be 1991, and for HMS Albion/Bulwark 1991 and for the Sandown Class 1994.
[2] The Type 45 programme was initially part of the Common New Generation Frigate (CNGF) project with France and Italy. The Type 45 programme was established when the UK withdrew from the CNGF element of the tripartite collaborative project. The Type 45 programme therefore went straight to main gate in August 2000.
[3] An initial gate decision was not made for the River Class as the vessels were proposed by the shipbuilder Vosper Thorneycroft UK through an unsolicited bid. The Department placed a contract for the lease and support of the River Class in 2001.
[4] HMS Clyde and Protector are non-complex vessels acquired through commercial lease arrangements, thus the period between initial gate and full operational capability is much shorter than for the other projects.
[5] Not yet achieved.

Public Bodies Bill (HL) 2010-12

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what discussions (a) he, (b) his predecessor and (c) Ministers in his Department have had with the Royal British Legion on the Public Bodies Bill; [84961]

(2) what discussions he and Ministers in his Department have had with colleagues in the Ministry of Justice on the Public Bodies Bill and the Office of the Chief Coroner. [84384]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Secretary of State for Defence, my right hon. Friend the Member for Runnymede and Weybridge (Mr Hammond), has had no recent discussions with ministerial colleagues on the Public Bodies Bill and the office of the Chief Coroner. The Chief Coroner post is entirely a matter for the Ministry of Justice, although we have provided assistance with regard to the impact on military bereaved families and have engaged with both the Ministry of Justice and Cabinet Office on this matter.

The Royal British Legion has made public its position on the Public Bodies Bill on many occasions and has referred to it in contacts with Defence Ministers and officials, but this is not a matter on which the Ministry of Defence takes the lead.

Sea King Helicopters

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the likely cost of extending the life of the Search and Rescue Sea King helicopters for (a) two, (b) five and (c) 10 years. [84370]

Peter Luff: The following table shows the estimated capital investment necessary to extend the life of the Ministry of Defence's Search and Rescue Sea Kings beyond their planned retirement. This is forecast to commence in 2015 and will conclude by March 2016.

Estimated costs for extending life of SAR Sea Kings beyond 2016

Number of years	£ million
Two	20
Five	100
Ten	350

These costs are for extending the life of the airframe only, and do not include the costs for providing aircrew and maintainers, supporting the aircrew training system, including simulators, and providing associated management arrangements, all of which are to be provided by the contractor under arrangements announced by the Secretary of State for Transport, my right hon. Friend the Member for Putney (Justine Greening), on 28 November 2011, Official Report, columns 52-53WS. These costs also exclude the costs of actually operating and flying the aircraft. It should be noted that while Sea King helicopters could be run on, their older design and age means that their capability in terms of time to reach incidents and availability would remain lower than more modern helicopters, regardless of investment.

World War II: Medals

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department is taking to encourage former Bevin Boys to apply for the Bevin Boys Veterans Badge. [85372]

Mr Robathan: The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) is the sponsor of the badge, and the Ministry of Defence issues the badge on their behalf. Full details of the badge, the eligibility criteria and the application process can be found on both the DECC and Veterans UK website.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85643]

Mr Paterson: The Northern Ireland Office internal auditors operate to Government Internal Audit Standards.

My Department does not have executive agencies.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85709]

Mr Paterson: Corporate risk registers are held by all of the non-departmental public bodies for which my Department is responsible.

Effective risk management is an integral component of the corporate governance arrangements of all of the Northern Ireland Office's sponsored bodies.

PRIME MINISTER

Research

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Prime Minister how many times he has visited a (a) university research department or (b) commercial centre of research since May 2010. [84448]

The Prime Minister: I have meetings and discussions with a wide range of organisations at a variety of locations around the country, including research centres. For instance, I visited BT's Adastral park on 5 December 2011. A strong competitive science and research base is a crucial part of securing sustainable economic growth and creating jobs of the future.

Festivals and Special Occasions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Prime Minister whether he took part in any events in an official capacity to mark (a) St George's day, (b) St Patrick's day, (c) St David's day and (d) St Andrew's day in 2011. [84898]

The Prime Minister: The Government and their bodies support a number of events to signify the importance of these dates, including flying their flags on a number of Government buildings.

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Council Tax

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) if he will estimate the average level of council tax per capita for (a) Eastleigh, (b) Amber Valley, (c) North Hertfordshire, (d) Broadland, (e) Stafford, (f) Epping Forest, (g) Swale, (h) Warwick, (i) East Hertfordshire, (j) St Albans, (k) Guildford, (l) Cherwell, (m) Lancaster, (n) Dacorum, (o) Maidstone and (p) Redcar and Cleveland in each year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [85373]

(2) if he will estimate the average level of council tax per capita for (a) Vale of White Horse, (b) Waverley, (c) Horsham, (d) South Kesteven, (e) East Devon, (f) Braintree, (g) King's Lynn and West Norfolk and (h) Tendring in each year between 2008-09 and 2011-12. [85374]

Robert Neill: Figures on average council tax per dwelling and average Band D council tax by local authority can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/localgovernment/localregional/localgovernmentfinance/statistics/counciltax/

Figures on council tax requirements by local authority can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/localgovernment/localregional/localgovernmentfinance/statistics/revenueexpenditure/

Mid-year population estimates by local authority area are published by the Office for National Statistics:

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/hub/population/population-change/population-estimates

Parliamentary Written Questions

Jon Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many parliamentary questions for (a) ordinary written answer and (b) written answer on a named day by his Department have remained unanswered for a period of two months since May 2010. [79587]

Robert Neill: 20 (0.5%) of around 3,900 written parliamentary questions answered by the Department in the House of Commons between the 2010 General Election and 31 October 2011 were answered two months or more after their due date for reply. 16 of these were ordinary written questions and four were named day questions.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the session. Statistics relating to Government Department's performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Gurkhas: Finance

Mr Kevan Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 23 November 2011, Official Report, column 430W, on Gurkhas: Aldershot, which local authorities will receive funding to support the integration of retired Gurkhas; how much each local authority will receive; and what methodology will be used to allocate the funding. [85269]

Andrew Stunell: DCLG Ministers and officials have met Gurkha charities and local authorities to understand the needs of local areas with a significant population of Gurkhas and how we might work with a small number of local authorities and Gurkha charities to support wider settlement. My officials have met Gurkha charities and the chief executive of Rushmoor borough council to discuss the impact of the settlement of Gurkhas and their families on the local community.

We have written to the chief executives of local authorities with Gurkha veterans asking for their experience and ideas. When we have received their responses, and following further conversations with Gurkha charities, we will make a decision on how to distribute available funds.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Civil Disorder

Mr Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what assessment she has made of the use of (a) the internet and (b) mobile telephones in (i) disseminating information about and (ii) encouraging participation in recent public disorder; and if she will make a statement; [69824]

(2) what recent discussions she (a) has had and (b) plans to have with the operators of mobile telephone companies on the provision of information to the police about individuals who (i) solicited participation and (ii) participated (A) directly and (B) indirectly in recent public disorder; and if she will make a statement; [69835]

(3) what estimate she has made of the number of offenders who (a) solicited participation and (b) participated (i) directly and (ii) indirectly in recent public disorder by use of (A) the internet and (B) mobile telephones; and if she will make a statement. [69836]

Nick Herbert: It is clear that social networking sites were used to co-ordinate some of the criminality in the disorder in August. We do not have a clear picture of how many of those committing offences made use of such services.

On 25 August, the Secretary of State for the Home Department, held a constructive meeting with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), the Metropolitan Police Force and representatives from the social media industry. The discussions looked at how law enforcement and the networks can build on existing relationships and co-operation to prevent the networks being used for criminal behaviour.

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps she is taking to review the use of new methods of using mobile technology following the public disorder of August 2011. [70858]

Nick Herbert: On 25 August 2011, the Secretary of State for the Home Department, held a constructive meeting with the Association of Chief Police Officers (ACPO), the Metropolitan Police Service and representatives from the social media industry. Companies made clear their commitment to removing illegal content and, when appropriate, closing accounts, whether at the request of the police or because of a report from other users. It was agreed to step up co-operation to ensure that these processes are working effectively.

ACPO is also taking forward work to develop the capability of police forces to use social media as a means of communicating and engaging with communities.

Firearms: Crime

Mr Umunna: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent assessment she has made of public opinion on what constitutes a gun crime; and whether her Department's definition of a gun crime accords with that opinion. [85492]

Nick Herbert: The Home Office makes regular assessments of the threat posed by gun crime including issues relating to the definition of this category of offence.

Metropolitan Police: Finance

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information her Department holds on the budget of the SO14 Royalty Protection Unit of the Metropolitan Police for the most recent financial year for which figures are available. [83819]

Damian Green [holding answer 29 November 2011]: We are unable to provide detailed information on the budget provided to SO14 Royalty Protection Unit of the Metropolitan Police. To do so would compromise the integrity of the security arrangements in place for members of the Royal Family.

We can provide details of the aggregate Home Office Dedicated Security Post (DSP) Grant which provides funding for police officers and staff who carry out protection duties. These duties relate to the protection of members of the Royal Family and their residences; and the protection of public figures, and their official and private residences. In 2010-11, £128 million was spent under the DSP Grant.

Police: Wales

Simon Hart: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) special constables and (b) police community support officers (i) were assigned to duties in Dyfed Powys in (A) 2009 and (B) 2010 and (ii) have been assigned to duties in that area in 2011; [85609]

(2) how many police officers there were in Dyfed Powys police in (a) 2009, (b) 2010 and (c) 2011. [85610]

Nick Herbert: The latest available information, which is set out in the following table, shows the number of police officers, special constables and police community support officers in Dyfed Powys police force between 2009 and 2011. Police officers and police community support officer figures are full-time equivalent which have been rounded to the nearest whole number. Special constables figures are given as headcount measures.

Number of police officers, special constables and police community support officers in Dyfed Powys police force between 2009 and 2011

As at 31 March each year	Police officers[1]	Special constables[2]	Police community support officers[1]
2009	1,197	176	82
2010	1,195	171	83
2011	1,157	186	80

[1] This table contains full-time equivalent figures that have been rounded to the nearest whole number.
[2] Special constable figures are given as headcount measures.

UK Border Agency: Correspondence

Mr Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if she will ask the UK Border Agency to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Walsall North of 2 November 2011 regarding a constituent, ref: M1309525 and CTS ref: B28057/11. [85513]

Damian Green: The UK Border Agency wrote to the hon. Member on 6 December 2011.

WORK AND PENSIONS

Employment and Support Allowance

Mrs Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions pursuant to the answer of 12 October 2011, Official Report, columns 426-7W, on employment and support allowance, if he will estimate the level of the disregard for (a) personal and (b) occupational pensions in employment and support allowance calculations if the level had been uprated by the consumers price index since 2001; and if he will estimate the financial effect of such uprating on an individual with £110 personal pension and no other income. [85088]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is in the following table. Based on the information in the table a person on contributory employment and support allowance with an occupational pension of £110.00 a week would have their benefit reduced by £3.95 a week.

Consumer prices index date	Consumer prices index rate of increase (percentage)	Benefit year	Threshold (£)
September 2000	1.00	April 2001	85.00
September 2001	1.30	April 2002	85.85
September 2002	0.90	April 2003	86.95
September 2003	1.50	April 2004	87.75

Consumer prices index date	Consumer prices index rate of increase (percentage)	Benefit year	Threshold (£)
September 2004	1.10	April 2005	89.05
September 2005	2.40	April 2006	90.05
September 2006	2.40	April 2007	92.20
September 2007	1.70	April 2008	94.40
September 2008	5.20	April 2009	96.00
September 2009	1.10	April 2010	101.00
September 2010	3.10	April 2011	102.10

Note:
Benefit rates are normally increased from April each year. The rate of increase is based on the previous September's inflation rate. Contributory employment and support allowance replaced incapacity benefit for new claims from October 2008. Incapacity benefit and employment support allowance have the same threshold for occupational and personal pension income of £85.00 a week.

Employment Schemes

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions with reference to the introduction of universal credit, what definition of (a) in employment and (b) off benefit his Department will use for the Work programme. [85599]

Chris Grayling: From the introduction of universal credit in 2013, we will continue to reward our Work programme contractors for getting claimants into work and keeping them there, in the same way that we do now.

We will be working in partnership with our contractors to develop an equivalent Work programme outcome definition which aligns current contracts with universal credit.

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions when he will publish details of the penalties for early termination of contracts under the (a) Flexible New Deal and (b) Pathways to Work programmes. [85600]

Chris Grayling: Discussions to agree settlements in closing Flexible New Deal contracts are currently in train. Information on settlement costs will be published once agreements have been reached with all contractors. No penalties were incurred in respect of the Pathways to Work programme.

Employment Schemes: Apprentices

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether he intends to publish data on the number of job outcomes under the Work programme that result from placement of an apprenticeship. [85601]

Chris Grayling: As a minimum, DWP currently expects to publish referral figures from spring 2012 and job outcome figures from autumn 2012. DWP expects to make these publicly available by various breakdowns including age; gender; ethnicity; disability; provider; local authority; parliamentary constituency; and contract package area. However, this is dependant on the availability and quality of data from the administrative systems.

Presently, we do not plan to publish data on the number of job outcomes that result from placement of an apprenticeship. The exact details of what Work programme Official Statistics we will publish will be available once we have developed more detailed requirements and are confident that the data are of sufficient quality to publish.

An information note detailing the Work programme Official Statistics release strategy can be found at the following website:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/index.php?page=statistical_summaries

Included in the note is an invitation for feedback on the type of statistics users would like to see made available for the Work programme.

As soon as we are confident we have reliable data we will pre-announce an exact release date via this website and on the UK Statistics Authority publication hub. Statistics will be published in the DWP quarterly statistical summary and via an internet based tabulation tool offering users bespoke breakdowns of the headline statistics.

Housing Benefit

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people receive local housing allowance in respect of (a) a shared room, (b) one bedroom, (c) two bedrooms, (d) three bedrooms, (e) four bedrooms and (f) five bedrooms in each local authority in Wales. [85650]

Steve Webb: Estimates of the numbers of local housing allowance (LHA) recipients on each rate, by local authority area, are published on the Department for Work and Pensions website (Annex 2, Table 5):

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/cia-hb-shared-accommodation-age-threshold.pdf

Housing Benefit: Brent

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much discretionary housing payment was allocated to the London borough of Brent in the last five years; and what proportion of the funding was used in each year. [84041]

Steve Webb: The following table shows how much Government contribution towards discretionary housing payments was allocated to the London borough of Brent, how much of the Government contribution they claimed, how much they spent in excess of the Government contribution and how much they spent on discretionary housing payments as a percentage of the Government contribution for each of the last five years.

	Government contribution towards discretionary housing payments (£)	Amount claimed against the Government contribution (£)	Amount spent in excess of the Government contribution (£)	% of the Government contribution spent
2006-07	250,674	250,674	1,850	100.74
2007-08	230,888	230,888	19,966	108.65
2008-09	254,714	208,319	0	81.79

2010-11	226,149	226,149	348	100.15

Housing Benefit: Females

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many lone parents in Wales receive housing benefit; and what proportion of such claimants are female. [85520]

Steve Webb: The information requested on lone parents in Wales receiving housing benefit and the percentage that are female is provided in the following table:

	Lone parents
	Caseload	Percentage who are female
Wales	57,770	94.1

Notes:
1.
The figures have been rounded to the nearest ten.
2. Percentage has been rounded to the nearest decimal place.
3. Housing benefit figures exclude any extended payment cases. An extended payment is a payment that may be received for a further four weeks when they start working full time, work more hours or earn more money.
4. SHBE is a monthly electronic scan of claimant level data direct from local authority computer systems. It replaces quarterly aggregate clerical returns.
5. The data is available monthly from November 2008 and August 2011 is the latest available.
6. For this analysis lone parents are those who are single with child dependant(s).
7. Caseload figure includes less than 1% of cases where gender is not recorded/missing.

Housing Benefit: Social Rented Housing

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment his Department has made of the effect on housing benefit claimants of the introduction of a size criteria in the social rented sector in each local authority in Wales. [85696]

Steve Webb: The information is not available.

The estimated impact of changes to housing benefit for tenants living in the social rented sector is based upon information collected in the Department's Family Resources Survey. Because the survey collects information from only a sample of households, we cannot produce reliable estimates for the number of claimants likely to be affected by the size criteria in each local authority area.

In February 2011 the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) produced an impact assessment entitled "Under-occupation of social housing", coinciding with the publication of the Welfare Reform Bill.

The impact assessment included regional estimates for the number of housing benefit claimants living in the social rented sector who were likely to be affected by the introduction of the size criteria. This included an estimate of the likely impact on Welsh housing benefit claimants.

The impact assessment can be found at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/social-sector-housing-under-occupation-wr2011-ia.pdf

Housing Benefit: Wales

Nia Griffith: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many households in (a) Wales and (b) each local authority in Wales will be worse off following the introduction of the housing benefit cap. [85691]

Chris Grayling: Estimates of the numbers affected in each local authority area by the introduction of caps on local housing allowance (LHA) rates and restricting LHA levels to the four bedroom rate are published on the Department for Work and Pensions website:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/impacts-of-hb-proposals.pdf

New Deal Schemes

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what proportion of referrals were dealt with by voluntary sector providers in each year of the Flexible new deal programme. [85603]

Chris Grayling: DWP held 24 contracts with 14 prime providers for Flexible new deal and none of those providers were from the voluntary sector.

Each prime provider had a supply chain of sub-contracts in place which included organisations from the voluntary sector. Data on the onward referral of claimants from prime providers to sub-contracted providers is not something that was recorded for Flexible new deal.

Pay

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate has been made of the value of benefits in addition to annual salary given to the top one per cent. of earners in (a) 1981 and (b) 2011. [84461]

Mr Gauke: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available either for benefits in kind or for state benefits.

Related information on amounts of taxable benefits in kind and expenses by income for years 2002-03 to years 2007-08 are published in table 4.2 on the HMRC website at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/taxable_benefits/menu.htm

Related information on the receipt of state support by equivalised income quintile for working-age individuals for 2009-10 are published in Table 5.3 of the Households Below Average Income publication at:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/hbai/hbai2010/index.php?page=contents

Social Justice Directorate

Michael Dugher: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the proportion of his Department's budget allocated to the Social Justice Directorate in (a) 2011-12, (b) 2012-13, (c) 2013-14 and (d) 2014-15. [85296]

Chris Grayling: The Department's planned allocation set aside for the Social Justice Directorate across these years cannot be separately identified because priorities and allocations are continuously reviewed.

Social Security Benefits

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what his policy is on support to fund additional work for people who left benefit and meet the Work programme's definition of in work but who will not receive working tax credit from April 2012 as a result of changes to the hours rule. [85602]

Chris Grayling: Work programme providers are paid for supporting people into work and helping them to stay there, for up to two years depending on the participants' circumstances. We have not specified what support the providers should give to participants once they find work—we expect them to innovate and find the most effective way of supporting them, reflecting their individual circumstances.

Unemployment

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what discussions he has had with Work programme providers since the publication of the Office for Budget Responsibility's new unemployment forecasts. [85549]

Chris Grayling: The DWP officials managing Work programme contracts will be responsible for communications with providers concerning the Office for Budget Responsibility forecasts.

Unemployment: Ex-servicemen

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the (a) employability and (b) employment retention of veterans. [85694]

Maria Miller: All new claimants for jobseekers allowance are assessed by Jobcentre Plus staff to ensure the most appropriate help is in place throughout their claim to support their employability.

The Department for Work and Pensions does not routinely record whether benefit claimants are former armed forces personnel. Also, the Labour Force Survey does not record whether respondents are former armed forces personnel.

We are looking into ways of improving knowledge on the employment and benefit outcomes of ex-service personnel.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Electoral Register: Fraud

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many successful prosecutions for electoral registration fraud there were in each region in each of the last five years. [85263]

Mr Harper: Electoral Commission figures show that the number of convictions for electoral registration fraud across the United Kingdom over the last three years was as follows:

	Convictions
2008	1
2009	1
2010	—

The Government do not collect or hold this data, but these statistics can be found in the Electoral Commission's 'Analysis of cases of alleged electoral malpractice' accessible through the following internet links:

http://www.electoralcommission.org.uk/__data/assets/pdf_file/0013/109012/Integrity-report-FINAL-no-embargo.pdf

The data has only been collected in this format since 2008.

CABINET OFFICE

Advisory Services

Yvonne Fovargue: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when his Department's review of free advice services will conclude; and when he expects to report the outcome of the review to the House. [85649]

Mr Hurd: The review of the free advice service sector announced on 21 November 2011 has now started and will conclude early next year. An appropriate announcement will be made at the relevant time.

Air Pollution: Cabinet Committees

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office (1) how many meetings of the (a) Home Affairs and (b) Economic Affairs Cabinet Sub-Committees have considered the effects of government policy on (i) air quality and (ii) the natural environment since May 2010; [84029]

(2) which Cabinet Sub-Committees have discussed plans for meeting EU air quality limit values under the Ambient Air Quality Directive. [84034]

Richard Benyon: I have been asked to reply.

In line with the constitutional convention of collective decision-making, and section 2 of the Ministerial Code, the Government do not disclose details of the internal process through which decisions are taken.

The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, is responsible for air quality (with the Secretary of State for Transport and the natural environment, and sits on the Economic Affairs and Home Affairs Cabinet Committees, where a wide range of issues are discussed.

Charitable Donations: Fraud

Mr Marcus Jones: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what recent progress he has made in steps to tackle charity bag doorstep collection fraud. [85508]

Mr Hurd: These crimes are unacceptable and risk undermining the confidence of the generous donating public. I continue to encourage and support collaborative work between the charity sector, commercial recyclers, licensing and enforcement agencies, and government. The National Fraud Intelligence Bureau has made good progress in building intelligence and working with police forces to tackle the criminal gangs that are behind much of this crime. I also know that the Fund Raising Standards Board (FRSB), in collaboration with other stakeholders, has just launched a new public awareness campaign to tackle bogus charity collections and encourage the public to give with care. The FRSB has written to Members of this House inviting support for the campaign.

Government Departments: Databases

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the autumn statement by the Chancellor of the Exchequer of 29 November 2011, Official Report, columns 799-810, and the paper Further Detail on Open Data Measures in the Autumn Statement 2011, what discussions he has had with the Office for National Statistics on each of the measures listed in the paper prior to their announcement; what the outcome was of the discussions on each such measure; and if he will make a statement. [85597]

Mr Maude: Comprehensive stakeholder engagement was undertaken in developing open data measures which were announced in the Chancellor's autumn statement, including meeting with data users and the Office for National Statistics. The ONS will continue to be a key stakeholder for the Cabinet Office Transparency Team given their particular position providing national statistics.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Alan Beith: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he expects to reply to the letter of 19 July 2011 from the right hon. Member for Berwick-upon-Tweed on a claim under the Civil Injury Benefit Scheme. [83162]

Mr Maude: The Cabinet Office has no record of receiving a letter from the right hon. Member dated 19 July 2011. I have responded to his subsequent letter on the same topic today.

Public Sector: Part-time Employment

Jessica Morden: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate he has made of the proportion of public sector workers who work part-time in Wales; and what proportion of such part-time workers are women. [85390]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what estimate he has made of the proportion of public sector workers who work part-time in Wales; and what proportion of such part-time workers are women. 85390

For the period July-September 2011 the estimated proportion of public sector workers in Wales who work part-time was 27 per cent. The proportion of these workers who were women was 87 per cent. The estimates are derived from the Labour Force Survey (LFS) and are not seasonally adjusted. As with any sample survey, estimates from the LFS are subject to a margin of uncertainty.

In the LFS the distinction between public and private sector is based on respondents' views about the organisation for which they work. The public sector estimates provided do not correspond to official Public Sector Employment estimates. Those are derived directly from employers and are based on National Accounts definitions, but do not include a gender breakdown.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Food Labelling

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (1) whether food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible plan to implement calorie labelling on menus and display boards; [85836]

(2) what steps the food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure the country of origin of foods are labelled on its menus and display boards. [85837]

John Penrose: The Department does not source food as part of its day to day business, following the closure of the staff canteen in December 2009. The Department for Culture, Media and Sport does not hold the information requested for its public bodies.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport (1) how much his Department spent in (a) Birmingham, (b) Newcastle, (c) Wakefield, (d) Manchester, (e) Leeds, (f) Liverpool, (g) Coventry, (h) Bristol, (i) Sheffield, (j) Bradford, (k) Leicester and (l) Nottingham in the last financial year for which figures are available; [85447]

(2) how much funding his Department has allocated to Birmingham in (a) ring-fenced and (b) non-ring fenced funding grants for each of the next three years. [85448]

John Penrose: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport analyses funding on a regional basis and not by individual cities across the country. To identify funding by geographical location could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many and what proportion of questions for ordinary written answer received a substantive response within (a) 10, (b) 20, (c) 30 and (d) more than 30 sitting days in the 2010-12 session to date. [85919]

John Penrose: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport received 1,973 ordinary written parliamentary questions for answer from the start of this parliamentary Session to 30 November 2011. The following table shows the proportion of questions which received substantive replies within the timescale specified.

	Number which received a substantive reply in:
Ordinary written PQs tabled this Session	10 sitting days	20 sitting days	30 sitting days	30+ sitting days
1,973	1,768 (89.6%)	129 (6.5%)	76 (3.85%)	0

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the Committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Gambling: Licensing

Cathy Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what timetable he has set for the introduction of a secondary gaming licence for overseas gambling operators. [85506]

John Penrose: We are committed to taking forward this legislation and will introduce it at the earliest opportunity. The Government have a very full legislative programme, however, and we are pursuing all options.

Horse Racing: Betting

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport with reference to the Gambling Act 2005, when he expects the full agreement between the racecourse bookmakers and (a) Arena Leisure and (b) Jockey Club Racing to be announced. [86037]

John Penrose: We understand that an agreement between the racecourse bookmakers and Arena Leisure has been reached. The discussions with Jockey Club Racing, although progressing, are yet to be fully completed. Departmental officials are in close and regular contact with the Federation of Racecourse Bookmakers Ltd (FRB) and the Racecourse Association (RCA) over the discussions. I strongly encourage both sides to find a way to reach agreement before the end of the year.

Mass Media: Young People

Lyn Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions his Department has had on the negative portrayal of teenagers, including teenage mothers, in the media. [84908]

Mr Vaizey: We are committed to a media free from Government intervention. However, while respecting this independence, we continue to look to all media to deal responsibly and sensitively to public concerns about the portrayal of women and young people.

The UK's media regulatory system is one of the most robust in the world, aiming to strike the right balance between freedom of expression while ensuring media content is acceptable. Under this system, the various bodies which regulate the media have set out a range of controls in relation to discriminatory treatment and the portrayal of women.

The role the media can play in presenting positive portrayals of women is widely recognised by Government, regulators and media organisations. As part of our consideration of these issues the Violence Against Women and Girls Inter-Ministerial Group recently held a forum, organised with DCMS and chaired by the Secretary of State for the Home Department, to discuss a range of concerns about the representation of women in the media.

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Air Pollution

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will consider publishing an air quality risk assessment for the purposes of identifying the risks to the UK population of poor air quality and priority areas for action. [84127]

Richard Benyon: Under the ambient air quality directive (2008/50/EC) and the fourth daughter directive (2004/107/EC), in September each year the UK publishes a compliance assessment for the previous calendar year. This identifies those parts of the UK where further action is needed to improve air quality. It is available on the library section of the UK-Air website:

http://uk-air.defra.gov.uk/

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the effects of poor air quality on different socio-economic groups. [84142]

Richard Benyon: The Government have published reports analysing air quality and social deprivation, which are publicly available on the UK-Air website:

http://uk-air.defra.gov.uk/

The most recent report, 'Air Quality and Social Deprivation in the UK: an environmental inequalities analysis' is from 2006. This highlights the complex relationship between the distribution of pollutant concentrations and areas of social deprivation, which depends on the pollutant in question and differs in the UK's various cities and regions.

Air Pollution: EU Law

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs if she will publish the minutes of each meeting her Department has had with the European Commission to discuss plans for meeting EU air quality limit values under the ambient air quality directive. [84051]

Richard Benyon: In September DEFRA submitted air quality plans to the European Commission setting out how the limit values for nitrogen dioxide are to be met in the shortest possible time. The Commission has up to nine months to assess these plans. DEFRA has had no bilateral meetings with the Commission to discuss them.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether her Department has completed an equalities impact assessment in respect of its air quality plans for the achievement of EU air quality limit values for nitrogen dioxide. [84052]

Richard Benyon: The air quality plans that were submitted to the European Commission in September 2011 assessed the impact that relevant current and planned policies, and local air quality plans, were likely to have on concentrations of nitrogen dioxide.

The need for an equalities impact assessment is considered when decisions about new policies are being made.

Biofuels: Pollution

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what plans her Department has to measure (a) black carbon and (b) arsenic emissions from biomass generating plants. [84138]

Richard Benyon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 22 November 2011, Official Report, column 302W.

Carbon Emissions

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what discussions her Department has had with the Department for Transport on the introduction of a national framework for low emission zones; [84049]

(2) what estimate she has made of the cost to the public purse of achieving EU air quality limit values for nitrogen dioxide by 1 January 2015; [84050]

(3) what assessment she has made of the potential contribution of a National Framework for Low Emission Zones to improving air quality. [84144]

Richard Benyon: DEFRA is working closely with the Department for Transport to investigate further measures to reduce pollution from heavy goods vehicles (HGVs) and buses, including the feasibility of a national framework for low emission zones. A report on the feasibility of developing a certification scheme for technology retrofitted to HGVs to abate nitrogen oxides emissions was published in November and is available on the UK-Air website:

http://uk-air.defra.gov.uk/

An assessment of technical measures needed to achieve compliance with EU air quality limit values was undertaken, which informed an impact assessment of a low emissions zone framework for inclusion in the time extension notification for compliance with the EU limit value for nitrogen dioxide. This impact assessment was published in June 2011 and is available on DEFRA's website.

An assessment of the potential contribution of a national framework for low emission zones to improving air quality was included in our air quality plans for nitrogen dioxide. These plans were submitted to the European Commission in September. The air quality plans are available on the library section of the UK-Air website.

Coastal Areas: Access

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent progress her Department has made on a timetable for the creation of coastal access pathways in England; and when such a timetable will be published. [85311]

Richard Benyon: We will introduce the new right of coastal access on a 30 km stretch of the English coast between Portland and Lulworth Cove in Dorset in time for the Olympic and Paralympic sailing events, which begin in July 2012. We are now at the stage of considering the "appointed person's" report and recommendations into the objections that were made to Natural England's proposals.

Natural England is also currently working on proposals to implement coastal access in a further five areas around the coast. When proposals for the coastal route have been prepared in each of the five areas, Natural England will start a period of local consultation.

DEFRA is working closely with Natural England to look at how we move forward after Weymouth and the five other stretches. It is important that we have the opportunity to look at the lessons learnt from the current projects that are being implemented to make sure that coastal access is delivered as cost effectively as possible.

Debt Recovery

Dr Whiteford: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what proportion of invoices from suppliers her Department paid within 10 days of receipt in July and August 2010. [74351]

Richard Benyon: During July and August 2010, 8,819 out of 8,892 valid invoices were paid by the Department within 10 days of receipt which equates to 99.18%.

Departmental Buildings

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how much has been spent on refurbishing and redecorating ministerial offices in her Department since May 2010. [80269]

Richard Benyon: There has been no expenditure incurred refurbishing and redecorating ministerial offices in DEFRA since May 2010.

Scientific Advice

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what her policy is on requiring her Department's (a) agencies and non-departmental public bodies and (b) contractors to have a written code of practice or protocol relating to the provision, conduct and quality assurance of scientific evidence and advice. [72470]

Richard Benyon: The information requested is as follows:

(a) DEFRA's agencies and arm's length bodies are expected to adopt good practice in the provision, conduct and quality assurance of scientific evidence and advice. A number have adopted internationally recognised or certified schemes, such as those provided by ISO or the OECD standard for Good Laboratory Practice, and have written codes or procedures as required by those schemes, or follow national codes such as the UK Statistics Authority's Code of Practice for Official Statistics. Others have their own codes or procedures in place, tailored to reflect their own circumstances, and consistent with guidelines issued by the Government chief scientific adviser on the use of scientific and engineering advice in policy-making where these guidelines are relevant. DEFRA's Science Advisory Council operates in line with the Code of Practice for Scientific Advisory Committees (currently being updated) and the Principles for Scientific Advice to Government. The guidelines, code of practice and principles referred to above are all available on the BIS website.

Given that DEFRA has different relationships and governance structures with its non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) and agencies—for example some NDPBs have a statutory purpose to provide evidence and advice—DEFRA has not prescribed any central policies regarding the provision, conduct and quality assurance of evidence and advice for its arm's length bodies.

(b) DEFRA is a co-signatory to the Joint Code of Practice for Research (JCoPR—available on the BBSRC website), which sets out principles for the quality of science and quality of the research process that research contractors sponsored by DEFRA must follow (if the JCoPR is not relevant to the proposed project, e.g. social research or economics, suppliers are required to describe what quality assurance measures they have in place). A number of DEFRA's arm's length bodies are in the process of adopting the JCoPR.

Nitrogen Dioxide

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what steps her Department is taking to ensure that nitrogen dioxide levels are within legal limits in all of the UK's zones and agglomerations by 1 January 2015. [84143]

Richard Benyon: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 21 November 2011, Official Report, column 186W.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) how many days each of the UK's zones and agglomerations exceeded the legal limit for nitrogen dioxide in (a) 2010 and (b) between 1 January 2011 and 31 October 2011; [84145]

(2) what estimate she has made of the number of days each of the UK's zones and agglomerations will exceed the legal limit for nitrogen dioxide in (a) each of the next three years and (b) 2020. [84146]

Richard Benyon: The legal limits for nitrogen dioxide (NO_2) have been set for both one-hour and annual-average time periods, but not for periods of a day. The one-hour limit value is exceeded if more than 18 hours exceed the limit at a monitoring site in a single year. A count of days does not directly demonstrate whether or not the one-hour or annual limit values have been exceeded in a year and does not form part of any compliance assessment for nitrogen dioxide legal limits.

Compliance assessments for 2010 for both the annual and one-hour NO_2 limit values are available on the library section of the UK-Air website:

http://uk-air.defra.gov.uk/

Where applicable, projections of compliance with the one-hour and annual NO_2 limit values for 2015 and 2020 were published as part of updated air quality plans submitted to the Commission in September 2011. These are also available on the UK-Air website.

Public Sector Employee Bids

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (1) what steps she is taking to put in place a right to provide for public sector workers to take over the running of services; and if she will make a statement; [74779]

(2) what steps her Department has taken to encourage the development of public service mutuals in its area of responsibility; and if she will make a statement. [74827]

Richard Benyon: The "right to provide" was drawn to the attention of all staff when the Open Public Services White Paper was published. A process for consideration of employee-led mutual candidates is now being established.

World War II: Medals

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many (a) Women's Land Army and (b) Women's Timber Corps lapel badges were awarded in (i) 2008, (ii) 2009, (iii) 2010 and (iv) 2011 to date. [85371]

Mr Paice: As at 1 December 2011 a total of 35,509 badges had been issued to former members of the Women's Land Army (WLA) and Women's Timber Corps (WTC). No distinction is made between those who served in WLA and the WTC. The number of badges issued in each year was as follows:

	Badges issued
2008	32,961
2009	1,838
2010	476
2011 (to date)	234

TREASURY

Capital Allowances: North-east England

Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of the extension of 100 per cent. capital allowances in the North East region. [85351]

Mr Gauke: The provision of 100% first year capital allowances for qualifying expenditure in Enterprise Zones in the North East Region is estimated to cost approximately £40 million over the next five years.

Credit Cards: Fees and Charges

John Thurso: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he plans to take to tackle excessive surcharges following the Office of Fair Trading's recommendations on card payment charges. [84851]

Mr Hoban: The Government are currently considering the Office of Fair Trading's recommendations and will update the House in due course.

Excise Duties: Fuels

Simon Hart: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the cost to the public purse of extending the fuel duty discount pilot scheme to rural areas of Wales. [85607]

Miss Chloe Smith: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 5 December 2011, Official Report, column 69W, to my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Julian Smith).

National Savings and Investments: Post Offices

Mr Weir: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer over what period he expects National Savings and Investments to withdraw its products from the Post Office network. [85155]

Miss Chloe Smith: The majority of NS&I's products are already managed by customers directly with NS&I. At the end of the final phase of NS&I's modernisation programme, in 2013, NS&I's range of savings and investments will only be available direct from NS&I, apart from Premium Bonds which NS&I intends to continue to offer through the Post Office.

Renewable Energy: North-east England

Helen Goodman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost to the public purse of (a) enhanced cap allowances and (b) public spending support to the Centres for Offshore Renewable Engineering at (i) Tees and (ii) Tyne. [85348]

Miss Chloe Smith: The provision of 100% first year capital allowances for qualifying expenditure in the Tees Valley and North East Enterprise Zones is estimated to cost approximately £40 million over the next five years. Centres for Offshore Renewable Engineering (COREs) are the beginning of a strengthened partnership between central Government and Local Enterprise Partnerships, to build on UK strengths in offshore wind. There is no spending commitment directly attached to COREs.

Stamp Duties

Mr Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the (a) number and (b) proportion of houses sold for over £1 million on which stamp duty land tax was paid at the full rate in each of the last four years; and if he will make a statement. [85199]

Miss Chloe Smith: Information on residential property transactions priced at over £1 million for 2008, 2009 and 2010 can be found in National Statistics table T16.1 on the HMRC website www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/survey_of_prop/table16-1.pdf

The corresponding figures for 2007 show a total of 1,613,000 residential property transactions in the UK, with 16,000 of those priced at over £1 million.

HMRC holds no data on residential property sales where a land transaction return is not made.

Stamp Duties: Tax Evasion

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the level of tax evasion on stamp duty; and what steps he is taking to reduce the level of such stamp duty evasion. [85268]

Miss Chloe Smith: Stamp duty (as opposed to stamp duty land tax) applies to transfers of stock and marketable securities via a stock transfer form.

There is no liable person for stamp duty and no statutory compulsion to present a document for stamping. So it is not appropriate to refer to "evasion" in this context.

The sanctions against leaving a document unstamped are that it cannot then be used as evidence in UK court proceedings (other than criminal proceedings) and that penalties and interest are charged for late stamping.

Taxation: Gambling

Cathy Jamieson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress his Department has made in its plans to tax remote gambling companies by making the taxable location the point of sale to the customer. [85507]

Miss Chloe Smith: On 18 July 2011, the Government announced their intention to review the taxation regime for remote gambling, looking at the case for taxing operators on the basis of customer location.

The initial review closed on 30 November 2011. All responses received are now being analysed. No decisions have been taken on whether to proceed with reform.

HEALTH

Accident and Emergency Departments

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many emergency readmissions there have been in each NHS primary care trust in each year since 1997; [85143]

(2) what the emergency readmission rate within 28 days of discharge was for each acute trust in (a) 2009 and (b) 2010. [85249]

Mr Simon Burns: Information is not available in the precise form or for the periods requested. The available information will be collated and placed in the Library as soon as possible.

Community Nurses

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the average case load for district nurses (a) in each primary care trust area and (b) nationally in the latest period for which figures are available. [85165]

Anne Milton: No estimate has been made centrally. It is for local national health service organisations to commission district nursing services and to determine their case loads taking into account local needs and resources.

Management Consultants

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has paid to (a) management consultants and (b) private health companies since May 2010; and what services were paid for. [85246]

Mr Simon Burns: The figures for expenditure on external management consultants for the Department of Health (this includes the core Department and Connecting for Health) for the last financial year 2010-11 are:

From April 2010-11—£14.77 million. (Figures can only be provided for the full financial year).

From April 2011-12 (The current financial year, to date)—£5.48 million.

The figure for expenditure on private health companies providing services for national health service patients through the independent sector treatment centres (ISTCs) since May 2010 is £282,179,000.

A full breakdown of the information by cost, supplier and description for core Department of Health expenditure for 2010-11 entitled 'Core Department of Health external consultancy expenditure for financial year 2010-11' has been placed in the Library.

Expenditure on management consultancies and private health companies since April 2010, and the value and supplier for each transaction (excluding core Department of Health expenditure for 2010-11) is shown in the following tables.

Departmental Public Appointments

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which public appointees to senior positions in (a) his Department, (b) its executive agencies, (c) official reviews and (d) commissions of enquiry have declared membership of the Conservative party in the latest period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [85266]

Mr Simon Burns: Information about the membership of political parties of appointees to senior positions in the Department and its public bodies is neither held nor collected centrally.

The Department complies with the Code of Practice of the Commissioner for Public Appointments. This requires that departments ask appointees to public bodies for information which is already in the public domain, and stipulates that they should not seek personal or private information such as membership of political parties.

Diabetes

Gareth Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people with diabetes in (a) the UK, (b) Kent and (c) Dartford constituency in each of the last five years. [85194]

Paul Burstow: The full data set to be able to answer this question accurately are not available.

The following table shows the number of diabetes registrations in National Diabetes Audit (NDA) data for England and Quality and Outcomes Framework (QOF) diabetes registrations for England for the last five years.

	2005-06	2006-07	2007-08	2008-09	2009-10
National Diabetes Audit England total[1]	655,953	1,221,814	1,423,669	1,658,409	1,929,985
Quality Outcomes Framework England total[2]	1,890,663	1,961,976	2,088,335	2,213,138	2,338,813

[1] The NDA contains people with diabetes (all types) of all ages, however it is not mandatory, and does not have 100% coverage or participation.
[2] QOF data only contain patients aged 17 years and over with diabetes mellitus.

The following table shows the NDA data for each of the Kent primary care trusts (PCTs) for the last four years. Growth in numbers of registrations in NDA needs to be assessed in the context of the growth in coverage for the audit. QOF data are an aggregate return so do not contain the detail required to respond at this level.

Data are not held at a constituency level.

Doctors: Vacancies

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many vacancies for junior doctors there were in each month since May 2010. [85241]

Anne Milton: We do not hold this information centrally.

Eating Disorders

Caroline Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent discussions he has had with (a) women's groups and (b) men's groups on treatment and support available to (i) adults and (ii) children with eating disorders; and if he will make a statement. [85144]

Paul Burstow: We are committed to improving mental health among the whole population. That is why we are providing around £400 million over the next four years to expand psychological therapies, with an annual £8 million investment to expand access to psychological therapies to children and young people.

Early intervention is essential for those with eating disorders and we have been clear that general practitioners are expected to use National Institute for Health and Clinical Evidence guidance when choosing the most appropriate treatments, from physical and psychological treatments to medicines. Access to high-quality mental health care, based on the best available evidence and delivered by staff with an appropriate range of skills and competencies, is critical to meeting the specific needs of this group of people.

The Government Equalities Office have begun a campaign which aims to reduce the burdens that popular culture places on an individual's well-being and self-esteem.

The Government have convened a group of experts to identify non-legislative solutions to tackling low levels of body confidence. This includes representatives from health care, fashion, beauty, media, advertising, and the voluntary sector.

Health

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to launch a revised public health responsibility deal. [85595]

Anne Milton: There are no plans to launch a revised Public Health Responsibility Deal. The networks continue to develop the next tranche of pledges that we expect will go much further and demand even greater commitment and action on the part of industry.

Health Services: Ex-servicemen

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms his Department has put in place to assess the level of access to health services by war veterans. [85242]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department is currently working on a number of physical and mental health care improvement programmes for veterans, and their families. These include, veteran-specific mental health services coming out of the implementation of the recommendations of Dr Andrew Murrison's 'Fighting Fit report'; and the development of enhanced rehabilitation and prosthetics services across England and the devolved Administrations in response to his latest report 'A Better Deal for Military Amputees'. The Department has committed significant sums of money to this work: £7.2 million in respect of Fighting Fit, and £15 million for the prosthetic care improvements.

It should also be noted that the Department has taken steps towards ensuring that more general practitioner (GPs) are made aware of the specific health care needs of service personnel. These include, the setup of armed forces networks in the 10 existing strategic health authority areas, through which national health service staff and forces representatives can plan the care of their local military and veterans' populations; and the launch of an e-learning package in conjunction with the Royal College of General Practitioners, to raise GPs awareness of the types of health care needs veterans with which veterans are likely to present.

Through the improvement of veteran-specific services and awareness raising among health professionals, the Department hopes to ensure that veterans will get a much better deal from their health services.

Health Visitors

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether he plans to publish an annual report on the health visitor implementation plan, 2011-15; [85577]

(2) when he expects to publish his first quarterly progress report on the health visitor workforce. [85578]

Anne Milton: The Department will publish its first annual report on the "Health Visitor Implementation Plan—A Call To Action 2011-15" by the end of this calendar year.

The first quarterly report on progress relating to the Government's commitment on health visiting, "A Call to Action Health Visitor Implementation Plan Summary Progress Report", was published on the Department's website on 31 October 2011, and is available at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Publicationsandstatistics/Publications/PublicationsPolicyAndGuidance/DH_130856

A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Health Visitors: Manpower

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors have returned to work in the NHS in each of the last five years. [85576]

Anne Milton: This information is not collected by the Department, however from January 2012, as part of the Health Visiting Minimum Data Set, the NHS Information Centre will be collecting the number of health visitors who return to practice.

Health Visitors: Training

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors were in training in each of the last five years. [85574]

Anne Milton: The following table shows the number of health visitors in training in each of the last five years:

Health visitor training commissions 2006-07 to 2010-11

	Actual commissions
2006-07	391
2007-08	269
2008-09	433
2009-10	514
2010-11	545

Source:
Quarterly strategic health authority financial management returns

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has for changes to the content of health visitor higher education programmes. [85575]

Anne Milton: In order to achieve the best outcomes in health visitor education for both staff and patients alike, the Department is working closely with education commissioners and the higher education sector to review the content of health visitor educational programmes.

The purpose of this collaborative working is to ensure that curricula and practice are aligned with the service vision set out in 'The Health Visitor Implementation Plan 2011-15, A Call to Action'. A copy has already been placed in the Library.

Health: Salt

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he plans to revise the targets for salt reduction contained in the public health responsibility deal. [85596]

Anne Milton: The Government have no plans currently to revise the Responsibility Deal salt targets; partners who have signed up to the salt reduction pledge have until 2012 to meet the targets.

Salt reduction is a key priority of the Public Health Responsibility Deal. As part of its work programme for 2012-13, the High Level Steering Group of the Food Network will consider what further actions are necessary to ensure continued progress towards the public health goal to reduce people's average salt consumption to no more than 6 grams of salt/person/day for adults and less for children.

Herbal Medicine: EU Law

Simon Reevell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what discussions officials in his Department have had with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency on enforcement of the EU Directive on Traditional Herbal Medicinal Products (Directive 2004/24/EC); when such discussions took place; and if he will make a statement; [85172]

(2) how many companies have been investigated by the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency for selling herbal medicinal products as food supplements in the last 12 months; when he expects each investigation to reach a conclusion; whether the product investigated will be removed from sale immediately if they are found to have breached the regulations; and if he will make a statement. [85173]

Mr Simon Burns: There have been no discussions between Ministers or officials with the Medicines and Healthcare products Regulatory Agency (MHRA) specifically about the enforcement of Directive 2004/24/EC. It is possible that the subject has been discussed in the context of how the end of the section 12(2) exemption in the Medicines Act 1968 would impact on herbal practitioners but such discussions would have been incidental to the main issue of practitioner regulation. The classification of products as medicines is made on a case-by-case basis by the MHRA. The MHRA does not hold information on how many herbal medicines have been presented as food supplements. Action taken by the MHRA will depend on the nature of the breach of regulation and any danger to public health posed by the product; this can include requiring the product to be removed immediately from the market. The MHRA is currently considering how effective, proportionate enforcement action can best ensure that the intended benefits of the legislation for consumers and for companies compliant with the legislation are achieved.

HIV Infection

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he took to mark World AIDS day 2011. [85453]

Anne Milton: World AIDS day provides the opportunity for people to unite to show their support for people living with HIV and to commemorate people who have died. To mark World AIDS day I spoke at a reception held by the Terrence Higgins Trust and hosted by my noble Friend, Lord Fowler, on 29 November.

The Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister both recorded a video message for World AIDS day.

Mr Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to reduce HIV infection rates; and what steps he plans to take to enable people who are most at risk of contracting HIV to participate in a comprehensive testing and education regime. [85555]

Anne Milton: The Department continues to fund targeted programmes of work on prevention for the groups most at risk of HIV in the United Kingdom and these highlight the importance of HIV testing. Additionally, in February 2011, the National Institute of Health and Clinical Excellence published its recommendations on increasing the offer of HIV testing to men who-have-sex-with-men and black African communities which we welcome.

Increasing the offer and uptake of HIV testing in a variety of health care settings, both primary and secondary, is important to reduce undiagnosed HIV. We are considering the findings of the Time to Test report, which was published by the Health Protection Agency in September this year which assessed the feasibility and acceptability of routinely offering HIV testing in eight pilot projects that were funded by the Department. We are also funding a three year project by the Medical Foundation for AIDS and Sexual Health to produce an interactive tool to support general practitioners and primary care staff in offering HIV testing.

Mr Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) young adults and (b) people were diagnosed with HIV in each of the last five years. [85614]

Anne Milton: The number of new HIV diagnoses reported in England in young adults, aged 15 to 24 and people of all ages, in each of the last five years, are shown in the following table:

Age group	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
15 to 24 years	742	733	700	633	631
Total—all ages	6,936	6,735	6,665	6,082	6,108

Note:
Diagnoses are from reports received to end June 2011.

Injuries: Dogs

Gloria De Piero: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children under 16 years were admitted to hospital because of injuries received from a dog in England and Wales in (a) 2011 and (b) 2010. [85571]

Mr Simon Burns: In 2010-11, there were 1,481 finished admission episodes[1] (FAEs) for children under 16 in England with a cause code[2] of bitten or struck by dog. In 2009-10, there were 1,382 FAEs for children under 16 in England with a cause code of bitten or struck by dog.

The Department does not collect information on the devolved Administrations.

Ministers in the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs have been working closely with Government and non-government organisations to prepare a package of measures to encourage more responsible dog ownership and reduce dog attacks. This work is nearing completion and an announcement will be made by that Department shortly.

[1] A finished admission episode (FAE) is the first period of in-patient care under one consultant within one health care provider. FAEs are counted against the year in which the admission episode finishes. Admissions do not represent the number of in-patients, as a person may have more than one admission within the year.

[2] A supplementary code that indicates the nature of any external cause of injury, poisoning or other adverse effects. Only the first external cause code which is coded within the episode is counted in Hospital Episode Statistics. Cause code used: W54—Bitten or struck by dog.

Lee Communications and Public Affairs

Chris Skidmore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings Ministers in his Department had with (a) Kevin Lee and (b) representatives of Lee Communications Public Affairs Limited between July 2009 and May 2010; and what the (i) date, (ii) names of those attending and (iii) subject of each meeting was. [85515]

Mr Simon Burns: Details of all ministerial meetings with external parties are published quarterly in arrears on the Department's website. Data from 1 January 2010 up to the end of March 2011 can be found at:

www.dh.gov.uk/en/Aboutus/MinistersandDepartmentLeaders/Departmentdirectors/DH_110759

No data are held prior to this date.

Mass Media

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on media monitoring since May 2010. [85195]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department spend on media monitoring since May 2010 is provided in the following table:

	Spend since May 2010[1] (£)
Press cuttings	164,797.28
Media monitoring	125,544.16

[1] Exclusive of VAT

Medical Treatments: Lasers

Chris Leslie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the provision of specialist training for [redacted] of class four laser treatment in the private therapy sector; and if he will make a statement. [85695]

Mr Simon Burns: Following deregulation of providers of class 3B and class 4 lasers lights in 2010, the Department supported creation of an industry led, assurance scheme whose objectives include publication of a set of accepted essential standards and a model training programme for educators to use. Work to develop these standards is being co-ordinated by the Independent Healthcare Advisory Service.

Meningitis: Vaccination

Bridget Phillipson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 6 September 2011, Official Report, column 580W, on meningitis: vaccination, whether his Department has received the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation's recommendation on meningococcal B vaccination. [85024]

Anne Milton: The Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) is continuing to assess carefully the impact and cost effectiveness of a potential vaccination programme against meningococcal B bacteria. The conclusions of JCVI's assessment are not expected until early 2013 at the very earliest.

Mental Health Services

Mr Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2011, Official Report, columns 961-2W, on mental health services, when he expects the National Liaison and Diversion Programme to complete its mapping exercise of mental health service provision in England. [85193]

Paul Burstow: The National Liaison and Diversion Programme is expected to complete the mapping exercise by April 2012.

Mental Health Services: Ex-servicemen

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what specialist mental health services are provided for armed forces veterans. [85248]

Mr Simon Burns: At least one in four people experience a mental health problem at some point in their life and mental ill-health represents up to 23% of the total burden of ill health in the United Kingdom—the largest single cause of illness. The Government are committed to the health and welfare of people serving in the armed forces, both during and after their time in service. This is part of rebuilding the Military Covenant, which is the basis for government policy aimed at improving the support available for the armed forces community. While the majority of service personnel do not experience mental health problems, mental health services still have a key role to play in fulfilling this covenant.

Shortly after coming into power, the current Government commissioned my hon. Friend the Member for South West Wiltshire (Dr Murrison) to carry out a report into the mental health provision made for serving personnel and veterans. 'Fighting Fit' was published in October 2010, and the Government immediately accepted all of its recommendations. The Department also announced a spending commitment of £7.2 million over the spending review period, to implement these recommendations. The Department is working closely with the Ministry of Defence, the national health service, Combat Stress and others to deliver the recommendations made by Dr Murrison in his report 'Fighting Fit'. Excellent progress has been made against almost all of these, and the work will continue. Work includes, the launch of a 24-hour veterans' helpline; the launch of an online early intervention peer support wellbeing and counselling service; and a commissioning increase in specifically targeted mental health professionals within the NHS.

NHS: Buildings

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from which planned NHS building projects his Department has withdrawn support in the last 12 months. [85142]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department monitors progress and approves business cases for major capital investment schemes (above a delegated approval limit of £35 million) taken forward by national health service trusts. None of these schemes have been stopped or cancelled in the last 12 months.

NHS: Crimes of Violence

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to prevent attacks on NHS staff. [85250]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department has a zero tolerance approach to violence against national health service staff.

NHS Protect leads work to deter and prevent violence and aggression against NHS staff in England.

Employers have a duty to identify and address risks to their staff. NHS Protect offers policy and operational guidance and assistance on this to NHS bodies and provides training for locally based security specialists.

Following enactment of the Criminal Justice and Immigration Act 2008, NHS Protect manage the provision of training to staff in the use of new powers to remove from hospital premises those causing a nuisance or disturbance, in order to tackle lower level nuisance behaviour and stop it from escalating into violence.

Conflict resolution training has been provided for frontline NHS staff in all sectors in the skills needed to recognise and defuse potentially violent situations before they become more serious. NHS Protect are reviewing the national training syllabus and standard.

NHS Protect manage the provision of a lone worker alarm service for NHS staff who work alone. Over 40,000 NHS staff are using this service, which enables lone workers to signal covertly for help from emergency services if needed and which provides a system control centre able to listen to and record events in a way that is legally admissible in prosecution cases that arise from incidents.

Where violent incidents do occur, NHS Protect is committed to ensuring that tough action, including appropriate sanctions, is taken against those who are violent and aggressive toward NHS staff. A new joint working agreement between NHS Protect, the Association of Chief Police Officers and the Crown Prosecution Service aims to ensure that criminal assaults are identified and do not go unpunished.

Nutrition: EU Law

Yasmin Qureshi: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to implement European Commission Regulation (EC) No 41/2009 on the gluten content of food. [85673]

Anne Milton: The Foodstuffs Suitable for People Intolerant to Gluten (England) Regulations 2010, were laid before Parliament on 20 September 2010 and come into force on 1 January 2012.

Orphan Drugs

Mr Timpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what steps he has taken to ensure that the criteria used by the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence and the Advisory Group for National Specialised Services for the selection of medicines for assessment complement one another to avoid duplication or omission; [85256]

(2) what his policy is on broadening the definition of orphan medicines that the Advisory Group for National Specialised Services will accept into its assessment process; [85257]

(3) if he will extend the capacity of the Advisory Group for National Specialised Services to conduct assessments of orphan medicines. [85258]

Mr Simon Burns: The majority of new drugs and significant licence extensions are considered through the topic selection process for the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence's (NICE) technology appraisal programme, against published criteria. In certain cases NICE will consider sending high cost low volume drugs for the treatment of rare conditions to the Advisory Group for National Specialised Services (AGNSS) for consideration for possible inclusion in the arrangements for national specialised commissioning. NICE and the secretariat to AGNSS work very closely together.

The orphan drug legislation is a European Commission Regulation (No. 141/2000) and was introduced to include a specific incentive which provides for a period of market exclusivity for a company which develops an orphan drug.

As an independent body NICE is responsible for developing its technology appraisal methodology. NICE has appraised a number of designated orphan medicines where they have met the published criteria for referral.

Funding to enable AGNSS to consider high cost low volume drugs is met from within its running costs.

TRANSPORT

Airports: Retail Trade

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if she will assess the effects of the one-bag rule for hand luggage operated by airlines on the level of airport retail sales; and if she will make a statement. [85026]

Mrs Villiers: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for North West Leicestershire (Andrew Bridgen) on 5 September 2011, Official Report, column 209W.

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information her Department holds on the number of people employed in the airport retail sector at each UK airport. [85028]

Mrs Villiers: The Department does not hold any such information.

Electric Vehicles: Bicycles

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the number of accidents involving scooter-style electric bicycles, in each of the last three years. [85604]

Mike Penning: Electrically assisted bicycles are not identified as a separate element in accident statistics.

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether she has plans to review the rules regulating the licensing and use of scooter-style electric bicycles. [85605]

Mike Penning: A public consultation on electric cycle legislation (The Electrically Assisted Pedal Cycle Regulations SI 1168/1983) was completed in March 2010. The legislation was also considered under the Road Transport theme of the Red Tape Challenge initiative. The Department will shortly be publishing a summary of consultation responses and a statement on next steps.

The Department is also negotiating a new EU regulation on two, three and light four wheel vehicles, including certain types of electric cycles. The outcome of these discussions are expected to conclude during the summer 2012. Decisions reached at EU level may affect how we regulate certain electric cycles in GB.

Northern Rail

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps she is taking to improve Northern Rail connectivity between Liverpool and Newcastle; and what recent progress she has made on the Northern Hub. [85273]

Mrs Villiers: In the recent autumn statement, the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced the electrification of the north Trans-Pennine route between Manchester and York.

We have previously announced that the line between Liverpool and Manchester via the Chat Moss route would be electrified and have given the go-ahead for the Ordsall Chord scheme in Manchester.

These investments, which are vital to the delivery of the Northern Hub strategy, will provide the opportunity for train operators to provide a direct fast service between Liverpool and Newcastle up to 45 minutes quicker than today.

Railway Stations: Manpower

Teresa Pearce: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many station staff on average were employed at railway stations in category (a) A, (b) B, (c) C, (d) D and (e) E in the most recent 12 months for which figures are available. [85598]

Mrs Villiers: The Department does not hold this information.

Rescue Services

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the invitation to tender for search and rescue helicopters includes a requirement that helicopters be equipped with night vision goggles. [85586]

Mike Penning: The UK Search and Rescue Helicopters project has an output based requirement including the requirement to operate aircraft safely at low level at night and in low light conditions in both the maritime and overland environments. The contractor must also enable the aircrew (pilots and rear-crew) to conduct aided visual searches. It is for the contractor to develop solutions to meet these requirements. However, it is highly unlikely that the contractor could meet these requirements without the use of night vision aids. The Civil Aviation Authority (CAA) already permits the use of night vision devices in civilian registered aircraft subject to the demonstration of adequate training processes and safe operating procedures.

Severn River Crossing

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money has been raised by Severn River Crossing in each of the last five years; how much has been paid to Severn River Crossing plc in each of the last five years; and how much remains to be paid to Severn River Crossing plc in the remainder of the current concession period. [85692]

Mike Penning: Severn River Crossing plc's (SRC) accounts are publicly available and are placed in the House Library. SRC's toll revenues (net of VAT) for the past five years are:

	£ million
2006	72.0
2007	76.1
2008	77.6
2009	77.4
2010	76.0

SRC was paid the following amounts for work which the concessionaire is not liable for under the terms of the agreement. This relates primarily to mitigation works for the corrosion of the main suspension cables on the original Severn Bridge.

	£ million
2006-07	3.8
2007-08	4.2
2008-09	6.5
2009-10	3.5
2010-11	3.2

As of 30 June 2011, the cumulative amount collected from the tolls during the concession period was £752.1 million (in July 1989 prices). The concession period ends when SRC has archived cumulative revenue of £995.83 million (in July 1989 prices, gross of operating costs). The remaining amount to be collected is £243.7 million in July 1989 prices, or about £502 million in current prices.

Transport: Exhaust Emissions

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment she has made of the effect on UK carbon emissions of the level of investment in (a) rail and (b) road set out in the autumn statement. [85347]

Norman Baker: All transport investments over £100,000 included in the autumn statement are subject to assessment, in line with the Department's guidance.

The Transport Business Case, which sets out the Department's approach to producing business cases to inform ministerial decisions, is available here:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/about/howthedftworks/transportbusinesscase/

Guidance on the detailed appraisal of transport projects in respect of their greenhouse gas emissions is also published in the Department's appraisal guidance ("webTAG"). The latest guidance is published at:

http://www.dft.gov.uk/webtag/documents/expert/unit3.3.5.php

The Government's Carbon Plan was published on 1 December and available here:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/tackling/carbon_plan/carbon_plan.aspx

The Carbon Plan sets out how we will deliver on our Climate Change Act 2050 target and intermediate carbon budgets. Transport will make a major contribution to reducing UK GHG emissions, with the ultimate aim of substantially decarbonising land transport by 2050.

The autumn statement announced several policies which will help to reduce transport's GHG emissions, including:

Providing a further £50 million to be used by local transport authorities for transport improvement schemes many of which will have focal environmental benefits.

Bringing forward the electrification of the North Trans-Pennine route from Manchester to York via Leeds, which will deliver significant carbon savings as well as reliability and journey time benefits.

Supporting low-carbon rail freight by making it easier to get new rail freight terminals built, and providing an additional £55 million to improve rail connectivity to Felixstowe Port.

Launching a third round of the Green Bus Fund, under which up to a further £25 million is being made available for the purchase of low carbon emission buses.

Announcing a new £8 million green truck fund to pump prime investment in low emission HGVs and their supporting infrastructure.

INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83891]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: In the last five years the Department for International Development (DFID) has had no legal proceedings brought against it by organisations receiving DFID funding.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85660]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The Department for International Development is taking a number of steps to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned:

An action plan for small and medium-sized enterprises has been developed;

Our support for the Greening Government sustainable procurement targets;

Business cases for the procurement of services include an assessment of social impact;

All tenders state DFID's wish to work with suppliers who demonstrate Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) by taking account of economic, social and environmental factors that are in compliance with International Labour Organisation (ILO) core standards on labour and social matters.

Ethiopia: Politics and Government

Steve Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development what assessment he has made of the effect of aid on standards of governance in Ethiopia. [85264]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: Ethiopia has a capable government that is demonstrably committed to addressing poverty. It has an impressive record of pro-poor spending and sound financial management.

Development assistance to Ethiopia has had a notably positive impact on standards of governance in Ethiopia. For instance, in the four years to 2010, support from international partners has helped deliver a threefold increase in tax revenues; dramatic increases in the efficiency of regional and federal courts and a 50% reduction in delivery times for a range of basic services. Development assistance has also trained and equipped the Ombudsman, Anti-Corruption Commission, Houses of Parliament, Office of the Auditor General and other institutions that play an increasingly important role in ensuring the Government remain accountable to their citizens.

EU Aid: Family Planning

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development if he will take steps to encourage his EU counterparts to increase aid for family planning above 0.4 per cent. of the total EU aid budget. [85518]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The UK Government are working closely with member states and the European Commission to increase EU support for family planning. We know that 215 million women in the developing world, who would like to delay or avoid a pregnancy, do not have access to modern family planning methods.

In November 2010, the EU pledged €23 million to the United Nations Population Fund's (UNFPA's) Global Programme for Reproductive Health Commodity Security (GPRHCS).

Last week, the coalition Government announced additional support for contraceptive supplies to this programme, to help prevent 2 million unintended pregnancies and avert nearly 220,000 unsafe abortions.

Tristan da Cunha

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for International Development whether he plans to visit Tristan da Cunha. [84589]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: No.

DEFENCE

Afghanistan: Peacekeeping Operations

Mrs Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many individuals attached to UK military operations in Afghanistan are employed through private contractors; what proportion of UK military staff in Afghanistan this represents; and if he will make a statement. [85089]

Nick Harvey: The Ministry of Defence employs around 5,200 individuals in Afghanistan through private contractors, with around a further 1,000 directly-employed local people. These work directly and indirectly in support of operations but none is employed in a combat role. UK force levels in Afghanistan are currently 9,500. Contractors and locally employed civilians play an important and valued role in the operation, undertaking roles that are more economically or appropriately undertaken by contracted personnel. We keep under review the roles they play and the scale of contracted effort in the light of the evolving operation.

Armed Forces: Education

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the average expenditure per recruit on academic education and non-military related training is for recruits at (a) the Army Foundation College Harrogate and (b) the Army Technical Foundation College Winchester. [85333]

Nick Harvey: The average amount spent on academic education and non-military training at the Army Foundation College Harrogate, based on the last completed course (September 2010 to August 2011), was £3,650 per successful recruit.

Comparable figures for the Army Technical Foundation College Winchester are not held in the format requested but the total average expenditure for all training provided at this college, including military training, was £5,650 per successful recruit over the same period.

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of recruits enlisting in the Armed Forces aged 18 years or younger attended the Army Technical Foundation College Winchester in the latest period for which figures are available. [85334]

Nick Harvey: The Army Technical Foundation College Winchester was established in September 2010 to deliver phase 1 training to junior soldiers aspiring to join the Technical Corps in the Army.

Between the period 1 September 2010 to 30 September 2011 a total of 3,745 under-18s commenced phase 1 training with the Army, of which 950 (25.4%) attended the Army Technical Foundation College Winchester.

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of staff at (a) the Army Foundation College Harrogate and (b) the Army Technical Foundation College Westminster have Qualified Teacher Status or Qualified Teacher Learning and Skills Status. [85335]

Nick Harvey: There are 379 military and civilian staff employed at the Army Foundation College Harrogate involved in the delivery of training to junior soldiers. 42 civilian staff provide vocational education in functional skills for mathematics, English and IT. All 42 have qualified teacher status. There are also nine military education and training Service officers who are fully qualified teachers.

I assume the hon. Member is referring to the Army Technical Foundation College Winchester, where there are 150 military and civilian staff involved in the delivery of training to junior soldiers. There are four civilian teachers providing the academic foundation required for recruits to succeed at their chosen trades in phase 2 training, all of whom either hold the qualified teacher learning and skills status or are working towards it. There are also three military education and training Service officers who are fully qualified teachers.

Armed Forces: Germany

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 4 May 2011, Official Report, columns 819-20W, on Armed Forces: Germany, what recent discussions officials in his Department have had with local authorities on the basing and estates issues arising from the rebasing from Germany; and whether any local authorities have requested additional funding as a consequence of such rebasing. [85570]

Nick Harvey: Preliminary discussions have taken place with a number of local authorities affected by the rebasing from Germany. It is too early at this time to comment on specific issues.

As of 6 December 2011, the Ministry of Defence was not aware of any local authorities requesting additional funding.

Armed Forces: Housing

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel and their families are waiting for married quarters accommodation in the greater Portsmouth area. [85237]

Mr Robathan: There are no service personnel families waiting for service family accommodation in the greater Portsmouth area.

However, as part of the normal cyclic housing accommodation, 16 families have applied for accommodation in the Portsmouth area and these families will be allocated a home within the standard 15 days.

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters in (a) Fareham, (b) Gosport and (c) Portsmouth were handed back to Annington Homes in each of the last five years. [85238]

Mr Robathan: The number of service family accommodation properties in Fareham, Gosport and Portsmouth handed back to Annington Homes Ltd are shown in the following table:

	Fareham	Gosport	Portsmouth
2008	0	0	1
2009	0	0	0

Defence

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of (a) the defence estate and (b) military industry in (i) Scotland and (ii) the UK. [83349]

Mr Robathan: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) keeps its estate under constant review to meet present and planned future requirements. Surplus assets are disposed of as quickly as possible in accordance with Treasury guidelines. The outcome of the Department's basing review, announced by the previous Secretary of State for Defence, my right hon. Friend the Member for North Somerset (Dr Fox) on 18 July 2011, Official Report, columns 643-45, confirmed our intent to continue to drive efficiencies across the whole of the estate.

Scottish industries, like those across the UK, play a vital role in ensuring our armed forces are equipped with the capabilities they require at reasonable cost to the UK taxpayer.

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83884]

Mr Robathan: There have been no occasions since 2007 when the Ministry of Defence (MOD) was involved in legal proceedings with an organisation that received funding from the MOD.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84175]

Mr Robathan: Communicators are employed across defence and the armed forces. They have an important task in explaining to the public, the media, our own people and other audiences—at the local regional, national and international levels—the role of defence, defence activities, capabilities and operations. The main effort for defence communicators at present is explaining our mission in Afghanistan.

The latest figures for the numbers involved in communications roles as at 31 March 2011 are shown in the following table, and include all posts for which over 50% of the post's core duties are communications:

	MOD/armed forces	Trading funds[1]	Non-departmental public bodies
Press Officers	108	6	0
Internal Communications Officers	39	4	0
External Communications Officers	334	20	2
Communications Strategy Officers	62	5	1
Other	106	4	0

[1] As at 31 March 2011. Includes 27 full time posts in the Met Office which has since transferred to the Department for Business Innovation and Skills.

These figures include both military and civilian posts worldwide. They represent a reduction of over 60 communications posts compared with 31 March 2010. Further savings have been made across the communications area during the course of the current financial year and more substantial reductions are planned for future years.

Procurement

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of contracts awarded through the framework agreement technical support process have been internally audited in the last 12 months. [82056]

Peter Luff [holding answer 23 November 2011]: A Defence Internal Audit report published in November 2011 reviewed the Framework Agreement for Technical Support (FATS) for the period from April 2009 to March 2011. Of 2,580 tasks placed through FATS during this period, a sample of 42 (1.5%) was considered.

Departmental Property

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's properties are occupied in (a) Portsmouth, (b) Fareham and (c) Gosport. [85236]

Mr Robathan: The number of properties occupied in Portsmouth, Fareham and Gosport as of 1 November 2011 is shown in the following table:

	Number
Gosport	940
Fareham	401
Portsmouth area	1,431

Ex-servicemen: Employment

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the effect of service in the armed forces on (a) employability and (b) employment retention of veterans. [83823]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 29 November 2011]: Approximately 95% of service leavers succeed in gaining employment within six months of discharge. This is clear evidence that employers value the unique skills, experiences and sense of reliability and discipline which military life has instilled into service leavers.

HMS Protector

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the total monetary cost was of HMS Protector from acquisition to operational readiness. [85235]

Peter Luff: I am pleased to confirm that as scheduled HMS Protector left Her Majesty's Naval Base Portsmouth, to commence her first Antarctic deployment, on 28 November 2011.

The contract for the lease of HMS Protector, which commenced in March of this year and is worth £26 million over three years, includes the acquisition of the vessel and full contractor support. The Ministry of Defence spent a further £3.7 million converting HMS Protector for military use. It is not possible to separately identify other operating costs during her conversion period, such as the fuel used to conduct her sea trials or her crew training.

Joint Exercises: Costs

Angus Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate the cost to the public purse of the UK's participation in Exercise Bersama Lima. [81100]

Nick Harvey: The UK played an important and substantial part in Exercise Bersama Lima, a Five Power Defence Arrangements joint exercise held in Singapore and Malaysia from 17 October to 4 November 2011. Four RAF Typhoons, one RAF VC-10, two contracted DA-20 aircraft and approximately 150 UK personnel participated in the Exercise. The total cost is estimated at £3.13 million, although this is subject to change as the recovery of RAF aircraft and personnel is not yet complete. This figure does not include the costs of manpower or the separately funded flying hours for the RAF aircraft.

Membership of the Five Power Defence Arrangements, which recently commemorated its fortieth anniversary, remains the focus of the Ministry of Defence's engagement in south east Asia. This demonstrates the UK's continuing commitment to security in south east Asia and the wider region, which is an increasingly important part of the world, and provides regular and beneficial opportunities for joint exercises with Australia, Malaysia, New Zealand and Singapore. The exercise also provided an opportunity to showcase the Typhoon export campaign in the region.

Military Bases: Planning Permission

Alison Seabeck: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of the sites owned by his Department and earmarked for housing development as indicated in the written ministerial statement of 21 November 2011 on housing reform have existing planning permission. [R] [84359]

Mr Robathan: As part of the Government's overall housing plan, the Ministry of Defence published its Interim Land and Property Disposal Strategy on 5 October 2011, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House, and at the following web address:

http://www.mod.uk/DefenceInternet/MicroSite/DIO/OurPublications/CorporateInformation/DefenceInfrastructureInterimLandAndPropertyDisposalStrategy.htm

The document contains an indicative disposal programme and, where appropriate, the current planning status on those sites.

Military Provost Guard Service

Mr Laws: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the strength of the Military Provost Guard Service in relation to its responsibilities. [80392]

Mr Robathan: The current strength of the Military Provost Guard Service (MPGS) is around 2,550, against a current requirement for 3,214. Recruitment action is being taken to reduce the shortfall. Guarding requirements are kept under constant review and capability gaps are covered, where necessary, by regular service personnel.

RAF St Athan: Airlines

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has considered the merits of allowing the use of RAF St Athan by private airlines; and if he will make a statement. [84714]

Mr Robathan: An arrangement has existed since 2004 whereby parts of St Athan are used for maintenance and repair of civilian aircraft. This has been promoted by the Welsh Government.

JUSTICE

Alternatives to Prison

Mrs Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer to my right hon. Friend the Member for Tooting (Sadiq Khan) of 20 June 2011, Official Report, column 112W, on young offenders: alternatives to prison, if he will commission an outcomes evaluation of the Intensive Alternative to Custody pilots. [85472]

Mr Blunt: The MOJ is currently looking at the feasibility of conducting an outcome evaluation of the IAC pilots which would compare reoffending rates for IAC offenders with reoffending rates for similar offenders receiving custodial sentences of less than 12 months. Due to the small number of offenders, there is no intention to disaggregate data for young adults from the other adults that took part in the pilots.

In July 2011, the MOJ published a short report with the main findings from a range of research exploring the learning from the Intensive Alternatives to Custody (IAC) pilot schemes:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/research-and-analysis/moj/intensive-alternatives-custody.htm

The process evaluations covering the seven IAC pilot sites are currently being concluded and will be published in due course.

Children: Abduction

Mark Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether he plans to bring forward proposals to change the offence of a parent taking and keeping a child abroad for over 30 days without permission of the other parent from a civil to a criminal offence. [84093]

Mr Djanogly: There are no such plans. The wrongful retention of a child away from the United Kingdom is already a criminal offence under the Child Abduction Act 1984. Where a residence order under the Children Act 1989 is in force with respect to a child, that child cannot be removed from the UK without either the written consent of every person with parental responsibility for the child or the leave of the court. However, the person in whose favour the residence order for a child was made may remove the child from the UK for a period of less than one month.

Where a person is accused or convicted of an offence of wrongfully retaining a child abroad, it may be possible for the UK to seek their extradition from the country where they are living, although this will not secure the return of the child.

However, where wrongful removal or wrongful retention of the child abroad is in a country which is a contracting state to the 1980 Hague convention on the civil aspects of international child abduction, the left-behind parent can apply under the convention for the return of the child. This is a summary procedure designed to seek the prompt return of the child to their country of habitual residence. In non-convention countries the Foreign and Commonwealth Office may be able to provide consular assistance.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85642]

Mr Kenneth Clarke: The Ministry of Justice (MOJ) Internal Audit and Assurance annual audit programme covering (a) MOJ core and (b) the agencies and other arm's length bodies (ALBs) is based on an assessment of audit need which includes those systems which underpin the key risks to the Ministry as well as systems which, although not linked to the key risks could expose the Ministry to reputational risks. The decision on the frequency of audit is based on the level of risk attached to a system, an analysis of previous audit results and the extent and results of any other independent review activity taking place. The final programme of audits is agreed with senior management and the Audit Committee, which is comprised of three non-executive directors (one of whom is the Chair) and an independent member.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85053]

Mr Kenneth Clarke: The proportion of written questions asked of my Department for answer on a named day that received answers within five working days is as follows:

June 2011: 93.1%

July 2011: 98.4%

August 2011: No relevant questions were tabled

September 2011: 95.3%

October 2011: 98.3%

November 2011: 95.3%.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Departments' performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Prisoners' Release: Sexual Offences

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many sex offenders were released after being found guilty but were released due to time served on remand. [85204]

Mr Blunt: The number of defendants found guilty of sexual offences at all courts in England and Wales from 2006 to 2010 (latest available) can be viewed in the table. Data are not held centrally on how many of these defendants had already served their sentence on remand.

Annual court proceedings data for 2011 are planned for publication in the spring 2012.

Number of defendants found guilty of sexual offences and sentenced to immediate custody, at all courts, England and Wales, 2006 to 2010[1,2]

	2006		2007		2008[3]		2009		2010
Offence type	Found guilty	Immediate custody	Found guilty	Immediate custody	Found guilty	Immediate custody	Found guilty	Immediate custody	Found guilty	Immediate custody
Sexual offences	4,890	2,806	5,059	2,807	5,116	3,000	5,107	2,987	5,784	3,287

[1] The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.
[2] Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.
[3] Excludes data for Cardiff magistrates court for April, July and August 2008.

Prisons: Postal Services

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many instances there have been where prisoners have received compensation in relation to cases concerning Rule 39 items of post being interfered with by prison staff; and what the total amount paid was. [85202]

Mr Blunt: Prison Rule 39 provides the authority for prison governors to stop and open written correspondence which is subject to legal privilege. This is only done where there is reasonable cause to believe it contains an illegal item which it is believed could endanger prison security, or the safety of others, or which is illegal. If a prisoner feels that their correspondence has been opened improperly, they may seek compensation through internal complaints procedures, correspondence, civil litigation and through the parliamentary ombudsman and the prisons and probation ombudsman. To provide the information requested would require collection of data from each prison and across NOMS headquarters. This could be achieved only at disproportionate cost.

Reoffenders

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many offenders have been convicted of offences whilst subject to a community order in each of the last five years; and how many such offences were of a (a) violent and (b) sexual nature. [85205]

Mr Blunt: Table 1 shows the proven reoffending rates for adults (aged 18 or over) commencing a community order who committed a proven reoffence within a year for the last five years for which figures are available. Table 2 shows for the last five years for which figures are available how many of these reoffences were violent or sexual.

Table 1: Reoffending rates of adult offenders who had commenced a community order, 2005-09

	Reoffending rates
2005	37.7
2006	36.5
2007	36.6
2008	36.7
2009	35.6

Table 2: Number of reoffences that were violent or sexual, 2005-09

	Number
2005
Sexual	174
Sex (child)	50
Violence non-serious	7,078
Violence serious	222
2006
Sexual	390
Sex (child)	96
Violence non-serious	15,653
Violence serious	508
2007
Sexual	473
Sex (child)	139
Violence non-serious	16,898
Violence serious	529
2008
Sexual	439
Sex (child)	182
Violence non-serious	17,011
Violence serious	557
2009
Sexual	518
Sex (child)	172
Violence non-serious	16,879
Violence serious	564

Proven reoffending is defined as any offence committed in a one year follow-up period and receiving a court conviction, caution, reprimand or warning either during the follow-up period or during a further six months allowed for cases to be proven. The sharp increase in numbers between 2005 and 2006 reflects the fact that these orders were introduced for offences committed after 4 April 2005.

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Climate Change: International Co-operation

Tim Farron: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will take steps to encourage EU and African groups at the UN Framework Convention on Climate Change to (a) consider the links between population growth, carbon emissions and adaptation problems and (b) invest climate funds in family planning and women's education and empowerment programmes. [85516]

Gregory Barker: The UK and EU are open to discussing the linkages between mitigation, adaptation, family planning and women's education and climate finance under the UNFCCC framework.

Responding to the unmet need for family planning and improving maternal health are major development priorities for the coalition Government. The UK is already investing heavily in family planning and women's education and empowerment programmes from Official Development Assistance outside our International Climate Fund.

The UK has committed to prevent more than five million unintended pregnancies by enabling at least 10 million more women in developing countries to use modern methods of family planning by 2015, The UK will work to get more girls in developing countries into the classroom, making sure that at least half of the nine million primary school children we will get into school over the next four years are female.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85636]

Gregory Barker: Internal Audit in the Department of Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) provide the internal audit function to the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC). DECC does not have any executive agencies.

Internal audits are undertaken in DECC as part of agreed annual audit plans which cover the duration of each financial year. The plans include a number of internal audits which form a core package of control and compliance work. This is necessary to provide adequate coverage to enable Internal Audit to provide assurance to the Accounting Officers at year end about the effectiveness of the internal control environment and to support the preparation of Governance Statements.

Internal Audit also identifies a programme of risk based work. This part of the audit plans is developed over the course of the year, dependent on the Department's priorities, the evolution of the risk environment and the emergence of entirely new risks. The audit plans list risk-based reviews to ensure that current risk areas, as identified through discussion with senior management and a review of the Department's high level risk registers, are addressed. The audit plans also contain a flexible allowance for timely audit response to changes in the risk profile and developments in DECC.

The audit plans are subject to approval by the DECC Audit and Risk Committees.

Internal Audit holds discussions with Directors-General and Directors throughout the year and updates the audit plans where necessary. The Audit and Risk Committees are provided with proposed revisions to the annual plans as appropriate.

The timing of the internal audit reviews carried out by Internal Audit is determined by a number of factors, including: discussions with senior management and members of the Audit and Risk Committees; discussion with the National Audit Office to align with their programmes of work; and timing based on previous year's plans.

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83886]

Gregory Barker: The Department does not maintain a central record of legal proceedings brought against it, and it would not be possible to compile a historical record without incurring disproportionate cost. In researching the answer to your question, my Department has not identified any case where an organisation funded by the Department has brought legal proceedings against it.

Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83911]

Gregory Barker: The presumption is that the Department will seek to recover its costs, except where that would not be appropriate, such as where costs are unlikely to be recoverable. Enforcement action would also be taken where appropriate.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85703]

Gregory Barker: All of DECC's Executive Non-Departmental Public Bodies hold risk registers. Each of the bodies has set out their approach to risk management in the Statement on Internal Control in their respective Annual Report and Accounts.

DECC's Advisory Non-Departmental Bodies do not hold their own risk registers. Their function is to provide independent scrutiny and advice to Government. This scrutiny includes seeking assurance that DECC's programmes falling within their remit, are underpinned by appropriate risk management.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many and what proportion of questions for ordinary written answer received a substantive response within (a) 10, (b) 20, (c) 30 and (d) more than 30 sitting days in the 2010-12 session to date. [85927]

Gregory Barker: During the period 18 May 2010 to 30 November 2011 a total of 2,844 ordinary written questions were tabled to the Department.

Total answered: 2,821.

Unanswered questions: 23.

Questions answered within five sitting days: 2,387 (84%).

Answered over five sitting days: 434 (15%); of these 57 (13%) were answered over 10 days but under 20 sitting days.

No questions were answered beyond 20, 30 or more sitting days.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide this information to the Committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Department's performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Electricity

Guto Bebb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change with reference to the Electricity Safety, Quality and Continuity Regulations 2002, what steps he has taken to enforce the continuity and quality of electricity supply. [84592]

Charles Hendry: Action can be taken under regulation 34 of the Electricity Safety, Quality and Continuity Regulations 2002 (ESQCR) to enforce continuity and quality of electricity supply. Electricity transmission and distribution companies have a statutory duty to report certain interruptions to supply under regulation 32 of the ESQCR, as follows:

Interruptions of 20 MW or more for three minutes or longer.

Interruptions of 5 MW or more for one hour or longer.

Interruptions of 5,000 consumers or more for one hour or longer.

Inspectors appointed under section 30 of the Electricity Act 1989 have powers to test, investigate or examine equipment to ascertain whether a breach of these regulations may have occurred.

Electricity Generation

Neil Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of energy lost through the transmission network in the latest period for which figures are available. [83039]

Charles Hendry: DECC estimates that approximately 1.6% of the electricity put on to the transmission network was lost in 2010, which amounts to 6.0 terawatt hours (TWh). Losses for the distribution network in 2010 account for 6.2% (21 TWh) of electricity available for distribution. These estimates are derived from data set out in The Digest of UK Energy Statistics 2011, which notes that UK transmission losses in 2010 were approximately 22% of total UK losses of 27 TWh. This publication is available at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/statistics/publications/dukes/dukes.aspx

Transmission losses have a cost of approximately £225 million per annum, which is recovered from generators and suppliers.

National Grid, as the system operator of the transmission system, and the distribution network operators are incentivised to minimise transmission and distribution losses respectively through reward or penalty payments based on performance against targets set by Ofgem, in its role as independent energy regulator.

Energy: Housing

Nicola Blackwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many houses in England he estimates meet an energy efficiency rating of (a) A, (b) B, (c) C, (d) D, (e) E, (f) F and (g) G. [83048]

Andrew Stunell: I have been asked to reply.

Energy efficiency ratings are not available for all homes in England. Information contained in the total number of certificates relating to homes in England that had been lodged on the Register of Energy Performance Certificates, up to and including 24 November 2011, it is estimated that the number of houses in England that achieve energy performance ratings of A, B, C, D, E, F and G is as follows:

Energy Performance Rating Band	Number of EPCs
A	1,505
B	204,798
C	925,671
D	1,546,241
E	923,229
F	280,043
G	79,077
Total	3,960,564

The estimated total of 15.97 million houses in England is taken from English Housing Survey data from 2009, and published in July 2011. The number of certificates relates to the number of Energy Performance Certificates lodged on the Certificate Register for houses in England as opposed to other types of dwelling (e.g. flat or maisonette), up to and including 24 November 2011.

Green Deal Scheme

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when he plans to publish his proposals for the allocation of funding for early uptake of the Green Deal in its initial phase in 2012-13 and 2013-14. [85485]

Gregory Barker: The Government announced £200 million of new funding to provide a time limited introductory offer to boost early take up of the Green Deal.

The Department will develop options for how best to use these funds over the winter, and will provide further details on our proposals next year.

Nuclear Power Stations: Construction

Guto Bebb: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) with reference to the National Infrastructure Plan, what discussions he has had with his ministerial colleagues in (a) HM Treasury and (b) the Department for Communities and Local Government on the potential benefits to communities of new nuclear build; [85274]

(2) if he will set up a cross-departmental task group including (a) his Department, (b) HM Treasury, (b) the Department for Communities and Local Government and (d) the Welsh Government to discuss the provision of community benefits of new nuclear build; [85275]

(3) how he plans to engage with (a) developers and (b) local authorities on the potential benefits to communities of new nuclear build. [85276]

Charles Hendry: The National Infrastructure Plan identifies community benefit as an area where action by Government might help meet reasonable community aspirations in areas where new nuclear development is proposed without adding excessive costs to investment. This followed discussions with HM Treasury and the Department for Communities and Local Government. In taking this issue forward, the Department will continue to engage with interested Government Departments and other bodies and with developers and local authorities to establish how this can be achieved.

Scottish Government

Jim McGovern: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when officials of his Department last met officials of the Scottish Government; and what was discussed. [84697]

Gregory Barker [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Department holds frequent meetings with officials from the Scottish Government to discuss a range of issues. The last meeting was held on 29 November where the Electricity Market Reform proposals were discussed.

Solar Power: Feed-in Tariffs

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to his answer of 24 November 2011, official report, column 474, on renewable energy: feed-in tariff, what the average payment to households who had installed solar PV under the feed-in tariff scheme was between April 2010 and October 2011. [83928]

Gregory Barker: For the 18,073 domestic (<4kW) installations in the 2010-11 period Ofgem estimate that total generation payments of £5,919,525.48 and export payments of £209,752.80 were made. These figures are based on the total number of installations registered over the period 1 April 2010 to 31 March 2011 only, as tariff information is supplied annually.

Ofgem does not (and is not required to) collect data on individual payments under the feed-in tariffs scheme.

Warm Home Discount Scheme

David Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what changes he is considering to support provided to pensioners through the Warm Home Discount scheme; and if he will make a statement. [85887]

Gregory Barker: Help for pensioners is a key part of the Warm Home Discount scheme. This winter more than 600,000 of the poorest pensioners will receive a Core Group discount of £120 on their electricity bills.

As set out in the Disclosure of State Pension Credit Information (Warm Home Discount) Regulations 2011 and the Warm Home Discount Regulations 2011 respectively, eligibility for the Core Group discount and the amount of rebate payable are shown in the following table for all four years of the scheme.

	Eligibility for the Core Group discount	Amount of rebate (£)
2011-12	In receipt of pension credit guarantee credit only	120
2012-13	In receipt of pension credit guarantee credit only, or aged 80 and over and in receipt of both pension credit guarantee/savings credit	130
2013-14	In receipt of pension credit guarantee credit only, or aged 75 and over and in receipt of both pension credit guarantee/savings credit	135
2014-15	All in receipt of pension credit guarantee credit	140

Additionally, to receive the discount the pension credit recipient or their partner must be the named bill payer on their electricity account with one of the six major energy suppliers.

Other low income pensioners may also be able to benefit from the same discounts as listed above on electricity accounts through the support offered by energy suppliers under the Broader Group element of the Warm Home Discount scheme. Pensioners are also among those who will be assisted by suppliers this year through the scheme under the transitional arrangements from the previous voluntary agreement.

Currently, no changes are being considered for the scheme, but we will keep this under review.

EDUCATION

Academies

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether Academies are able to sell assets such as land. [84447]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 1 December 2011]: The Funding Agreements with Academies include a requirement that they cannot dispose of assets such as land without first seeking the consent of the Secretary of State for Education. In seeking such consent, the Academy Trust would be required to make a business case setting out the reasons for the sale, and the way in which any proceeds will be spent. For example, Academy Trusts and Foundation bodies that hold land for Academies which has been either provided or enhanced at public expense can propose the disposal of that land, where it is in the interests of the education they provide. Requests for consent are currently dealt with by the Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA).

Children's Centres: Finance

Mrs Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education from what date local authorities will be required to provide information about expenditure on children's centres; where such information will be published; and whether such a requirement will take the form of statutory guidance. [82627]

Sarah Teather: This is the first year the Department has collected and published the expenditure by local authorities on children's centres. Local authorities are required under section 251 of the Apprenticeships, Skills, Children and Learning Act 2009 to prepare and submit an education and children's social care budget statement by 31 March each year and this commenced in March 2011 That legislation also requires local authorities to publish the information locally . It must be made available on a website maintained by the local authority and accessible to the public.

Departmental Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what applications for judicial review have been made against his Department (a) in the last Parliament and (b) since May 2010; whether each such application (i) succeeded, (ii) failed and (iii) remains pending; what legal costs were incurred by his Department for each such application; in each failed application whether he applied for costs against the applicant and whether they were (A) awarded and (B) paid; whether his Department (1) paid for and (2) offered to pay for the legal costs incurred by each such applicant; and what the total cost to the public purse was of payment of the legal costs for each such applicant. [80711]

Tim Loughton: We do not hold centrally the information requested. A search and analysis of all records of judicial reviews brought over the past six years would involve disproportionate cost. However, we have the following figures for how much the Department for Education, and its predecessors, the Department for Children, Schools and Families and the Department for Education and Skills, have paid to the Treasury Solicitor's Department, whom we instruct in most litigation cases, for litigation lawyers' fees and disbursements in judicial review proceedings in each financial year since 1 April 2005. This does not include amounts that may have been paid by the Department for Education and its predecessors in costs or damages to the other side in the litigation. Nor does it include the cost of departmental lawyers' time or of other departmental officials.

2005-06: Department for Education and Skills: £57,223

2006-07: Department for Education and Skills: £228,003

2007-08: Department for Education and Skills (to June 2007); Department for Children, Schools and Families (from June 2007): £252,035

2008-09: Department for Children, Schools and Families: £277,102

2009-10: Department for Children, Schools and Families: £361,080

2010-11: Department for Children, Schools and Families (to May 2010); Department for Education (from May 2010): £253,829

2011-12 (to 25 November 2011): Department for Education: £258,927.

Design and Technology

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made of the number of children studying Design and Technology in (a) Sefton and (b) England in each of the years 2010-11 to 2014-15. [84953]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: We have not made any estimate of the number of students who will study design and technology and related subjects in each of the years 2010-11 to 2014-15. In academic year 2010/11 14,871 pupils were entered for design and technology A Level, and 226,400 pupils were entered for GCSE, in schools in England. In Sefton 54 pupils were entered for A Level in design and technology. We do not have the corresponding number for pupils entered for design and technology GCSE in Sefton.

British Overseas Territories: Students

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what his policy is on programmes to educate school students about the British Overseas Territories. [84583]

Mr Gibb: Students are taught about British Overseas Territories as part of the history curriculum, and this topic can also be studied as part of geography.

The Government believe that the existing history curriculum does not ensure that children and young people are able to gain a secure knowledge and shared knowledge of British history or the key events in world history. We are currently conducting a review of the national curriculum with the aim of reducing prescription and focusing on the essential knowledge that all children should acquire.

Design and Technology

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what estimate he has made of the number of students who will study design and technology and related subjects in each of the next 10 years. [84149]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 1 December 2011]: We have not made any estimate of the number of students who will study design and technology and related subjects in the next ten years. In academic year 2010/11 14,871 pupils were entered for design and technology A-level, and 226,400 pupils were entered for GCSE, in schools in England.

Education: Young Mothers

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of mothers aged 16 to 19 were in education, employment or training on the latest date for which figures are available. [84618]

Tim Loughton: Latest estimates from the Labour Force Survey show that 28.6% of teenage mothers aged 16 to 19 were in education, employment or training in 2010. The proportion of teenage mothers who are in education, employment or training has remained fairly stable since 1998.

Music: Education

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education with reference to the National Music Plan, what assessment he has made of the potential effects of reductions in local government funding on the provision of music education in schools. [84529]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: In the current financial climate it is important that public funding is used effectively. We are allocating significant public expenditure to music education because we are determined that every child should have access to a high quality music education, not only those from families that can afford to pay for private lessons. Primary responsibility for music education has always and will continue to be the responsibility of schools, in delivering the music curriculum. In practice, that role has been supported by a mixed economy, with contributions from central Government, local government, schools, parents, community and charitable music organisations and the lottery.

The new National Plan for Music Education, published on Friday 25 November, sets out Department for Education future funding allocations and a new funding mechanism from 2012-13. We are moving toward a per-pupil national funding formula that will turn around the historical imbalance in funding for music services between areas, with transitional protection to guard against large losses in any one area.

Local authority funding for music education is clearly a matter for local authorities, but very much hope that they will want to support us in improving the quality of all pupils' music education.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much funding his Department has allocated for the provision of music education in the next three years by local authority area; and how much funding for such purposes was allocated in the last five years. [84556]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The table shows the Music Standards Fund allocations for music education for all local authorities in England from 2006-11 and the funding allocations for music education in local authorities in 2011-15. Detailed funding for individual local authority areas from April 2012 to March 2015 were published alongside the new National Plan for Music Education, published on 25 November. This is available at:

http://www.education.gov.uk/schools/teachingandlearning/curriculum/subjects/a00200352/national-plan-for-music-education

Details of funding for 2011-12 were published by the Federation of Music Services and are available at:

www.thefms.org/the-fem/professional/funding

We shall place copies of individual local authority allocations from 2006-07 to 2010-11 in the House Libraries.

The National Plan for Music Education sets out future funding allocations and a new funding mechanism from 2012-13. We are moving toward a per-pupil national funding formula that will turn around the historical imbalance in funding for music services between areas, with transitional protection to guard against large losses in any one area.

[2] Music Education Hubs.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much funding his Department has allocated to local authorities for the purchase of musical instruments in the next three years by local authority area. [84557]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The Department does not allocate funding amounts for the purchase of musical instruments. It is for local authorities to decide how they allocate their budget for music education.

Providing instrumental tuition and progression routes for those wishing to develop their skills are two of four 'core' services that music education hubs will be required to make available to pupils from September 2012. The Federation of Music Services is currently undertaking an audit of instrument purchases so that the new hubs will have a basis from which to plan future expenditure. As part of their contribution to the National Plan, Arts Council England have agreed to extend their 'Take it Away' scheme which provides interest free loans via retailers for the purchase of instruments for 18 to 25-year-olds, to five to 18-year-olds. This will make the purchase of instruments financially easier for parents/carers.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he plans to take to ensure that music teachers are engaged in the implementation and delivery of the National Plan for Music Education. [84634]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: The National Plan for Music Education recognises that music education takes place primarily in schools, and that schools are responsible for delivering the music curriculum; and that within schools, music teachers have a fundamental role to play. The National Plan for Music Education responds to the findings by Darren Henley that teachers in primary schools need specialist support to teach music, while those in secondary schools can feel isolated.

Music education hubs will be funded in such a way that will reward partnerships between local authorities and local music organisations. Together these partnerships will open up new networks of music educators, all working to ensure every child has a high-quality music education, including the opportunity to learn to sing, to play an instrument and to play music with others. Finally, the plan announces that a new music teaching module is being developed, to develop teachers' skills in teaching music, and to help them understand the context within which they work in music education hubs.

Schools: Admissions

Mr Laurence Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the average number of pupils was in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [82482]

School Census

Caroline Nokes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to amend the Admissions Code to control the number of lone European Economic Area children studying in the UK. [84871]

Mr Gibb: On 1 December, the new School Admissions and Appeals Codes were laid before Parliament. Subject to the approval of Parliament, these codes will come into force on 1 February 2012. The School Admissions Code makes clear that all admission authorities must treat applications, for children coming from overseas, in accordance with European Community law. Where the provisions of the Immigration (European Economic Area) Regulations 2006 are satisfied, nationals of the European Economic Area and their children of any age, who come to the UK lawfully to work, or for certain other economic purposes, have a right to reside in the UK. They enjoy the same rights to education as British citizens. This right also applies to EEA national children who come to study in the UK, but are not accompanied by their parents. Non-EEA children of EEA parents, who are not accompanied by their parents, do not have this right.

Schools: History Teaching

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether there are any subjects in British history which his Department directs schools not to teach. [84732]

Mr Gibb: Schools are currently required to follow a programme of study for teaching history, but there are no subjects in British history that the Department has directed schools not to teach.

The Government believe that the existing history curriculum does not ensure that children and young people are able to gain a secure knowledge and shared knowledge of British history or the key events in world history. We are conducting a review of the national curriculum with the aim of reducing prescription and focusing on the essential knowledge that all children should acquire.

Schools: Inspections

Graham Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of parent consultations on Ofsted inspections. [83362]

Mr Gibb: This is a matter for Ofsted. HM Chief Inspector, Miriam Rosen, has written to my hon. Friend, and a copy of her response has been placed in the House Libraries.

Letter from Miriam Rosen, dated 28 November 2011:

Your recent parliamentary question has been passed to me, as Her Majesty's Chief Inspector, for a response.

The Education and Inspections Act 2006 section 117 (1) requires Ofsted to carry out its functions in ways which encourage the services we inspect and regulate to be user-focused. In addition, section 117 (2) also requires Ofsted to have regard to the views expressed by relevant persons about the services we inspect. In fulfilling these requirements Ofsted is committed to ensuring that the views of parents and carers are taken into account when deciding how and when to inspect. In addition, Ofsted engages with parents and carers during inspections in order to take their views into consideration and help inform the judgements made by inspectors. This includes, for example, Ofsted's inspections of childcare and early education as well as those of schools.

Under section 7 of the Education Act 2005 the Chief Inspector has a specific duty to have regard to any views expressed by the parents of registered pupils during inspections of maintained schools. Parents are contacted by letter and asked to inform the inspection team of their views about the school. They can inform inspectors in a variety of ways, including a confidential parents' and carers' questionnaire. Inspectors take these comments and responses into account as they carry out the inspection. In 2010/11 Ofsted received responses from parents or carers of over one-quarter of the pupils in the schools inspected.

Our analysis shows that overall; parents remain very positive about the quality of education that their child receives. An analysis of 315,182 parental questionnaires returned from 3,679 inspections carried out in 2010/11 shows that 94% of the parents who responded were positive overall about their child's schooling. These results are consistent with the previous year, when 93% expressed a positive opinion overall. The lowest proportion of strongly positive comments came in response to the question, 'The school takes account of my suggestions and concerns', but even here 85% of parents either agreed or strongly agreed with the statement. For the most part, parents who responded to the questionnaire are positive about how schools manage behaviour. As one might expect, this figure varies according to the overall quality of behaviour at the school. Parents in schools where behaviour was judged inadequate or satisfactory are three times more likely to think that the school does not deal effectively with poor behaviour than parents in schools where behaviour was judged outstanding.

The new framework for the inspection of maintained schools and academies from January 2012 places a strong focus on the views of pupils, parents and staff. In addition, Ofsted recently introduced Parent View, an online questionnaire that will—for the first time—allow parents and carers to give their views on their child's school at any time of the year. Parent View has been produced with the assistance of a panel of parents who contributed to the shaping of the questions and the way the site functions. The questionnaires will cover a range of topics including quality of teaching, bullying and levels of homework, allowing parents to rate their child's school's approach to each issue, with a final question as to whether or not they would recommend the school to other parents. The questions were carefully chosen to ensure that they cover a range of issues which are important to parents but are equally designed to provide Ofsted with the right information to support decisions about inspection.

Ofsted also actively seeks the views of parents and carers as part of the consultation process when developing new frameworks. 615 members of the Ofsted parents' panel, an online panel of parents whose children attend maintained, schools or use registered childcare, responded to a questionnaire about the proposals.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Manufacturing

20. Neil Carmichael: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what recent assessment he has made of the performance of the manufacturing sector. [85415]

Mr Prisk: Despite challenging export markets UK manufacturers have responded positively. For example, exports of motor vehicles have now doubled in real terms since the first quarter of 2009.

Airports: Retail Trade

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he has assessed the level of retail sales in airports (a) annually and (b) seasonally; and if he will make a statement. [85025]

Mr Prisk: Her Majesty's Government have made no estimate of the contribution of airport retail to the economy, either annually or seasonally.

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate he has made of the contribution of airport retail to the economy (a) annually and (b) during Christmas; and if he will make a statement. [85027]

Mr Prisk: Her Majesty's Government have made no estimate of the contribution of airport retail to the economy, either annually or at a specific time of the year.

Apprentices

Brandon Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many new apprenticeships have been started in each year since 2008-09. [83327]

Mr Hayes: I refer my hon. Friend to the response I gave on 29 November 2011, Official Report, columns 844-6W.

Basic Skills

Mr Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps his Department is taking to ensure that young people have the social and emotional skills needed in the workplace. [85409]

Mr Hayes: Young people develop the social and emotional skills they need for work, and to become adult citizens, by interacting with adults and having opportunities to take responsibility and gain real experience of the workplace. That is why we are reforming vocational education and increasing the opportunities for young people to gain work experience.

We have given Further Education colleges and providers the freedom to tailor provision to meet the needs of students, including addressing their social and emotional skills where this supports learning and progression. We also continue to fully fund training for people aged 19 to 24 to enable them to get their first full level 2 or first full level 3 qualifications and training for people who are unemployed and actively seeking work to give them the skills they need to get into work. We provide careers advice through the Next Steps, which will become part of the new National Careers Service, to help young adults understand their options and take their first steps into work.

We are expanding the number of Apprenticeship places by increasing funding for Apprenticeships in 2011-12 to over £1.4 billion, sufficient to train 360,000 apprentices. We have also committed to 40,000 incentive payments to encourage small employers to take on their first apprentice aged 16 to 24. We have launched sector-based work academies which provide a combination of training, work experience and a guaranteed job interview for people who are unemployed.

We are committed to ensuring graduates are better prepared for the workplace. All universities have published employability statements outlining how they work with their students to prepare them for employment. From September 2012 higher education institutions will be required to publish information about student satisfaction, costs and student employment outcomes.

Business: Equal Opportunities

Julian Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what plans he has to encourage FTSE 100 and FTSE 200 listed businesses to publish the numbers of men and women they employ. [84532]

Mr Davey: Government are currently reviewing the narrative reporting requirements placed upon businesses which includes measures to improve the disclosure of the number of women, and by default men, at various levels within individual organisations as recommended by the noble Lord Davies of Abersoch in his review of women on boards.

Copyright: Arts

Angie Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps his Department is taking to minimise the effect on business of changes to artists' resale rights. [85414]

Mr Davey: On 2 December 2011, the Department laid Statutory Instrument 2873 which will amend the implementation of Artist's Resale Right in the UK. The instrument is intended to simplify the administration of the right, by clarifying the nationality requirements for heirs and nationals of non-EEA countries entitled to receive royalties on a reciprocal basis. These changes will come into effect on 1 January 2012. On the same date the 2001 Directive will be fully implemented in the UK, when Resale Right is extended to sales of in copyright works by qualifying deceased artists. I expect the changes made by this instrument to simplify administration of payments following that extension.

Consumer Debt

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he has taken to assist those with very high levels of personal debt in the last 12 months. [84929]

Mr Davey [holding answer 6 December 2011]: Government are concerned about the very high levels of consumer debt that has built up the economy in recent years and the impact this can have on people's day-to-day lives.

The Face-to-Face debt advice project is funded by a £27 million grant from BIS in 2011/12, and employs around 500 specialist advisers in Citizens Advice Bureaux and other community advice services across England and Wales. Since 2006, over 470,000 individuals have been helped.

In order to place debt advice in the future on a more secure footing, the Money Advice Service has agreed to take on responsibility for the co-ordination of debt advice services from April 2012. The Money Advice Service is in the process of securing funding to continue resourcing the existing free Face-to-Face Debt Advice services after 31 March 2012, so that people in need have access to good advice.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85630]

Mr Davey: Internal Audit (IA) in the Department for Business innovation and Skills (BIS) provide the internal audit function to the Department, and 10 of the 61 non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) the Department is responsible for. These are:

ACAS
Capital for Enterprise
Central Arbitration Committee/Certification Office
Competition Appeal Tribunal
Competition Commission
Competition Service
Local Better Regulation Office
Low Pay Commission
Office of Manpower Economics
UK Trade and Investment.

Internal audits are undertaken in the Department for Business (BIS), and those NDPBs that BIS IA provide an audit service to, as part of agreed annual audit plans necessary to provide adequate coverage to enable BIS IA to provide assurance to the Accounting Officers and to support the Governance Statements each financial year.

The plans include a number of internal audits forming core control and compliance work, together with a programme of risk based work. The control/compliance element of BIS IA audit plans is determined at the start of the year but remains flexible over the course of the year, dependent on the Department's and its client NDPBs' priorities, the evolution of the risk environment and the emergence of entirely new risks. The audit plans list risk-based reviews designed to provide assurance, where required, over key risk areas identified through discussion with senior management and a review of the Department's and the 10 client NDPBs' high level risk registers. Audit plans are subject to approval by the departmental and NDPBs' Audit and Risk Committees and are kept under regular review. The plans also contain a small flexible allowance for unplanned work allowing timely audit response to changes in the risk profile and developments in BIS, and those NDPBs that BIS IA provide an audit service to across the year.

BIS IA continues to hold discussions with Directors-General, Directors and client NDPB chief executives throughout the year and updates the audit plans were necessary. The Audit and Risk Committees are provided with proposed revisions to the annual plan as appropriate.

The timing of the internal audit reviews carried out by BIS IA is determined by a number of factors, including: discussions with senior management and members of the Audit and Risk Committees; discussion with the National Audit Office to align with their programmes of work; and timing based on previous year's plans.

The other BIS NDPBs use their own criteria for deciding what should be audited and this information is not held centrally.

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills which organisations that have received funding from his Department have brought legal proceedings against his Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether his Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83880]

Mr Davey: According to our records, no organisations that have received funding from the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills have brought legal proceedings against the Department since it was set up in June 2009.

Design Services

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much his Department has spent on design in respect of (a) logos, (b) buildings, (c) advertising, (d) stationery and (e) campaigns in the last year for which figures are available. [80200]

Mr Davey: In the last full financial year, 2010/11, the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills (BIS) did not incur any external design costs with regard to logos, buildings or stationery. There were design costs associated with advertising and campaigns. These costs could not be disaggregated from overall totals except at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what his policy is on (a) the recovery of legal costs from failed applicants for judicial review and (b) enforcement of any such recovery; and whether any exceptions apply. [83916]

Mr Davey: Where the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills is successful following a judicial review it will normally seek an order that costs are payable. However, the Department will make an assessment on a case to case basis as to whether securing payment will be cost effective when the costs of enforcement are taken into account.

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84180]

Mr Davey: During the period 1 May 2010 to 30 November 2011 there were 3,973 events held by the Department in the Department's Conference Centre at its headquarters building 1 Victoria street, London. These events will include internal events with only BIS staff attending and external events where external stakeholders are invited.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85669]

Mr Davey: UK public procurement policy is to award contracts on the basis of value for money, which means the optimum combination of cost and quality over the lifetime of the project. Public sector procurers are required to assess value for money from the perspective of the contracting authority using criteria linked to the subject matter of the contract, including compliance with the published specification.

Wider socio-economic benefits that do not accrue to the contracting authority cannot be taken into account at tender evaluation stage if they do not relate to the subject matter of a contract from the point of view of the contracting authority.

Details of the steps being taken by the Department's non-departmental public bodies are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Higher Education

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had with the British Council on the effect on the international reputation of British higher education of Government proposals to give degree awarding powers to institutions which do not carry out teaching or research. [80733]

Mr Willetts: I meet representatives of the British Council regularly to discuss higher education issues, including at the International Education Advisory Forum. I have not had any discussions with the British Council on this specific issue nor have I received any representations from them in response to the recent technical consultation "A New, Fit-for-purpose Regulatory Framework for the Higher Education Sector" which discussed these proposals.

Higher Education: Admissions

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what plans he has to alter the AAB and above threshold for unrestricted recruitment of university places following the 2012-13 academic year. [85522]

Mr Willetts: The Department stated in the White Paper, "Students at the Heart of the System" that AAB represented a starting point and that it was our ambition to increase the proportion of new entrant places freed from student number controls by the end of this Parliament. We will set out our plans in due course and have asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) to consult on future funding arrangements, including liberalising student number controls, in their forthcoming consultation on teaching funding for 2013/14 and beyond.

Insolvency: Legislation

Harriett Baldwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether his Department has any plans to review insolvency laws. [85389]

Mr Davey: We keep our insolvency laws under review and liaise regularly with interested parties on how they are working in practice and suggestions for reform.

The Government have recently published a consultation proposing reforms to the application processes for entry into bankruptcy and compulsory winding-up. Measures are also being considered that might strengthen the regulatory regime under which licensed insolvency practitioners operate.

Additionally, work is under way to modernise the procedural insolvency rules. As well as a proposed new set of those rules, amendments are being considered in a number of areas to improve clarity, transparency and accountability for creditors and other stakeholders.

Members: Correspondence

Sir Gerald Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills when he plans to answer the letter from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton of 6 October 2011 with regard to Mr P Wightman. [85145]

Mr Davey: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 1007W.

National Savings and Investments: Post Offices

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what discussions he has had with representatives of National Savings and Investments on its decision to stop selling its products through the post office network. [85156]

Mr Davey: National Savings and Investments (NS&I) is an executive agency of Her Majesty's Treasury (HMT). As such, I have had discussions with both NS&I and HMT on the provision of NS&I products through the post office network. I would also point out that Premium Bonds, by far the most popular NS&I product at post offices and accounting for 75% of all NS&I sales there, will continue to be available to buy and redeem at any post office.

Overseas Students

Caroline Nokes: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what his most recent estimate is of the number of lone European Economic Area students studying in the UK. [84936]

Mr Willetts: There were 128,675 European Economic Area students[1] enrolled on postgraduate and undergraduate courses at UK higher education institutions in the 2009/10 academic year. The Department does not hold information on how many of these students were lone students. Information for the 2010/11 academic year will become available from January 2012.

[1] Covers full-time and part-time students domiciled in European Union countries (other than the United Kingdom) and Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway. Domicile refers to the country of a student's permanent or home address prior to entry to their course.

Planning: Sculpture

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he will review the effectiveness of the operation of legislation enshrining an artist's moral rights pertaining to site specific sculpture; and if he will make a statement. [85680]

Mr Davey: The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, has no plans to conduct a review of this issue.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84179]

Mr Davey: The Department does not publish statistical information at postcode level, but uses postcode information to derive geographical data, such as region, county, local authority and parliamentary constituency, and to produce statistical maps. Postcode information is also used in the process of linking statistical datasets and is supplied to contractors for use in surveys to obtain phone numbers through data matching.

The Department provides the online BIS Assisted Area Postcode Checker which can be used to provide an indication of whether a postcode in Great Britain is an Assisted Area as defined for the 2007-13 Assisted Area Map.

Public Expenditure

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills with reference to the Autumn Statement 2011, column 8231, page 46, table 2.1, what spending decisions are represented by the figures of £30 million for (a) 2012-13, (b) 2013-14 and (c) 2014-15 in line 29: Science of the table. [84768]

Mr Willetts [holding answer 5 December 2011]: This budget is allocated to support the commercialisation of new biomedical technologies, and will fund research, development and testing activities, and leverage additional private sector investment. This will seek to accelerate the commercialisation of innovative technologies from the research base to the market, for the benefit of patients. This budget will be managed by the Technology Strategy Board.

Regional Growth Fund: EU Grants and Loans

Catherine McKinnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 852W, on regional growth fund: EU grants and loans, how many of the bids to the second round of the regional growth fund (RGF) which mentioned funding from European regional development fund sources were successful in obtaining RGF funding in each region. [85310]

Mr Prisk [holding answer 6 December 2011]: Regional breakdown of the successful bids to the second round of Regional Growth Fund which mentioned funding from European regional development fund sources is as given as follows:

	Number
North-east	2
North-west	1
Yorkshire and Humber	2
West midlands	3
East midlands	2
East of England	1
South-east	0
South-west	1
National	0

Space Technology

David Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to encourage sales of remote sensing services by businesses in the UK space sector. [85394]

Mr Willetts: The UK Space Agency, under my direction, is developing a UK data service to support businesses in developing new remote sensing products and services and to support their uptake by users in the public and private sectors. In addition, the agency in partnership with the Technology Strategy Board, invests in programmes supporting development of new remote sensing technologies, services and applications. The International Space Innovation Centre at Harwell, Oxfordshire provides a focus for much of this support.

The UK Space Agency is partnering with Lancaster city council and the Inshore Fisheries Authority to develop Remote Sensing applications specifically to support activities in Morecambe bay. These include monitoring the movement of channels within Morecambe bay and identifying habitats most likely to sustain shellfish beds. These are supported through the Government Information from the Space Sector (GIFTSS) programme.

Steria

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many contracts his Department has awarded to Steria since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [85479]

Mr Davey: The Department has awarded no contracts to Steria since May 2010.

Third Sector

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he has received representations concerning (a) the Big Society Bank, (b) the Work programme and (c) volunteering since June 2011; and if he will make a statement. [75066]

Mr Davey: As far as I am aware the Department has not received any formal representations concerning the Big Society Bank or the Work programme since June 2011. The Department has received a small number of representations related to volunteering in that time. We welcome the creation of Big Society Capital (formerly known as the Big Society Bank) which will provide new support for organisations which invest in the social sector.

Third Sector: Finance

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what funding over £100,000 his Department's Finance and Commercial Directorate allocated to (a) the voluntary sector, (b) charities and (c) other third sector organisations in (i) 2010-11 and (ii) 2011-12; and if he will make a statement. [85688]

Mr Davey: The Department does not separately identify funding made to the voluntary sector, charities or other third sector organisations and the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Trade Unions

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills if he will commission an independent assessment of the contribution of union representatives to business performance in the public sector to include the effect of such representation on (a) numbers of employment tribunal cases, (b) the number of working days lost due to workplace injury and (c) the incidence of work-related illness. [85613]

Mr Davey: I have no current plans to commission an assessment of the contribution of union representatives to business performance. The following recent documents give information on the benefits to employers and for industrial relations of having workplace union representatives.

'Reps in Action'—how workplaces can gain from modern union representatives (URN 09/931) 2009

Workplace Representatives: a review of their facilities and facility time (URN 07/1464) 2010

Interships

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (1) whether he has estimated the average cost incurred per week by a person undertaking an unpaid internship in London; [84595]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of people currently undertaking an internship in (a) the south-west, (b) the south-east, (c) London, (d) the east of England, (e) the east midlands, (f) the west midlands, (g) the north-west, (h) Yorkshire and the Humber, (i) the north-east, (j) Scotland, (k) Wales and (l) Northern Ireland. [84596]

Mr Willetts: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave on 5 December 2011, Official Report, column 174W.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH OFFICE

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85078]

Mr Lidington: The Foreign and Commonwealth office, its executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies do not make payments to individuals as a limited company in lieu of salary. All senior staff are directly employed, are paid through payroll and have deductions for income tax and national insurance contributions made at source through standard PAYE arrangements.

Press Releases

Dr Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 862W, on press releases, what representations his Department has made to those newspapers which broke the embargo by reporting the contents in detail of the speech on intelligence matters on 16 November 2011 before it was delivered. [84769]

Mr Lidington: The full text of the speech was embargoed and this was not broken.

Dr Julian Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 862W, on departmental press releases, whether a partial text of the speech was given to any media prior to 16 November 2011; whether the publication of detailed extracts from the speech which were published in newspapers on the morning of 16 November were unauthorised; and if he will make a statement. [84770]

Mr Lidington: Some elements of this speech were provided to the media in advance of delivery. As stated in my previous reply, all public statements are handled in accordance with the Ministerial Code and this was no exception.

Embassies: Festivals and Special Occasions

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many embassies and other posts held events to celebrate (a) St George's Day, (b) St Andrew's Day, (c) St Patrick's Day and (d) St David's Day in the last 12 months. [84900]

Mr Lidington: The information is not held centrally and could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. Embassies are free to arrange events to celebrate patron saints' days at their discretion.

EU Law: Czech Republic

Chris Heaton-Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the proposal by the government of the Czech Republic for an amendment of the EU Treaties submitted to the President of the Council of the European Union in September 2011 in accordance with Article 48(2) of the Treaty on European Union. [85005]

Mr Lidington: The content of the draft protocol was agreed by the UK—and all other EU member states—at the October 2009 European Council. Protocol 30 on the application of the charter of fundamental rights to Poland and to the United guarantees and clarifies the way in which the charter applies. The draft Czech protocol is helpful to the UK as it makes clear that that the UK and Polish protocol on the charter of fundamental rights shall also apply to a further member state, the Czech Republic. Parliament will further scrutinise the document as the draft protocol is subject to the scrutiny of the relevant parliamentary committees under the provisions of the European Union Act 2011 before the UK can agree to ratify the protocol.

EU Law: Republic of Ireland

Chris Heaton-Harris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his policy is on the proposal by the Government of Ireland for an amendment of the EU treaties submitted to the President of the Council of the European Union in July 2011 in accordance with article 48(2) of the treaty on European Union. [85003]

Mr Lidington: The content of the draft protocol was agreed by the UK—and all other EU member states—at the June 2009 European Council. The draft Irish protocol contains clarifications in relation to the right to life, family and education; taxation; and security and defence. It is helpful to the UK as it clarifies the limitations of the Lisbon treaty in a manner which is consistent with our interpretation. Parliament will further scrutinise the document before the UK can agree to ratify the protocol as the draft protocol is subject to the scrutiny of the relevant parliamentary committees under the provisions of the European Union Act 2011.

Israel

Mrs Main: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to encourage the British Ambassador to Israel to (a) visit Beer Sheva and the Bedouin villages and (b) meet the Negev Coexistence Forum. [85006]

Mr Bellingham: Our ambassador in Tel Aviv has visited the Negev and Beer Sheva on many occasions. He has raised UK concerns about Bedouin rights with the Israeli Government and discussed with Israeli Ministers and officials the Israeli Government's plans for the relocation of the Bedouin community and their concerns.

We remain in close touch with numerous Bedouin leaders and organisations, such as the Negev Institute for Strategies and Peace and Development. The ambassador plans to visit Bedouin villages and the Negev Coexistence Forum in the near future.

Linda Carty

Hazel Blears: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has made representations to his US counterpart on behalf of Linda Carty; and if he will make a statement. [84904]

Alistair Burt: The Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, wrote to US Secretary of State Clinton in July and November 2010 about Ms Carty's case. Since the UK Government became aware of Ms Carty's case in 2002, officials have maintained regular contact with her, her legal team, her family and the UK non-governmental organisation Reprieve. I met with Jovelle Carty, Linda's daughter, last year. The UK Government have also made their concerns known throughout the legal process and have submitted three amicus curiae briefs to the US courts in relation to the case. The decision on Ms Carty's case is a matter for the Texan authorities. We will continue to raise Ms Carty's case, and the UK's wider opposition to the death penalty, with the Texan authorities and Federal Government.

SCOTLAND

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria his Department uses when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85644]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office follows the guidance in the HM Treasury publication 'Government Internal Audit Standards'.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what risk registers are held by the non-departmental public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85710]

David Mundell: The Scotland Office is responsible for the Boundary Commission for Scotland which has a risk register in place. In addition, regular discussions take place between my officials and Commission staff regarding the work of the Commission and other relevant matters.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by his Department; and if he will make a statement. [85663]

David Mundell: Other than minor or bespoke purchases, the Scotland Office does not undertake direct procurement or tendering projects. It utilises existing service contracts between suppliers and the Scottish Government or the Ministry of Justice.

Unemployment: Young People

Ann McKechin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish Government Minister for Youth Unemployment before January 2012. [86204]

David Mundell: The Secretary of State for Scotland, the right hon. Member for Berwickshire, Roxburgh and Selkirk (Michael Moore), has written to Angela Constance MSP to congratulate her upon her appointment as the new Scottish Government Minister for Youth Employment. He intends to meet Ms Constance at the earliest opportunity available to discuss how the UK and Scottish Governments will continue to work together to support Scotland's young people into employment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS COMMISSION

Computers

Chris Ruane: To ask the hon. Member for Caithness, Sutherland and Easter Ross, representing the House of Commons Commission, pursuant to the answer of 13 October 2010, Official Report, column 290W, on computers, how many of the laptops and desktop computers returned to PICT in the 2010 refresh programme were sold to (a) hon. Members, (b) agencies, companies or other individuals and (c) as scrap; and how much revenue was raised in each of these categories. [85301]

John Thurso: Disposal of obsolete ICT equipment arising from the 2010 refresh programme for hon. Members was undertaken by two third-party suppliers, one covering constituency offices and another covering the estate. In both cases, after destruction of data to specified and certified standards, the choice between resale or destruction was a commercial one taken by the suppliers.

No equipment was sold to hon. Members. Nearly 2,760 laptops and desktops were sold to third parties or destroyed by the suppliers during the relevant period. Revenue amounting to £70,122 was received as a result. This figure includes revenue from the disposal of some printers from the estate which cannot be separately identified. Comparable figures are not available separately for sales to third parties and destruction.

WALES

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what criteria her Department uses when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if she will make a statement. [85647]

Mr David Jones: The Wales Office has an annual internal audit programme, which is agreed by the Audit Committee and internal audit. The areas tested each year change according to the Audit Committee's priorities for the year.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps her Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by her Department; and if she will make a statement. [85666]

Mr David Jones: The Wales Office has no executive agencies, and all services used by the Department are under Ministry of Justice procured contracts.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what risk registers are held by the non-departmental public bodies for which her Department is responsible; and if she will make a statement. [85713]

Mr David Jones: The Wales Office is not responsible for any non-departmental public bodies.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85662]

Mr Paterson: The Northern Ireland Office uses approved public procurement policies to achieve the most advantageous combination of cost, quality and sustainability to meet the Department's requirements.

My Department does not have executive agencies.

Cabinet

Mr David Hamilton: To ask the Prime Minister pursuant to the written ministerial statement of 24 October 2011, Official Report, column 1WS, on the Cabinet Manual, (1) whether he expects chapter two of the Cabinet Manual on Elections and Government Formation to have any legal status in the event of a future hung parliament; [86228]

(2) whether he plans to re-issue the Cabinet Manual (a) when relevant legislative changes are made, (b) when relevant changes to the machinery of Government are made, (c) when a significant EU treaty is signed and (d) on a regular calendar based timescale. [86229]

The Prime Minister: As stated in the preface of the Cabinet Manual, it is not intended to be legally binding or to set issues in stone. We expect it to evolve in form and content over time.

Departmental Internet

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Prime Minister if he will ensure that the 10 Downing street website is updated to include meetings he has had since March 2011. [86174]

The Prime Minister: An updated list has been published. It can be found on the Cabinet Office website:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/resource-library/ministerial-gifts-hospitality-travel-and-meetings-external-organisations-april-june

Departmental Publications

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) leaflets, (b) posters and (c) reports his Office has published since May 2010; how much each cost; and which company (i) published and (ii) designed each. [82990]

Mr Maude: I have been asked to reply.

For the purposes of administration, 10 Downing street is an integral part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the answer I have given him today on this matter.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Prime Minister how many and what proportion of questions for ordinary written answer received a substantive response within (a) 10, (b) 20, (c) 30 and (d) more than 30 sitting days in the 2010-12 session to date. [85938]

The Prime Minister: Out of 270 ordinary written questions tabled, 265 received a substantive response within 10 days. All remaining questions were answered within 20 days.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General what criteria (a) the Law Officers' Departments and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85629]

The Solicitor-General: The Treasury Solicitor's Department (TSol) is responsible for handling internal audits for itself, the Attorney-General's Office and HM Crown Prosecution Service Inspectorate (HMCPSI).

The TSol Internal Audit Service complies fully with Government Internal Audit Standards. Each year an annual internal audit plan, identifying individual internal audits and their proposed timing, is prepared and approved by the Audit Committee. This annual plan is designed to meet the assurance needs of the Accounting Officer, Board and Audit Committee. During the year the internal audit plan may be updated, with the approval of the Accounting Officer and Audit Committee, to reflect changes to TSol's operations, risk profile or assurance needs.

The Director of the Serious Fraud Office (SFO) and the chair of the Audit Committee agree an annual plan of reviews with the SFO's internal auditors to provide independent assurance that the SFO's risk management and internal control processes are operating effectively. When deciding on the topics and timing of internal audits within that plan the SFO considers planned business initiatives for the coming year, financial reporting requirements and previous NAO/Internal Audit report findings.

The Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) is the largest of the Law Officers' Departments. The CPS Head of Internal Audit (HIA) is responsible for determining which internal audits are undertaken based on CPS' management's assessment of the risks to the achievement of organisational objectives. The criteria used by the HIA when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit are:

The significance of the activity/system to the achievement of organisational goals, and the maintenance of the CPS's reputation.

The degree to which an activity mitigates risks identified on the Corporate Risk Register.

The findings of recent audit or HMCPSI activity.

Cumulative audit knowledge of the robustness of controls and compliance in place in a system.

The level of change in a system—to people, process, technology, inputs, and its operating environment.

The difficulty of the objective, the complexity of the system and the level of IT/automation.

The novelty of the activity and risk assessment.

The financial materiality of the system.

The stated needs for assurance of the accounting officers.

The known plans of the HMCPSI and National Audit Office in relation to the activity/system in question.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) the Law Officers' Departments and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85670]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments are required to follow EU procurement rules and Government procurement guidance to ensure best value for money. Government procurement best practice encourages small and medium sized enterprises to tender for procurement opportunities and recognises the importance of environmental, social and economic concerns.

In line with Government procurement policy the Law Officers' Departments normally use pre-tendered pan-government contracts wherever possible for the supply of services. Such contracts will have been awarded following an open competition process led by either the Government Procurement Service (formally the Office of Government Commerce-Buying Solutions) or another Government Department or public sector body.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Attorney-General what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which the Law Officers' Departments are responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85715]

The Solicitor-General: The Law Officers' Departments do not have responsibility for any other public bodies.

Prosecutions: Tobacco

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Attorney-General how many people have been prosecuted for selling illegal tobacco products in each of the last five years. [85625]

The Attorney-General: Excise offences include evasion of duty on alcohol and hydrocarbon oils as well as tobacco products. There is no specific offence of selling illegal tobacco products.

The following table provides information relating to the number of completed prosecutions, by defendant, for "excise" offences where charges were laid under SI 70 of the Customs and Excise Management Act 1979. It is not possible to break this data down further without retrieving files at disproportionate expense.

Financial years	Excise cases
2006-07	358
2007-08	330
2008-09	240
2009-10	263

ENVIRONMENT, FOOD AND RURAL AFFAIRS

Agriculture: Subsidies

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs whether she has made an estimate of the number of (a) hon. Members and (b) Members of the European Parliament who receive funding from the common agricultural policy. [84000]

Mr Paice: No such estimate has been made. It would not be possible to do so without incurring disproportionate cost as it would require considerable cross-checking between, for example, lists of hon. Members interests and the database of beneficiaries of common agricultural policy funds. Simply searching the database for hon. Members' (or MEPs') names would not identify any businesses in which they had an interest.

Animal Welfare: Circuses

Caroline Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs pursuant to the answer of 8 November 2011, Official Report, column 221W, on animal welfare: circuses, for what reasons it was considered that to ensure full participation assurances should be given to participants that the data collected would be confidential; and if she will make a statement. [82081]

Mr Paice: The decision to agree to confidentiality for these specific papers rests with the previous Government. The participants have reiterated to this Government that confidentiality should be maintained and, having considered the circumstances, the Government's view is that confidentiality should be respected.

Mr Leech: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of legal advice submitted to her Department by Animal Defenders International on 7 June 2011 on the conformity of a ban on the use of wild animals in circuses with the (a) Human Rights Act 1998 and (b) European Services directive. [83456]

Mr Paice: The Government's assessment of the legal advice submitted by Animal Defenders International are protected by legal professional privilege which is not ordinarily waived. The Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs, my right hon. Friend the Member for Meriden (Mrs Spelman), does not propose to waive privilege on this occasion.

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she plans to publish proposals for a licensing scheme for wild animals in circuses. [84433]

Mr Paice: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cambridge (Dr Huppert), during the oral answers to questions on 13 October 2011, Official Report, columns 467-68.

Fiona O'Donnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs which bodies are advising her Department on the proposals for a licensing scheme for wild animals in circuses. [84434]

Mr Paice: DEFRA has had, or will shortly have, discussions on our proposals for a licensing scheme for wild animals in circuses with the RSPCA, Animal Defenders International, Born Free, CAPS and PAWSI.

Animal Welfare: Performing Arts

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what recent assessments she has made of the adequacy of the welfare standards applicable to animals used in the performing arts industry. [84580]

Mr Paice: No such assessments have been made of animal welfare standards applicable to the performing arts as a whole. DEFRA is currently considering the adequacy of welfare standards in the context of performing wild animals in travelling circuses, and will consult on proposals for this in early 2012.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Dan Rogerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs how many cases of bovine tuberculosis have been recorded in camelids in each of the last 12 months. [82340]

Mr Paice: The Animal Health and Veterinary Laboratories Agency provides DEFRA with data on the number of cases of camelids it has examined for TB each quarter and the number positive for M. bovis on culture. Cumulative figures are published in the statistics section of DEFRA's website.

The numbers of cases reported in the last 12 months have been:

	October-December 2010	January-March 2011	April-June 2011	July-September 2011
Cases examined
Alpacas	12	17	35	40
Llamas	1	1	1	1
Numbers positive for M. bovis

All data provided for 2011 are provisional and subject to change as more becomes available.

The figures represent submissions of individual animals rather than premises (i.e. several submissions may be from the same premises) and are made up of a combination of voluntary submissions from a range of farms and also multiple submissions from a small number of TB-restricted herds undergoing repeat TB testing and compulsory slaughter of TB test reactor animals (i.e. which have given a test result consistent with being infected with bovine TB) and non-reactor ("direct contact") animals.

Harriett Baldwin: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what the (a) initial capital cost and (b) ongoing maintenance costs are of the SAM computer system for logging cases of bovine tuberculosis. [83569]

Mr Paice: The initial capital cost of the SAM system for bovine TB is £12.8 million and the annual running cost (hosting and application support), on average, £153,000 per annum.

SAM will enable savings in staff costs specifically related to bovine TB of over £2.3 million per annum. In addition, the investment will allow legacy systems, that are approaching the end of their economic lives and are rapidly becoming unsupportable, to be retired, with consequential savings in support costs. Specifically this system will automate the administrative process relating to bovine TB (which accounts for approximately 50% of Animal Health and Veterinary Laboratories Agency's core business), improving both speed and quality. The time required to enter test results and to remove infected animals will be minimised as a result of reducing manual data entry and preventing any possible errors in duplicate data entry.

Dangerous Dogs

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what correspondence she has received on the effects on local authority budgets of dealing with dangerous dogs in England. [81000]

Mr Paice: There are no records of Ministers having received correspondence on this subject from local authorities. However, we are aware of their concerns regarding the costs facing them.

Dogs: Tagging

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the case for compulsory micro-chipping of dogs. [80463]

Mr Paice: The Government are considering a range of measures to deal with dangerous dogs and irresponsible dog ownership. One of the proposals under consideration is the compulsory micro-chipping of dogs. We have made it a priority to look at the complex issue of dangerous dogs and will shortly announce measures to tackle them and make our streets safer.

Imports: Israel

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what total volume by (a) value and (b) tonnage of fresh fruit and vegetables was imported from Israel in each of the last five years; and what proportion by (i) value and (ii) tonnage (A) had and (B) did not have a certificate of conformity with marketing standards issued by the Israeli authorities. [82408]

Mr Paice: The requirement for a certificate of conformity is only relevant for imports of those particular products which are covered by EU marketing standards for fresh fruit and vegetables. Certain products such as potatoes are not covered by the standards—but for information import figures for this crop are also included in the following tables:

Table 1: Total (a) value and (b) volume of fresh fruit and vegetables, as regulated by EU marketing standards, for 2006-10

Livestock: Disease Control

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what assessment she has made of the risk to human and animal health of the use of antibiotics on farm animals as a preventative measure. [84664]

Mr Paice: All veterinary medicinal products must satisfy extensive safety criteria, which include safety to the animal being treated, safety to humans and safety to the environment before being granted a marketing authorisation. Efficacy and quality criteria must also be satisfied. There is also a specific requirement for manufacturers to supply data to address the area of the development of resistance new antibiotic products prior to authorisation.

Veterinary medicinal products containing antibiotics are available only on veterinary prescription. Where products have been authorised for use in food producing animals, the greater majority are authorised for the treatment of disease. This authorisation includes the treatment of groups of animals when not all individual animals have developed the symptoms of the disease. A minority of veterinary medicinal product containing antibiotics are authorised for the prevention of disease in farmed animals and these include those used to prevent mastitis in dairy cattle at drying-off.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what estimate she has made of the number of animals subjected to mulesing in England in the latest period for which figures are available; and what assessment she has made of the effect of this practice on the welfare of the animal. [84665]

Mr Paice: Mulesing is not a permitted procedure in the UK. There have been no reported illegal mutilations of animals in this way in the UK, therefore no assessment of this practice has been made on the welfare of the UK-reared animal.

Veterinary Laboratory Service: Redundancy

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs what impact assessment her Department has conducted on (a) the loss of 81 members of staff in the rationalisation of the Veterinary Laboratory Service and (b) what impact the loss of 81 staff members will have on the level of service provided by the Veterinary Laboratory Agency; and if she will place (i) the impact assessment and (ii) the academic model on which the proposed rationalisation is based in the Library. [77730]

Mr Paice: In April 2011 the AHVLA executive team initiated a review of the delivery of laboratory services across England and Wales. This work followed the earlier AHVLA sustainable surveillance project which recommended that the post mortem examination of carcases, which makes up the most critical aspect of surveillance work, be de-coupled from the provision of laboratory service functions, removing the requirement for co-location of the two work areas.

No formal impact assessment is required for changes such as these. Under the current Better Regulation Guidance it states that if there is no impact on regulation and there is no increased cost to the end user then no impact assessment is required. The decision on which laboratories would retain laboratory services was based on a number of factors including future needs for specialist skills, staff capacity to deliver the volumes of work, facilities required, and retaining resilience of service delivery.

The basis for the new delivery model is not an academic study; it is our experience of the model used successfully at the University Veterinary Schools surveillance centres at both Liverpool and London. At these sites the university staff accept carcase material and then forward samples onto the relevant AHVLA regional laboratory as no testing is carried out at the veterinary schools.

The onward submission of tests to other laboratory sites is also common practice at all post mortem sites, so this is an extension of existing practice.

The ability to respond to disease outbreak with a surge in capacity is maintained as confirmatory tests for notifiable diseases are carried out by Weybridge which is not part of the regional laboratory network. AHVLA is confident that service levels will not be reduced with the proposed changes.

Written Questions: Government Responses

Natascha Engel: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs when she expects to answer question 70107, on electronic training aids for cats, tabled by the hon. Member for North East Derbyshire on 2 September 2011 for answer on 6 September 2011. [80908]

Mr Paice: I apologise to the hon. Member. My answer on electronic training aids for cats was published on 24 November 2011, Official Report, column 436.

DEFENCE

Armed Forces: Cadets

Stephen Barclay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 974W, on armed forces: cadets, if he will consider extending the central provision of insurance for sea cadet forces to cover buildings insurance. [85175]

Mr Robathan: Sea cadet units are independent charities in their own right, affiliated to the Marine Society and sea. cadets subject to certain conditions being in place. Each unit therefore is responsible for funding its own running costs, including buildings insurance, which they do in the main with considerable success. The Marine Society and sea cadets provide a competitive package through their insurers with a free direct debit service for units to spread this through the year. There are no current plans to increase the central provision to include buildings insurance.

Armed Forces: Education

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he is taking to ensure that education and training for armed forces recruits aged between 16 and 18 years meet the minimum standards recommended by the Wolf Review of vocational education; and what the cost of meeting these standards is. [85336]

Nick Harvey [holding answer 8 December 2011]: The Government's acceptance of the recommendations of the Wolf Review of Vocational Education, means that functional skills and GCSEs will be the only recognised pathways to achieve the compulsory English and maths elements of an apprenticeship. The armed forces are committed to the introduction of functional skills and some areas already exceed the minimum requirements laid down in the Wolf Report. All areas will meet these requirements within the timescales laid down, under transition arrangements for the introduction of functional skills.

The costs of delivering apprenticeships for those aged between 16 and 18 years are embedded in the total training costs and cannot be separated without incurring disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Food

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes have been made to the Pay As You Dine scheme since May 2010. [86011]

Mr Robathan: There have been no changes to the Pay As You Dine scheme since May 2010.

Armed Forces: Housing

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the number of (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel in Afghanistan who will return to a different accommodation when they have completed their deployment in the next year; [84977]

(2) how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel in Afghanistan will be informed of the location of their service accommodation on return from their deployment; [84978]

(3) how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel overseas will return to a different accommodation having completed their deployment in the next year; [84980]

(4) how many (a) Army, (b) Royal Navy and (c) RAF personnel currently overseas will be informed of the location of their service accommodation on return from deployment in the next year. [84981]

Mr Robathan: No service families with a member away on operational deployment will be asked to move to a different service family accommodation property during their deployment.

Personnel in single living accommodation are not generally moved to alternative accommodation while away on operational deployment. Information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces: Leisure Services

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what estimate he has made of the number of local authorities in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland which offer discounts for local authority-owned leisure services for (i) serving members and (ii) veterans of the armed forces; [85686]

(2) what discussions he has had with ministerial colleagues in the Department for Communities and Local Government on local authorities offering discounted leisure services to (a) serving servicemen and women and (b) veterans of the armed forces. [85687]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 8 December 2011]: The Ministry of Defence (MOD) welcomes all initiatives to offer discounts to serving personnel or veterans. While no estimate or formal discussions have taken place, the MOD held an armed forces community covenant conference with the Local Government Association for local authorities in England on 1 November 2011. In the discussions and workshops that took place, the issue of offering discounts to members of the armed forces community was discussed, with some local authorities providing examples of what discounts they offered. Ultimately decisions on these matters must be for the local authorities themselves.

In addition, the MOD provides, through an agreement with a contractor, a Defence discount scheme which is open to all those who are serving, have served, their families, MOD civil servants, cadets, reservists and NATO personnel serving in the UK. The scheme has partnered with over 1,200 businesses offering thousands of discounts across the UK. The scheme has an active membership of over 190,000 members; is free to join; and is easily accessed through the website:

www.forcesdiscounts-mod.co.uk

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what efficiency savings his Department made in 2010-11; what savings he expects to make in (a) 2011-12 and (b) 2012-13; what targets he has set for each of these years; and if he will make a statement. [85232]

Mr Philip Hammond: The efficiency programme set out in the 2010 spending review began at the start of the current financial year. The previous financial year was covered by the value for money programme that saved £2.8 billion over the years covered by the 2007 comprehensive spending review.

The Ministry of Defence is committed to realise £3.2 billion in efficiencies over the spending review period. Detailed analysis of our performance against these measures will be reported annually, after the departmental accounts have been audited.

Railways

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department has had with the Department for Transport on the potential for greater use of his Department's rail infrastructure in and around Bicester following the re-opening of the east-west rail link between Oxford and Milton Keynes. [85763]

Mr Robathan: Ministry of Defence (MOD) officials are in discussions with the Department for Transport for the utilisation of the rail network at the MOD site in Bicester.

The Department for Transport is supportive of the MOD's proposals including retention and exploitation of rail connections.

Ex-servicemen: Employment

Mr Jim Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many veterans of the armed forces have found long-term work through the Employment Support Programme in each year since its creation; [84070]

(2) how many armed forces veterans have found long-term work through the Full Resettlement programme in each year since its creation; [84993]

(3) how many veterans have found long-term work through the Career Transition Partnership (a) in total and (b) in each year since its creation. [83821]

Mr Robathan [holding answer 29 November 2011]: This information is not collected by the Ministry of Defence (MOD) as it would require former service personnel to notify the MOD when they have obtained or changed employment. However, the Career Transition Partnership (CTP) undertakes a survey at six months after discharge and the following table lists the total number of service leavers who have gained employment within six months of being discharged since 2005. We do not maintain records for individual programmes ran by CTP.

Financial year	Number of career transition clients employed within six months of discharge
2005-06	9,811
2006-07	11,819
2007-08	12,673
2008-09	8,666
2009-10	10,047

This indicates that, over the period, some 95% of CTP clients have secured employment within six months of leaving.

Iran: Nuclear Weapons

Mr Mike Hancock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his assessment is of the potential for the weaponisation of the Iranian nuclear programme. [85230]

Nick Harvey: In November the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) expressed "serious concerns" about credible information that

"indicates that Iran has carried out activities relevant to the development of a nuclear explosive device."

It also suggests that some activities relevant to the development of such a device may still be ongoing. We share these concerns and continue to call for full implementation by Iran of United Nations Security Council and IAEA Board of Governors Resolutions.

Postcodes

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department uses postcodes for purposes other than the postage of mail. [84173]

Mr Robathan: Postcodes are used in the Ministry of Defence for purposes other than the postage of mail but it is not possible to provide a definitive and detailed list of these uses, because this information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The following examples are no more than indicative.

Defence Analytical Services and Advice (DASA) use postcodes as the basis for aggregating statistics on stationed location, as published in TSP 10—UK Regular Forces Stationed Location and available online at:

http://www.dasa.mod.uk/applications/newWeb/www/index.php?page=48&thiscontent=100&pubType=0&date=2011-11-17&disText=01%20Oct%202011&from=historic&topDate=2011-11-17&PublishTime=09:30:00

The postcodes are used to identify an individual's base location and to count how many people are stationed within a particular base, local authority, region, or country.

Postcodes have also been used to group the responses to administration surveys into rough areas by using the first part of the postcode eg SW1A 2HB would be collated with other responses in the SW1A area, cross referenced to the post town.

RAF Lossiemouth

Sir Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) pursuant to the answer of 9 November 2011, Official Report, column 368W, on RAF Lossiemouth, European Fighter Aircraft, for what period of time RAF Lossiemouth undertook the Quick Reaction Alert North role when resurfacing work was undertaken at RAF Leuchars; and on how many occasions aircraft from RAF Lossiemouth were (a) scrambled and (b) launched in that role during that period; [83902]

(2) on how many occasions aircraft from RAF Leuchars have responded to incidents which (a) involved and (b) did not involve aircraft from foreign powers in the last 10 years. [83903]

Nick Harvey: The choice of the Quick Reaction Alert (QRA) base or bases used for each incident is at the discretion of the tactical commander and forms part of the deterrent value of our QRA posture. Therefore, it is departmental policy only to release limited statistics relating to QRA launches.

QRA statistics are no longer held for incidents prior to September 2006. All launches of the QRA force from September 2006 were either for Russian military aviation (Bear or Blackjack aircraft) which approached the NATO Air Policing Area (for which the UK has responsibility) or aircraft within UK civil airspace that were causing concern to air traffic controllers. The aircraft that were causing concern to civil controllers were a range of aircraft types registered in a range of countries, including the UK.

The number of days on which RAF QRA aircraft have been launched from all QRA bases since September 2006 is as follows:

Number of days QRA launched	Number
2006 (since September)	2
2007	24
2008	15
2009	14
2010	14
2011	18

Strategic Defence and Security Review

Richard Drax: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will review the Strategic Defence and Security Review in the light of global instability; [84625]

(2) if he will review the Strategic Defence and Security Review in the light of rising unemployment. [84626]

Mr Philip Hammond: No. Events have demonstrated that the central finding of the Strategic Defence and Security Review—the need for the UK to adopt an adaptable posture—remains appropriate.

Warships: Wrecks

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what steps his Department is taking to identify and contact the current owners of HMS Aboukir, HMS Hogue and HMS Cressy to seek their assistance in preventing further disturbance to these three war graves; [86047]

(2) whether there are provisions in the contract of sale of the wrecks of HMS Aboukir, HMS Hogue and HMS Cressy to provide for the proper treatment of human remains; [86049]

(3) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the salvors fulfil their legal obligations to land and report any recovery of personal possessions of the crews of HMS Aboukir, HMS Hogue and HMS Cressy. [86050]

Mr Robathan: Departmental records indicate that these three wrecks were sold, apparently for scrap, in 1954. We are aware that salvage subsequently took place in the 1950s and 1960s. Records do not identify the purchaser.

No details remain on the circumstances of the sale or of the provisions of the agreement.

It is the responsibility of the salvors to comply with the appropriate national legislation wherever wreck material is landed, whether this comprises of the ship's fixtures and fittings or the personal possessions of individuals. Notwithstanding the particular circumstances of these three wrecks, the Ministry of Defence is continuing to liaise and work with the Dutch authorities with respect to the activities of salvors based in the Netherlands and on issues related to naval wreck protection in general.

Mr Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what his policy is on the protection of maritime war graves in international waters; and if he will make a statement. [86048]

Mr Robathan: The Government view wrecked military vessels, wherever they may lie, as being the last resting places of those who lost their lives in the ship's sinking. As a general principle we believe that such sites should remain undisturbed to the maximum extent possible.

With regard to the protection of such wrecks in international waters, depending on the circumstances of the individual case we would look to make use of our rights in international law together with domestic legislation where appropriate.

CULTURE, MEDIA AND SPORT

Broadband: Expenditure

Andrew Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how much his Department has invested in broadband infrastructure in each of the last three financial years. [85566]

Mr Vaizey: The Department for Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) has been responsible for broadband delivery since April 2011. The Department has £530 million to support broadband infrastructure over the period to 2015, and indicative funding allocations for each local authority area and the devolved Administrations were announced in the summer. Each area needs to undertake a procurement to select a broadband supplier and funding will be paid in accordance with the achievement of delivery targets by the supplier. No projects have yet reached this stage and consequently no payments have been made so far. Currently eight local broadband projects are in procurement and a further four local areas have agreed Local Broadband Plans. Together, these represent nearly half of the allocated funding. The other areas of the country are currently developing their plans.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85634]

John Penrose: This Department's internal audit function is provided by the Department for Communities and Local Government's Internal Audit Services (IAS), which operates to Government Internal Audit Standards. IAS produces an annual audit plan that is agreed with the Department on the basis of need, priority and expected value added, and is approved by its Audit and Risk Committee (ARC). The plan includes a core package of audits on controls and compliance, necessary to provide assurance to the accounting officer at the year end and which will support the annual Governance Statement (which replaces the Statement on Internal Control this financial year). In addition, there is a programme of risk-based work, which reflects the Department's priorities and high-level risk registers and is developed during the year in the light of changes in the risk environment. The plan also contains a flexible allowance—for ad hoc advisory work and to enable timely response to changes in risk profile or other developments during the year. Prior experience, assessment of urgency and regular contact with senior management, the ARC and the National Audit Office all inform the precise timing of individual internal audits.

The equivalent information for the Department's public bodies is not held centrally, though the criteria used by them would be set by each individual body's own board and audit committee.

Secondment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport how many secondees are working in his Department and its associated public bodies; from which organisations; for how long each secondment is due to last; and if he will make a statement. [85813]

John Penrose: There are 16 secondees working in the Department for Culture, Media and Sport as outlined in the following table.

Home organisation	Expected leaving date	Work area
Royal Parks	30 October 2012	DCMS
Qualifications Curriculum Authority	19 October 2012	DCMS
Electoral Commission	7 November 2012	DCMS
National Audit Office	31 October 2012	DCMS
English Cricket Board	16 April 2012	DCMS
Royal Air Force	31 October 2012	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	30 September 2012	Olympic Games
DWP	31 October 2012	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	31 December 2011	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	30 November 2012	Olympic Games
Transport for London	20 April 2012	Olympic Games
Transport for London	30 December 2011	Olympic Games
Hitachi	1 August 2012	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	31 December 2012	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	30 September 2012	Olympic Games
Olympic Delivery Authority	30 September 2012	Olympic Games

We do not collate this information for our non-departmental public bodies. Accordingly, I have asked each of their chief executives to write directly to the hon. Member for Harrow West. Copies of the replies will be placed in both House Libraries.

Ofcom: Finance

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what the budget is for Ofcom for the period 2008 to 2016. [85355]

Mr Vaizey: Ofcom's budgets for 2008-09 to 2011-12 inclusive are shown in the following table:

	Budget (£ million)
2008-09	133.7
2009-10	136.8
2010-11	142.5
2011-12
Including six months post	119.8
Excluding post	(115.8)

Ofcom has not set its budget beyond 2011-12. However, the funding cap agreed by HM Treasury as part of the recent spending review, and from within which Ofcom will set future budgets for the years 2012-13 to 2014-15 inclusive, are shown in the following table:

	Budget (£ million)
2012-13	125.9
2013-14	121.0
2014-15	119.7

Olympic Games 2012: Contracts

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what the cost was of operating the London 2012 Business Network in each year since its establishment. [82097]

Mr Prisk: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has interpreted this question as being the cost of the CompeteFor service (the website chosen by London 2012 for the publication of Games-related contract opportunities).

CompeteFor cost £3.633 million to develop, which included concept development, specification, implementation and testing, and establishing the support structure.

A summary of the operating costs of CompeteFor for each financial year is shown as follows:

Financial year	CompeteFor (website and helpdesk) (£)
2007/08	[1]220,000
2008/09	1,226,633
2009/10	1,201,555
2010/11	853,163
2011/12 (projected)	799,230

[1] December to March

In addition, CompeteFor employs a buyer engagement service, helping buying organisations to ensure they are supported and to maximise their use of CompeteFor.

The cost of the buyer engagement service for each financial year is shown as follows:

Financial year	Buyer engagement service (£)
2007/08	587,000
2008/09	1,036,082
2009/10	993,980
2010/11	1,066,301
2011/12 (projected)	772,085

CompeteFor has been funded by the regional development agencies in England along with the devolved Administrations of Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

Radio Frequencies

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the monetary value of receipts from the auction of 4G spectrum. [85352]

Mr Vaizey: We have made no estimates of the monetary value of receipts from auctions. Similar auctions for 4G spectrum across Europe have raised significantly different amounts. The recent German auction raised a total of €4.4 billion for spectrum in three bands and France's recent auction of Spectrum at 2.6 GHz raised €936 million in total. This has to be compared with spectrum auctions in other countries which raised much lower amounts, Sweden raised approximately €233 million for the 800 MHz band in its recent auction and Finland raised approximately €3.8 million in its auction of 2.6 GHz spectrum. It should be noted that the forthcoming auction in the UK may be under different terms to those and the UK market is different to markets in those countries.

Helen Goodman: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what estimate he has made of the monetary value of receipts from the release of spectrum below 5 GHz. [85356]

Mr Vaizey: We have made no estimates on the likely revenues that could be generated by the release of the 500 MHz of publically held spectrum. The purpose of the release is to generate innovation and commercial opportunities for industry rather than to generate revenue. In addition the exact bands to be released have not been decided yet and this would be a significant factor in determining the value of the spectrum to industry.

International Sporting Events

Andrew Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport if he will estimate the financial benefit to the economy of international sporting events staged in the UK for each of the last three financial years. [85473]

Hugh Robertson: The evidence we have of financial benefits to the economy from international sporting events staged in the UK relates to events supported through UK Sport's Major Events Programme. While these are supported to deliver a wide range of impacts, research shows that for every £1 of investment into those events, a net economic impact of £4.87 has been felt in the host economy, generating a projected overall impact of £48 million from an investment of £9.86 million.

The £6 billion investment in the building of the Olympic Park and Village has already had 98% of contracts awarded to British businesses and over 40,000 people having worked to build the Olympic Park and Village by the time all work is complete. The whole of the UK stands to gain from the wide range of opportunities created by the 2012 Games, through businesses winning Games-related work, increased tourism and cultural celebrations.

Sports: VAT

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what discussions he has had with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the decision by HM Revenue and Customs that the provision of sports league services is subject to VAT at the standard rate. [85499]

Hugh Robertson: I recently wrote to the Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury, my hon. Friend the Member for South West Hertfordshire (Mr Gauke), about the VAT treatment of sports leagues. The Exchequer Secretary to the Treasury clarified that the standard rate of VAT has always been in place for sports leagues. They issued the Revenue and Customs Brief 04/11 in February to make clear this position.

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what assessment he has made of the potential effects on levels of participation in sport of the decision by HM Revenue and Customs that the provision of sports league services is subject to VAT at the standard rate. [85500]

Hugh Robertson: Neither the Department nor Sport England have made a specific assessment of the potential effects on levels of participation in sport by the VAT treatment of sports leagues. However, we do record participation levels in sport via the Taking Part Survey and Active People Survey which can be found at the following links:

http://www.culture.gov.uk/what_we_do/research_and_statistics/4828.aspx

and

http://www.sportengland.org/research/active_people_survey.aspx

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport if he will offer assistance to providers of league sport services whose businesses are affected by the HM Revenue and Customs decision that the provision of such services is subject to VAT at the standard rate. [85501]

Hugh Robertson: The Revenue and Customs Brief 04/11, issued in February by HM Revenue and Customs:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/briefs/vat/brief0411.htm advises businesses who feel they have been affected by incorrect advice to contact the HMRC Complaints Team. The Department does not have an intention to provide an additional service for such businesses.

Television: Licences

Hywel Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Culture, Olympics, Media and Sport what information his Department holds on the number of television licences issued in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and how much income was generated. [86172]

John Penrose: My Department does not hold information on the number of television licences broken down by nation. The BBC does not calculate these figures.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many and what proportion of questions for ordinary written answer received a substantive response within (a) 10, (b) 20, (c) 30 and (d) more than 30 sitting days in the 2010-12 session to date. [85937]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The information is not held in the format requested.

Of the 564 questions tabled to me for ordinary written answer between 12 May 2010 and 30 November 2011, 493 (88%) received a substantive response within the five sitting day deadline.

Domestic Visits

Mr Gregory Campbell: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how many visits he has undertaken in an official capacity to (a) Scotland, (b) Wales and (c) Northern Ireland since his appointment; and whether he plans to visit Northern Ireland in 2012. [86209]

The Deputy Prime Minister: During my time in office I have visited Scotland three times, Wales twice and Northern Ireland once. My travel plans for the forthcoming year have not been confirmed.

Travellers: Caravan Sites

Chris Ruane: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what consideration has been given by the Collaborative Spatial Planning Group of the British-Irish Council to the availability of sites for Irish Travellers across British and Irish jurisdictions; and if he will place the most recent work programme of that group in the Library. [85880]

The Deputy Prime Minister: There has been no such consideration by the British-Irish Council Collaborative Spatial Planning group.

The British-Irish Council provides a consultative, inter-executive forum that allows its members to consult, discuss and exchange views on a range of issues, on a confidential basis. Biannual updates of the Collaborative Spatial Planning group's work can be found in the British-Irish Council summit communiqués, available to the public through:

http://www.gov.je/britishirishcouncil/Pages/index.aspx

COMMUNITIES AND LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Council Tax

Nicholas Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government (1) if he will estimate the average level of council tax per capita for (a) Suffolk Coastal, (b) Teignbridge, (c) Breckland, (d) Mid Sussex, (e) South Oxfordshire, (f) South Cambridgeshire, (g) East Lindsey, (h) Isle of Wight and (i) Wealden in each year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [85315]

(2) if he will estimate the average level of council tax per capita for (a) Newcastle-under-Lyme, (b) Preston, (c) Middlesbrough, (d) Poole, (e) Arun and (f) Elmbridge in each year between 2008-09 and 2011-12; [85316]

(3) if he will estimate the average level of council tax per capita for (a) Ipswich, (b) Halton, (c) Nuneaton and Bedworth, (d) Slough, (e) Norwich, (f) Thanet, (g) Reigate and Banstead, (h) Torbay, (i) Windsor and Maidenhead, (j) Oxford, (k) Canterbury and (l) Blackburn with Darwen in each year between 2008-09 and 2011-12. [85317]

Robert Neill [holding answer 6 December 2011]: Figures on average council tax per dwelling and average band D council tax by local authority can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/localgovernment/localregional/localgovernmentfinance/statistics/counciltax/

Figures on council tax requirements by local authority can be found at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/localgovernment/localregional/localgovernmentfinance/statistics/revenueexpenditure/

Mid-year population estimates by local authority area are published by the Office for National Statistics.

http://www.statistics.gov.uk/hub/population/population-change/population-estimates

Council Tax Benefits

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what progress his Department has made on the implementation of council tax benefit localisation. [85579]

Robert Neill: The consultation on proposals for localising support for council tax in England closed on 14 October 2011, and the Government will publish a formal response in due course, alongside draft legislation. The Department is continuing to discuss its proposals, and plans for enabling local schemes to be implemented by April 2013, with Local Government.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85633]

Robert Neill: Internal audit services in the Department for Communities and Local Government provide the internal audit function to the Department, and six of the 18 executive agencies, non-departmental public bodies, public corporations and public body for which the Department is responsible. The others use their own criteria for deciding what should be audited and this information is not held centrally.

The delivery of internal audit services is governed by Government internal audit standards and these standards ensure a consistent and robust approach to the delivery of services, including the determination of the scope of Internal Audit plans.

Internal audits are undertaken by internal audit services as part of agreed annual internal audit plans. These are compiled by looking at the risk profile of the Department (and its bodies where the service provides the internal audit function) through: discussions with senior management; the National Audit Office; and reviews of high level risk registers. These are agreed with the Audit and Risk Committees and are reviewed throughout the year to reflect changes in the risk profile. The timing of internal audit reviews is determined as part of this process.

Departmental Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84199]

Robert Neill: All departmental staff employed in communications roles are members of the Department's Communication Directorate, which comprises external communications division and corporate communications division, managed by the Director of Communication.

At the time the current Administration took office in May 2010, the Department employed 72 people with a communications remit. As at 30 November 2011, there are 52 staff working in communication roles in the Department. As part of the Department's organisational restructuring, the Communication Directorate's staffing levels will decrease further during 2012, with seven members of staff leaving by April.

Of the current staffing: external communications currently employs 25 communications officers working on a combination of press, marketing, speechwriting and news planning. This equates to 23.4 full-time equivalent posts, as some members of staff are employed part time. There are 15 people who work predominantly on press office duties.

Corporate communications currently employs 23 communications officers working on internal communication, web management, print/publishing and the Info4Local internet service. This equates to 22.6 full-time equivalent posts. Four other communications specialists within Communication Directorate work directly with policy directorates.

The Department does not hold a comprehensive, up-to-date record of the communications posts across all of its public bodies. However, the Department and its public bodies are increasingly working together to provide communication services more efficiently, reflecting the best practice that we are encouraging local government to follow. The number of communication specialists across the Department and its public bodies will be reduced by a further 17 full-time equivalent posts by October 2012.

Departmental Judicial Review

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what applications for judicial review have been made against his Department (a) in the last Parliament and (b) since May 2010; whether each such application (i) succeeded, (ii) failed and (iii) remains pending; what legal costs were incurred by his Department for each such application; in each failed application whether he applied for costs against the applicant and whether they were (A) awarded and (B) paid; whether his Department (1) paid for and (2) offered to pay for the legal costs incurred by each such applicant; and what the total cost to the public purse was of payment of the legal costs for each such applicant. [80708]

Robert Neill: All litigation cases against the Department are managed by the Treasury Solicitors Department under a service level agreement. The litigation cases include judicial reviews, statutory planning appeals (some of which are also judicial reviews), compulsory purchase order challenges, personal injury, employment and contractual cases.

(a) In the last Parliament under the previous Administration from 5 May 2005 to 6 May 2010 there were on average 260 open cases at any one time and DCLG paid around £9,105,000 in total for that period;

(b) Since 7 May 2010 to 31 October 2011 there were on average 230 open cases at any one time, including legal challenges inherited from the previous Administration. DCLG paid around £2,084,000 in total for that period. The costs paid to the Treasury Solicitors included fees, disbursements and adverse costs.

To disaggregate this information further, for just judicial review cases and to identify applications that succeeded, failed, remains pending, costs awarded and paid could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Pay

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85083]

Robert Neill: No senior staff in the Department for Communities and Local Government (either in the Department, its Executive agencies or non-departmental public bodies) are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary. The Department does not have a formal policy in relation to this issue.

Parliamentary Written Questions

Chris Ruane: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what proportion of written questions for answer on a named day received a substantive answer within five working days in each of the last six months. [85046]

Robert Neill: The readily available information, which relates to the month in which parliamentary questions were tabled, is shown in the following table.

2011	Number of named day questions	Answered on time or within five sitting days[1]
May	48	44
June	71	61
July	55	54
August	7	7
September	24	21
October	60	57

[1] Including non-sitting Fridays.

The Government have committed to providing the Procedure Committee with information relating to written parliamentary question performance on a sessional basis and will provide full information to the committee at the end of the Session. Statistics relating to Government Department's performance for the 2009-10 parliamentary Session were previously provided to the committee and are available on the Parliament website.

Homes and Communities Agency: Equality

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what criteria were used to select the members of the Homes and Communities Agency's Diversity and Equality Working Group; and if he will make a statement. [86173]

Andrew Stunell: The Homes and Communities Agency established an Equality and Diversity Board Advisory Group in June 2009. The Advisory Group acts in an advisory capacity for the agency on diversity and equality issues in relation to its operations as well as organisational issues. It has no authority over the activities of the board, executive management team, staff or the agency's resources. Its terms of reference are available at:

http://www.homesandcommunities.co.uk/equality-and-diversity-advisory-group

Members serve a term of three years. The group has an independent Chair, Dorian Leatham, appointed by the Homes and Communities Agency's Board. Professor Peter Roberts represents the Agency Board. The Homes and Communities Agency directly appointed three members based on specific areas of expertise with the remaining eight members being selected and appointed in April 2009 following an open competition. All members of the group are expected to demonstrate an expertise and commitment to equality and diversity as well as an understanding of housing and regeneration. Group members are not paid (beyond reasonable travel and subsistence claims).

Housing: North-east England

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government with reference to his policy on underoccupancy, what assessment he has made of (a) the availability of and (b) potential changes in demand for one-bedroom properties in (i) County Durham and (ii) the North East. [85562]

Andrew Stunell: Information is not available on the total stock of one-bedroom properties in County Durham and the North East. Estimates of one-bedroom properties as a percentage of all new build properties are available in Table 254 at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/housing/housingresearch/housingstatistics/housingstatisticsby/housebuilding/livetables/

There are 4,507 one bedroom local authority properties in Durham Unitary Authority accounting for 24% of the local authority's stock. In the North East there are 25,804 one bedroom local authority properties accounting for 22% of the local authority stock in the region.

Estimates are not available for the future demand of one-bed properties. The Department does not forecast housing need. However, the Department publishes household projections that show the number of households by size that would form if previous demographic trends were to continue. These are available in Table 420 at:

http://www.communities.gov.uk/housing/housingresearch/housingstatistics/housingstatisticsby/householdestimates/livetables-households/

Housing: Population

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what assessment he has made of the effect on UK housing stock of (a) migration from the EU and (b) non-EU immigration. [85467]

Andrew Stunell: The Department does not estimate housing need. However, the Department publishes household projections, which are a trend-based view of the number of households that would form given a projected population and previous demographic trends (including migration). Local authorities should use the projections as a part of the evidence base for assessing future housing demand.

The number of households in England is projected to grow to 27.5 million in 2033, an increase of 5.8 million (27%) over 2008, or 232,000 households per year. International migration, based on past trends, contributes around 40% towards this projected increase in households. It is not possible to break this down into EU and non-EU migration.

Government have committed to reduce net migration from the current hundreds of thousands to tens of thousands per year. We have already introduced a series of measures in relation to migrant workers and students, including a limit on the number of skilled workers, and will introduce measures on settlement and family later this year.

Non-domestic Rates

Miss McIntosh: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government if he will assess the effect on rural areas of (a) any changes to the arrangements for local retention of business rates and (b) proposals for metropolitan areas to retain a greater proportion of business rates. [85615]

Robert Neill: The Government will shortly be introducing a Bill to give effect to their proposals for business rates retention. This Bill will be accompanied by an impact assessment setting out the Government's initial views on the impacts of the proposals.

Right to Buy Scheme

Mr Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the number of homes that will be sold under the new right to buy scheme in each year between 2012-13 and 2015-16. [R] [85454]

Grant Shapps: We will be publishing a consultation paper shortly seeking views on our proposals to reinvigorate the right to buy and an impact assessment detailing the impact of the proposed changes.

Mr Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what estimate he has made of the potential implications for housing benefit expenditure of the extension of the Right to Buy scheme under which homes sold will be replaced by hew homes let as affordable rents. [R] [85455]

Grant Shapps: The Government have announced their intention to reinvigorate the Right to Buy—to support social housing tenants who aspire to own their own home, by raising the discount to make it attractive to tenants across England.

To support tenants and help build more affordable housing, we are matching this with a commitment that for every additional home bought under Right to Buy, a new affordable home will be built.

We will issue a consultation on our proposals shortly and intend to publish an Impact Assessment.

Mr Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government how many homes his Department estimates will be created from the revenue from the sale of social housing properties to their tenants at a 50 per cent. discount. [85475]

Grant Shapps: The receipts generated by right to buy sales will be used not only to pay down the debt associated with that property but also help to fund the delivery of new affordable homes on a one for one basis.

We will be consulting shortly on the best way to ensure delivery of replacement homes across England.

Social Rented Housing: Armed Forces

Mr David Hamilton: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 991W, on social rented housing: armed forces, (1) what steps his Department plans to take to measure the effect of its proposed changes to the social housing additional preference given to members of the armed forces; [86357]

(2) for what reasons his Department decided it was necessary to consult on a change to the law in order to require local housing authorities in England to provide for former service personnel with urgent housing needs to receive additional preference in their allocation scheme; [86358]

(3) whether he plans to collect information on (a) the number of armed forces personnel and veterans on the waiting lists and (b) the councils which give additional preference to armed forces personnel and veterans in the future. [86359]

Grant Shapps: The Government believe it is right that those who have put their life on the line for their country should receive the priority for social housing they need and deserve. We also believe that local authorities in England who are required to implement the regulations, as well as others who are affected by them, should have the opportunity to comment on these changes.

We are considering appropriate changes to the system used by councils and housing associations to record lettings (the CoRe lettings log) so we can monitor the number of social tenancies granted to service personnel. Local authorities are already obliged to make their allocation scheme available to the public.

Urban Areas: Finance

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government pursuant to the answer of 7 November 2011, Official Report, columns 25-6W, on urban areas: finance, which local authorities have applied for support from the High Street Support scheme; how much was distributed to each local authority; and which bids for funding were turned down. [82058]

Robert Neill [holding answer 23 November 2011]: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 1 December 2011, Official Report, column 1027W. This outlines how practical support and financial funding has been given by local authorities to local residents and local firms through the Homelessness Support Scheme, the Recovery Fund and the High Street Support Scheme.

Under these schemes, local councils have been in the lead in providing support. Central Government subsequently are reimbursing local councils for their costs retrospectively.

Since that answer, I can inform the House that my Department has made a second set of payments under the Recovery Fund, totalling £1,324,602. This relates to:

London borough of Croydon: £993,749. This includes funding for works to deal with dangerous structures, site clearance and emergency works to highways and footpaths, council tax discounts, street lighting and cleaning.

London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority: £194,484. The majority of this claim is for staff overtime costs.

London borough of Lambeth: £64,989. This relates to additional staff costs for youth custody services and the clearing of debris.

Greater Manchester Fire and Rescue Service: £33,143, in respect of overtime and incidental expenses.

Nottingham city council: £28,482, for costs relating to overtime, cleaning and emergency control centre operations, legal costs and youth activities.

Salford city council: £5,466. The expenditure relates to emergency repairs, street cleaning and staff overtime.

Leicester, Leicestershire and Rutland Combined Fire Authority: £2,206, for overtime costs.

London borough of Lewisham: £2,083, relating to clearing debris.

As I outlined in my earlier answer, the deadline for councils to claim back their expenditure which they have incurred under the High Street Support Scheme is 31 January 2012.

I will update hon. and right hon. Members in due course on further payments that are made under the schemes.

Voluntary Organisations: Finance

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government what steps he has taken to ensure local authorities follow best value guidance when making decisions on the funding of voluntary sector organisations; and if he will make a statement. [85683]

Andrew Stunell: The Best Value guidance, published on 2 September, is statutory and local authorities are required to have regard to it. The Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government, my right hon. Friend the Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr Pickles), wrote to all local authority leaders and chief executives at the time of consultation on the revised Best Value guidance. Following the consultation DCLG issued a press notice and wrote to all those who had been consulted informing them that the revised guidance had been published.

Wildlife: EU Action

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government whether his Department is to be involved in the review of the implementation of the (a) Habitats and (b) Wild Birds Directive. [85612]

Robert Neill: Yes. My Department will be involved in this review which will be led by DEFRA.

TRANSPORT

Biofuels: Government Assistance

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what funding her Department provides to assist the development of biofuels. [86241]

Norman Baker: The primary support for biofuels is through the Renewable Transport Fuels Obligation (RTFO), which obligates fossil road transport fuel suppliers to produce evidence that a specified percentage of their fuels for road transport in the UK comes from renewable sources. The RTFO includes a certificate trading mechanism to increase the efficiency of compliance. One certificate is awarded for each litre of biofuel (or kilogram in the case of biogas) supplied. From 15 December 2011, to increase the support for innovative biofuels, two certificates will be awarded for each litre of biofuel produced from non-food cellulose or lignocellulosic material. There will also be two certificates for each litre of biofuels from wastes and residues.

Cycling

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) letters and (b) emails her Department has received on cycling in the last 12 months. [82959][1]

Norman Baker: The Department has received 136 letters and 135 emails regarding cycling in the last 12 months.

Dartford-Thurrock Crossing: Automatic Number Plate Recognition

Gareth Johnson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate she has made of the cost of installing automatic number plate recognition systems for use at the Dartford Crossing. [85460]

1. [Official Report, 23 February 2012, Vol. 540, c. 1MC.]

Mike Penning: The proposals for an automatic number plate recognition (ANPR) system are currently being considered as part of the preliminary design stage for a free-flow charging scheme at the Dartford Crossing.

Final decisions on that design have yet to be taken and therefore the cost of installation is yet to be determined.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria (a) her Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if she will make a statement. [85645]

Norman Baker: Internal audit functions for the Department for Transport, its executive agencies, trading funds and non-departmental public bodies operate to a common methodology, which is consistent with the requirements of the standards issued by the Institute of Internal Auditors, and with Government Internal Auditing Standards.

Audit planning is designed to identify organisational objectives, risks to the achievement of objectives and controls used to manage risks in order to provide integrated assurance to each Accounting Officer. This is achieved through a combination of top-down and bottom-up approaches to identify and prioritise audit assignments consistent with the following criteria:

alignment to key business/corporate plans, objectives and priorities; assures the mitigation of board-level strategic risks, and key risks for constituent parts of each organisation;

reflects the maturity of existing internal control frameworks, risk management processes and assurance sources; provides coverage of core internal/compliance functions;

revisits areas audited in previous years that require follow-up;

activity mandated by HM Treasury, Cabinet Office, etc;

where appropriate, responds to management requests for advice on improving the management of risks and internal controls/ operations; or investigates impropriety and other irregularities (for example, arising from whistleblowing or allegations of fraud); is delivered by the most appropriate assurance provider (for example, does not duplicate work of others such as the external auditors); and is scheduled when the activity will provide most value, within the confines of the availability of audit resources and the need to provide an annual audit opinion.

The resulting plan is presented to the Accounting Officer and to the Audit Committee, who provide a 'top down' view, prior to formally agreeing the plan.

Departmental Civil Proceedings

Mr Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations that have received funding from her Department have brought legal proceedings against her Department in the last five years; which such organisations were not successful in their actions; and whether her Department (a) applied and (b) was paid for costs in respect of such cases. [83895]

Norman Baker: During the last five years, there were two sets of legal proceedings in the superior courts (in both instances in the High Court) brought against the Secretary of State by organisations that also received funding from the central Department for Transport. To confirm the position as regards courts other than superior courts, or in relation to the Department's seven executive agencies would, I regret, incur a disproportionate cost.

The organisations/legal proceedings mentioned above are as follows:

(1) R (First Essex Buses Ltd) v. Secretary of State for Transport and Anor [2009] EWHC 3024 (Admin) (25 November 2009).

First Essex Buses Ltd received funding by way of the bus service operators' grant.

First Essex Buses Ltd was not successful in its application for judicial review. Costs were applied for and the payment for costs is being pursued.

(2) Certain Bus Operating Companies in the Stagecoach Group (1) Certain Bus Operating Companies in the Go-Ahead Group (2) v. Secretary of State for Transport and Anor [2010] EWHC 223 (Admin) (16 February 2010).

The organisations receiving funding by way of the bus service operators grant:

I. The United Omnibus Company Limited

II. Stagecoach West Limited

III. Stagecoach (South) Limited

IV. Lincolnshire Road Car Limited

V. Midland Red (South) Limited

VI. Thames Transit Limited

VII. East Kent Car Company Limited

VIII. Stagecoach Devon Limited

IX. Cambus Holdings Limited

X. East Midland Motor Services Limited

XI. East Kent Road Car Limited

XII. Solent Blue Line Limited

XIII. Wiltshire and Dorset Bus Company Limited

XIV. Marchwood Motorways (Services) Limited.

The bus operating companies listed above were party to these five judicial review proceedings against the Secretary of State for Transport. Before the High Court was willing to deal with the individual judicial reviews, it chose to deal with "preliminary issues" on how the bus concessionary travel regime operates. (In the meantime it stayed the five individual claims.) It found in favour of the Secretary of State on the preliminary issues and awarded costs to the Secretary of State. Separately, in relation to one discrete element of the bus companies' claims, and which the Secretary of State had already conceded (called the "fixed sum" issue), the High Court ordered that the Secretary of State pay the claimants' costs, but only up to the point in time of her concession.

Following on from this, the litigation was settled, with both sides agreeing to bear their own costs.

Food Procurement

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps she is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs procured by (a) her Department and (b) public bodies for which she is responsible. [83790]

Norman Baker: The requested information about the steps DFT is taking to ensure that the same standards of animal welfare for whole eggs apply to imported liquefied eggs is as follows:

DFT central Department

The central Department does not use liquefied eggs.

DVLA

DVLA do not use liquefied eggs.

PSA

The Driving Standards Agency's (DSA) supplier of shell eggs will be fully compliant with the requirements of the European Union directive 1999/74/EC on the welfare of laying hens by the end of 2011. These standards will be verified independently by representatives of the British Lion scheme, which promotes the traceability, safety and quality of British eggs. DSA's supplier of liquefied eggs uses British 'Lion Quality' Eggs to make their products.

The Highways Agency

The Highways Agency has taken no specific steps.

Other arm's length bodies

The requested information is not held for the remainder of DFT's arm's length bodies as they do not have catering contracts in place.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of food sourced by (a) her Department and (b) public bodies for which she is responsible was procured from UK food producers in the latest period for which figures are available. [83791]

Norman Baker: The requested information for this year relating to on-site catering facilities that the Department has some direct responsibility for is as follows:

(a)

Organisational unit	Proportion of food sourced from UK food producers
Department for Transport headquarters building	Across all food groups over 70% of food is sourced to Farm Assured, Red Tractor and The Marine Stewards Council guidelines, depending on the time of year.
Driving Standards Agency	56%
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	61%

(b) The requested information is not held by Trinity House Lighthouse Service and Northern Lighthouse Board. Other Department for Transport non departmental public bodies either do not procure food or are minor occupiers and have no direct responsibility for on-site food procurement.

The Department cannot identify the origins of food purchased under other arrangements including as part of external room hire or conference packages.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps (a) her Department and (b) public bodies for which she is responsible are taking to ensure that they meet the Government's buying standards for food and catering. [83792]

Norman Baker: The requested information about the steps DFT is taking to ensure it meets Government's buying standards for catering is as follows.

DFT Central Department

Across all food groups DFT's caterers achieve in excess of 70% compliance with Farm Assured, Red Tractor and The Marine Stewards Council guidelines, depending on the time of year. Fruit and vegetables are very difficult to comply with as many products are not available from UK producers. But where and when they are, they always buy UK if financially viable.

Highways Agency

The Highways Agency is currently considering how most effectively to reflect the Government's Buying Standard for food and catering services via the current contractual arrangements in place for food-based facilities to be provided at some of its office locations, and future such arrangements.

DSA

The Driving Standards Agency's contractor is developing contractually-binding agreements with its key food suppliers to ensure that they will adhere to guidance set out in the Government Buying Standards (GBS) document.

They have engaged with the Agency's main food supplier to review the specific criteria of the revised GBS document and are finalising the contract amendment.

DVLA

DVLA procure all their food through the PFI Estates Contract. However, under schedule 13 of this contract, the service provider is obliged to comply with any Government guidance on sustainable food and farming, in delivering the Catering Service to the Agency. To ensure compliance, the service provider is required to produce all necessary, statutory reports relevant to the provision of the catering. A particular return required in this respect is, the 'Public Sector Food Procurement Initiative', which is produced annually and while we review and, in some cases challenge the data; there has to be a balance in terms of keeping the costs down.

Other Arm's Length Bodies

The requested information is not held for the remainder of DFT's arm's length bodies as they do not have catering contracts in place.

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many unique hits her Department's website received in each of the last 12 months. [82956]

Norman Baker: Website traffic to www.dft.gov.uk over the last 12 months is as follows:

Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what receptions and events have been hosted by her Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by third parties. [84201]

Norman Baker: The requested information is as follows:

Organisational unit	Event	Date
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	EUCARIS meeting—communications network of participating European nations to share data relating to motor vehicles and driving licences	May 2010
Vehicle Certification Agency	Biennial Open Day	June 2010
Driving Standards Agency	Association of Industrial Road Safety Officers (AIRSO) study day—attended by AIRSO members	November 2010
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	"Deadly Mates" event—joint campaign between the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency, Driving Standards Agency and GoSafe Road Casualty Reduction Partnership	November 2010
Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	E-reg subgroup—Meeting held with registration authorities from across Europe	December 2010
Driving Standards Agency	Presentation by Loughborough University's Vehicle Research Safety Centre—Relating to the work the university was doing on driver behaviour	February 2011
DFT Central (Rail Accident Investigation Branch)	Institute of Mechanical Engineers (IMechE) visit—Presentation to IMechE members on RAIB's role and work	September 2011
Driver and Vehicle and Licensing Agency	EUCARIS meeting—communications network of participating European nations to share data relating to motor vehicles and driving licences	October 2011
Driver and Vehicle and Licensing Agency	Transport Select Committee visit to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency	October 2011
DFT Central (Rail Accident Investigation Branch)	Loughborough University visit—Vehicle Dynamics and Crash Worthiness Course visit	November 2011
Maritime and Coastguard Agency	UK reception for the International Maritime Organization (27th Assembly)	November 2011

This excludes all events held as part of day-to-day business of the Department including working level meetings with stakeholders.

The above also excludes events hosted at the Department for Transport headquarters building and by the Highways Agency as the requested information is not centrally recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Older Workers

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many people her Department employs who are aged over (a) 55 and (b) 65. [83015]

Norman Baker: On 31 October 2011 the central Department and its seven executive agencies employed:

(a) 3,490 members of staff who were aged 55 to 64; and

(b) 145 members of staff aged 65 and over.

Of this total, the central Department employed 235 members of staff aged 55 to 64, and eight members of staff aged 65 and over.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much her Department spent in (a) Birmingham, (b) Newcastle, (c) Wakefield, (d) Manchester, (e) Leeds, (f) Liverpool, (g) Coventry, (h) Bristol, (i) Sheffield, (j) Bradford, (k) Leicester and (l) Nottingham in the latest financial year for which figures are available. [85449]

Norman Baker: In 2010-11 the Department for Transport allocated funding to the named local authorities as per the following table. This includes un-ringfenced funding for integrated transport block and highways maintenance to local transport authorities for general capital investment in transport.

Local authority	Funding (£000)
Birmingham	67,949
Bradford	13,616
Bristol	[1]17,530
Coventry	9,742
Leeds	40,013
Leicester	12,439
Liverpool	18,596
Manchester	14,118
Newcastle	8,545
Nottingham	41,974
Sheffield	11,661
Wakefield	9,751

[1] Includes Cycling Town funding both in Bristol and South Gloucestershire.

Funding that was allocated to Integrated Transport Authorities rather than individual local authorities but which covers the areas named is given in a separate table. It is not possible for the Department to disaggregate this funding. This table also includes funding for rail support given to Passenger Transport Executives but does not include the £70 million the Department provides to Merseytravel for the operation of the devolved Merseyrail network.

Integrated Transport Authority	Funding (£000)
Greater Manchester ITA	260,744
Merseyside ITA	39,820
South Yorkshire ITA	48,745
Tyne and Wear ITA	85,138
West Midlands ITA	37,584
West Yorkshire ITA	94,130

While some of the variation in the tables above will be due to the differing geographical sizes and transport needs of areas, funding for local major schemes, including PFI projects, has a large effect.

Revenue expenditure on transport is generally supported through the Department for Communities and Local Government's formula grant.

The Department spends funds on the strategic road network through the Highways Agency (HA). The HA's reporting systems do not record actual expenditure for local authority areas; expenditure is recorded by project and activity.

Likewise, funding for other transport projects in England, such as rail projects, and spend by other executive agencies of the Department for Transport is not available on the basis of local authority boundaries.

Electric Vehicles

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent discussions she has had on the future of electric cars. [86243]

Norman Baker: Ministers and officials routinely discuss ultra low emission vehicles, including electric cars and meet key stakeholders including automotive manufacturers, charging infrastructure suppliers, power supply companies, other interested organisations and relevant Government Departments to inform these discussions.

First Capital Connect: Snow and Ice

Nadine Dorries: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what meetings Ministers in her Department have had with First Capital Connect on preparations for winter weather. [85796]

Norman Baker: Ministers have not held any recent meetings specifically with First Capital Connect on preparations for winter weather. However, I have discussed winter preparations with the Association of Train Operating Companies (ATOC) representatives on a number of occasions since the summer.

Members: Correspondence

Andrea Leadsom: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when she plans to respond to the letter of 6 October 2011 from the hon. Member for South Northamptonshire. [85807]

Mike Penning: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

Motor Vehicles: Lights

Yasmin Qureshi: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many accidents have poorly adjusted headlamps of oncoming vehicles been a contributory factor in each of the last five years. [85675]

Mike Penning: The requested information is not collected by the Department. However, Table 1 shows the number of reported personal injury road accidents in Great Britain which had (i) "defective lights or indicators" or (ii) "dazzling headlights" recorded as a contributory factor, over the period 2006 to 2010. It is not possible to identify whether poorly adjusted headlamps of oncoming vehicles contributed to these accidents.

Please note that contributory factors are reported only for injury road accidents where a police officer attended the scene and reported at least one contributory factor. These factors are largely subjective, reflecting the attending officer's opinion at the time of reporting. It is recognised that subsequent inquires could lead to the reporting officer changing his/her opinion.

Table 1: Reported personal injury road accidents[1] by selected contributory factors, Great Britain 2006 to 2010

	Number of accidents[1] with the following contributory factors attributed to the accident
	(i) Defective lights or indicators	(ii) Dazzling headlights
2006	256	483
2007	226	417
2008	208	415
2009	182	365
2010	174	300

[1] Includes only accidents where a police officer attended the scene and in which a contributory factor was reported

Motor Vehicles: Registration

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the cost to the public purse was of issuing V5C vehicle registration certificates to all owners of cars; and if she will make a statement. [85523]

Mike Penning: The new style V5C vehicle registration certificate has been issued since August 2010 to keepers of newly registered vehicles and to those keepers making changes to a vehicle's registration details. These documents would have been issued in the normal course of business and represent no extra cost.

Since October 2011, the document has also been issued for vehicles which do not already have one, when they are re-licensed or declared to be off-road. This accelerated production is expected to cover the entire national vehicle fleet within 12 months and is estimated to cost around £6 million to complete. The DVLA is taking action to recover these costs from a third party.

Simon Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions she has had with the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency on (a) reducing the risk of theft of and (b) its procedures for safe disposal of defective blank V5C vehicle registration certificates. [86465]

Mike Penning: Since the theft of V5C vehicle registration certificates from a supplier or one of their subcontractors was identified in early 2007, discussions have taken place with the ministerial team on action to reduce the impact of the crime and changes have been made.

Processes around the destruction of defective blank V5C vehicle registration certificates have been tightened. Significant investment has been made at the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency to ensure all waste, spoiled or defective documents are destroyed securely on site. Also, tougher contract terms have been introduced for suppliers and more stringent audit controls surround the handling of V5C vehicle registration certificates have been put in to place.

Parking: Fees and Charges

Mrs Moon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what statutory provisions govern the time allowed to a car driver to decide whether a pay and display car parking fee is reasonable before becoming liable to pay; and if she will make a statement; [85090]

(2) what statutory provisions govern the amount of time a car may be in a pay and display car park before a car parking fee becomes payable; and if she will make a statement. [85091]

Norman Baker: There is no legislation governing these specific aspects of local authority car parks. It is entirely for the car park owner to set the terms and conditions for parking on their land.

Railways: Bicester

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions she has had with the Secretary of State for Defence on the potential for greater use of Ministry of Defence rail infrastructure in and around Bicester consequent upon the re-opening of the east-west rail link from Oxford to Milton Keynes. [85764]

Mrs Villiers: Department for Transport officials have worked with Defence officials to ensure they are aware of the potential effect of East West Rail on the value and use of Defence land at Bicester. This includes possible re-use of the MoD railway and freight infrastructure for commercial purposes.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what planning process she expects to be followed in respect of the route and construction of the re-opening of the east-west rail link between Oxford and Milton Keynes. [85765]

Mrs Villiers: The East West Rail consortium has proposed that full use is made of the permitted development rights of the railway, combining these with existing local authority planning processes to expedite construction and reopening.

Railways: Finance

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to the answer of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 891W, on railways: private sector and with reference to page 104 of the Office of Rail Regulation's (ORR) National Rail Trends Yearbook: 2010-11, whether she has requested from the ORR a list of the total investment in the railway industry received from each (a) train operating company, (b) rolling stock company, (c) freight company and (d) Network Rail in each year from 2006-07 to date; and if she will place this information in the Library. [R] [85685]

Mrs Villiers: The Department has not requested this information from ORR. With regard to investment in rolling stock, I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 1 December 2011, Official Report, columns 1020-21W. Network Rail publishes details of its investment annually in its Delivery Plans. These are available on Network Rail's website.

Roads: Accidents

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths and (b) serious injuries have occurred on roads in Pendle constituency in the last 12 months. [85753]

Mike Penning: In the 2010 calendar year (the latest period for which information is available), one person was killed and 34 were seriously injured in reported road accidents in the Pendle parliamentary constituency.

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate she has made of the number of staged car accidents in the latest period for which figures are available; and what estimate has been made of the effects of such accidents on (a) car insurance premiums and (b) other costs to motorists. [85754]

Mike Penning: The Department has made no estimate of the number of staged car accidents, or the effect of such accidents on motor insurance premiums and other costs to motorists.

Detecting such incidents is largely for the insurance industry who set up the Insurance Fraud Bureau (IFB) to detect and prevent organised fraud. The industry has also agreed to fund a specialist insurance fraud police unit due to go live by January 2012.

Roads: Manholes

Yasmin Qureshi: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps her Department is taking to improve the standard of grip for (a) two wheeled vehicles on manholes and (b) inspection covers on roads in England. [85672]

Norman Baker: The majority of manhole and inspection covers placed on the highway network are the responsibility of utility companies, with a small percentage under the ownership of local highway authorities, and so are not the responsibility of the Department for Transport.

However, the Department has been working with the Institute of Highways and Incorporated Engineers (IHIE) to develop Guidelines for Motorcycling. Section 6.3.16 of the guide encourages designers and maintenance engineers to ensure that covers should not be positioned in the carriageway so as to impose a hazard to motorcyclists. The guide may be viewed on the IHIE website at:

www.motorcyclingguidelines.org.uk

In addition, the British and European Standard (prEN124) on "gully tops and manhole tops for vehicular and pedestrian areas" has been going through revision. One of the areas being considered as part of this work is the in-service skid slip resistance of the covers. Consideration is also being given to an enhanced skid slip resistance value to improve consistency between the road surface and service covers placed in the highway.

Roads: Repairs and Maintenance

Mark Lancaster: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment her Department has made of the cooling time for bituminous paving materials used on roads for the purposes of determining reasonable times for such works to be carried out. [86069]

Mike Penning: There are a number of controlling factors for determining reasonable times for works to be carried out and the associated cooling times for modern bituminous paving materials. The principal ones are the material type, the weather conditions (air temperature and wind speed) and the thickness that the material is to be laid at.

On behalf of my Department, the Highways Agency has carried out extensive research in this field over many years. The Highways Agency's Specification for Highways Works http://www.dft.gov.uk/ha/standards/mchw/vol1/index.htm

incorporates the outcomes from the research, taking account of the modern bituminous materials used for pavement construction on the strategic road network. Research is ongoing into bituminous paving materials that can be laid at lower temperatures. As these materials are mixed and laid at lower temperatures, they can be compacted and opened to traffic more quickly than conventional bituminous materials. The research will determine whether these materials are suitable for the heavy traffic using the strategic road network.

Steria

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts her Department has awarded to Steria since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [85478]

Norman Baker: The Department for Transport has not awarded any contracts to Steria since May 2010.

Tottenham Hale-Brimsdown Railway Line

Dr Huppert: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether she has made an assessment of the need for a third rail track between Tottenham Hale and Brimsdown on the line between London Liverpool Street Station and Cambridge. [85892]

Mrs Villiers: The Government have not made an assessment of whether a third rail track is needed between Tottenham Hale and Brimsdown on the line between London Liverpool Street station and Cambridge. In its London and South East Route Utilisation Strategy, Network Rail assessed a number of infrastructure options on this line—including a third track between Lea Bridge and Brimsdown—and has now proposed an alternative intervention at Brimsdown in its initial industry plan. The Government will set out their requirements for the railway for the five year period from 2014 to 2019 in the High Level Output Specification, to be published in July 2012.

JUSTICE

Free Schools: Planning Permission

Sadiq Khan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice pursuant to the answer of 1 December 2011, Official Report, column 1042W, on free schools: planning permission, whether (1) his Department would return any capital receipts received from the sale of (a) Balham youth court, (b) Haringey magistrates court, (c) Mid-Sussex magistrates court and (d) Sutton Coldfield magistrates court; [85902]

(2) (a) Balham youth court, (b) Haringey magistrates court, (c) Mid-Sussex magistrates court and (d) Sutton Coldfield magistrates court are being offered for sale at market value. [85944]

Mr Djanogly: These courts will be sold at market value and the capital receipts retained by the Ministry of Justice to delivery justice services.

Alternatives to Prison: Females

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what his policy is on the provision of alternatives to custody for women offenders; and if he will make a statement. [85496]

Mr Blunt: The National Offender Management Service (NOMS) has provided funding to help sustain a network of women-only community provision and has given a commitment to services with a proven track record of tackling offending behaviour among women from 2012-13. NOMS also makes available accommodation to defendants, who would otherwise be remanded in custody, through the Bail Accommodation and Support Service. Finally, we are working with the Department of Health to ensure that offenders with mental health problems receive treatment in the most appropriate and secure setting necessary.

Bail

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many people were bailed from the courts in each of the last five years. [86039]

Mr Blunt: The total number of defendants remanded on bail at all courts in England and Wales from 2006 to 2010 can be viewed in the following table.

Defendants remanded on bail at magistrates courts[1] or the Crown court, 2006-10[2], England and Wales

Defendants (thousand)

	Defendants bailed by magistrates courts[1,3]	Defendants bailed by the Crown court[1,3]	Defendants bailed by either court[1,3]
2006	500.7	61.6	562.3
2007	420.7	64.6	485.2

Birmingham: Grants

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what expenditure his Department plans to incur by way of (a) ring-fenced and (b) non ring-fenced grants in Birmingham in each of the next three years. [85539]

Mr Djanogly: The Department's planned expenditure by way of grants to organisations in Birmingham for 2012-13 and 2013-14 is shown in the following table.

	2012-13	2013-14
Ring-fenced	76,555	79,949
Non ring-fenced	60,000	60,000
Total	136,555	139,949

Decisions have not yet been taken on grant funding allocations for 2014-15.

In addition to providing grants to organisations based in Birmingham, the Department also provides grants to some national organisations, which are not specific to Birmingham.

The figures above relate to the core Department. The Youth Justice Board (YJB), an Executive non-departmental public body of the Ministry of Justice, will be providing a grant to the Birmingham youth offending team in each of the next three years. The size of these grants has yet to be determined.

YJB grants are not officially termed as a ring-fenced, but in the context of their narrow statutory powers, such grants are only to be spent on matters relating to youth justice.

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what assets his Department owns in Birmingham; and what is the estimated value of each such asset. [85540]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice owns 14 freehold properties in Birmingham. We do not hold up-to-date data on the market value of all properties. Gathering this information would require a survey of the properties.

Food Labelling

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice (1) whether food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible plan to implement calorie labelling on menus and display boards; [85830]

(2) what steps the food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure the country of origin of foods are labelled on its menus and display boards. [85831]

Mr Blunt: Currently, the means for each prison to calculate the calorific value of their individual menus is not available. To do this in all cases would require a full evaluation and is likely to require major capital investment at a time when public spending is under severe constraint. While MOJ are looking at aspects of menu provision including identifying calorific values for certain recipes, there are currently no plans to include such information on daily menus.

NOMS sets out the specification for catering in the prison service Instruction 44/2010 which contains a set of minimum standards for prisons to implement. Prison catering managers publish in advance pre-select menus covering between three and five weeks which are rotated over several months.

Food for prisons is purchased and delivered through mandated suppliers who have to comply with Food Labelling Regulations 1996. The voluntary inclusion of country of origin is not a requirement for all foods. Suppliers will procure food from several different countries based on price and availability. Prisons will often not know the country of origin of some products until the day of delivery prohibiting this detail from being included on previously published menus.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85661]

Mr Kenneth Clarke: The Ministry of Justice set out its strategic approach to competition in the Offender Services Competition Strategy[1]. This included defining a clear set of principles. These comprise:

competition activity should be focused on achieving mid to long-term savings, not finding the cheapest solution at the expense of quality; competition should be used to deliver public sector reforms, ensuring providers are more effectively held to account for the outcomes they deliver;

providers should be involved early to identify where efficiencies could be realised in national or process-based functions through competition;

small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) and the voluntary and community sector (VCS) should be encouraged to participate to drive innovation; and competition should be widely applied, with public sector providers allowed to bid where we are competing localised services and robustly held to account where successful.

Risk Assessment

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85708]

Mr Djanogly: Each of the Ministry's public bodies is responsible for assessing which risks they are responsible for, and for putting in place the appropriate processes to monitor and manage those risks.

For many of the MOJ's public bodies, the Department will monitor and manage the risks (for example, when a public body is located within a MOJ building the MOJ corporate centre will have responsibility for any accommodation risks).

Risk registers are held by the following MOJ public bodies:

Arms Length Body

Judicial Office of England and Wales
Civil Justice Council
Family Justice Council
Office for Judicial Complaints
HM Chief Inspectorate of Prisons
HM Chief Inspectorate of Probation
Information Commissioner's Office (ICO)
Judicial Appointments and Conduct Ombudsman (JACO)
Judicial Appointments Commission (JAC)
Office of Public Guardian
Law Commission
Legal Services Board (LSB)
Office for Legal Complaints (OLC)
Prisons and Probation Ombudsman
Sentencing Council for England and Wales
Youth Justice Board for England and Wales (YJB)
Criminal Cases Review Commission (CCRC)
Administrative Justice and Tribunal Council (AJTC)
Court Funds Office (CFO)
Criminal Injuries Compensation Authority (CICA)

Members: Correspondence

Malcolm Wicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when he plans to reply to the letter from the right hon. Member for Croydon North of 19 July 2011 concerning the circumstances leading to the death of the right hon. Member's constituent, Umesh Chaudhary. [78706]

Mr Kenneth Clarke: I have now replied. I am very sorry for the delay.

Offender Assessment System

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice with reference to his planned review and redesign of the Asset structured assessment tool, whether he has any plans to similarly update the Offender Assessment System. [85432]

Mr Blunt: The Offender Assessment System (OASys) is periodically updated to ensure that it provides a reliable and valid assessment tool based on the latest research evidence.

Tom Brake: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice whether the Offender Assessment System includes a section to identify speech, language or communication needs in adult offenders. [85433]

Mr Blunt: The Offender Assessment System (OASys) does record whether the offender has required the use of an interpreter, what language the offender speaks and whether the offender has communication needs. The offender can also record any such needs within the OASys Self Assessment Questionnaire.

Police Cautions

Mr Mark Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what provision he has made for public scrutiny of the practice of conditional cautioning. [85958]

Mr Blunt: We are considering how transparency of out of court disposals could be improved in developing a clearer framework for their use. We will work with partners across the criminal justice system to widen access to information and education for the public and practitioners to increase the awareness and understanding of conditional cautions. This will help the public to have greater confidence that conditional cautions and other informal and formal disposals are being utilised effectively and appropriately.

Prisoners: Per Capita Costs

Philip Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the average cost per year is of accommodating a prisoner serving an indeterminate sentence for public protection. [86035]

Mr Blunt: The average annual overall cost per prisoner in England and Wales for financial year 2010-11 is £37,000 (to nearest £1,000). The cost of a prisoner serving an indeterminate sentence for public protection (IPP) is not separately calculated.

Average prisoner costs are calculated for each prison establishment and grouped by prison function on the basis of the major use of each prison. The calculations do not analyse costs by type of sentence or prisoner, and as a prisoner serving an indeterminate sentence may be held in prison establishments of different functions during the course of the sentence, an average cost for a prisoner serving an IPP is not available.

The calculation for cost per prisoner is based on net resource expenditure related to prisons included in the annual accounts of the National Offender Management Service (NOMS) expressed in terms of the average prison population. This includes some estimation. Expenditure which is met by other Government Departments, such as expenditure on health and education, is not included. Expenditure recharged to the Youth Justice Board in respect of young people is included.

Indeterminate sentence prisoners may be held in any prison providing it is appropriate to the security category of the prisoner and is best placed to meet the next identified need in the sentence plan.

Full details of average cost per prisoner by prison function for financial year 2010-11 can be accessed from the Ministry of Justice website under Management Information Addendum at the following link:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/publications/corporate-reports/noms/annual-report-accounts-2010-11.htm

Prisons: Energy Efficiency

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many prisons have installed energy efficiency measures since May 2010. [86078]

Mr Blunt: Since May 2010 all public sector prisons have been part of a Carbon Trust carbon management programme (CMP). This has resulted in 51 sites installing energy saving technology directly, with a further five sites having replacement equipment under the major maintenance programme.

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice if he will estimate the average annual heating and lighting costs in prisons if all prisons reached Energy Performance Certificate grade (a) A, (b) B, (c) C, (d) D, (e) E, (f) F and (g) G level. [86080]

Mr Blunt: The Ministry of Justice is unable to provide the average annual heating and lighting costs in prisons if all prisons reached Energy Performance Certificate grade (a) A, (b) B, (c) C, (d) D, (e) E, (f) F and (g) G level as the information is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what the average Energy Performance Certificate rating is of the prison estate. [86082]

Mr Blunt: The average Energy Performance Certificate rating of the prison estate is based on Display Energy Certificates (DEC) assessments of energy use in occupied buildings.

The average DEC rating of the prison estate is 90.08 (sample size 131 sites).

Prosecutions: Fireworks

Mr Woodward: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many (a) fixed penalties were issued and (b) prosecutions were brought relating to the misuse of fireworks in (i) St Helens South and Whiston constituency, (ii) Merseyside and (iii) England in each of the last five years. [84659]

Mr Blunt: Data on the number of penalty notices for disorder (PNDs) issued in the Merseyside police force area and England for offences related to the misuse of fireworks and defendants proceeded against at magistrates courts for throwing fireworks, in each year between 2006 and 2010 (latest currently available), can be viewed in the table. These data are not available at constituency level.

Court proceedings data for 2011 are planned for publication in the spring of 2012.

Defendants given penalty notices for disorder (PNDs) for offences related to fireworks and defendants[1] proceeded against at magistrates courts for throwing fireworks[2], in the Merseyside police force area and England, in each year between 2006-10

Area/offence	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
Merseyside
PNDs issued:
Breach of fireworks curfew[3]	1	1	—	—	—
Possession of category 4 firework[3]	3	2	2	1	—
Possession by a person under 18 of adult firework[3]	10	5	6	7	7
Throwing fireworks	27	20	19	28	26
Proceedings at magistrates courts:
Throwing fireworks	1	—	2	1	1
England
PNDs issued:
Breach of fireworks curfew[3]	51	37	19	13	23
Possession of category 4 firework[3]	25	22	23	56	22
Possession by a person under 18 of adult firework[3]	73	101	63	58	60
Throwing fireworks	639	607	500	317	330
Proceedings at magistrates courts:
Throwing fireworks	32	28	28	18	25

[1] The figures given in the table on court proceedings relate to persons for whom these offences were the principal offences for which they were dealt with. When a defendant has been found guilty of two or more offences it is the offence for which the heaviest penalty is imposed. Where the same disposal is imposed for two or more offences, the offence selected is the offence for which the statutory maximum penalty is the most severe.
[2] Explosives Act 1875, section 80: Throwing, casting or firing any fireworks in or into any highway, street, public place etc.
[3] Fireworks Regulations 2004 under section 11 of the Fireworks Act 2003.
Note:
Every effort is made to ensure that the figures presented are accurate and complete. However, it is important to note that these data have been extracted from large administrative data systems generated by the courts and police forces. As a consequence, care should be taken to ensure data collection processes and their inevitable limitations are taken into account when those data are used.

Reoffenders

Nicky Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice what estimate he has made of the number of suspended sentences which have been breached by offenders in (a) Leicestershire, (b) the East Midlands region and (c) England in the last 12 months. [85941]

Mr Blunt: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Information on breaches of suspended sentence orders (SSOs) by individual offenders is recorded by probation trusts on their case management systems. It is used in the day-to-day management of offenders, including as a trigger to appropriate action in response to breach, for example through formal warnings or enforcement action, but data on the total number of breaches do not form part of trusts' routine reporting.

However, data are available on the reasons for termination of SSOs. These reasons include successful completion of the order as well as early termination for failure to comply with requirements or for conviction of a further offence.

The numbers of successful and unsuccessful completions of SSOs for 2010-11 for (a) Leicestershire and Rutland Probation Trust, (b) the East Midlands region and (c) for England are set out in the following table:

Suspended sentence orders, 2010-11

	Successful terminations (number)	Unsuccessful terminations (number)	Total successful and unsuccessful terminations (number)	Percentage of unsuccessful terminations
(a) Leicestershire and Rutland	551	273	824	33.1
(b) East Midlands	2,368	1,150	3,518	32.7
(c) England	29,037	11,450	40,487	28.3

The figures are a sub-set of the figures used to calculate the rate of successful completion of orders and licences published in the NOMS Annual Report 2010-11: Management Information Addendum:

http://www.justice.gov.uk/downloads/publications/statistics-and-data/hmps/noms-annual-report-2010-11-addendum.pdf

It should be noted that the figures in the column for total successful and unsuccessful completions do not constitute all SSOs which terminated during the period. There are in addition a number which terminate for other reasons, such as a conditional discharge or the death of the offender, which are treated as 'neutral' for the purposes of the NOMS indicator and therefore excluded from the calculation.

The figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Not all breaches of SSOs will result in early termination. In line with National Standards for the Management of Offenders 2011 and the accompanying draft Practice Framework an offender who fails to comply with the terms of his or her supervision on a community order or suspended sentence order may be given one formal warning in any 12-month period on an order before breach action becomes required.

Third Sector

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much direct funding his Department has allocated to each civil society organisation in (a) 2010-11, (b) 2011-12, (c) 2012-13, (d) 2013-14 and (e) 2014-15; and if he will make a statement. [74818]

Mr Djanogly: The Ministry of Justice funds a large number of organisations that provide a wide range of services, such as the provision of support for victims of crime, mediation services, work to reduce crime and debt advice. To determine which of those are civil society organisations and how much is specifically paid or allocated to each of them over this five-year period could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Victims: Commissioner

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice when he plans to appoint a new Victims Commissioner. [81555]

Mr Blunt: We are considering the future of the role and intend to make an announcement shortly. We regard it as important that the voice of victims is heard by policy makers across the criminal justice system.

Young Offenders Institutions

Mrs Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many hours on average young offenders aged (a) under 18-years-old and (b) between 18 and 20 years spent out of cells on (i) weekdays and (ii) weekends at each Young Offenders Institution in each month since April 2005. [85561]

Mr Blunt: Data for time out of cell on weekdays are collated by overall prison establishment and are not disaggregated for different prisoner age groups in individual establishments. Data are no longer collated for time out of cell on weekends but are available for the period April 2005 to March 2008.

Figures for time out of cell for each young offender institute (aged 18 to 20) and each young offender institute holding young persons (aged under 18) for each month since April 2005 are set out in a table for weekdays and weekends where available. The table has been deposited in the Library.

The figures used in the answer have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large-scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Young Offenders: Expenditure

Lisa Nandy: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how much the Youth Justice Board paid, including VAT per person for a place in (a) a secure children's home, (b) a secure training centre, (c) a publicly-run young offenders' institution and (d) a privately-run young offenders institution in the latest year for which figures are available. [86022]

Mr Blunt: The average prices, including VAT where charged, paid by the Youth Justice Board per child or young person placed in a secure children's home, secure training centre or a publicly run young offender institution as of 1 April 2011 are set out in the following table. For reasons of commercial sensitivity I am not able to provide information in respect of privately run young offender institutions. As not all types of youth secure accommodation attract a charge for VAT, the figures do not reflect the price of the services delivered on a like for like basis.

Type of youth secure accommodation	Average cost per place per year as of 1 April 2011 (£)[1]
Secure children's home	211,000
Secure training centre	203,000
Public young offender institution	55,000

Notes:
1. Secure children's homes—these services do not attract VAT.
2. Secure training centres—these services do attract VAT.
3. Publicly-run young offender institutions do not attract VAT.
4. Privately-run young offender institutions do attract VAT.
5. These are costs to the YJB as at 1 April 2011. They are not intended to represent the total cost of providing custody and related services to young people. For example, they do not include YJB funding to NOMS Prisoner Escort Management (PEM) for the provision of Prison Escort and Custodial Services (PECS) for young people.
6. For court ordered secure remand places (in the STC and SCH sectors) the YJB recovers one third of the costs from the home local authorities.

[1] Including VAT where charged. To the nearest £1,000.

These figures have been drawn from administrative IT systems, which, as with any large scale recording system, are subject to possible errors with data entry and processing.

Information on a prisoner's residence is provided by prisoners on reception into prison and recorded on a central IT system. Addresses can include a prisoner's home address, an address to which they intend to return on discharge or next of kin address and these figures are provided in the above table.

If no address is given, a prisoner's committal court address is used as a proxy for the area in which a prisoner is resident. These figures are also included in the table above. No address has been recorded and no court information is available for around 3% of all prisoners, these figures are excluded from the table.

Youth Custody: Enfield

Mr Love: To ask the Secretary of State for Justice how many offenders aged 18 to 20 from the London borough of Enfield have been held in (a) young offender institutions, (b) local prisons, (c) women's prisons and (d) other parts of the secure estate in each month since May 2009. [85259]

Mr Blunt: All young offenders serving sentences of DYOI are held in appropriately designated YOI accommodation within the prison estate. The majority of this accommodation is in dedicated YOIs, although some establishments in the estate have a dual designation (designated both as a prison and a YOI) and hold both adult prisoners and young offenders.

The following table shows the number of remand or convicted unsentenced and convicted and sentenced male and female prisoners aged 18 to 20-years-old with a recorded residential address or proxy in the London borough of Enfield who were held in predominant function male young offender institutions, predominant function male local prisons, all female prisons and the rest of the male estate on a set day in each month where data are available since May 2009.

EDUCATION

Academies

Helen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many (a) academies and (b) free schools there are in each local authority in England. [84923]

Mr Gibb [holding answer 5 December 2011]: As of 1 December there are now 24 free schools and 1,463 open academies of which 319 are sponsored and 1,144 are converters. Details of how many are in each local authority as at 1 November are included in the following table.

Edubase, November 2011

Academies: School Meals

Mrs Hodgson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish the results of research commissioned from the School Food Trust on nutritional standards in academies. [81137]

Mr Gibb: Results of the work commissioned from the School Food Trust are expected to be published in spring 2012.

Education: Rural Areas

Dr Poulter: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what consideration he has given to providing additional grants to rural areas for the purposes of access to educational services. [83994]

Mr Gibb: Our recent consultation on reforming the school funding system looked carefully at how rural schools should be supported. The Department for Education is considering responses to the consultation and discussing options with interested parties, including those who represent rural areas, before we decide how to proceed. We aim to consult on more detailed proposals in the spring.

Free Schools

Lisa Nandy: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what the selection (a) criteria and (b) process were for the recent grant awarded by his Department for free school pre-application support. [84544]

Mr Gibb: The selection criteria and process were described in the public guidance for applicants for the grant. This has been placed in the House Libraries.

GCSE: North-west England

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of (a) looked after children and (b) other children gained five GCSEs or equivalent at grades A* to C in each of the last five years for (i) the borough of Wirral and (ii) the North West region; and how many of those included GCSEs or equivalent in English and mathematics. [85810]

Tim Loughton: This information will be published shortly. I will write to the hon. Member in due course and place a copy of the letter in the House Libraries.

New Schools Network

Chi Onwurah: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what agreement the New Schools Network concluded with the Appointments Commission to enable it to recruit for staff to launch free schools. [84728]

Mr Gibb: Consistent with similar grant agreements, the Department for Education did not require New Schools Network (NSN) to agree staff appointments with the Appointments Commission. NSN's staff do not launch free schools; they advise and support groups who are seeking to establish free schools.

Pupil Exclusions

Kelvin Hopkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many children in each secondary school year group were permanently excluded from (a) academies, (b) free schools and (c) other schools in (i) the 2011-12 academic year to date and (ii) each of the previous three academic years. [82906]

Mr Gibb: Information on the number of permanent exclusions in academies and other state-funded secondary schools from 2007/08 to 2009/10 is shown in the table. Information for 2010/11 and 2011/12 has not yet been collected, and as a result there is no available information on free schools.

Pupil Premium

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what proportion of his Department's budget for the pupil premium has been spent on students in Pendle constituency since April 2011. [84730]

Mr Gibb: Schools in the Pendle constituency have been allocated £1.096 million for the pupil premium in 2011-12. This is equivalent to 0.176% of the £625 million budget for the pupil premium in 2011-2012. To date, £483,115 has been paid to Lancashire county council for schools in Pendle. The remaining £612,885 will be paid in two instalments in December 2011 and March 2012.

School Meals

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to ensure healthy school meal standards. [84478]

Sarah Teather: New standards for school food in maintained schools were introduced, through legislation, in 2007. The regulations set out a combination of food-based and nutrient-based standards.

Governing bodies of maintained schools and local authorities are legally responsible for meeting the school food standards. If they do not, any person may complain, through the normal local routes and ultimately to the Secretary of State, who can then issue a direction to the school if necessary.

Parents play an important role in monitoring the quality of food at their children's school. We expect maintained schools, as a minimum, to have arrangements in place to meet the standards. The School Food Trust will be able to offer help and share examples of good practice.

School Standards

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he is taking to seek to ensure that schools which did not meet the Government's GCSE targets in 2011 do so in future years. [83145]

Mr Gibb: Sponsored academies are seen as the central solution for dealing with serious, long-term underperformance in all schools.

When the 2011 secondary school performance tables containing data fully checked and agreed by schools are published in January, we will be looking at those schools that fall below the floor standard and, working with the school and their LA, we will seek to achieve the best possible solution to improve their performance. In most cases that solution will be to secure an academy sponsor to provide the necessary support and challenge for the school.

Students: Finance

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many learners aged 19 years at the start of their course claimed Care to Learn in (a) 2009-10, (b) 2010-11 and (c) 2011 to date; [85360]

(2) what the total expenditure was on learners claiming Care to Learn who were aged 19 years at the start of their course in (a) 2009-10, (b) 2010-11 and (c) 2011 to date; and what the average expenditure per individual claimant was in each year. [85361]

Mr Gibb: These are matters for the Young People's Learning Agency (YPLA) who operate the Care to Learn scheme for the Department for Education. Peter Lauener, the YPLA's chief executive, will write to the hon. Member with the information requested and a copy of his reply will be placed in the House Libraries.

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he plans to publish the outcome of his consultation on Care to Learn; and how many responses the consultation has received. [85377]

Mr Gibb: The DFE consultation on options for the future of the Care to Learn scheme received 329 responses. We plan to publish the full consultation response on the DFE website shortly.

Teenage Pregnancy

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many teenage pregnancies there were in England in each year since 1997; and how many there were in each local authority in the most recent period for which figures are available. [84881]

Sarah Teather: England has declining teenage pregnancy rates. Between 1998 and 2009 (the latest data available), under-18 conceptions have fallen by 18.1% to the lowest rate in almost 30 years. Over the same period, 95% (142 out of 150) of local authorities have seen a decline in their under-18 conception rates. However, this varies significantly with some areas achieving reductions of over 30%.

The England latest quarterly rates for 2010 continue to fall. Annual under-18 conception data for 2010 will be published in February 2012.

I have set out the specific information requested on teenage pregnancies in the following tables.

CABINET OFFICE

Big Lottery Fund: Public Appointments

Mr Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what remuneration the Chair of the Big Lottery Fund is receiving; how many days a week he works for the Fund; for how long he has been appointed; and whether he has been given ministerial guidance on the performance of his duties. [85907]

Mr Hurd: The Big Lottery Fund UK Board chair is remunerated £21,600 per annum, with a time commitment of six days per month. The appointment is for a term of four years which commenced on the 1 June 2011 to 31 May 2015. The chair has been given ministerial guidance on the performance of his duties.

Charity Commission: Public Appointments

Mr Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office when he proposes to start recruitment for the next Chair of the Charity Commission; what recruitment process will be followed; and if he will make a statement. [85906]

Mr Hurd: The current Chair of the Charity Commission's term of office is due to end in July 2012. The recruitment of a successor will begin in the new year. As a public appointment, the recruitment process will be conducted in line with the requirements of the Commissioner Public Appointments.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85632]

Mr Maude: Details of the Cabinet Office's internal audit work and that of the Civil Service Commission, its sponsored executive non-departmental body, are contained in their respective Statements of Internal Control. The statements are included in their annual reports and accounts 2010-11. These publications are available in the House of Commons Library and on the following websites:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/sites/default/files/resources/resource-accounts-2010-11.pdf

http://civilservicecommission.independent.gov.uk/downloads/annual-report/cs-annual-report10-11.pdf

Procurement

Gordon Henderson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate he has made of the cost of employing civil servants to undertake procurement for his Department in (a) 2008-09, (b) 2009-10 and (c) 2010-11; and what estimate he has made of the cost of (i) employing civil servants and (ii) engaging consultants to undertake procurement for his Department in 2011-12. [73192]

Mr Maude: The estimated cost of employing civil servants to undertake procurement is as follows:

	£ million
2008-09	0.8
2009-10	0.7
2010-11	0.4
2011-12	0.4

Consultants are only engaged to provide specialist commercial advice on particular projects where this is not available in-house, and may also be used in the procurement process itself where suitable expertise is not available in-house. The use of these consultants, regardless of value, is subject to a strict set of approval procedures, and prior approval must be sought in all cases. The work involved in researching the finance systems to identify this expenditure in past years, and in consulting all business units to analyse and forecast expenditure for 2011-12 would incur disproportionate costs.

The total cost of consultancy is published in the Cabinet Office Annual Reports and Accounts, available in the House of Commons Library and on the Cabinet Office website:

http://www.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/resource-library/cabinet-office-annual-reports-and-accounts

The amounts are as follows:

			£000
	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Administration	8,732	19,467	7,025
Programme	10,584	8,036	2,107
Total	19,316	27,503	9,132

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Byrne: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how much his Department spent in (a) Birmingham, (b) Newcastle, (c) Wakefield, (d) Manchester, (e) Leeds, (f) Liverpool, (g) Coventry, (h) Bristol, (i) Sheffield, (j) Bradford, (k) Leicester and (l) Nottingham in the latest financial year for which figures are available. [85450]

Mr Maude: The information is not held in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Publications

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many (a) leaflets, (b) posters and (c) reports his Department has published since May 2010; how much each cost; and which company (i) published and (ii) designed each. [83007]

Mr Maude: The Cabinet Office uses a number of channels and suppliers to publish leaflets, posters and reports such as the Central Office of Information (COI), The Stationery Office (TSO)—for the production and publication of Command and House papers—and existing internal resources such as our in-house reprographics team.

Cabinet Office only keeps records centrally of leaflets, posters and reports that incur external costs. Information on these are detailed as follows:

Information provided by COI:

The Cabinet Office published seven reports through COI between May 2010 and the end of March 2011 at a total cost of £90,695. (i) Each report was published under Crown Copyright, (ii) no design costs were incurred.

No leaflets or posters were published by COI during this period.

Information provided by TSO:

The Cabinet Office published one report through TSO between May 2010 and the end of March 2011 at a total cost of £640. This does not include reports published in the name of the Deputy Prime Minister detailed in his PQ answered on 30 November 2011, Official Report, column 1000W.

No leaflets or posters were published by TSO during this period.

Unemployment: Households

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what proportion of households in each parliamentary constituency have (a) any adult and (b) all adults who have never worked. [86350]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking what proportion of households in each parliamentary constituency has a) any adult and b) all adults who have never worked [86350].

The table shows estimates for part a) and relate to the period January-December 2010. The estimates are derived from the Annual Population Survey (APS) and are not seasonally adjusted. An asterisk indicates that sample sizes are too small to provide reliable estimates for a particular parliamentary constituency. The table will be placed in the Library of the House.

For part b) it is not possible to provide reliable estimates for parliamentary constituencies because the sample sizes are not sufficiently large enough.

As with any sample survey, estimates from the APS are subject to a margin of uncertainty as different samples give different results.

Government Procurement

Philip Davies: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office if he will estimate the number of government contracts which have not been awarded to UK companies due to EU procurement rules in each of the last five years. [86036]

Mr Maude: UK Government contracts are awarded on the basis of value for money. Statistics from the European Commission indicate that 97% of UK Government contracts are awarded to UK-based firms.

Immigrants: EU Nationals

Priti Patel: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 333-4W, on immigrants: EU nationals, what the original countries of birth were of those EU nationals who have entered the UK in each of the last five years. [86327]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, pursuant to the Answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 333-4W, on immigrants: EU nationals, if he will provide a breakdown of what the original countries of birth were of those EU nationals who have entered the UK in each of the last five years (86327).

The Office for National Statistics produces estimates of long-term international migration, primarily based on the International Passenger Survey (IPS). The IPS is a continuous voluntary sample survey conducted by the Office for National Statistics.

The answer of 22 November 2011 provided long-term immigration estimates of all EU citizens who were not born in the EU for each of the last five years. It is not possible to provide a reliable breakdown of what the individual countries of birth were of EU nationals coming to the UK for each of the last five years, due to the large standard errors associated with the estimates. A migration estimate with a standard error percentage of more than 25 per cent is not considered to be reliable.

Priti Patel: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 333-4W, on immigrants: EU nationals, how many EU nationals whose original country of origin is outside the EU have settled in the UK in each of the last five years. [86328]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question, pursuant to the Answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 333-4W, on immigrants: EU nationals, how many EU nationals whose country of origin is outside the EU have settled in the UK in each of the last five years (86328).

The Office for National Statistics produces estimates of long-term international migration, primarily based on the International Passenger Survey (IPS). The IPS is a continuous voluntary sample survey conducted by the Office for National Statistics. The latest figures available are for 2010 and these are shown in the following table. These latest estimates were published on 24 November 2011.

Long-term immigration to the UK of people who are EU citizens but whose country of last residence is not an EU state

	Estimate	SE%
2005	9,000	25
2006	7,000	29
2007	11,000	33

SE% = Standard error percentage

Standard error percentages (SE%) indicate the robustness of each estimate. A migration figure with a standard error percentage greater than 25% is not considered to be reliable for practical purposes.

Population: Babies

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate has been made of the number of children in each constituent part of the UK who are aged under one. [86364]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics, I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking for an estimate of the number of children in each constituent part of the UK who are aged under one year old (86364).

Table 1 shows the number of children aged under one year old in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland for mid-2010. This is the latest year for which population estimates are available.

Public Sector: Mutual Societies

Richard Graham: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what assessment his Department has made of the performance of the mutuals pathfinders; and if he will make a statement. [85462]

Mr Maude: The Cabinet Office has recently reviewed the progress of the Mutual Pathfinders, and has released a "Mutual Pathfinder Progress Report", which is available at the following link:

http://mutuals.cabinetoffice.gov.uk/documents/mutual-pathfinder-progress-report

Public Sector: Pay

Bill Esterson: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what estimate has been made of the real level of pay for staff working in the public sector in (a) Sefton and (b) the UK in each of the next five years. [86057]

Mr Hurd: The information requested falls within the responsibility of the UK Statistics Authority. I have asked the authority to reply.

Letter from Stephen Penneck, dated December 2011:

As Director General for the Office for National Statistics (ONS), I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate has been made of the real level of pay for staff working in the public sector in (a) Sefton and (b) the UK in each of the next five years. (86057)

ONS does not make estimates of earnings levels for future periods, so no estimates have been made of real levels of pay for staff working in the public sector in Sefton and the UK in each of the next five years.

Public Sector: Pensions

Steve Baker: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps his Department is taking to ensure that non-unionised public sector workers are represented in pension negotiations. [85676]

Mr Maude: The Chief Secretary to the Treasury, the right hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn, Badenoch and Strathspey (Danny Alexander), and I have been jointly leading discussions with a TUC delegation, as representatives of public sector workers, since February 2011. Formal consultations, as the usual method for non-union members to comment on Government proposals, have already taken place on proposed increases to employee contributions from April 2012 in the civil service, teachers and NHS pension schemes. There were 13,834 responses from individuals.

Steria

Keith Vaz: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office how many contracts his Department has awarded to Steria since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [85480]

Mr Maude: The Cabinet Office has not awarded any contracts to Steria since May 2010.

Voluntary Work: Young People

Grahame M. Morris: To ask the Minister for the Cabinet Office what steps his Department has taken to ensure that young people in the North East have access to National Citizen Service programmes. [85565]

Mr Hurd: We are committed to ensuring that as many young people as possible have access to National Citizen Service regardless of background or location. When commissioning providers for 2011 and 2012, we therefore worked to ensure a good geographical spread of National Citizen Service pilots across England. In 2011, Catch 22, Princes Trust, Safe in Tees Valley and v/Dame Kelly Holmes Legacy Trust all offered places on National Citizen Service pilots to young people in the north east. In 2012, there will be a number of opportunities for 16-year-olds in the north east to take part in a National Citizen Service pilot. The organisations providing these places are Academy of Youth, Catch 22, Future Foundations, Safe in Tees Valley and v/Dame Kelly Holmes Legacy Trust who are now actively recruiting in the area.

BUSINESS, INNOVATION AND SKILLS

Aviation: Treaties

Andrew Stephenson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 17 May 2011, Official Report, column 149W, on aviation: treaties, what recent progress has been made on the ratification of the Cape Town convention. [85585]

Mr Prisk: Since my answer of 17 May, the Department's officials have continued to work closely with industry representatives to discuss the benefits of UK ratification and this has resulted in additional evidence being submitted. Officials are now considering all the evidence that has been provided to the Department. A Government Response to the Call for Evidence will be published in the new year.

Business

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what estimate he has made of the number of mentors available to support small businesses in (a) Sefton and (b) nationally. [86349]

Mr Prisk: There are 70 mentoring organisations now accessible via:

www.mentorsme.co.uk

and through them 11,000 mentors. This initiative is led by business, not by Government, and the British Bankers Association (BBA) is co-ordinating and sponsoring the work. The website does not contain data on mentors at regional or constituency level but the search facility on the website allows visitors to easily find a mentoring organisation in their locality.

Our aim is to develop a network of over 40,000 business mentors and the BBA is currently screening applications from other mentoring organisations who wish to be listed on the portal.

The banks themselves are also contributing practical mentoring support alongside the other contributing organisations: the banks have made a commitment to have 1,000 bank mentors trained and deployed in not-for-profit mentoring organisations by the end of June 2012.

Additionally, new grant funding of £1.2 million was announced by BIS on 16 November to recruit and train 10,000 volunteer business mentors from the small business community via the Small Firms Enterprise Development Initiative (SFEDI). This is on top of funding of £700,000 for 5,000 mentors announced by the Secretary of State for the Home Department as part of the package of support for female entrepreneurs on 4 November.

SFEDI (the sector skills body for enterprise) is working with a range of trade associations and business representative bodies who will be recruiting from among local business communities and the volunteer business mentors will be accessible through

Business: Entry Clearances

Shabana Mahmood: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 10 November 2011, Official Report, columns 459-60W, on business: entry clearances, if he will place in the Library the representations he has received on forward planning and Tier 2 visas. [82533]

Mr Prisk: I will place representations the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills, and the Minister for Trade and Investment have received on forward planning and Tier 2 visas in the Libraries of the House. The company names will be redacted to protect commercial confidentiality.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many applications from employees to run services for which his Department is directly responsible he has received since May 2010; and if he will make a statement. [77614]

Mr Davey: There have been no applications, to our knowledge, that have progressed through to procurement.

Export Credits Guarantees: Egypt

Meg Hillier: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether any of the debt owed by Egypt to the Export Credits Guarantee Department comes from sales of military equipment. [84122]

Mr Davey: The debt owed to the Export Credits Guarantees Department does not include military hardware i.e. aircraft, helicopters, tanks or missiles. It includes export contracts relating to the supply of communications equipment e.g. telephone and radio sets, to the Egyptian Government for use by the armed forces.

Financial Services: Older People

Rory Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to promote financial inclusion for older people living in rural areas who do not have access to the internet. [75040]

Mr Prisk: Broadband Delivery UK (BDUK)—a team within the Department for Culture, Media and Sport—delivers the Government's broadband strategy, bringing superfast broadband to all parts of the UK. BDUK's main role is to allocate and distribute £530 million of funding to bring superfast broadband to the third of UK homes and businesses which will not be provided for by the broadband market. There are currently nine procurement programmes operating in Cumbria, the Highlands and Islands, Herefordshire and Gloucestershire, North Yorkshire, Lancashire, Rutland, Surrey and Wales.

The Government have allocated £17.13 million to help stimulate broadband private investment in Cumbria and the Cumbria county council is in procurement procedures to select a supplier, or suppliers, to upgrade infrastructure to support improved broadband services.

Race Online 2012 is the Government-supported organisation led by Martha Lane Fox working to encourage everybody in the UK, including older people living in rural areas, to access the internet. Latest figures from the Office for National Statistics estimate that the number of adults in the UK who had never been online fell by 300,000 to 8.43 million in the third quarter of 2011. Race Online 2012 has issued a report "Getting on—a Manifesto for Older People in a Network Nation". A copy is attached and can be accessed at:

http://raceonline2012.org/sites/default/files/resources/getting_on_august_2011.pdf

Further Education: English Language

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what recent discussions Ministers in his Department have had with the Association of Colleges on fee remission for English for speakers of other languages courses; and if he will make a statement. [85493]

Mr Hayes: The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills and I meet regularly with representatives from the further education sector to discuss a wide range of issues.

Learners in receipt of jobseeker's allowance or employment support allowance (in the work-related activity group) are eligible for full fee remission where English language skills have been identified as a barrier to entering employment. Further education colleges and training organisations also have local discretion to provide fully subsidised courses for people on a wider range of benefits where the training is to help them enter employment. The Government continue to contribute 50% towards English for speakers of other languages (ESOL) course fees for people who are settled here and not eligible for full Government funding. We will no longer fund ESOL courses delivered in the workplace.

Further education (FE) colleges and training providers are responsible for meeting the needs of their local community, and increased freedoms and flexibilities that we have introduced will help them respond and determine within their funding where this is prioritised.

Higher Education

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills whether he has plans for further changes to higher education policy in 2013-14. [85583]

Mr Willetts: We set out our plans for higher education in the White Paper "Students at the Heart of the System" Cm 8122. We have consulted on the White Paper proposals. We have also asked the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) to consult on future funding arrangements, including liberalising student number controls, in its forthcoming consultation on teaching funding for 2013/14 and beyond. We will respond to the White Paper consultation in the new year and a Higher Education Bill will be introduced in 2012, parliamentary time permitting.

Liz Kendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what the average cost was of providing a level 3 or higher qualification for adults aged 24 years old and over in the latest period for which figures are available. [86220]

Mr Hayes: Based on information provided by the Skills Funding Agency, the average in year unit cost for level 3 and higher qualifications for adults aged 25 and over for the 2009/10 academic year is estimated as £1,350 for apprenticeship provision and £2,100 for classroom based provision.

The total public funding for individual qualifications will depend on the length of the course, the subject area and whether the individual qualifies for full fee remission or the costs are shared between Government, the individual or the employer.

From the 2013/14 academic year we are introducing a new system of further education (FE) loans, which shifts more of the responsibility for investing in learning to individuals, and maintains support for adults to learn at advanced and higher levels. Sharing the same progressive features as higher education (HE) student finance—no upfront cost to the learner, no repayments until earnings reach £21,000, and outstanding amounts written off after 30 years—FE loans will use much of the delivery infrastructure for HE student loans, creating a more coherent offer to learners. The introduction of loans is an important step, and we will be working closely with colleges, training providers and stakeholders as we implement them for the 2013/14 academic year.

Higher Education: Fees and Charges

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how many institutions have set tuition fees below £9,000. [85582]

Mr Willetts: Of the 149 institutions that have submitted access agreements to the Office for Fair Access (OFFA), there are 143 with estimated average tuition fees less than £9,000 (96%) after fee waivers.

Manufacturing Industries: Training

Karen Lumley: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what funding his Department has provided to colleges and training providers to train people for jobs in the manufacturing industry in 2011-12. [84825]

Mr Hayes: This Government recognise the importance of manufacturing and its key role in rebalancing the economy. Working with industry, this Government are taking action aimed at increasing growth in manufacturing output in the UK by encouraging higher levels of innovation, exports, business investment and technical skills, as well as cutting excessive red tape.

As set out in this Department's Skills Investment Statement 2011 to 2014 (1 December 2011), overall investment in adult further education (FE) and skills will be £3.8 billion in the 2012-13 financial year.

The Skills Funding Agency has responsibility for the funding of post-19 FE and skills training and allocates budgets to individual FE colleges and training organisations. It does not allocate funding at the qualification level. From the 2011/12 academic year we introduced a single adult skills budget. This will provide FE colleges and training organisations with the flexibility to offer the range and balance of programmes, from basic skills to higher-level skills, in the mode of delivery that will best meet the needs of learners, employers and communities in line with demand.

Post Offices: Pilot Schemes

Ian Murray: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills pursuant to the answer of 28 November 2011, Official Report, column 736W, on post offices, what recent discussions he has had with Consumer Focus on the volume of customer transactions in Post Office Local pilots. [86355]

Mr Davey: Departmental officials and I have regular discussions with Consumer Focus on a range of topics, including matters relating to the post office network. As I explained in my previous answer, the Post Office Local model and the range of services available is currently being piloted across the UK. In May 2011, Consumer Focus published a detailed report, based on independent research, about the Post Office Local model which showed that the model offers over 85% of the range of post office services and that these services account for 97% of total customer transaction volumes across the network.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much his Department spent in (a) Birmingham, (b) Newcastle, (c) Wakefield, (d) Manchester, (e) Leeds, (f) Liverpool, (g) Coventry, (h) Bristol, (i) Sheffield, (j) Bradford, (k) Leicester and (l) Nottingham in the latest financial year for which figures are available. [85444]

Mr Davey: The Department does not maintain records of spend in individual towns and cities and the information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For information, the Department is committed to transparency and publishes details of monthly expenditure on our website at:

www.bis.gov.uk/transparency/financial and from August 2011 onwards, this information contained the postcode of the supplier.

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much funding his Department has allocated to Birmingham in (a) ring-fenced and (b) non ring-fenced funding grants for each of the next three years. [85445]

Mr Prisk: The Birmingham region, through the local enterprise partnership, can access a variety of funding streams from the Department for Business, Innovation and Skills as set out in my response to the right hon. Member on 23 November 2011, Official Report, column 452W.

To date the only funding this Department has allocated to the partnership is through the Capacity and Start up which is ring-fenced.

Scholarships

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills what steps he is taking to support young people leaving kinship care to access the National Scholarship scheme; and if he will make a statement. [85494]

Mr Willetts: The National Scholarship Programme is designed for students whose family income is no greater than £25,000. Participating universities and colleges establish their own eligibility criteria to determine whom to help from among this broad group of people. In most cases, young people leaving kinship care will be deemed independent and only the student's own income, if any, will be taken into account.

Guidance to institutions about the programme published by the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE) suggested to institutions that they may wish to consider if there are particular groups of students they would especially wish to support and encourage. The guidance listed students who were looked after children or care leavers (which includes those leaving kinship care) as one example of such a group.

Institutions charging above £6,000 must agree Access Agreements with the Director of Fair Access setting out the support they will provide to students from disadvantaged backgrounds, information about their outreach and retention activities, and the benchmarks or targets that they will set themselves. 32 institutions included milestones for care leavers in their Access Agreements approved by the Office for Fair Access in July 2011.

Tourism: Regional Development Agencies

Mary Creagh: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills how much each regional development agency spent on promoting tourism in its respective region in each of the last five financial years. [84833]

Mr Prisk: The following figures refer to spending by regional development agencies (RDAs) on core tourism and leisure objectives. RDAs have also spent money on activities related to tourism initiatives such as specific regeneration projects. The cost of these related activities are not included in the table.

£ million

	Expenditure on tourism
RDA	2006/07	2007/08	2008/09	2009/10	2010/11
AWM	3.8	4.9	8.5	6.1	3.3
EEDA	1.5	1.8	1.4	1.1	1.1
EMDA	5.3	4.7	3.3	3.3	2.5
LDA	23.9	29.4	18.7	20.1	14.1
NWDA	6.1	8.9	4.5	4.7	2.5
ONE	10.8	10.6	11.3	7.2	4.7
SEEDA	2.3	2.3	2.4	2.5	1.6
SWRDA	3.2	2.6	1.3	1.3	1.3
YF	3.9	6	3.1	6.2	6.3

Veterinary Services: Fees and Charges

Mark Pritchard: To ask the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills if he will ask the Competition Commission to investigate the pricing structures of the veterinary profession. [85466]

Mr Davey: Where there are concerns relating to pricing structures in a market, responsibility for investigating and referring them to the Competition Commission primarily rests with the Office of Fair Trading as the responsible competition authority.

TREASURY

Air Passenger Duty

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the cost to the public purse was of the consultation on the reform of air passenger duty; and if he will estimate the number of hours officials in his Department have been engaged in the consultation. [85890]

Henry Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (a) how much funding from the public purse and (b) how many official working hours was spent on the consultation on the reform of air passenger duty. [85979]

Paul Maynard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of (a) the cost to the public purse and (b) the number of working hours spent by his officials on the consultation on the reform of air passenger duty. [86184]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Government regularly consult on a wide range of issues. The cost of public consultation is accounted for within annual departmental budgets, which are published and available online. No separate estimates are available for the cost of the air passenger duty consultation.

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the likely amount of air passenger duty paid per passenger journey to (a) the Caribbean and (b) Hawaii following implementation of his planned reforms to air passenger duty. [85891]

Henry Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether passengers from UK airports flying to the Caribbean or Hawaii will pay more air passenger duty following his reforms to the duty. [85978]

Paul Maynard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he proposes that passengers from UK airports flying to the Caribbean will pay more air passenger duty (APD) than passengers flying to Hawaii following his planned reform of APD. [86336]

Miss Chloe Smith: Air passenger duty (APD) rates for 2012-13, which take effect from 1 April 2012, were published at the Autumn Statement. The rates are set out in Table 1 of the document entitled 'Tables Confirming Tax and Tax Credit Rates and Thresholds for 2012-13', which is available on the HM Treasury website at:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/as2011_documents.htm

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when airlines were informed of the new air passenger duty rates applicable from 1 April 2012. [85904]

Henry Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when airlines were informed of the air passenger duty rates applicable from 1 April 2012. [85975]

Miss Chloe Smith: Budget 2011 announced that air passenger duty would be frozen for 2011-12 and the RPI increase assumed in the Office for Budget Responsibility's (OBR) forecast would be implemented from 1 April 2012. The Autumn Statement of 29 November confirmed the rates for 2012-13. The published rates are available on the HM Treasury website at:

www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/as2011_documents.htm

Mr Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of the changes to air passenger duty announced in the Government response to the consultation on the reform of air passenger duty are intended to achieve greater simplification of the system. [85905]

Henry Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes to air passenger duty announced in the Government response to the consultation on the reform of air passenger duty are intended to achieve greater simplification of the system. [85977]

Paul Maynard: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of whether his planned changes to air passenger duty (APD) will result in greater simplification of the APD system. [86335]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Government consultation on Air Passenger Duty (APD) emphasised a number of objectives, including fairness and the need to maintain revenues from the aviation sector. It is right that the aviation sector makes a fair contribution to the public finances.

The Government considered changes to the APD banding structure, alongside the base case of no change. A revenue neutral change would have required those flying to band A and band B destinations (91% of passengers) to pay more. The Government therefore decided to retain the existing four APD distance bands.

Business: Loans

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether companies that develop and export low carbon technologies will be eligible to receive support through his proposed National Loan Guarantee Scheme. [85484]

Mr Hoban: All firms in the UK with annual turnover of up to £50 million will be eligible to apply for loans under the National Loan Guarantee Scheme.

Child Benefit: Wales

Jessica Morden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) families and (b) lone parents receive child benefit in Wales; and how many such lone parents are women. [85814]

Mr Gauke: The number of families receiving child benefit in Wales can be found in the HMRC statistical publication 'Child Benefit Statistics: Geographical Analysis', available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/stats/child_benefit/chb-geog-aug10.pdf

As of August 2010, there were approximately 373,000 families in Wales receiving child benefit.

Information on the number of lone parents is not available. The child benefit administrative dataset does not contain any information on household composition of claimants.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85646]

Miss Chloe Smith: Internal audit plans for the Treasury and its executive agencies are drawn up annually and reviewed as required through the year. They are based on a review of management risk assessments, discussions with senior managers, previous internal audit work and planned changes and developments, and also linked with the organisations' objectives. The plans are established in consultation with, and subject to approval by, the Accounting Officers, boards and the Audit Committees as appropriate.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85665]

Miss Chloe Smith: UK public procurement policy is to award contracts on the basis of value for money, which means the optimum combination of cost and quality over the lifetime of the project. Public sector procurers are required to assess value for money from the perspective of the contracting authority using criteria linked to the subject matter of the contract, including compliance with the published specification.

Wider socio-economic benefits that do not accrue to the contracting authority cannot be taken into account at tender evaluation stage if they do not relate to the subject matter of a contract from the point of view of the contracting authority.

Economic Growth

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the levels of economic growth in (a) the UK and (b) other G7 countries over the last 12 months. [85580]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Office for Budget Responsibility (OBR) is responsible for producing independent economic and fiscal forecasts. Its "Economic and fiscal outlook" published 29 November 2011 state that

"World activity has slowed since our March forecast, especially in advanced economies. This reflects: the deepening of the euro area sovereign debt crisis and related weakness in the financial sector; the supply chain effects from the Japanese earthquake; sluggish performance in the US labour and housing markets; and higher oil prices, partly related to unrest in the Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region."

The UK cannot be immune from this series of shocks, which have weakened economic growth in the UK and other G7 countries over the last 12 months.

Economic Growth: North-west England

Bill Esterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to his autumn statement of 29 November 2011, Official Report, column 806, what plans he has for the development of the Atlantic Gateway. [85512]

Danny Alexander [holding answer 8 December 2011]: Returning the UK economy to sustainable economic growth that is more balanced across the UK and sectors is a key priority.

The Government are taking forward an ambitious work programme with the eight core cities outside London to help them maximise their growth potential, including consideration of financial tools and support to drive forward key projects for the area.

We will be working closely with business, city leaders, chief executives and LEP chairs across the country to develop tailored deals to unlock growth, including how to realise the ambitions in the Atlantic Gateway.

Employment

Richard Graham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department has made an estimate of the number of new jobs required to be created to maintain employment levels at a time of increasing population growth in the next 20 years. [85482]

Miss Chloe Smith: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Richmond Park (Zac Goldsmith) on 7 December 2011, Official Report, column 365W.

Financial Services: Qualifications

Guto Bebb: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he has had with the Financial Services Authority as part of the retail distribution review on exempting financial advisers who have reached a certain age from professional requirements. [85435]

Mr Hoban: The Retail Distribution Review (RDR) is a matter for the Financial Services Authority (FSA), an independent body. The FSA has consulted extensively on the RDR since 2006 and, in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, has published cost-benefit analyses of the proposals.

The FSA is required under the Equality Act 2010 to have due regard to the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination in the exercise of its functions. This includes discrimination on the basis of age.

National Income

Mr Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of levels of domestic consumption on gross domestic product over the last 12 months. [85581]

Miss Chloe Smith: The Office for National Statistics (ONS) has published gross domestic product (GDP) by expenditure up to the third quarter of 2011. The level of household consumption is 1.4% lower than the same quarter last year and the level of Government consumption is 2.9% higher. The independent Office for Budget Responsibility (OBR) published its "Economic and fiscal outlook" on 29 November 2011, setting out its forecasts for 2011. GDP growth in 2011 is forecast to be 0.9% with household consumption forecast to fall by 1.1% in 2011, contributing -0.7 percentage points to growth in GDP overall. Government consumption is forecast to rise by 2.2% in 2011, contributing 0.3 percentage points to GDP growth.

Poverty: Rural Areas

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications of the findings of the Hills Report for his policy on rural poverty. [85965]

Gregory Barker: I have been asked to reply.

Professor Hills published his Interim Report in October 2011, and he is due to present his final report to Government in early 2012. My officials and I will carry out an assessment of his recommendations and their implications at that time.

Public Expenditure: Northern Ireland

Mr Donaldson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether factors other than the application of the Barnett formula were used to determine the block grant to Northern Ireland announced in October 2010. [85894]

Danny Alexander: In addition to Barnett consequential, the Northern Ireland Executive received £25 million to set up an access fund to ensure a fair and just resolution of issues arising from the collapse of the Presbyterian Mutual Society. They were also granted an additional £175 million of borrowing in order to create headroom within NIE's budget for a loan to the PMS administrator to facilitate an orderly disposal of assets.

Public Sector: Pensions

Mr Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2011, Official Report, columns 179-80W, on public sector: pensions, to which individual trades union leaders the Chief Secretary to the Treasury was referring in his BBC TV interview. [85380]

Danny Alexander: As I said during the interview of 6 November 2011 and in my answer to the same parliamentary question on 21 November 2011, most of the unions want to reach an agreement.

Discussions are ongoing and I am very keen that a deal is reached with the trades unions.

Bill Esterson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect on the level of pensions of the uprating of public sector pensions for (a) current and (b) future pensioners. [85697]

Danny Alexander: Public service pensions in payment (or deferral) are uprated annually according to consumer prices index, through the statutory link to the indexation of the state second pension.

On 6 December 2011, Official Report, columns 163-65, the Minister with responsibility for pensions my hon. Friend the Member for Thornbury and Yate (Steve Webb) confirmed in an oral statement to Parliament that the state second pension will be increased by 5.2% in April 2012. The level of public service pensions for current pensioners will therefore also increase by 5.2%.

David T. C. Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the total annual increase in public sector pension payment expenditure arising from the proposed (a) guarantee to protect full existing pension rights for those within 10 years of pension age and (b) change in the accrual rate for public sector schemes. [86237]

Danny Alexander: On 2 November 2011, I announced an enhanced offer on public service pensions. This included:

setting an objective that public service workers who, as of 1 April 2012, have 10 years or less to their pension age see no change in when they can retire, nor any decrease in the amount of pension they receive at their current normal pension age. Schemes have been asked to determine the fairest way of reaching this objective, while ensuring that costs to the taxpayer in each and every year do not exceed the Office for Budget Responsibility forecasts of public service pension costs; and an increase in the accrual rate in the Government's preferred scheme design for public service pension reform, from 1/65ths to 1/60ths. This is an 8% cost increase.

Revenue and Customs: Correspondence

Cathy Jamieson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to improve the performance of HM Revenue and Customs in dealing with post at the National Insurance Contributions and Employer Office within the target timescale of 80 per cent. being dealt with within 15 days. [85960]

Mr Gauke: HMRC National Insurance Contributions and Employer Office redeployed staff from other work to bring customer correspondence to under the 15 days target. Currently 88% of post is less than 15 days old.

Taxation: Energy

Alun Cairns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposed removal of the levy exemption certificate on energy intensive industries which depend on combined heat and power plants. [85911]

Miss Chloe Smith: Budget 2011 announced that from 2013, the new relief from the carbon price floor for combined heat and power will be introduced and the existing relief from climate change levy provided through levy exemption certificates removed.

A Tax Impact and Information Note on the removal of the exemption was published on 6 December, alongside the draft legislation, and is available at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/tiin/tiin700.pdf

The Government are working with the Combined Heat and Power (CHP) Association and its members in order to develop a simpler, direct and more cost effective means of support for combined heat and power stations.

The level of the relief from the carbon price floor for supplies of fossil fuels to good-quality CHP stations that are intended to be used to generate electricity, will be announced at Budget 2012.

Alun Cairns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the proposed carbon floor price on energy intensive industries which depend on combined heat and power plants. [85912]

Miss Chloe Smith: An assessment of the impacts of the carbon price floor is given in HMRC's Tax Information and Impact Note published alongside the Budget. This is available online at:

http://www.hmrc.gov.uk/budget2011/tiin6111.pdf

The Department for Energy and Climate Change has carried out an assessment of the impact of all Government policies on energy bills for energy-intensive industries, published on 23 November, available at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/meeting_energy/aes/impacts/impacts.aspx

The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced at the autumn statement on 29 November 2011, Official Report, columns 799-810, a package of measures to reduce the transitional impacts of energy and climate change policies on the costs of electricity for the most energy-intensive industries. The Department for Business, Innovation and Skills will assess the impacts of the package as the details are developed.

Taxation: Pensions

Mr Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the potential revenue yield from setting the annual pension tax relief allowance at (a) £40,000 and (b) £80,000; and if he will make a statement. [85198]

Mr Gauke: HMRC estimate that setting the annual pension tax relief allowance at:

(a) £40,000 would yield around £600 million per year.

(b) £80,000 would cost around £1,200 million per year.

This is when compared to the current £50,000 annual allowance which was introduced for tax year 2011-12 onwards.

These estimates are on an accruals basis and exclude behavioural effects.

Mr Laws: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent estimate he has made of the cost of restricting tax relief on pensions to 20 per cent. on incomes of over £100,000 per annum; and if he will make a statement. [85200]

Mr Gauke: HMRC estimate that the revenue yield from restricting tax relief on pensions to 20% on incomes over £100,000 per annum would be £3.6 billion in 2012-13, when compared to a position of full relief on contributions up to £50,000. This is on an accruals basis and excludes behavioural effects.

VAT: Electronic Publishing

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether his Department plans to introduce a zero rate of value added tax on e-books. [85381]

Mr Gauke: Under EU law, VAT on electronic books must be charged at the standard rate. Existing agreements with our EU partners do not allow the UK or other member states to introduce a new zero-rate or extend an existing one to relieve e-books from VAT and they specifically exclude electronically supplied services, which includes e-books, from a reduced rate.

Working Tax Credit: Wales

Jessica Morden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) male and (b) female lone parents receive working tax credits in Wales. [86018]

Mr Gauke: The following table shows the number of male and female lone parents receiving working tax credit in Wales.

Number of in-work lone parents benefiting from working tax credit by gender of parent

	Thousand
Female	60.9
Male	4.0
Total	64.9

Written Questions: Government Responses

Chris Leslie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to answer questions (a) 79735, (b) 79736, (c) 79737, (d) 79738 tabled by the hon. Member for Nottingham East on 7 November 2011 for answer on 10 November 2011. [86045]

Mr Gauke: I have replied to the hon. Member.

HEALTH

Contraceptives

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidance his Department plans to provide to local authorities on how to undertake a needs assessment of contraceptive services in their locality to ensure choice and open access to these services; and if he will make a statement; [86149]

(2) with reference to his Department's proposed reforms to the delivery of public health services, what support and guidance his Department provides to local authorities on commissioning comprehensive sexual and reproductive health services; and if he will make a statement; [86150]

(3) with reference to his Department's proposed reforms to the delivery of public health services, what sexual and reproductive health services local authorities will be required to commission to ensure choice and open access to such services; and if he will make a statement; [86151]

(4) whether his Department expects Public Health England to produce guidance for (a) clinical commissioning groups and (b) local authorities on the commissioning of comprehensive sexual and reproductive health services; and if he will make a statement. [86152]

Anne Milton: It is the Government's intention that, subject to the passage of the Health and Social Care Bill, there should be a small number of activities that local authorities will be mandated to commission. These activities will include appropriate provision of confidential, open-access sexual health services. However, it is not the intention to be overly prescriptive regarding the detail of how these services should be commissioned, or to constrain local authorities' ability to design services which meet the needs of local people.

The Joint Strategic Needs Assessment and the Health and Wellbeing Strategies prepared by each local area will help to inform the commissioning of sexual health services, including contraceptive services, from April 2013. Clinical and service standards developed by bodies such as the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence, the Faculty for Sexual and Reproductive Healthcare and the British Association for Sexual Health and HIV are available to current service commissioners to help to inform commissioning decisions, and these standards will be available to future service commissioners as well.

The Department will also work with colleagues both in the national health service and in local authorities to determine their need for guidance on commissioning specific public health services such as sexual health services.

Abortion: Research

John Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the causes of multiple abortions among (i) under 16s and (ii) under 18s. [85502]

Anne Milton: The Department has not commissioned any research projects specifically on the causes of multiple abortions among young women aged under 16 and young women aged under 18. However, the Government Office for London, which has now been abolished, commissioned a research report published in January 2010, 'Young People in London: Abortion and Repeat Abortion'. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

Abortion: Young People

John Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many girls of school age who had abortions in the latest period for which figures are available have previously been on an at risk register. [85503]

Anne Milton: Data on the number of girls of school age having abortions that have previously been on the at risk register are not collected by the Department.

John Pugh: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of people aged under 18 years who had abortions in the latest period for which figures are available are recorded as having had a previous abortion. [85504]

Anne Milton: The latest period for which data are available is 2010. Of the 16,460 legal abortions carried out on young women in England and Wales under the age of 18 years, 1,294 (7.9%) had undergone a previous abortion.

Antenatal Care: Wirral

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what improvements have been made in the antenatal care offered to families by antenatal contact at 28 to 36 weeks in the Wirral following his agreement on the early implementer site Piloting of Pathways. [86365]

Anne Milton: The Wirral is one of 26 early implementer sites announced in March 2011 to demonstrate improvement and success in delivery of the new Health Visiting Service Vision and Family Offer as detailed in the "Health Visiting Implementation Plan: A Call to Action 2011-2015". Pilot projects under way are looking at improving outcomes for children and families and ensuring greater awareness of and alignment of local early years services.

We are advised that in the Wirral, the results and lessons learned from the projects will be captured as case studies and shared within the region, as well as nationally to ensure the spread of key learning and improvement practice. This will be achieved through monthly knowledge sharing forums and specifically through an end of year event in March 2012.

Baby Care Units: Manpower

Brandon Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of future staffing levels of neonatal units for premature and ill babies in NHS hospitals. [86510]

Anne Milton: Work force planning is a matter for local national health service organisations. They are best placed to assess the health needs of their local health community and will commission the required number of training places to develop the work force to meet those needs.

A safety and quality assurance process has been developed to ensure that any significant change proposed in the clinical work force has involved clinicians at all levels, maximising their engagement, leadership and sign off.

Baby Care Units: Nurses

Brandon Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many specialist nursing staff are employed to care for premature or ill babies in NHS hospitals in each year since 2006. [86511]

Anne Milton: It is for local national health service organisations to invest in training for specialist skills and to deploy specialist nurses in accordance with their local needs.

In December 2010, a new code for the capture of the number of nurses working in neonatal nursing, including special care baby units (SCBUs), was introduced to enable the separate identification of this key aspect of the NHS work force via the electronic staff record (ESR) system. Though the records for this new code are currently incomplete it will in time help to inform more targeted commissioning for the education and training of this specific staff group and therefore help to improve front line nursing for premature and sick babies.

As the code for nurses working in neonatal nursing (including SCBUs) was only implemented in ESR on 25 February 2011 even the most recent published data (August 2011) would contain very patchy coverage and therefore would not be suitable for answering this question. Those nurses working in maternity services and paediatric nursing would be involved in a wider range of work outside of the specific care of premature and sick babies (hence the inclusion of the new code) and therefore would not be suitable either.

Children's Centres: Departmental Co-ordination

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking jointly with the Department for Education to enable Sure Start children's centres to focus on families in greatest need. [86366]

Anne Milton: The Government want to retain a vibrant network of high-quality children's centres which are accessible to all families but focused on those in greatest need.

The Department of Health and the Department for Education published their joint vision for services from pregnancy through to age five in 'Families in the Foundation

Years' earlier this year. As part of this joint vision, the Government have also committed to doubling the number of places on the family nurse partnership (FNP) programme by 2015. This is a preventive programme for vulnerable young first time mothers and their babies. It offers intensive and structured home visiting, delivered by specially trained nurses, from early pregnancy until the child is two. FNP is either connected to or delivered from Sure Start children's centres in many areas and family nurses encourage clients to use children's centre services.

DFE is working with departmental colleagues on the Health Visiting community development training programme to look at sharing resources more widely and explore joint training opportunities for health visitors and children centre staff.

DFE, working closely with the Department, will set out ways in which children's centres should focus on families in greatest need in the Sure Start children's centres statutory guidance, which will be sent out for consultation in the new year. Local commissioners of health services, as well as local authorities and other partners, must have regard to the statutory guidance.

Payment by results approaches are also being developed to strengthen the focus on the core purpose of children's centres: to improve child development and school readiness (including health and well-being) amongst young children and to reduce inequalities. This includes identifying, reaching and supporting the most disadvantaged families to improve their parenting aspirations and skills and to promote health and well-being.

The NHS Operating Framework 2012-13 includes the requirement that strategic health authority and primary care trust clusters should work together to deliver the number of health visitors required as part of the Government commitment to increase the number by 4,200 by April 2015, as set out in the 'Health Visiting Implementation Plan 2011-15—A Call to Action' to deliver the Healthy Child Programme, provide greater support to families and develop local community capacity in support of children and families working closely with Sure Start children's centres and other local services.

Chronically Sick People

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the number of people in the (a) working and (b) total population suffering from (i) one long-term condition and (ii) two long-term conditions; and what he estimates the above numbers will be in (A) 10 years time and (B) 20 years time. [85757]

		Number (million)
(a)	Number of people in work force with one or more long-term conditions	10.7
(b) (i)	Number of people with one long-term condition	10.4
(b) (ii)	Number of people with two or more long-term conditions	5.0
(i) (A)	Estimate over next 10 years for people with one or more long-term conditions	15.4
(i) (B)	Estimate over next 20 years for people with one or more long-term conditions	17.9

Departmental Assets

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assets his Department owns in Birmingham; and what the book value is of each such asset. [85442]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department has no assets physically located in Birmingham.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85639]

Mr Simon Burns: The Department's internal audit plan, developed in line with government internal audit standards, that outlines all proposed internal audit reviews is designed to align with departmental priorities and key risks. It is a 12-month plan which is revised and refreshed every quarter in line with Audit and Risk Committee meetings and updates to the Department's strategic risk register. This allows for the addition of new work to meet new priorities and emerging risks throughout the course of the year.

The proposed areas and broad timings for the reviews are discussed with the Permanent Secretary, presented to the senior executive team for their input and then subsequently to the Audit and Risk Committee (which then reports to the Department Board) for comment and agreement.

The Department's arm's length bodies maintain similar arrangements, in line with government internal audit standards, to develop a programme of internal audit intended to provide assurance to their board that adequate systems of internal control are in place and operating satisfactorily. Programmes of internal audit are authorised by their Audit and Risk Committee, or equivalent, and will consist of a range of reviews. Some audits will be routine work required to provide assurance to their external auditors, others will be based on risk assessments, typically involving the internal auditors, management and the Audit and Risk Committee, or designed to cover specific risks around fraud and corruption.

Departmental Public Expenditure

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department spent in (a) Birmingham, (b) Newcastle, (c) Wakefield, (d) Manchester, (e) Leeds, (f) Liverpool, (g) Coventry, (h) Bristol, (i) Sheffield, (j) Bradford, (k) Leicester and (l) Nottingham in the latest financial year for which figures are available. [85440]

Mr Simon Burns: The information requested is not collected centrally. Such information as is available is shown in the following table.

Primary care trusts (PCTs) net operating costs, 2010-11

City	Primary care trust	£000
Birmingham	Birmingham East and North PCT	762,260
	Heart of Birmingham Teaching PCT	589,000
	South Birmingham PCT	676,051
Newcastle	Newcastle PCT	527,308
Wakefield	Wakefield District PCT	651,925
Manchester	Manchester PCT	1,045,190
Leeds	Leeds PCT	1,303,910
Liverpool	Liverpool PCT	1,010,022
Coventry	Coventry Teaching PCT	585,246
Bristol	Bristol PCT	761,261
Sheffield	Sheffield PCT	988,515
Bradford	Bradford and Airedale PCT	914,092
Leicester	Leicester City PCT	548,802
Nottingham	Nottingham City PCT	554,422

Source:
Audited summarisation schedules, 2010-11.

This table shows the net operating costs of those PCTs which are geographically the most closely associated with the cities named in the question. These costs do not represent direct expenditure by the Department. PCT expenditure is funded from sums voted by Parliament to the Department. Once those funds are allocated, it is for PCTs to decide locally how the money should be used to address the health needs of their resident populations.

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much funding his Department has allocated to Birmingham in (a) ring-fenced and (b) non-ring fenced funding grants for each of the next three years. [85441]

Mr Simon Burns: The following table shows total revenue allocations made to primary care trusts (PCTs) in the Birmingham area for 2011-12.

PCT	2011-12 total revenue allocations (£ million)
Birmingham East and North	747.3
Heart of Birmingham Teaching	578.4
South Birmingham	650.2

PCT recurrent revenue allocations are not broken down by service or policy area. It is for PCTs to commission services to meet the health care needs of their local populations, taking account of local and national priorities.

PCT allocations for 2012-13 will be announced shortly. This will be the last round of allocations made to PCTs, as, subject to the passage of the Health and Social Care Bill, from 2013-14 the NHS Commissioning Board would be responsible for the allocation of resources to clinical commissioning groups, while the Department would make grants to local authorities for their public health responsibilities.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85658]

Anne Milton: In line with United Kingdom public procurement policy, the Department and its arm's length bodies' procurement policy is to award contracts on the basis of value for money, which means the optimum combination of cost and quality over the lifetime of the project. Public sector procurers are required to assess value for money from the perspective of the contracting authority using criteria linked to the subject matter of the contract, including compliance with the published specification.

Wider socio-economic benefits that do not accrue to the contracting authority cannot be taken into account at tender evaluation stage if they do not relate to the subject matter of a contract from the point of view of the contracting authority.

Doctors: Foreign Nationals

Dr Poulter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many non-UK doctors have been registered in (a) Suffolk Primary Care Trust and (b) England to provide out-of-hours care in each year since 2001; [85458]

(2) how many locum doctors have been registered in (a) Suffolk Primary Care Trust and (b) England to provide out-of-hours care in each year since 2001. [85459]

Mr Simon Burns: This information is not held centrally.

Doctors are not required to register specifically to provide out-of-hours care. Every doctor providing national health service primary care services must be on a Performers List held by a primary care trust (PCT). In England a doctor can only be on one PCT list at any one time.

E. coli

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of E. coli 0157 infection were reported in (a) 2006, (b) 2007, (c) 2008, (d) 2009, (e) 2010 and (f) 2011. [85948]

Anne Milton: The Health Protection Agency (HPA) carries out national microbiological and epidemiological surveillance of E. coli 0157. The HPA receives reports of laboratory human infections from microbiology laboratories throughout England and Wales and these data are collated and reported regularly in the HPA's Health Protection Report:

www.hpa.org.uk

The number of cases reported in England and Wales in the last five years are provided as annual and regional totals in Tables 1 and 2. Outbreak data are provided in Table 3. Data for 2011 will not be available until early 2012.

Table 1. E coli 0157 annual totals for England and Wales, 2006-10

[1] Food is defined as provided in Regulation (EC) No 178/2002; i.e. a food is any substance or product, whether processed, partially processed or unprocessed intended to be, or reasonably expected to be ingested by humans, including drinking water.

John McDonnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure the implementation of the recommendations of the Griffin report into the outbreak of E.coli 0157 at Godstone Farm, Surrey in 2009. [85955]

Anne Milton: Following publication in June 2010 of Professor George Griffin's report of the independent investigation into the outbreak of E. coli 0157 at Godstone Farm in 2009, the Godstone Multi Agency Implementation Committee (GMAIC) was established to agree and implement action in response to the recommendations made in the Griffin report.

GMAIC was a multi-agency cross-government group that included representatives from the open farms industry, public interest groups and the National Farmers Union and was chaired by the Health Protection Agency (HPA). GMAIC has completed its task, and a report of the actions it has taken against each of the 43 recommendations in the Griffin Report is published in full on the HPA's website:

www.hpa.org.uk/webw/HPAweb&HPAwebStandard/HPAweb_C/1317131725640

Epilepsy: Health Services

Paul Maynard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what variation there is in the funding of vagus nerve stimulation for refractory epilepsy by (a) primary care trusts and (b) specialised commissioning groups. [85379]

Paul Burstow: We have made no analysis of any variation in funding for vagus nerve stimulation for refractory epilepsy by primary care trusts and specialised commissioning groups.

Family Nurse Partnership Programme

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people worked in family nurse partnerships in each year since the inception of the family nurse partnership programme; [85811]

(2) how many families received assistance from family nurse partnerships in each year since the inception of the scheme. [86367]

Anne Milton: Since 2007, the approximate number of family nurses and family nurse partnership (FNP) supervisors working (full-time equivalents) in local FNP sites each year is 52 in 2007-08, 180 in 200-09, 270 in 2009-10, 295 in 2010-11. We expect there to be 430 by the end of 2011-12.

The total number of clients to have received assistance from the FNP programme to date (December 2011) is over 8,000. The approximate number of new families who have joined FNP each year from 2007 was 1,189 in 2007-08, 889 in 2008-09, 2,331 in 2009-10, 2,583 in 2010-11 and 1172 so far in 2011-12. Families receive assistance from FNP for up to two and a half years.

Foetal Alcohol Syndrome

James Wharton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department holds on the number of children with foetal alcohol spectrum disorders. [85486]

Anne Milton: The actual United Kingdom prevalence for either foetal alcohol syndrome or foetal alcohol spectrum disorder is unknown and there is no mechanism currently for national data collection.

Four Seasons Health Care

Liz Kendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with responsibility (1) with reference to comments made by the Minister for care services on Radio 4's "Today" Programme, 6 December 2011, on Southern Cross, what assurance process his Department has undertaken on the financial viability of Four Seasons Healthcare; and if he will publish the results of any such assurance process; [86176]

(2) what assurance his Department has received that Four Seasons Healthcare will seek to restructure its finances following its takeover of Southern Cross care homes; and when any such restructuring will be completed; [86177]

(3) how many times (a) Ministers and (b) officials of his Department have met senior management of Four Seasons Healthcare in the last 12 months. [86221]

Paul Burstow: The chairman and chief executive of Four Seasons Healthcare have met senior officials from the Department to explain the company's financial position twice in the last 12 months. We will continue to keep in close touch with the company. There have been no meetings between the company and Ministers to discuss this issue.

The company has explained its trading position and its plans to deal with its debt restructuring. It has stressed that its business model is very different from that of Southern Cross Healthcare. Unlike Southern Cross, it owns the majority of its homes. It also reports that it is operating profitably and is better able to cope with fluctuations in the market.

Four Seasons' historic debt matures in September 2012. The process to restructure the debt has begun and will be completed before the maturity date. The information provided by the company is commercially sensitive and it would not be appropriate to publish it.

At present, the Department does not have concerns about Four Seasons' financial position. However, we are keeping the situation under review.

It is for the Care Quality Commission (CQC) to register providers of adult social care services, including care homes. The registration process for care providers with the CQC requires that they declare their organisation takes all reasonable steps to remain financially viable. Where the CQC has concerns regarding a declaration, it will ask further questions to determine whether the provider is compliant with Regulation 13 of the CQC (Registration) Regulations 2009, which requires providers to ensure the "financial viability" of their enterprise, before deciding whether to register them.

Health Services: Cardiovascular System

Mr Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether NICE has any plans to publish a quality standard on the treatment of cardiovascular disease. [85556]

Mr Simon Burns: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) has already published quality standards on chronic heart failure and stroke, and is developing further quality standards on stable angina, acute coronary syndromes (including myocardial infarction), and thromboembolic diseases (including pulmonary embolism).

Further information on the quality standards NICE is developing can be found at:

www.nice.org.uk/aboutnice/qualitystandards/qualitystandards.jsp

NICE, jointly with the National Quality Board, recently ran an engagement exercise on the development of a library of quality standard topics for the national health service. The list of proposed quality standard topics published as part of this exercise included the following cardiovascular topics:

acute heart failure;

atrial fibrillation;

hypertension;

secondary care management of malignant hypertension;

lipid modification;

secondary prevention of myocardial infarction and cardiac rehabilitation; familial hypercholesterolemia;

risk assessment of modifiable cardiovascular risk factors;

peripheral vascular disease;

varicose veins; and abdominal aortic aneurysm.

The engagement exercise closed on 14 October 2011.

Further information on the engagement exercise can be found at:

www.nice.org.uk/getinvolved/currentniceconsultations/NQBEngagement.jsp

An announcement on next steps will be made once the responses have been analysed.

Health Services: Males

Mr Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has any plans to include sexual history in the men's health check. [85553]

Mr Simon Burns: The NHS Health Check programme is a national public health programme for men and women in England aged 40-74. The purpose of the programme is to identify an individual's risk of heart disease, stroke, kidney disease and diabetes, and for that risk to be managed through appropriate follow up. There are no current plans to include sexual history as part of a check.

Health Visitors: Regulation

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to reform the regulation of the health visitor role undertaken by the Nursing and Midwifery Council. [85815]

Anne Milton: The review to reform the regulation of the health visiting profession is the responsibility of the Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC).

The NMC announced on 19 October 2011, that regulation of the health visitor role is to be positively reformed across the United Kingdom, as part of a programme of work emphasising the vital role of health visitors and other specialist community public health nurses. The NMC will build on much of the work that has been led by the four UK health departments, including the work of the Health Visitor Programme. The Department will contribute to the review. We are not aware of a date for which the review is scheduled for completion.

Health Visitors: Training

Mr Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitor training commissions there were in each strategic health authority in 2011-12. [85812]

Anne Milton: The following table shows the number of health visitor training commissions planned by each strategic health authority (SHA) for 2011-12.

Health: Males

Mr Sanders: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will estimate the number of men that are likely to suffer from testosterone deficiency syndrome in 2020. [85554]

Anne Milton: Data on the number of men who suffer from testosterone deficiency syndrome are not currently held centrally and there are no plans at present to estimate the number of men that might suffer from the syndrome in 2020.

Hospitals

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which hospitals (a) he and (b) each other Minister in his Department has visited since May 2010; and on what date each such visit took place. [85547]

Anne Milton: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

KPMG

Andrew Gwynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has paid (a) KPMG and (b) McKinsey since May 2010; and for what services. [85469]

Anne Milton: The following tables set out information from the Department's central procurement system about the purchase order (PO) value the Department (includes core Department of Health and Connecting for Health) has awarded and paid KPMG and McKinsey since April 2010 (figures can only be provided for the full financial year 2010-11).

Malcolm Lader

Eric Ollerenshaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether Professor Malcolm Lader holds any official appointment within his Department or any of its Executive agencies or non-departmental public bodies; and whether he has contributed to its policy review on addiction to medicines. [85384]

Anne Milton: Professor Malcolm Lader is one of the experts and stakeholders whose advice has been sought in the Department's work on addiction to medicines. Professor Malcolm Lader does not hold any official appointment within the Department, its executive agencies or non-departmental public bodies.

Medical Certificates

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects GP practices to have access to systems allowing them to issue electronic fit notes. [85759]

Mr Simon Burns: We expect over half of the general practitioner (GP) practices in England to have access to electronic fit notes using their GP systems during spring 2012 with others to follow as the practices' system suppliers develop their systems to incorporate this functionality.

Mental Health Services: Hospital Beds

Andrew Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many acute mental health beds there are in each mental health trust in England; and how many such beds there are per 100,000 people. [85823]

Paul Burstow: The Department does not collect the total number of acute mental health beds in each mental health trust in England or the number of beds per 100,000 people.

However, the Department does collect data on the average daily number of mental health beds available in all trusts in England that are available overnight.

Figures for the latest quarter (July to September 2011) are in the following table. The table also shows population data for England, and the number of beds per 100,000 people for England. The population data cannot be broken down further.

Midwives: Manpower

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that the additional midwives the Government undertook to provide are being provided at a local level in the NHS; how many such midwives have already been provided; and how many he plans to provide in each year to 2015. [85490]

Anne Milton: The number of qualified midwives has increased by 2.2% (450) since May 2010. However, it is the responsibility of local NHS organisations to plan and deliver a work force appropriate to the needs of their local population, based on clinical need and sound evidence.

The Department has asked the Centre for Workforce Intelligence to undertake an in-depth study of the nursing and maternity work force starting 2011-12 in order to inform the future commissioning of training places. This study will help inform our plans for the future.

Neurology: Surgery

Paul Maynard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effect of interim funding decisions for neurosurgery made by specialised commissioning groups on (a) patients with rare clinical need and (b) their carers and families. [85378]

Anne Milton: During 2012-13, all money and accountability for the decision making processes for access to specialised services will still be under the control of primary care trusts (PCTs).

Commitments have been given to PCTs that no policy convergence will take place in 2012-13 without their knowledge and explicit support. In the case of access to neurosurgery, this will still be governed by local policy although work is being undertaken to identify differences in access to services.

A clinical, financial and public patient experience and engagement process is being developed to support policy convergence for 2013-14 onwards.

NHS: Negligence

Mr Slaughter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) whether the NHS Litigation Authority is operating a moratorium on settling large claims; and if he will make a statement; [85881]

(2) in how many cases the NHS Litigation Authority has admitted liability but voluntary interim payments have not been paid; and if he will make a statement; [85882]

(3) how many cases received by the NHS Litigation Authority have been resolved in terms of (a) liability and (b) damages and fees in each month since May 2010. [85883]

Mr Simon Burns: The NHS Litigation Authority (NHSLA) does not have a moratorium on settling large claims. The NHSLA is committed to appropriately resolving all claims as speedily as possible.

The NHSLA does not have data on the number of cases where it admitted liability but voluntary interim payments have not been paid, because the NHSLA does not have a record of all instances where voluntary interim payments were requested.

The number of clinical negligence claims settled by the NHSLA by month since May 2010 is shown in the following table. The table shows separately the number of settlements with no damages or costs and the number of settlements with damages and/or costs.

Palliative Care

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to draw to the attention of (a) GPs and (b) hospital trusts the recent advice of the National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence on the use of painkillers in palliative care. [85990]

Paul Burstow: The National Institute for Health and Clinical Excellence (NICE) is currently developing a clinical guideline on the safe and effective use of opioids in palliative care and has not yet issued final guidance to the national health service.

NICE has published draft guidance for consultation and stakeholders have until 6 January to comment on NICE'S provisional recommendations. The Institute currently expects to publish its final guidance in May 2012.

Tony Baldry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure that patients and their relatives are informed by clinicians when hospital trusts are placed on the Liverpool care pathway. [85991]

Paul Burstow: The Liverpool care pathway (LCP) was developed by the Marie Curie Palliative Care Institute in Liverpool as an approach to support the delivery of good care in the last days of life. The Department of Health is not responsible for the LCP, but recommends it as good practice.

Before putting someone on the LCP, senior doctors and nurses involved in the patient's care should agree that death is very likely to be imminent and that being placed on the pathway will be beneficial to the patient. The LCP documentation is clear that a decision to use the pathway should always involve the patient and/or family members.

The National Care of the Dying Audit—Hospitals, based on the standards of care within the LCP and run by the Marie Curie Palliative Care Institute in collaboration with the Royal College of Physicians, assesses the use of the LCP and the quality of care provision. This audit is one of those that must be reported in providers' Quality Accounts.

The report of the third round of the audit notes that in 94% of documented cases discussions explaining the use of the LCP were held with relatives or carers. However, as part of the report's recommendations, it stresses that the decision that a patient is dying and in the last hours or days of life should be discussed with patients, where appropriate, and always with relatives or carers.

Palliative Care: Community Hospitals

Tom Blenkinsop: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has made any assessment of the relative importance of palliative care, rehabilitation and post-operative and respite care being delivered in local community hospitals. [85376]

Paul Burstow: The Government are committed to increasing care and access to treatment in the community. Local community hospitals provide a vital community resource to support patients in need of rehabilitation, recuperation and respite care—preventing unnecessary admissions to hospitals and supporting a rapid return to independence and good health.

Subject to the passage of the Health and Social Care Bill through Parliament, power and responsibility for commissioning services will be devolved to more local clinical commissioning groups, which will mean that the design of patient pathways and local services is always clinically-led and based on more effective dialogue and partnership with hospital specialists.

Prescriptions

Debbie Abrahams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many prescriptions were issued by (a) nurse independent prescribers, (b) community practitioner nurse prescribers and (c) doctors in each of the last 12 months for which figures are available. [85491]

Mr Simon Burns: Information is not collected centrally on the number of prescriptions issued. Information is available for the number of items prescribed and subsequently dispensed in primary care. The following table provides information, by category of prescriber, for the latest 12-month period.

Prescription-items issued by category of prescriber in England, and dispensed, in the community, in the United Kingdom, from October 2010 until September 2011

Radiation Exposure

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what costs have been incurred by the Health Protection Agency following the incident at the Fukushima nuclear plant in respect of collaboration with (a) organisations involved with civil contingencies, (b) the World Health Organisation, (c) the International Atomic Energy Agency and (d) the UN Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation; and from what budget any such costs have been paid. [85789]

Anne Milton: The total costs of staff time incurred by the Health Protection Agency (HPA) in connection with the accident at the Fukushima nuclear plant up until 8 December 2011 were £313,675 of which £2,459 were in support of the United Nations Scientific Committee on the Effects of Atomic Radiation (UNSCEAR), and £50,843 were in support of the World Health Organization (WHO) including travel costs to Geneva.

The remaining costs were incurred supporting the United Kingdom national response. No direct costs were incurred supporting the International Atomic Energy Agency. Ongoing support is currently provided to UNSCEAR and WHO. All of these costs were paid from the HPA Grant in Aid as part of the HPA's UK health protection responsibilities.

Steria

Keith Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts his Department has awarded to Steria since May 2010; and what the (a) purpose, (b) monetary value and (c) net worth was of each contract. [85476]

Anne Milton: The Department's central procurement system holds information on the following purchase orders (POs) relating to contracts awarded between May 2010 and November 2011. The following table sets out the date the PO was awarded, the service description for each transaction and the total value of the PO when awarded.

Date purchase order awarded	Description of services	Monetary value (£)	Net worth (£)
15 June 2010	Implementation Management for the e-Learning for Health Programme	33,120.00	33,120.00

ENERGY AND CLIMATE CHANGE

Climate Research Unit

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what recent discussions he has had with representatives of the Climate Research Unit. [86249]

Gregory Barker: The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change has not had any discussions with representatives of the Climatic Research Unit at the university of East Anglia.

All DECC ministerial meetings are published on a quarterly basis on the Department's website at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/accesstoinform/registers/registers.aspx

Carbon Emissions

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the monetary value was of the (a) Carbon Emission Reduction Target and (b) Community Energy Saving Programme in (i) 2008, (ii) 2009, (iii) 2010 and (iv) 2011; and what the monetary value of such schemes will be in (A) 2012 and (B) 2013. [85910]

Gregory Barker: These obligations are set in carbon saving terms and my Department does not require or collect data on actual expenditure. We do however make estimates of costs in the Impact Assessments published when the obligations are put in place or varied. We have estimated that obligated parties would need to invest around £5,000 million to meet their CERT targets (over the period April 2008 to December 2012) and around £350 million to meet CESP (October 2009 to December 2012).

CERT and CESP will be replaced by the Energy Company Obligation (ECO) in late 2012. As part of the recent Green Deal consultation we have proposed targets for ECO which we estimate would cost around £1,300 million per year.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what progress he has made on his inquiry into the outcome of the European Parliament vote of 5 July 2011 on carbon emissions targets; and when he plans to publish the outcome of the inquiry. [86520]

Gregory Barker: There has been no inquiry by my officials into the European Parliament's vote on EU greenhouse gas emission reductions, which took place on 5 July 2011.

Carbon Sequestration

Tom Greatrex: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what the expected timetable is for the development of carbon capture and storage projects; and if he will make a statement. [85898]

Charles Hendry: We will be launching an accelerated process for the selection of CCS projects as soon as possible. The Department is holding an Industry Day on 16 December to provide further information on the CCS programme. Sponsors and developers of proposed CCS projects, power generators, CO_2 transport infrastructure providers, oil and gas field operators and independent operators, and CO_2 capture technology providers are invited to contact the Office of Carbon Capture and Storage if they wish to attend.

Tom Greatrex: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with Scottish and Southern Energy on the timetable for the development of carbon capture and storage at Peterhead. [85899]

Charles Hendry: Ministers hold regular meetings with industry to discuss a range of energy and climate change issues. In addition, my officials hold regular discussions on specific issues relating to the development of carbon capture and storage. Officials from the Office of Carbon Capture and Storage met with representatives of a number of CCS project developers recently, including SSE, to discuss the development of the UK CCS Programme and will be holding an Industry Day on 16 December to provide further information on the selection process. We will not be making decisions about which projects to take forward before this process has been completed.

Tom Greatrex: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much Government funding will be provided for carbon capture and storage demonstration projects in (a) 2011-12, (b) 2012-13, (c) 2013-14 and (d) 2014-15. [85900]

Charles Hendry: We have made it clear that £1 billion is available to support CCS projects. We expect projects to come forward in this spending review period and for expenditure to be committed as part of that process. The detailed profile of spend will be determined by the projects selected and when they require funding. We and our partners also expect to invest £125 million in CCS R&D by 2015.

Carbon Sequestration: Finance

Mr Weir: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 6 December 2011, Official Report, column 211W, on carbon sequestration: finance, when the competition for the carbon capture and storage fund will close; and over what timetable he expects the carbon capture and storage competition fund to be distributed. [86233]

Charles Hendry: We will be launching an accelerated process for the selection of CCS projects as soon as possible. The detailed profile of spend will be determined by the projects selected and when they require funding.

Climate Change: International Co-operation

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what proportion of the funding he announced for climate finance in Africa in his speech at the Grantham Institute on 24 November 2011 consists of funding previously announced by his Department. [86007]

Gregory Barker: I referred to a package of UK support to help Africa adapt to the impacts of climate change and move to low carbon development paths in a speech at the Grantham Institute on 24 November 2011. I announced the full details of this package in Durban on 6 December 2011.

The package is all funded out of an existing funding commitment—the UK's £2.9 billion International Climate Fund, which was announced in the 2010 spending review.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if the funding he announced to finance climate change adaptation and mitigation in his speech at the Grantham Institute on 24 November 2011 will meet the transparency criteria promoted by the International Aid Transparency Initiative. [86008]

Gregory Barker: Yes. This Government are committed to being open and transparent on how UK climate finance is spent. I announced a package of programmes to finance climate change adaptation and mitigation in Durban on 6 December. All of the programmes contribute to UK Official Development Assistance (ODA) and information will be published to meet the transparency standards promoted by the International Aid Transparency Initiative.

Rushanara Ali: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps he plans to take at the Durban conference on climate change to secure global commitment to the Cancun summit aim of providing US $100 billion funding for climate change adaptation and mitigation in the developing world. [86009]

Gregory Barker: The UK has been working with EU member states and international partners at the Durban conference to make progress on long-term climate finance, to ensure that developed countries meet their commitment to mobilise $100 billion of public and private climate finance per year by 2020. Specifically, we aim to make progress on the recommendations of the Advisory Group on Climate Finance (AGF) and are looking to build on the work undertaken by the World Bank for G20 Finance Ministers.

Food Labelling

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible plan to implement calorie labelling on menus and display boards. [85856]

Gregory Barker: DECC receives its catering services through a contract procured by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). Guideline Daily Amounts (GDAs) labels, which provide information on calories, fats, saturated fats, salt and sugar, are provided on foods and have been rolled out across the DEFRA catering contract, which includes DECC.

In relation to those DECC non departmental public bodies who have catering contracts:

the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority is planning to implement the labelling of calories on menus in the new year.

the Coal Authority's external catering services provider is developing menus and display boards for main courses on sale which will show calorie labelling. The menus and display boards will be available in the authority's canteen as from February 2012.

Huw Irranca-Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps the food and catering services in (a) his Department and (b) public bodies for which he is responsible are taking to ensure the countries of origin of foods are labelled on its menus and display boards. [85857]

Gregory Barker: DECC receives its catering services through a contract procured by the Department for Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA). The catering contractor has signed up to the industry principles, agreed with DEFRA, for country of origin labelling for meat and dairy products. The country of origin is identified on menus by indicating either UK (British), EU or global.

In relation to those DECC non-departmental public bodies who have contracts covering catering:

the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority is planning to implement country of origin labelling on menus in the new year; and the Coal Authority's food and catering services are provided by an external company under contract. The countries of origin are not displayed. The majority of the food provided is sourced from the United Kingdom. The remainder comprises fresh salad produce, tinned tomatoes and other produce, the origins of which will change during the year.

Departmental Flags

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many flags his Department (a) owns and (b) maintains; and at what cost in the last 12 months. [86250]

Gregory Barker: The Department of Energy and Climate Change has one standard Union flag on one of its buildings at 55 Whitehall.

In the last 12 months, the Department has not incurred any costs in relation to the flag.

Departmental Internet

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what social media presence his Department has. [86244]

Gregory Barker: The Department has a social media presence on Twitter, Flickr, YouTube and Facebook.

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many unique hits his Department's website received in each of the last 12 months. [86253]

Gregory Barker: The Department's website's unique hits for each of the last 12 months are as follows:

	Website hits
2011
November	217,726
October	210,974
September	126,156
August	118,362
July	131,992
June	134,867
May	129,014
April	112,181
March	174,855
February	118,218
January	108,999
2010
December	94,428

Departmental Manpower

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many staff of his Department are aged over (a) 55 and (b) 65 years. [86246]

Gregory Barker: As of 30 September 2011, the Department of Energy and Climate Change employed (a) 121 people who are aged over 55 years and (b) less than five who are aged over 65 years.

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many staff in his Department previously worked for a political party. [86614]

Gregory Barker: The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) does not hold details of the previous employment of its staff on a central database. To search individual records to find this information would incur disproportionate costs.

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many people were working for his Department on (a) 11 May 2010 and (b) 8 December 2011. [86626]

Gregory Barker: The number of civil servants employed by the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) on specific dates is shown in the following table.

	Civil servants (including senior civil servants)
31 May 2010	1,018
30 November 2011	1,228

The number shown above are quoted as full-time equivalent.

Departmental Official Hospitality

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what receptions and events have been hosted by his Department since May 2010, including those sponsored by a third party. [84192]

Gregory Barker: DECC uses a wide range of methods and channels to ensure stakeholders and the public are engaged with its policies. This includes hosting events itself, and where appropriate jointly with stakeholders, across the UK to maximise reach and value for money.

However, a comprehensive list of all receptions and events hosted by DECC since May 2010 is not held centrally and to assemble the information would entail disproportionate cost.

Engagement activity including events is reported regularly on the Department's website at www.decc.gov.uk

Departmental Pay

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many staff in his Department receive salaries over £65,000 per year. [86624]

Gregory Barker: There were 69 civil servants in the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) receiving a salary of more than £65,000 as at 30 September 2011.

The salary figures used are base salary and do not include any allowances or non-consolidated performance related pay.

Press Releases

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many press releases his Department has issued in the last 12 months. [86257]

Gregory Barker: DECC has issued 115 press releases in the last 12 months.

Departmental Responsibilities

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85655]

Gregory Barker: As part of its standard terms and conditions, the Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) requires its suppliers to provide goods and services in accordance with good industry practice and legal requirements. This includes consideration of areas with a social dimension such as health, safety and welfare and the Equality Act.

Policy Reviews

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what departmental policy reviews his Department has undertaken since 6 May 2010; and on what date each such review (a) was announced and (b) is expected to publish its findings. [85876]

Gregory Barker: The following table sets out, in order of date announced, the policy reviews announced and undertaken by the Department of Energy and Climate Change since 6 May 2010, the date each was announced, and the date each was published, or is expected to be published.

Policy review	Date announced	Date published/expected to publish
Review of the CRC Energy Efficiency Scheme	27 July 2010	Headline results of the review were published in June 2011. A formal consultation on the details will be published in spring 2012.
Review of Climate Change Agreements	27 July 2010	The consultation was published in September 2011 and the Government response is expected in the new year.
Review of Ofgem	27 July 2010	A summary of conclusions was published 19 May 2011. The final report was published 12 July 2011.
Delivery Review	27 July 2010	Published 19 May 2011.

Policy review	Date announced	Date published/expected to publish
Fuel Poverty Review	HMG announced a review of the definition of fuel poverty as part of the comprehensive spending review, 20 October 2010. The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change appointed Professor Hills to carry out a review of the current definition of fuel poverty on 14 March 2011.	Professor Hills published his Interim Report 19 October 2011. The final report is due to be presented to Government in early 2012.
Review of the Feed-in Tariffs Scheme	7 February 2011	Findings on the fast-track element of the review were published on 9 June 2011. Overall findings from the comprehensive review will be announced during the first half of 2012.
Low Carbon Innovation Delivery Review	21 March 2011	Outcomes will be published on the DECC website prior to the new year.

Drugs

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what his Department's policy is on mandatory drug testing of its employees. [86251]

Gregory Barker: The Department of Energy and Climate Change does not have a policy of undertaking mandatory drug testing of its employees.

Drugs: Offences

Andrew Rosindell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many officials of his Department have been disciplined for drug offences in the last 12 months for which information is available. [86258]

Gregory Barker: There have been no cases in the last 12 months where employees of the Department of Energy and Climate Change have been subject to disciplinary procedures for drugs offences.

Energy: Meters

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans he has to encourage the uptake of smart meter time-of-use tariffs. [86074]

Gregory Barker: The Government's smart meter technical specifications will mandate energy suppliers to install meters with the functionality to support a range of time-of-use tariffs.

Planned changes to the settlement system together with half-hourly data from smart meter readings will enable energy suppliers to benefit to a greater extent from lower wholesale market prices during periods of off-peak demand. We expect suppliers to incentivise customers to shift energy demand to off-peak periods through developing and promoting attractive time-of-use tariffs.

Energy: Pensioners

Laura Sandys: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the number of pensioners who will receive the guaranteed £120 rebate on their energy bills under the warm home discount scheme in each (a) region, (b) local authority and (c) parliamentary constituency. [86392]

Gregory Barker: More than 600,000 of the poorest pensioners will receive a core group discount of £120 on their electricity bills this winter. Regional, local authority, or constituency breakdowns for these data are not available.

Energy: Prisons

Luciana Berger: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change if he will estimate the number of jobs that would be created in the energy efficiency sector if all prisons were upgraded to an Energy Performance Certificate grade (a) A, (b) B and (c) C level. [86077]

Gregory Barker: We estimate that Government programmes to promote energy efficiency in homes, businesses and the public sector will support 65,000 insulation sector jobs in 2015. However, job creation figures specific to energy efficiency improvements in the prison sector are not available.

Green Deal Scheme

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 22 June 2011, Official Report, column 338W, on energy: housing, for what reason the recommendations of his Department's joint working group with the Ministry of Defence on improving the energy efficiency of service family accommodation were not set out in the consultation document on the Green Deal published this autumn. [85867]

Gregory Barker: The two Departments are still considering whether Green Deal can work in the particular context of service family accommodation, and the alternatives that may be available if not. We were therefore unable to include recommendations in the consultation document, but we will confirm the recommendations next year. None the less, in the consultation, we welcome any comments on the impact of Green Deal and the ECO on particular groups.

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what recent discussions he has had with the Green Deal Finance Company consortium on the potential for Green Deal-backed securities to reduce the cost of Green Deal finance. [86075]

Gregory Barker: The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change and I met with representatives from the Green Deal Finance Company on 2 November 2011 to understand their proposals for providing low cost finance to Green Deal Providers. The Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change also spoke by phone to a member of the consortium on 24 November 2011 following the launch of the Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation consultation.

Alex Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change for what reason he has set the period for the Green Deal and Energy Company Obligation consultation at eight weeks. [86083]

Gregory Barker: The consultation length was set for eight weeks on the basis of careful consideration. The tight timetable for delivering the Green Deal legal framework to provide business certainty was the primary reason. This has been accompanied by a comprehensive stakeholder engagement programme in advance of and during the consultation.

In line with best practice, we are also providing additional means for people to express their views, including a dedicated phone line, postal address, e-mail address, blog with commenting function and web chat with officials.

Nuclear Installations: EU Law

Caroline Lucas: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what steps he has taken to implement European Council Directive 2009/71/Euratom of 25 June 2009 establishing a Community framework for the nuclear safety of nuclear installations; what steps he has taken in response to infringement proceedings by the European Commission against the UK for non-compliance with Directive 2009/71/Euratom; and if he will make a statement. [85216]

Charles Hendry: The UK notified the European Commission (EC) on 19 July 2011 that we had given effect to the Council Directive 2009/71/Euratom using the existing UK regulatory regime. The EC has sought further information on two aspects of the UK's implementation—the provision of a correlation table and the implementation of the provisions in Gibraltar. A correlation table was provided on 19 July 2011 even though the directive does not require it. We are liaising with the Gibraltarian Government to ensure the necessary legislation is put in place even though there are no nuclear facilities on Gibraltar to which this directive would apply. It is expected that this work will be completed in early 2012. The UK Government will shortly be writing to the EC to confirm that a correlation table has already been provided and to inform it of progress with implementation in Gibraltar.

Nuclear Power

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the potential costs to (a) his Department and (b) the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority of information gathering on (i) the market for mixed oxide fuel, (ii) the availability of reactors in which it can be burned and (iii) the costs and timescales for procuring services or facilities. [85788]

Charles Hendry: Support to the Government on the development of policy on plutonium management is part of the Nuclear Decommissioning Authority's (NDA) approved strategy. It is estimated that DECC and the NDA will spend around £3 million to £5 million to gather all of the information required throughout the next phases of the programme. Costs are anticipated to be met from within the existing budgets.

Renewable Energy

Glyn Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what plans he has to promote (a) anaerobic digestion and (b) small hydro developments in Wales. [86189]

Gregory Barker: We are promoting anaerobic digestion and hydropower across the UK, including Wales, through the provision of financial incentives.

We are supporting (a) anaerobic digestion through the feed-in tariffs (FITs) scheme and the renewables obligation (RO) which support small scale and large scale electricity generation respectively; and the renewable heat incentive (RHI) which supports the production of heat and the injection of biomethane into the gas grid.

We are supporting the development of (b) small hydropower in Wales through FITs (<50kWs) and through FITs and the RO (>50kWs). Since 2009 the number of new hydro schemes licensed in Wales has increased nearly three times.

In addition, DECC continues to work closely with the Environment Agency, which has streamlined its permitting process and is reviewing its Good Practice Guide. DECC is consulting, before the end of this year, on accreditation for those small hydro schemes seeking access to feed-in tariffs. DECC also provides updated information on a range of alternative funding models for community hydro projects on DECC's "Community Energy Online":

http://ceo.decc.gov.uk/en/ceol/cms/about_ceih/economics_fund/economics_fund.aspx

Additionally, in January 2010, the Welsh Government launched the Ynni'r Fro programme, a scheme to support community scale renewable energy projects in Wales. So far, the programme has supported eight anaerobic digestion and 65 hydro projects in Wales. The Environment Agency Wales and the Forestry Commission Wales have both carried out detailed surveys of potential hydro sites in Wales. This information is being utilised by the Ynni'r Fro team to match up the sites with communities interested in taking hydro schemes forward.

Glyn Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what discussions he has had with private sector firms on proposals to develop (a) tidal power, (b) shale gas and (c) nuclear power in Wales. [86190]

Charles Hendry: All formal ministerial meetings with external organisations are published on a quarterly basis and can be found on the Department's website via the following link:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/accesstoinform/registers/ministermtgs/ministermtgs.aspx

Renewable Energy: Feed-in Tariffs

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what estimate he has made of the cost per tonne of carbon dioxide equivalent emissions saved through the feed-in tariff system in 2010-11. [84106]

Gregory Barker: We cannot currently make this estimate, as generation data for Year 1 of the FITs scheme have not yet been collated by Ofgem.

Barry Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change (1) what proportion of the spending envelope for the feed-in tariff for each year of the current spending review period is allocated to projects accredited between 1 April 2010 and 31 October 2011; [84388]

(2) what proportion of the spending envelope for the feed-in tariff for each year of the current spending review period is allocated for new projects accredited in that year. [84389]

Gregory Barker: New installations in any year are not specifically allocated a proportion of the feed-in tariffs (FITs) budget. The available amount in the budget for new installations in any year is impossible to predict in advance, as it will depend on the level of installations in previous years. This is because the budget is cumulative, and must cover the cost of projects accredited in previous years of the scheme as well as new projects.

We estimate the proportion of the levies control framework spending envelope taken up by projects accredited up to 31 October to be as follows:

Costs to consumers	2011-12	2012-13	2013-14	2014-15	Total
£ million, nominal undiscounted
FITs costs (rounded)	110	215	220	230	775
FITs budget (revised)	94	196	328	446	1,064
Costs as percentage of revised budget (rounded)	120	110	65	50	70
FITs budget (original)	80	161	269	357	867
Costs as percentage of original budget (rounded)	140	135	80	65	90

The table above shows the committed spend on FITs as a proportion of both the original and revised FITs spending limits. The spending limit for FITs as originally published—the fourth line of the table—referred to projected additional expenditure over and above the baseline of installations of less than 5 MW that would have been deployed in the absence of the FITs scheme (because some of those small-scale installations would have come forward under the renewables obligation (RO)).

In the revised estimate of the FITs spending limit—the second line of the table—that baseline has been incorporated into the spending limit for FITs, as we judge that the small scale installations are more likely to take up FITs in preference to the RO. The effect of this adjustment is to increase the FITs spending envelope (as shown in the table) and reduce the RO spending envelope by the same amount, compared with the original spending limits published for each scheme. This is a technical adjustment to the published spending limits which merely provides a more accurate picture of the money that was always available for each of the two schemes. We have not made more subsidy available overall, but DECC still has flexibility on how it meets the overall levies control framework as long as expenditure as a whole is controlled i.e. overspend on one policy can be balanced by underspend in another.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change when he plans to publish his Department's response to the comprehensive feed-in tariff review phase 1. [85779]

Gregory Barker: We plan to announce the outcome of the current consultation on feed-in tariffs for solar photovoltaics towards the end of January, and by 8 February 2012 at the latest, in order to make it possible to change rates from 1 April 2012. We are aware that the industry needs certainty as soon as possible, and will strive to announce at the earliest opportunity.

Solar Power

Zac Goldsmith: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change what recent estimate his Department has made of the number of people employed by solar photovoltaic manufacturing companies based in the UK. [85253]

Gregory Barker: It is difficult to accurately estimate, and forecast, number of jobs associated with any single technology or sector, such as solar PV. However, there are a range of methodologies that can, and are, being used to provide an indication; these inevitably lead to a range of estimates being calculated.

We estimate that, based on the number of solar photovoltaic (PV) installations by the end of October 2011, around 8,000 to 14,000 gross full-time equivalent (FTE) jobs have been supported by solar PV since the introduction of the feed-in tariffs (FITs) scheme. The total number of people doing some solar PV work is likely to be higher than this range because those who are involved in solar PV installations are also likely to undertake other tasks linked to their employment. In addition, this estimate includes manufacturing jobs among a range of other types.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 21 November 2011, Official Report, column 44W, on solar power: feed-in tariffs, what the evidential basis is for the estimate that 1,000 to 10,000 gross additional full-time equivalent jobs could be created in the solar sector in the three years to 2014-15. [85776]

Gregory Barker: It is difficult to accurately estimate, and forecast, numbers of jobs associated with any single technology or sector, such as solar PV. However, there are a range of methodologies that can, and are, being used to provide an indication, although these inevitably lead to a range of estimates being calculated.

The range of 1,000 to 10,000 gross full-time equivalent jobs supported by solar PV is calculated by applying estimates of the time taken for various tasks associated with those installations by industry and independent consultants to projected installations between 2012-13 and 2014-15. They are then converted to a full-time equivalent (FTE) basis. The wide range around the estimate is largely due to the uncertainty surrounding how the energy efficiency proposals could affect future take-up of solar PV.

Solar Power: Feed-in Tariffs

Mr Brady: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how many households and businesses in each region of the UK have installed solar panels utilising the Government-subsidised feed-in tariff scheme. [80572]

Gregory Barker: The number of domestic and non-domestic solar photovoltaic (PV) installations registered for feed-in tariffs by region, as at end of September 2011[1], are:

Region	Domestic PV installations	Percentage of domestic PV installations	Non-domestic[3] PV installations	Percentage non-domestic PV installations
East Midlands	6,943	9	107	7
East of England	9,470	12	127	9
London	2,364	3	103	7
North East	1,532	2	54	4
North West	5,042	7	102	7
South East	14,642	19	168	12
South West	14,251	19	271	19
West Midlands	5,311	7	135	9
Yorkshire and the Humber	8,471	11	86	6
England	68,026	88	1,153	80
Wales	4,135	5	88	6
Scotland	4,221	5	56	4
Unallocated[2]	584	1	148	10
Total	76,966	100	1,445	100

[1] Data are sourced from the Central FIT Register maintained by Ofgem. The register is continually being updated and revised, so statistical reports extracted at a later date may not exactly match the totals presented here. Local authority data can be found on the DECC website http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/statistics/energy_stats/source/electricity/electricity.aspx titled 'Feed-in Tariff Capacity (ET5.6)'.

[2] Schemes that could not be allocated at local authority level.

[3] Non-domestic installations include industrial, commercial and community installations.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 22 November 2011, Official Report, columns 315-6W, on renewable energy: feed-in tariffs, if he will make it his policy to ensure that all solar PV installations with a commissioning date before 12 December 2011 are eligible for the existing tariff level. [85777]

Gregory Barker: An installation becomes eligible for feed-in tariffs (FITs) from its eligibility date. The term "eligibility date" is defined in condition 33 of the standard conditions of electricity supply licences, and is the latter of either:

(a) the date on which the installation is commissioned; or

(b) the date on which a valid application for FITs has been received by either Ofgem (in the case of solar photovoltaic (PV) installations with a declared net capacity of over 50kW) or a FIT licensee (in the case of solar PV installations with a declared net capacity of up to 50kW).

Our consultation on FITs for solar photovoltaics (PV) proposes that new tariffs will be implemented from 1 April 2012 but will apply to all new PV installations with an eligibility date on or after a proposed "reference date" of 12 December 2011. For the majority of solar PV installations, the eligibility date will be the date on which a valid application is received by the FITs licensee, normally the applicant's electricity supplier.

Caroline Flint: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change pursuant to the answer of 25 November 2011, Official Report, column 616W, on feed-in tariffs, whether the second consultation on the comprehensive review will seek views on further changes to feed-in tariffs for solar PV. [85868]

Gregory Barker: Phase 2 of the consultation on the comprehensive review will consider all non-solar photovoltaic tariffs and administrative aspects of the feed-in tariffs scheme, including potential cost control measures for all technologies.

Taxation: Nuclear Power

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change whether he has had discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the potential introduction of a tax on the revenue generated by nuclear power stations. [85817]

Charles Hendry: Tax is a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer. DECC Ministers have regular conversations with HM Treasury Ministers on a wide range of issues. As was the case with previous Administrations, it is not the Government's practice to provide details of such discussions.

UK Global Threat Reduction Programme

Paul Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy and Climate Change how much his Department has contributed to the UK Global Threat Reduction Programme in each of the last three financial years; on what aspects of the programme such contributions are spent; and what the programme has published in each of the last three financial years. [77287]

Charles Hendry: The UK Global Threat Reduction Programme (GTRP) forms an important element of the UK's counter-proliferation strategy. It delivers the UK contribution to the G8 Global Partnership against the Spread of Weapons and Materials of Mass Destruction, a $20 billion ten-year programme agreed at the G8 Summit at Kananaskis, Canada in 2002 with an initial focus on the nuclear and chemical weapons legacies of the former Soviet Union.

The Department of Energy and Climate Change (DECC) is responsible for implementing the nuclear and radiological parts of the GTRP. The Ministry of Defence (MOD) manages the chemical and biological elements of the programme. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) holds the overall policy responsibility.

For each of the last three financial years (2008-09; 2009-10; 2010-11) the GTRP had a ring fenced budget of £36.5 million per annum, allocated to DECC for both the DECC and MOD programmes. In 2010-11 DECC contributed an additional £9 million to GTRP, in order that the UK fully met its share of the G8 pledge to the April 2011 Chernobyl pledging conference.

Over the course of the Global Partnership, the UK has developed a mature portfolio of programmes aimed at:

- improving the security of nuclear materials;
- dealing with the Soviet nuclear submarine legacy in North West Russia;
- the destruction of Russia's chemical weapons stocks;
- reducing the proliferation risk posed by unemployed former Soviet nuclear weapon scientists by supporting the creation of alternative sustainable employment.

Further details of the annual expenditure breakdown across all GTRP programmes can be found in the GTRP annual reports for 2008 (published spring 2009), 2009 (published spring 2010) and 2010 (published spring 2011), copies of which were placed in the House Library and which can also be found on the DECC website:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/meeting_energy/en_security/nonprolif/global_threat/global_threat.aspx

In addition to these three annual reports, in late 2009, DECC published a completion report on its Nuclear Safety Programme, which closed in early 2009. In spring 2010 DECC published the findings of an independent external impact evaluation of the UK-funded "Social and Economic Consequences of Nuclear Power Plant Closure" programme, which closed in 2007. Both these reports are available online at:

http://www.decc.gov.uk/en/content/cms/meeting_energy/en_security/nonprolif/global_threat/reports/reports.aspx

WORK AND PENSIONS

Apprentices

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of 16 to 24-year-olds likely to participate in the Youth Contract in (a) the East Midlands and (b) Leicester City. [85783]

Chris Grayling: Over the coming weeks we will be working with Work programme providers, employers and key stakeholders to develop the detail of the recently announced Youth Contract.

Overall the Youth Contract will provide:

- 160,000 wage incentives, worth £2,275 each, available through the Work programme;
- an extra 250,000 work experience or sector-based work academy places over the next three years, taking the total to at least 100,000 a year;
- at least 20,000 extra incentive payments worth £1,500 each for employers to take on young people as apprentices;
- extra support through Jobcentre Plus for all 18 to 24-year-olds; and
- a new £150 million programme to provide support to some of our most vulnerable 16 to 17-year-olds who are not in employment, education or training.

No estimates for participation at local levels have yet been made.

Departmental Assets

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assets his Department owns in Birmingham; and what is the estimated value of each such asset. [85542]

Chris Grayling: This response is based on the definition of assets referring to departmental buildings and their contents. Since 1998 the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) occupies the majority of its accommodation across the country under a 20-year private finance initiative (PFI) known as the PRIME Contract. Under the terms of this PFI the Department leases back fully furnished and serviced accommodation from its private sector partner Telereal Trillium. This covers a variety of building and facility management services. Therefore, the Department does not own building assets in Birmingham, or in any other part of the country.

Design Services

Dan Jarvis: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how much his Department has spent on design in respect of (a) logos, (b) buildings, (c) advertising, (d) stationery and (e) campaigns in the last year for which figures are available. [80201]

Chris Grayling: DWP spent £1,614,326 in 2010-11 on design, editorial and branding with regard to publicity and marketing carried out by DWP Communications.

In respect of buildings design, since 1998 the Department for Work and Pensions occupies the majority of its accommodation under a private finance initiative (PFI) known as the PRIME Contract. Under the terms of this PFI the Department leases back fully serviced accommodation from its private sector partner Telereal Trillium. This covers the provision of a variety of building and facility management services including the capital expenditure projects (CAPEX) where buildings require alterations to meet changing business requirements. Telereal Trillium's estimate of design costs incurred on CAPEX projects during 2010-11 is £900,000 excluding VAT.

Departmental Information Communications

Pete Wishart: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many (a) press officers, (b) internal communications officers, (c) external communications officers, (d) communications strategy officers and (e) other positions with a communications remit were employed by (i) his Department, (ii) its agencies and (iii) each non-departmental public body sponsored by his Department on the most recent date for which figures are available. [84187]

Chris Grayling: Since the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Angus (Mr Weir) on 9 February 2011, Official Report, columns 318-19W, the Department has reduced communications staff by 24%. As a minimum the number will reduce by a further 13% by March 2015.

Department for Work and Pensions Communications Directorate[1]

	Number
Press Officers (including Regional Press)	21
Internal Communications Officers	47

Departmental Pay

Justin Tomlinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the cost to the public purse was of Christmas bonus payments in each of the last five years; and what proportion was spent on administration of the payment. [84619]

The amounts shown exclude the cost of administrating the Christmas bonus payment as this information is not available; the table only shows the actual money paid to customers.

					£ million
	2006-07	2007-08	2008-09	2009-10	2010-11
Christmas bonus—contributory	126	127	823	121	122
Christmas bonus—non-contributory	19	20	221	32	32
Total	145	147	1,044	154	155

Notes:
1. Christmas bonus was increased to £70 in 2008-09, for one year only; in all other years it was £10.
2. The majority of Christmas bonus payments are made with a qualifying benefit and, as such, it is not possible to disaggregate the administration cost. However, these costs are minimal as the significant majority of payments are automated.

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions whether any senior staff in (a) his Department and (b) its Executive agencies and non-departmental public bodies are paid by means of payments to a limited company in lieu of a salary; and if he will publish his policy on such payments. [85068]

Chris Grayling: The Department's policy is that salaries are paid into employees' bank accounts.

Some agency workers are deployed to provide short-term cover for absence or as specialist contractors providing specific expertise that is not available in-house and in these cases, payments may be made to limited companies in lieu of a salary.

There are currently three senior staff (senior civil service level) working in the Department on an agency basis, one in DWP and two in the Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission, who are paid via Capita Resourcing Ltd. Capita Resourcing Ltd provides a managed service under contract for the supply of contingent labour to DWP and other Government Departments.

In the Office for Nuclear Regulation, an internal agency of the Health and Safety Executive, two senior staff are paid by means of payments to limited companies in lieu of a salary.

Procurement

Stewart Hosie: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions which services his Department has outsourced in each of the last five years. [84236]

Chris Grayling: The Department for Work and Pensions have specifically outsourced the following services:

Contract identifier	Contract name	Service description	Year
UI_DWP_001104	Fleet Lease and Management	Official vehicle fleet including private user scheme vehicles and associated fleet management services	2007

Various	Learning and Development Services	Multiple contracts for the delivery of staff learning and development training[1]	2006

[1] Learning and Development contracts—some of this provision may have been previously delivered in-house, some will have been traditionally delivered by an external supplier (outsourced). It is not possible to determine without examining each case in consultation with the business customer and/or HR.

Departmental Audit

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies use when deciding whether and when to hold an internal audit; and if he will make a statement. [85648]

Chris Grayling: Internal audit services in the Department and its public bodies work to the Government Internal Audit Standards (GIAS), which are mandatory for all central Government Departments, agencies and executive non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs). These are published on the HM Treasury website at:

http://www.hm-treasury.gov.uk/d/internalaudit_gias_0211.pdf

This framework applies to in-house internal audit services, shared services and to outsourced arrangements, and requires that:

the chief audit executive must establish risk-based plans to determine the priorities of the internal audit activity, consistent with the organisation's goals (Standard 2010);

the internal audit activity's plan of engagements must be based on a documented risk assessment, undertaken at least annually. The input of senior management and the board must be considered in this process (Standard 2010.A1);

the chief audit executive must identify and consider the expectations of senior management, the board and other stakeholders for internal audit opinions and other conclusions (Standard 2010.A2); and the chief audit executive should consider accepting proposed consulting engagements based on the engagement's potential to improve management of risks, add value and improve the organisation's operations. Accepted engagements must be included in the plan (Standard 2010.C1).

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps his Department is taking to ensure social value is included when services are commissioned by (a) his Department and (b) its public bodies; and if he will make a statement. [85657]

Chris Grayling: As part of the commissioning process, all contracts above £10,000 in value are advertised on Contracts Finder with those suitable for small and medium enterprises and voluntary organisations identified accordingly.

The Department, and its public bodies, consider social value in the initial stages of commissioning services by using sustainable procurement risk assessment methodology (SPRAM).

SPRAM is mandatory for all new contracts and considers the impact of diversity and equality, people with disabilities, the use of supported factories and businesses, the suitability of small and medium enterprises and voluntary organisations and questions whether or not there are unacceptable labour standards in the supply chain.

Where relevant and proportionate, social value factors can be scored as part of the evaluation process during the commissioning phase. Following contract award, suppliers are asked to complete periodical returns demonstrating how they have implemented those social value aspects of the contract they are delivering.

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what risk registers are held by the public bodies for which his Department is responsible; and if he will make a statement. [85714]

Chris Grayling: The risk registers held by the public bodies for which my Department is responsible are shown as follows:

Child Maintenance and Enforcement Commission

There is an overarching risk register for each directorate within the commission.

Health and Safety Executive

Health and Safety Executive holds a corporate risk register which is supported by subsidiary project and directorate risk registers as appropriate.

Independent Living Fund

The Independent Living Fund maintains a number of risk registers:

a strategic risk register;

five internal directorate risk registers; and project risk registers.

National Employment Savings Trust (NEST) Corporation

National Employment Savings Trust (NEST) Corporation maintains two risk registers. The principal register supports the identification and management of all business and delivery risks within the organisation. The second register is focused on NEST Corporation's information security risks.

Pensions ombudsman

The pensions ombudsman has the following risk registers:

operational risk register; and a strategic risk register.

Pension Protection Fund

Pension Protection Fund has the following registers:

Risk Universe;

team risk registers;

information risk registers;

key process risk registers;

topic-based risk registers;

financial risk register;

project risk registers; and a tri-partite risk register.

Remploy Ltd

Remploy Ltd has:

a strategic risk framework (register);

high level business risk frameworks; and individual business and departmental registers.

The Pensions Advisory Service

The Pensions Advisory Service has the following risk registers:

corporate risk register;

pensions risk register;

service area risk registers; and project risk registers for major projects.

The Pensions Regulator

The Pensions Regulator has one risk register.

Employment and Support Allowance: Expenditure

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the projection made by the Office for Budget Responsibility that expenditure on employment and support allowance will be £1 billion more than previously expected by 2015-16; and if he will make a statement. [85809]

Chris Grayling: The new projections made by the Office for Budget Responsibility of employment and support allowance (ESA) expenditure reflect the latest data on the number of claimants assessed as fit for work, the most up to date assumptions on the composition of the caseload and the number of new claims.

Employment and Support Allowance: Peterborough

Mr Stewart Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many individuals in Peterborough constituency currently in receipt of employment and support allowance in the Work Related Activity Group with a prognosis of six months are being migrated into work; and if he will make a statement. [85338]

Chris Grayling: The Department regularly publishes National Statistics which provide information on the caseloads of various different benefits to the constituency level. This information can be found by using the tabulation tool ('Tabtool') on the departmental website here:

http://83.244.183.180/100pc/tabtool.html

The Tabtool shows that as at May 2011, the latest data available, there were 1,620 people on employment and support allowance in the Peterborough parliamentary constituency and of these, 550 were in the Work Related Activity Group.

Information on the prognosis given by the Atos Healthcare Professional following the work capability assessment is available for claims flowing on to employment and support allowance by local authority area rather than parliamentary constituency. Note that on-flow figures are not directly comparable to the caseload figures provided above.

Between March 2010 and February 2011 (the most recent period for which data are available) there were 2,090 new claims for employment and support allowance (ESA) in the Peterborough local authority area. Of these 530 went into the Work Related Activity Group (WRAG) following the initial work capability assessment. Of those claims going into the WRAG, 140 (26%) were given a prognosis of three months, 260 (49%) had a prognosis of six months and the remaining 130 (25%) were given a prognosis of 12 months or longer.

This information is taken from administrative data held by DWP, and assessment data provided by Atos Healthcare. All figures have been rounded to the nearest 10.

ESA claimants in the WRAG will have the opportunity to join the Work programme, when the outcome from their work capability assessment is known. The Work programme was launched on 10 June 2011 and is now in place nationally. This is the biggest single payment by results employment programme Great Britain has ever seen, providing personalised support to an expected 2.4 million claimants over the next seven years.

Information on the numbers leaving ESA to move into work is not currently available. The Work programme has only been in place for six months, and the measures of its success are long term. The Department is closely monitoring all aspects of the Work programme, and will publish this information as soon as reliable and meaningful data are available, in accordance with guidelines set by the UK Statistics Authority. Official statistics on referrals will be available from spring 2012, and on job outcomes from autumn 2012.

Employment Schemes

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what the average duration of work experience placements has been since January 2011. [85536]

Chris Grayling: This information is not available. Work experience placements are expected to last for a period of between two and eight weeks, with an optional extension to up to 12 weeks if the employer decides they would like to offer the participant an apprenticeship and that offer is accepted.

Mr Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what steps he has taken to ensure Prime Contractors to the Work programme are using the Compact with the voluntary sector in their discussions with subcontractors from the voluntary sector; and if he will make a statement. [85681]

Chris Grayling: The principles of the Compact have been taken forward through the Code of Conduct which underpins the DWP Commissioning Strategy. These principles are further embedded through the Merlin Standard which all Work programme providers are required to achieve as a condition of their contracts. Merlin assessments will take place from spring 2012 and biannually thereafter.

The Merlin Standard will require that all subcontractors are treated fairly in their dealings with Prime Contractors and that supply chains remain robust and healthy. Primes that do not fulfil their obligations will be subject to action for breach of contract and may lose their contracts.

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many young people in (a) the East Midlands and (b) Leicester City have participated in the work experience programme. [85785]

Chris Grayling: Details of the number of young people who have participated in work experience from the East Midlands region, and Leicestershire parliamentary constituencies is available and shown in the following table.

Work experience participants up to August 2011

	Number
East Midlands region	1,270
Leicester East	60
Leicester South	70
Leicester West	60
North West Leicestershire	30

Work experience participants up to August 2011

	Number
South Leicestershire	20

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many young people (a) were referred to and (b) took up work experience placements in each month since January 2011. [85532]

Chris Grayling: Figures are not available for the number of young people referred to work experience.

The most recent statistics for work experience starts were published on 16 November 2011, for the period January to August 2011. There have been a total of 16,360 work experience starts between January and August 2011. A breakdown of this information can be found in the following table:

Work experience starts

2011	Number
January	60
February	290
March	980
April	1,350
May	2,210
June	3,150
July	3,830
August	4,520

Notes:

2. Values less than 10 are suppressed and marked with a dash.
3. Due to rounding totals may not be the sum of the individual cells.

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many 16 to 24 year olds in (a) the East Midlands and (b) Leicester City have found sustainable employment following participation in the work experience programme. [85782]

Chris Grayling: This information is unavailable. However recent early analysis, based on a national sample of 1,300 participants, indicates that less than half of participants are claiming working age benefits after 13 weeks of starting a work experience placement.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Bill Esterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the number of people registered as unemployed who are eligible for the enterprise allowance (a) in Merseyside and (b) nationally. [86356]

Chris Grayling: The new enterprise allowance is available to unemployed people aged 18 and above who have been in receipt of jobseeker's allowance (JSA) for six months or more and who are not on the Work programme.

In October, there were 11,010 people in Merseyside and 314,355 nationally aged over 18 who had been claiming JSA for six months or more. These figures include claimants who may have been referred to the Work programme and are therefore higher than the number of people actually eligible.

Housing Benefit

Hilary Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many social tenants he estimates will lose some housing benefit because they are under-occupying their home; and how many and what proportion of these he expects to be (a) pensioners and (b) disabled people. [84772]

Steve Webb: From April 2013 we intend to restrict housing benefit for working-age claimants living in the social rented sector where the claimant and the claimant's household under-occupy their accommodation.

We estimate that approximately 670,000 housing benefit claimants are likely to be affected by the introduction of size criteria in the social rented sector, and experience reductions in housing benefit as a result.

A breakdown of the categories of working age households affected is included in the equality impact assessment of the social sector size criteria, published to accompany the Welfare Reform Bill.

The equality impact assessment can be found at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/eia-social-sector-housing-under-occupation-wr2011.pdf

Notes:
1. For housing benefit, the threshold between working-age and pension-age is determined by reference to the qualifying age for state pension credit. This is linked to planned changes in the state pension age for women.
2. Exceptionally, a pensioner may choose to claim a working-age benefit, such as income-based jobseeker's allowance, rather than claiming pension credit. In these situations the claimant would be assessed in line with the working-age rules for housing benefit.
3. Alternative definitions of disability would produce differing estimates of the number of disabled households affected by the social sector size criteria.

Stephen Gilbert: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions if he will estimate the number of fathers aged (a) 16 to 24 and (b) 25 to 34 who will be affected by the extension of the shared accommodation rate of local housing allowance. [86348]

Steve Webb: The shared accommodation rate already applies to single people under 25, so no fathers aged 16 to 24 will be affected by the change in the age threshold.

It is estimated that around 10,000 of the people affected by the extension of the shared accommodation rate are non-resident parents who have some contact, although not necessarily overnight contact, with children who live elsewhere.

All of these are aged 25 to 34, and most are fathers. This excludes parents who do not currently have any contact with their children.

Source:
DWP analysis of Single Housing Benefit Extract, 2008/09 Family Resources Survey and 2008 Families and Children Survey. This estimate is based on a small number of sample survey cases and is subject to a large degree of uncertainty.

Housing Benefit: Wales

Jessica Morden: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions for how many recipients of local housing allowance (LHA) in Wales the level of payment will change if (a) LHA rates are set at the 30th percentile of local market rents and (b) LHA levels are restricted to the four bedroom rate; and what proportion of those affected will be women. [85908]

Steve Webb: Estimates of the numbers affected in Wales by the local housing allowance (LHA) changes are published on the Department for Work and Pensions website:

Estimates of the proportion of those affected in Wales who are women are not available. The published Equality Impact Assessment for the measures shows the estimated proportions affected by gender for Great Britain. This is available at:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/docs/lha-eia-nov10.pdf

(Annex E, Table 25 shows the impact of setting LHA rates at the 30th percentile, and Annex D, Table 20 shows the impact of restricting LHA levels).

Incapacity Benefit: Aberdeen

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how the results of the incapacity benefit reassessment pilots in Aberdeen and Burnley informed the recalculation of the future costs of employment and support allowance reported at the Autumn Statement by the Office for Budget Responsibility; and if he will make a statement. [86178]

Chris Grayling: The first stage of incapacity benefit reassessment began in October 2010 with a trial involving 1,700 customers from the Burnley and Aberdeen benefit centres. This trial was designed to provide early indicators about customer and staff reactions to the reassessment process.

The data from the trial influenced changes to the initial assumptions for IB reassessment used in the expenditure forecasts. The trial results suggested the fit for work rate was higher than originally assumed. Additionally, a higher proportion of claimants being moved on to ESA were placed in the support group than initially assumed. However, the trial data need to be used with caution as they may not reflect the national picture. We will continue to monitor the assumptions used in the expenditure forecasts as more data become available.

Income Support: Mortgages

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of expenditure on support for mortgage interest for people who receive employment and support allowance in the (a) Support Group, (b) Work Related Activity Group and (c) Assessment Phase in each financial year to 2015-16. [86079]

Chris Grayling: The following table shows forecasts of housing requirements. Housing requirements include support for mortgage interest and other housing elements not included in housing benefit.

Total	1	28	49	64	92	97	100	113	131

Jobseeker's Allowance: Young People

Ian Austin: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the cost to his Department of introducing weekly signing for all 18 to 24-year-olds on jobseeker's allowance from the fifth month of their claim. [85584]

Chris Grayling: The cost of providing weekly signing was included as part of a package of support within the Youth Contract that is expected to cost nearly £1 billion over the next three years. The final costs for weekly signing will be driven by the volume of claimants and the Department for Work and Pensions does not forecast unemployment levels.

National Benefit Fraud Hotline

Geoffrey Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many referrals through the National Benefit Fraud Hotline were made by hon. Members in each of the last five years; and how many investigations were launched as a result of such referrals. [86006]

Chris Grayling: All information received by the Department in relation to an allegation of benefit fraud, including that received through the National Benefit Fraud Hotline (NBFH) is treated as confidential. All referrals to the NBFH are therefore anonymised so the information requested is not kept by the Department.

Older Workers: East Midlands

Jonathan Ashworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what assessment he has made of the effect of the Youth Contract on older employees in (a) East Midlands and (b) Leicester City. [85816]

Chris Grayling: Our existing programmes will be supporting up to 350,000 young people over the next two years, but we recognise that the current economic situation means that some young people are still finding that getting work is not easy. The Youth Contract is being introduced with the aim of getting more young people involved in meaningful jobs and training early in their working lives to ensure that they are not left behind.

This renewed effort is not expected to be to the detriment of older workers, and we will continue to offer a full and effective package of support to help older unemployed people through a range of flexible support offered by Jobcentre Plus. For those at risk of long-term unemployment there is the Work programme, and for those interested in setting up a business there is the new enterprise allowance.

PAYE

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how his Department plans to participate in the April 2012 pilot of PAYE real time information; and if he will make a statement. [86180]

Chris Grayling: DWP has been working closely with HMRC to ensure readiness for the implementation of PAYE real time information. DWP's intention is to participate during the pilot year but will not be part of the initial pilot. HMRC has confirmed that there is sufficient employer representation for the pilot at April 2012.

Poverty: Children

Stephen Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate his Department has made of the number of children who would be living in poverty (a) before and (b) after housing costs in each year from 2011-12 to 2014-15 on the basis of (i) the policies in place prior to the Autumn Statement and (ii) implementation of those policies. [86179]

Maria Miller: The Government have not forecast how many children they expect to be in poverty before and after the introduction of the policies announced in the autumn statement for each year to 2014-15. Child poverty is dependent on a number of factors which cannot be reliably predicted.

Analysis shows an estimated increase of around 100,000 in 2012-13; on the measure used previously (i.e. the impact of tax and benefit changes on the number of children living in households with an income less than 60% of the median).

But this does not represent a forecast of the actual change in child poverty year on year. When, as is currently and exceptionally the case, CPI is substantially higher than average earnings growth, uprating benefits by CPI will act to reduce child poverty, all other things being equal.

This measurement also does not take into account the value of public services which benefit children, such as education and health care. These are very important tools in improving life chances, particularly among poorer households.

Social Fund

Kate Green: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what criteria are used to prioritise who will receive payments from the Social Fund; how these criteria will be affected by implementation of the Welfare Reform Bill; and if he proposes to issue guidance on the distribution of the Social Fund under the new legislative framework. [85437]

Steve Webb: The eligibility criteria for an award from each type of Social Fund Payment is set out in the Department for Work and Pensions' publication SB16—A guide to the Social Fund available on the departmental website:

http://www.dwp.gov.uk/publications/specialist-guides/technical-guidance/sb16-a-guide-to-the-social/

The Welfare Reform Bill introduces universal credit. With the exception of pension credit, the qualifying benefits that are part of the eligibility criteria for most Social Fund payments will eventually be replaced by universal credit. The Social Security Advisory Committee has been commissioned to carry out an independent review of passported benefits and the links with universal credit, including Regulated Social Fund. This review is still taking place and the Committee has been asked to report by the end of January 2012. The Department will publish the final report alongside its response by the end of April.

Winter fuel payments are Regulated Social Fund payments. Eligibility is not linked to receipt of benefits as they are paid to most people over women's state pension age. There are no plans to change the current eligibility criteria for winter fuel payments.

Clause 70 of the Welfare Reform Bill will allow budgeting loans to be awarded for funeral and maternity expenses. This change will be implemented two months after Royal Assent and the guidance will be updated accordingly.

Only Community Care Grants have a local funding allocation and this will not be affected by the Welfare Reform Bill. Clause 69 of the Welfare Reform Bill ends discretionary Social Fund payments. Crisis loans and community care grants will come to an end in April 2013. They will be replaced by a combination of local provision and a national scheme of payments on account of benefit, neither of which will be part of the Social Fund. Budgeting Loans will be phased out as universal credit is introduced and will be replaced by budgeting advances within universal credit.

After April 2013 the remaining Social Fund Payments have a national funding allocation and therefore guidance on distribution of funding is not necessary.

Social Security Benefits

John Mann: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions how many people received more than £10,000 in benefits in each parliamentary constituency in the most recent year for which figures are available. [84888]

Chris Grayling: The information requested is not available.

While information on DWP administered benefits is available at constituency level we do not hold complete information on those benefits administered by other Government Departments and organisations. Restricting analysis to those benefits administered directly by DWP may present a misleading picture of benefit receipt. In addition, we estimate that developing an appropriate methodology and quality assuring any analysis of DWP administrative data would exceed disproportionate cost limits.

The table provides estimates of the number of benefit units in receipt of benefit and tax credit income in excess of £10,000 in 2009-10 based on the latest release of the Family Resources Survey (FRS).

The FRS is a clustered sample designed to produce robust estimates at former Government Office Region (GOR) level. Sample sizes below this level will be small, and not every area within a GOR will be covered by the FRS in any year, therefore we are not able to produce estimates at the constituency level.

Notes:

1. The Family Resources Survey is a nationally representative sample of UK households. Data for 2009-10 was collected between April 2009 and March 2010.
2. The figures from the Family Resources Survey are based on a sample of households which have been adjusted for non-response using multi-purpose grossing factors which align the Family Resources Survey to former Government Office Region population by age and sex. Estimates are subject to sampling error and remaining non-response error.
3. Results have been rounded to the nearest 100,000.
4. The Family Resources Survey is known to under-record benefit receipt and so estimates should be treated with caution.
5. A benefit unit is defined as a single adult or a married or cohabiting couple and any dependent children; from January 2006 same-sex partners (civil partners and cohabitees) are included in the same benefit unit.
6. A benefit unit has been defined as in receipt of a benefit or tax credit if at least one member of the benefit unit is in receipt of income from at least one benefit or tax credit.

Social Security Benefits

Mr Byrne: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions what estimate he has made of the likely change in (a) benefits expenditure and (b) number of claimants for each benefit for which his Department is responsible during the forecast period. [85439]

Chris Grayling: The latest forecasts of benefit expenditure, which are consistent with the 2011 Autumn Statement have been published at the following address:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/autumn_2011_table_1a_and_1b.xls

The available information has also been placed in the Library.

Caseload information which is consistent with the Autumn Statement will be published on 21 of December at the following address:

http://research.dwp.gov.uk/asd/asd4/index.php?page=medium_term

A copy will also be placed in the Library.

Social Security Benefits: Foreign Nationals

Priti Patel: To ask the Secretary of State for Work and Pensions (1) how many non-UK citizens were in receipt of each type of welfare benefit in each of the last five years; [84411]

(2) how many non-UK citizens were registered with Jobcentre Plus in each of the last five years. [84412]

Chris Grayling: The UK's benefit payment systems do not record the nationality of claimants as nationality itself is not a condition of entitlement. Therefore, it is not possible to determine the number of non-UK nationals claiming benefit or registered with Jobcentre Plus from administrative data.
